Another meaning of antara is "this body." The body is an impediment to self-realization because it is always engaged in sense gratification. Similarly, antara means "money." If money is not used in Kṛṣṇa's service, it is also an impediment. Antara also means janatā, "people in general." The association of ordinary persons may destroy the principles of devotional service. Similarly, antara may mean "greed," greed to acquire more money or enjoy more sense gratification. Finally, the word antara may also mean "atheistic ideas" by which one considers the temple Deity to be made of stone, wood or gold. All of these are impediments. The Deity in the temple is not material-He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. Similarly, considering the spiritual master an ordinary human being (guruṣu nara-matiḥ) is also an impediment. Nor should one consider a Vaiṣṇava a member of a particular caste or nation. Nor should a Vaiṣṇava be considered material. Caraṇāmṛta should not be considered ordinary drinking water, and the holy name of the Lord should not be considered an ordinary sound vibration. Nor should one look on Lord Kṛṣṇa as an ordinary human being, for He is the origin of all viṣṇu-tattvas; nor should one regard the Supreme Lord as a demigod. Intermingling the spiritual with the material causes one to look on transcendence as material and the mundane as spiritual. This is all due to a poor fund of knowledge. One should not consider Lord Viṣṇu and things related to him as being different. All this is offensive.

In the Bhakti-sandarbha (265), Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī writes: nāmaikaṁ yasya vāci smaraṇa-patha-gatam ityādau deha-draviṇādi-nimittaka-'pāṣaṇḍa'-śabdena ca daśa aparādhā lakṣyante, pāṣaṇḍamayatvāt teṣām.

The Māyāvādīs look on Viṣṇu and Vaiṣṇavas imperfectly due to their poor fund of knowledge, and this is condemned. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.46), the intermediate Vaiṣṇava is described as follows:

īśvare tad-adhīneṣu bāliśeṣu dviṣatsu ca prema-maitrī-kṛpopekṣā

yaḥ karoti sa madhyamaḥ

”The intermediate Vaiṣṇava has to love God, make friends with the devotees, instruct the innocent and reject jealous people.” These are the four functions of the Vaiṣṇava in the intermediate stage. In Caitanya-caritāmṛta (Madhya 22.64) Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī is taught:

śraddhāvān jana haya bhakti-adhikārī
’uttama’, ’madhyama’, ’kaniṣṭha’–śraddhā-anusārī

”One who is faithful is a proper candidate for devotional service. In terms of one’s degree of faith in devotional service, one is a first-class, second-class or neophyte Vaiṣṇava.”

śāstra-yukti nāhi jāne dṛḍha, śraddhāvān
’madhyama-adhikārī’ sei mahā-bhāgyavān

”One who has attained the intermediate stage is not very advanced in śāstric knowledge, but he has firm faith in the Lord. Such a person is very fortunate to be situated on the intermediate platform.” (Cc. Madhya 22.67)

rati-prema-tāratamye bhakta-tara-tama

”Attraction and love are the ultimate goal of devotional service. The degrees of such attraction and love for God distinguish the different stages of devotion-neophyte, intermediate and perfectional.” (Cc. Madhya 22.71) An intermediate devotee is greatly attracted to chanting the holy name, and by chanting he is elevated to the platform of love. If one chants the holy name of the Lord with great attachment, he can understand his position as an eternal servant of the spiritual master, other Vaiṣṇavas and Kṛṣṇa Himself. Thus the intermediate Vaiṣṇava considers himself kṛṣṇa-dāsa, Kṛṣṇa’s servant. He therefore preaches Kṛṣṇa consciousness to innocent neophytes and stresses the importance of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. An intermediate devotee can identify the nondevotee or motivated devotee. The motivated devotee or the nondevotee are on the material platform, and they are called prākṛta. The intermediate devotee does not mix with such materialistic people. However, he understands that the Supreme Personality of Godhead and everything related to Him are on the same transcendental platform. Actually none of them are mundane.

yāṅhāra darśane-by the sight of whom; mukhe-in the mouth; āise-automatically awakens; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; tāṅhāre-him; jāniha-must know; tumi-you; vaiṣṇava-pradhāna-the first-class Vaiṣṇava.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, ”A first-class Vaiṣṇava is he whose very presence makes others chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa.”

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that if an observer immediately remembers the holy name of Kṛṣṇa upon seeing a Vaiṣṇava, that Vaiṣṇava should be considered a mahā-bhāgavata, a first-class devotee. Such a Vaiṣṇava is always aware of his Kṛṣṇa conscious duty, and he is enlightened in self-realization. He is always in love with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, and this love is without adulteration. Because of this love, he is always awake to transcendental realization. Because he knows that Kṛṣṇa consciousness is the basis of knowledge and action, he sees everything connected with Kṛṣṇa. Such a person is able to chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa perfectly. Such a mahā-bhāgavata Vaiṣṇava has the transcendental eyes to see who is sleeping under the spell of māyā, and he engages himself in awakening sleeping conditioned beings by spreading the knowledge of Kṛṣṇa consciousness. He opens eyes that are closed by forgetfulness of Kṛṣṇa. Thus the living entity is liberated from the dullness of material energy and is engaged fully in the service of the Lord. The madhyama-adhikārī Vaiṣṇava can awaken others to Kṛṣṇa consciousness and engage them in duties whereby they can advance. It is therefore said in Caitanya-caritāmṛta (Madhya-līlā, Chapter Six, verse 279):

lohāke yāvat sparśi’ hema nāhi kare tāvat sparśa-maṇi keha cinite nā pāre

”One cannot understand the value of touchstone until it turns iron into gold.” One should judge by action, not by promises. A mahā-bhāgavata can turn a living entity from abominable material life to the Lord’s service. This is the test of a mahā-bhāgavata. Although preaching is not meant for a mahā-bhāgavata, a mahā-bhāgavata can descend to the platform of madhyama-bhāgavata just to convert others to Vaiṣṇavism. Actually a mahā-bhāgavata is fit to spread Kṛṣṇa consciousness, but he does not distinguish where Kṛṣṇa consciousness should be spread from where it should not. He thinks that everyone is competent to accept Kṛṣṇa consciousness if the chance is provided. A neophyte and intermediate devotee should always be anxious to hear the mahā-bhāgavata and serve him in every respect. The neophyte and intermediate devotees can gradually rise to the platform of uttama-adhikārī and become first-class devotees. Symptoms of a first-class devotee are given in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.45):

sarva-bhūteṣu yaḥ paśyed
bhagavad-bhāvam ātmanaḥ
bhūtāni bhagavaty ātmany
eṣa bhāgavatottamaḥ

When teaching Sanātana Gosvāmī, the Lord further said:

śāstra-yuktye sunipuṇa, dṛḍha-śraddhā yāṅra
’uttama-adhikārī’ se tāraye saṁsāra

”If one is expert in Vedic literature and has full faith in the Supreme Lord, then he is an uttama-adhikārī, a first-class Vaiṣṇava, a topmost Vaiṣṇava who can deliver the whole world and turn everyone to Kṛṣṇa consciousness.” (Cc. Madhya 22.65) With great love and affection, the mahā-bhāgavata observes the Supreme Personality of Godhead, devotional service and the devotee. He observes nothing beyond Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa consciousness and Kṛṣṇa’s devotees. The mahā-bhāgavata knows that everyone is engaged in the Lord’s service in different ways. He therefore descends to the middle platform to elevate everyone to the Kṛṣṇa conscious position.

TRANSLATION

Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi initiated Gadādhara Paṇḍita for the second time, and on the day of Oḍana-ṣaṣṭhī he saw the festival.

PURPORT

At the beginning of winter, there is a ceremony known as the Oḍana-ṣaṣṭhī. This ceremony indicates that from that day forward, a winter covering should be given to Lord Jagannātha. That covering is directly purchased from a weaver. According to the arcana-mārga, a cloth should first be washed to remove all the starch, and then it can be used to cover the Lord. Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi saw that the priest neglected to wash the cloth before covering Lord Jagannātha. Since he wanted to find some fault in the devotees, he became indignant.

I have mentioned only the chief devotees. No one can describe the total number.

gadādhara-paṇḍita yabe saṅgete calilā
'kṣetra-sannyāsa nā chāḍiha'–prabhu niṣedhilā

SYNONYMS

gadādhara-paṇḍita-Gadādhara Paṇḍita; yabe-when; saṅgete-with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; calilā-started to go; kṣetra-sannyāsa-the renounced order of life at a holy place of pilgrimage; nā chāḍiha-do not give up; prabhu niṣedhilā-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu forbade.

TRANSLATION

When Gadādhara Paṇḍita started to go with the Lord, he was forbidden to come and was asked not to give up the vow of kṣetra-sannyāsa.

PURPORT

When one takes kṣetra-sannyāsa, he leaves his household life and goes to a place of pilgrimage devoted to Lord Viṣṇu. Such places include Puruṣottama (Jagannātha Purī), Navadvīpa-dhāma and Mathurā-dhāma. The kṣetra-sannyāsī lives in these places alone or with his family. Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura considers kṣetra-sannyāsa to be the preferable vānaprastha situation in this Age of Kali. Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya lived in this way, and he has been called a kṣetra-sannyāsī-that is, a sannyāsī living in Jagannātha Purī.

TEXT 131

paṇḍita kahe,–"yāhāṅ tumi, sei nīlācala kṣetra-sannyāsa mora yāuka rasātala"

SYNONYMS

paṇḍita kahe-Gadādhara Paṇḍita said; yāhāṅ-wherever; tumi-You are situated; sei-that; nīlācala-Jagannātha Purī; kṣetra-sannyāsa-vow to remain in a holy place of pilgrimage; mora-my; yāuka-let it go; rasātala-to hell.

TRANSLATION

When he was requested to return to Jagannātha Purī, Gadādhara Paṇḍita told the Lord, "Wherever You are staying is Jagannātha Purī. Let my so-called kṣetra-sannyāsa go to hell."

TEXT 132

prabhu kahe,–"iṅhā kara gopīnātha sevana" paṇḍita kahe,–"koṭi-sevā tvat-pāda-darśana"

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; iṅhā-here; kara-just do; gopīnātha sevana-worship of Gopīnātha; paṇḍita kahe-the paṇḍita said; koṭi-sevā-millions of times the service; tvat-pāda-darśana-seeing Your lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked Gadādhara Paṇḍita to remain at Jagannātha Purī and engage in Gopīnātha's service, Gadādhara Paṇḍita replied, "One renders service to Gopīnātha a million times simply by seeing Your lotus feet."

TEXT 133

prabhu kahe,–"sevā chāḍibe, āmāya lāge doṣa iṅhā rahi' sevā kara,–āmāra santoṣa"

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; sevā chāḍibe-you will give up the service; āmāya-to Me; lāge-will attach; doṣa-fault; iṅhā rahi'-staying here; sevā kara-just be engaged in service; āmāra-My; santoṣa-satisfaction.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then said, "If you abandon His service, it will be My fault. It is better that you remain here and render service. That will be My satisfaction."

TEXT 134

paṇḍita kahe,–"saba doṣa āmāra upara tomā-saṅge nā yāiba, yāiba ekeśvara

SYNONYMS

paṇḍita kahe-the Paṇḍita said; saba-all; doṣa-fault; āmāra upara-upon me; tomā-saṅge-with You; nā yāiba-I shall not go; yāiba-I shall go; ekeśvara-alone.

TRANSLATION

The Paṇḍita replied, "Do not worry. All the faults will be on my head. I shall not accompany You but shall go alone.

TEXT 135

āi'ke dekhite yāiba, nā yāiba tomā lāgi'
'pratijñā'-'sevā'-tyāga-doṣa, tāra āmi bhāgī"

SYNONYMS

āi'ke-mother Śacīdevī; dekhite-to see; yāiba-I shall go; nā yāiba-I shall not go; tomā lāgi'-for Your sake; pratijñā-sevā-the vow and service to Gopīnātha; tyāga-doṣa-the fault of giving up; tāra-for that; āmi bhāgī-I am responsible.

TRANSLATION

"I shall go to see Śacīmātā, but I shall not go for Your sake. I shall be responsible for the abandoning of my vow and service to Gopīnātha."

TEXT 136

eta bali' paṇḍita-gosāñi pṛthak calilā

TRANSLATION

No one can understand the loving intimacy between Gadādhara Paṇḍita and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Gadādhara Paṇḍita gave up his vow and service to Gopīnātha just as one gives up a piece of straw.

PURPORT

Just to get Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's association, Gadādhara Paṇḍita gave up his life's vow to engage in Gopīnātha's service. This kind of loving affection can be understood only by very confidential devotees. Ordinarily, no one can understand its purport.

TEXT 138

SYNONYMS

sva-nigamam-His own promise not to take a weapon and fight on behalf of the Pāṇḍavas; apahāya-giving up; mat-pratijñām-my promise; ṛtam-true; adhikartum-to make more; avaplutaḥ-having jumped down; ratha-sthaḥ-who was on the chariot (Lord Kṛṣṇa); dhṛta-who took up; ratha-caraṇaḥ-the wheel of the chariot; abhyayāt-ran forward; calat-guḥ-making the entire planet tremble; hariḥ-a lion; iva-like; hantum-to kill; ibham-an elephant; gata-uttarīyaḥ-losing the outer garment.

TRANSLATION

" 'Intending to make my promise true, Lord Kṛṣṇa broke His own promise not to take up a weapon at Kurukṣetra. With His outer garment falling off, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa jumped from His chariot, picked up a wheel and came running at me to kill me. Indeed, He rushed at me like a lion going to kill an elephant, and He caused the whole earth to tremble.'

PURPORT

Lord Kṛṣṇa promised not to fight in the battle of Kurukṣetra or even take up a weapon. But when Bhīṣma wanted to keep his own promise to break the promise of the Lord, the Lord immediately got down from the chariot, and to make Bhīṣma's promise true He picked up a chariot wheel and rushed forward to kill him. This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.9.37).

TEXT 146

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His party arrived at Yājapura, the Lord asked the two government officers who had come with Him to return.

PURPORT

The place called Yājapura is very well known in Orissa. It is a subdivision of the Kaṭaka district and is situated on the southern side of the Vaitaraṇī River. Formerly great sages performed sacrifices on the northern bank of the Vaitaraṇī River; consequently the place is known as Yājapura-"the place where sacrifices are performed." Some people say that this was one of the capital cities of King Yayāti and that from the name Yayāti-nagara the name Yājapura has come. As stated in Mahābhārata (Vana-parva Chapter 114):

ete kaliṅgāḥ kaunteya yatra vaitaraṇī nadī yatrāyajata dharmo 'pi devān śaraṇam etya vai atra vai ṛṣayo 'nye ca
purā kratubhir ījire

According to the Mahābhārata, great sages formerly performed sacrifices in this place. There are still many temples of demigods and incarnations there, and there is also a Deity of Śrī Varāhadeva. This Deity is especially important and is visited by many pilgrims. Those who worship the Supreme Lord's energy worship Vārāhī, Vaiṣṇavī and Indrāṇī, as well as many similar forms of Devī, the internal energy. There are many deities of Lord Śiva, and there are many places along the river known as Daśāśvamedha-ghāṭa. Sometimes Yājapura is also called Nābhi-gayā or Virajā-kṣetra.

TRANSLATION

"It must be Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself who has changed the Mohammedan's mind. Due to His presence and even due to His remembrance, the whole world is liberated."

PURPORT

From this we can understand that the Mohammedan governor was a drunkard (madyapa). Ordinarily, there was no chance that he would change, but Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu could turn anyone's mind to Kṛṣṇa consciousness. One can be delivered from material existence simply by remembering Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's holy name or by visiting Him. This Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is being spread throughout the world, but not even one yavana or mleccha addicted to drinking could have changed and accepted Kṛṣṇa consciousness without Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's grace. People are often astonished to see many thousands of Westerners converted to Vaiṣṇavism. Generally Westerners are addicted to meat-eating, drinking, gambling and illicit sex; therefore their taking up Kṛṣṇa consciousness is astonishing. In India, especially, there is much astonishment at this. The answer, however, is given here: darśana-smaraṇe yāṅra jagat tārila. This change is made possible simply by the remembrance of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The Western devotees are very sincerely chanting the holy names of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His associates: śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu nityānanda śrī-advaita gadādhara śrīvāsādi-gaura-bhakta-vṛnda. By the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His associates, people are being purified and their consciousness directed from māyā to Kṛṣṇa.

The word viśvāsa refers to a secretary. This title is generally found among the kāyastha caste in the Hindu community. In Bengal, the title viśvāsa is still used by the kāyasthas. The word viśvāsa means "faithful," and a viśvāsī is a person in whom one can place faith. Śrī Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura states that during the Mohammedan reign in Bengal, there was a secretariat entitled viśvāsa-khānā. The office of viśvāsa-khānā was a secretariat office in which only the most reliable people were employed. They were elected from the kāyastha community, a community that is still very expert in managing business and government affairs. The secretariat, or viśvāsa-khānā, is generally a very reliable and faithful servant. Whenever some confidential service was needed, these officers were employed.

TRANSLATION

” ’To say nothing of the spiritual advancement of persons who see the Supreme Person face to face, even a person born in a family of dog-eaters becomes immediately eligible to perform Vedic sacrifices if he once utters the holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, or chants about Him, hears about His pastimes, offers Him obeisances or even remembers Him.’ ”

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.33.6). According to this verse, it doesn’t matter what position a person holds. One may be the lowest of the low-a caṇḍāla, or dog-eater-but if he takes to chanting and hearing the holy name of the Lord, he is immediately eligible to perform Vedic sacrifices. This is especially true in this Age of Kali.

harer nāma harer nāma
harer nāmaiva kevalam kalau nāsty eva nāsty eva nāsty eva gatir anyathā

A person born in a brāhmaṇa family cannot perform Vedic sacrifices until he is properly purified and has attained his sacred thread. However, according to this verse, it is understood that even a lowborn person can immediately perform sacrifices if he sincerely chants and hears the holy name of the Lord. Sometimes envious people ask how Europeans and Americans in this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement can become brāhmaṇas and perform sacrifices. They do not know that the Europeans and Americans have already been purified by chanting the holy name of the Lord-Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare Hare Hare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare. This is the proof. Śvādo ’pi sadyaḥ savanāya kalpate. One may be born in a family of dog-eaters, but he can perform sacrifices simply by chanting the mahā-mantra.

Those who find fault in the Western Vaiṣṇavas should consider this statement from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and the commentary on this verse by Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī. In this regard, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī has stated that to become a brāhmaṇa, one has to wait for purification and undergo the sacred thread ceremony, but a chanter of the holy name does not have to wait for the sacred thread ceremony. We do not allow devotees to perform sacrifices until they are properly initiated in the sacred thread ceremony. Yet according to this verse, an offenseless chanter of the holy name is already fit to perform a fire ceremony, even though he is not doubly initiated by the sacred thread ceremony. This is the verdict given by Lord Kapiladeva in His instructions to His mother, Devahūti. It was Lord Kapiladeva who instructed Devahūti in pure Sāṅkhya philosophy.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then glanced with mercy at the Mohammedan governor. Giving him assurance, He asked him to chant the holy names Kṛṣṇa and Hari.

PURPORT

It is Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s mercy that He advises everyone-even caṇḍālas, mlecchas and yavanas-to chant the holy name of the Lord. In other words, one who has taken to chanting the holy names Kṛṣṇa and Hari has already received Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s mercy. The Lord’s request to chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa is now extended to everyone in the world through this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. Whoever follows Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s instructions will certainly be purified, and one who sincerely chants the holy name offenselessly is already more than a brāhmaṇa. Unfortunately there are many fools and rascals in India who do not allow Western Vaiṣṇavas to enter certain temples. Such rascals do not clearly understand the Vedas. As stated previously: yan-nāmadheya-śravaṇānukīrtanād.

TEXT 188

sei kahe,–'more yadi kailā aṅgīkāra eka ājñā deha,–sevā kari ye tomāra

SYNONYMS

sei kahe-the Mohammedan governor said; more-me; yadi-if; kailā aṅgīkāra-You have accepted; eka ājñā-one order; deha-give; sevā-service; kari-I may render; ye-so that; tomāra-Your.

TRANSLATION

The Mohammedan governor then said, "Since You have so kindly accepted me, please give me some order so that I can render You some service."

PURPORT

If one is purified by following Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's orders-that is, by chanting the holy name of Kṛṣṇa-one must certainly be eager to render service to the Lord. This is the test. When one engages enthusiastically in the Lord's service, it is to be understood that he is reaping the results of chanting the names of Kṛṣṇa and Hari.

TEXT 189

go-brāhmaṇa-vaiṣṇave hiṁsā karyāchi apāra sei pāpa ha-ite mora ha-uka nistāra go-brāhmaṇa-vaiṣṇave-to the cows, brāhmaṇas and Vaiṣṇavas; hiṁsā-violence and envy; karyāchi-I have done; apāra-unlimitedly; sei pāpa ha-ite-from those sinful activities; mora-my; ha-uka-let there be; nistāra-liberation.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

The Mohammedan governor then prayed for liberation from the unlimited sinful activities he had previously incurred by being envious of brāhmaṇas and Vaiṣṇavas and killing cows.

PURPORT

By chanting the holy names Kṛṣṇa and Hari, one is certainly liberated from sinful activities, such as killing cows or insulting brāhmaṇas and Vaiṣṇavas. It is most sinful to kill cows and insult brāhmaṇas and Vaiṣṇavas. The karma incurred by such activity is very great, but one can immediately nullify all this karma by surrendering to Lord Kṛṣṇa and chanting His holy name. After being released from one's sinful reactions (karma), one becomes eager to serve the Lord. This is the test. Since the Mohammedan governor was immediately purified in the presence of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he could utter the names of Kṛṣṇa and Hari. Consequently he was anxious to render some service, and the Lord, anxious to fulfill his desires, immediately had the devotee Mukunda Datta inform the governor that there was some service to render.

tabe mukunda datta kahe,–'śuna, mahāśaya

TRANSLATION

Finally Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu bade farewell to the mahā-pātra. Standing on the river bank and looking at the boat, the mahā-pātra began to cry.

TEXT 198

SYNONYMS

mantreśvara-named Mantreśvara; duṣṭa-nade-at a dangerous spot in the river; pāra karāila-arranged to cross; pichaldā paryanta-up to the place named Pichaldā; sei-that; yavana-Mohammedan governor; āila-accompanied Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

The Mohammedan governor accompanied Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu past Mantreśvara. This place was very dangerous due to pirates. He took the Lord to a place named Pichaldā, which was near Mantreśvara.

The very wide mouth of the Ganges near present-day Diamond Harbor was called Mantreśvara. Through the Ganges, the boat entered the Rūpa-nārāyaṇa River and reached the village of Pichaldā. Pichaldā and Mantreśvara are located very close together. After passing Mantreśvara, the Mohammedan governor accompanied the Lord as far as Pichaldā.

TEXT 200

TRANSLATION

Finally Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu bade the governor farewell. The intense ecstatic love exhibited by the governor cannot be described.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu bade farewell to the Mohammedan governor at Pichaldā. Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī herein states that the governor experienced symptoms of ecstatic love due to being separated from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. These symptoms, he admits, cannot be described.

SYNONYMS

eka-dina-one day; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tathā-there; kariyā nivāsa-residing; prāte-in the morning; kumārahaṭṭe-the town named Kumārahaṭṭa; āilā-reached; yāhāṅ-where; śrīnivāsa-the home of Śrīnivāsa Ṭhākura.

TRANSLATION

The Lord stayed at Rāghava Paṇḍita's place for only one day. The next morning, He went to Kumārahaṭṭa, where Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura lived.

PURPORT

The present name of Kumārahaṭṭa is Hālisahara. After Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted sannyāsa, Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura-due to separation from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu-left Navadvīpa and went to Hālisahara to live.

From Kumārahaṭṭa, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to Kāñcanapallī (known as Kāṅcaḍāpāḍā), where Śivānanda Sena lived. After staying two days at Śivānanda's house, the Lord went to the house of Vāsudeva Datta. From there He went to the western side of Navadvīpa to the village called Vidyānagara. From Vidyānagara He went to Kuliyā-grāma and stayed at Mādhava dāsa's house. He stayed there one week and excused the offenses of Devānanda and others. Due to Kavirāja Gosvāmī's mentioning the name of Śāntipurācārya, some people think that Kuliyā is a village near Kāṅcaḍāpāḍā. Due to this mistaken idea, they invented another place known as New Kuliyāra Pāṭa. Actually such a place does not exist. Leaving the house of Vāsudeva Datta, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to the house of Advaita Ācārya. From there He went to the western side of Navadvīpa to Vidyānagara and stayed at the house of Vidyā-vācaspati. These accounts are given in the Caitanya-bhāgavata, Caitanya-maṅgala, Caitanya-candrodaya-nāṭaka and Caitanya-carita-kāvya. Śrīla Kavirāja Gosvāmī has not vividly described this entire tour; therefore, on the basis of Caitanya-caritāmṛta, some unscrupulous people have invented a place called Kuliyāra Pāṭa near Kāṅcaḍāpāḍā.

vācaspati-gṛhe-at the house of Vidyā-vācaspati; prabhu-the Lord; yemate-as; rahilā-stayed there for some time; loka-bhiḍa bhaye-due to fear of crowds of people; yaiche-just as; kuliyā āilā-He came to Kuliyā, the present city of Navadvīpa.

TRANSLATION

The Lord remained some time at the house of Vidyā-vācaspati, but then, because it was too crowded, He went to Kuliyā.

PURPORT

The house of Vidyā-vācaspati was located at Vidyānagara, which was near Koladvīpa, or Kuliyā. It was here that Devānanda Paṇḍita was residing. This information is found in Caitanya-bhāgavata (Madhya-līlā, Chapter Twenty-one). In Caitanya-candrodaya-nāṭaka, the following statement is given about Kuliyā. Tataḥ kumārahaṭṭe śrīvāsa-paṇḍita-vāṭyām abhyāyayau: "From there the Lord went to the house of Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita in Kumārahaṭṭa." Tato 'dvaita-vāṭīm abhyetya haridāsenābhivanditas tathaiva taraṇī-vartmanā navadvīpasya pāre kuliyā-nāma-grāme mādhava-dāsa-vāṭyām uttīrṇavān. evaṁ sapta-dināni tatra sthitvā punas taṭa-vartmanā eva calitavān: "From the house of Śrīvāsa Ācārya, the Lord went to the house of Advaita Ācārya, where He was offered obeisances by Haridāsa Ṭhākura. The Lord then took a boat to the other side of Navadvīpa to a place called Kuliyā, where He stayed seven days at the house of Mādhava dāsa. He then proceeded along the banks of the Ganges."

In the Śrī Caitanya-carita-mahā-kāvya, it is stated, anyedyuḥ sa śrī-navadvīpa-bhūmeḥ pāre gaṅgaṁ paścime kvāpi deśe, śrīmān sarva-prāṇināṁ tat-tad-aṅgair netrānandaṁ samyag āgatya tene: "The Lord went to the eastern side of the Ganges at Navadvīpa, and everyone was pleased to see the Lord coming."

In the Caitanya-bhāgavata (Antya-khaṇḍa, Chapter Three), it is stated, sarva-pāriṣada-saṅge śrī-gaurasundara ācambite āsi' uttarilā tāṅra ghara: "The Lord suddenly came to Vidyānagara with a full party and stayed there in the house of Vidyā-vācaspati," Navadvīpādi sarva-dike haila dhvani: "Thus throughout Navadvīpa, the Lord's arrival was made known." Vācaspati-ghare āilā nyāsi-cūḍāmaṇi: "Thus the chief of all the sannyāsīs, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, arrived at the house of Vidyā-vācaspati." As further stated:

"When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu stayed at Vidyā-vācaspati's house, many hundreds and thousands of people went to see Him and chant the holy name of Hari. It was so crowded that people could not even find a place to walk; therefore they made room by clearing out the jungles near the village. Many roads were automatically excavated, and many people also came by boat to see the Lord. So many came that it was difficult for the boatmen to get them across the river. When Vidyā-vācaspati suddenly arrived, he made arrangements for many boats to receive these people, but the people would not wait for the boats. Somehow or other they crossed the river and hurried toward the house of Vidyā-vācaspati. Due to this great crowd, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu secretly went to Kuliyā-nagara. After the Lord left Vidyānagara, however, all the people heard news of His leaving. They then accompanied Vācaspati to Kuliyā-nagara. Since the news of the Lord's arrival was immediately broadcast, large crowds arrived and greeted Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu with great jubilation. Indeed, when the crowd went to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, it increased ten thousand times in number. No one could say how many people crossed the river to see Him, but many hundreds of thousands made a great tumult when crossing the River Ganges. After crossing the river, everyone began to embrace one another because they heard the good news of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's arrival. Thus all the inhabitants of Kuliyā, the sinful, intermediate, and spiritually advanced, were delivered and glorified by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu."

As stated in Caitanya-bhāgavata (Antya-khaṇḍa, Chapter Six):

khānāyoḍā, baḍagāchi, āra dogāchiyā gaṅgāra opāra kabhu yāyena 'kuliyā'

As stated in Caitanya-maṅgala:

gaṅgā-snāna kari prabhu rāḍha-deśa diyā krame krame uttarilā nagara 'kuliyā' māyera vacane punaḥ gelā navadvīpa vārakoṇā-ghāṭa, nija vāḍīra samīpa

In the commentary of Premadāsa it is said:

nadīyāra mājhakhāne, sakala lokete jāne, 'kuliyā-pāhāḍapura' nāme sthāna.

Śrī Narahari Cakravartī, or Ghanaśyāma dāsa, has written in his Bhakti-ratnākara:

kuliyā pāhāḍapura dekha śrīnivāsa pūrve 'koladvīpa'-parvatākhya–e pracāra

In a book named Navadvīpa-parikrama, also written by Ghanaśyāma dāsa, it is stated: kuliyā-pāhāḍapura grāma pūrve koladvīpa-parvatākhyānanda nāma. Therefore one can conclude that the present-day city of Navadvīpa and the places known as Bāhirdvīpa, Kolera Gañja, Kola-āmāda, Kolera Daha, Gadakhāli, etc. were known as Kuliyā, but the so-called Kuliyāra Pāṭa is not the original Kuliyā.

SYNONYMS

mādhava-dāsa-gṛhe-at the house of Mādhava dāsa; tathā-there; śacīra nandana-the son of mother Śacī; lakṣa-koṭi loka-many hundreds and thousands of people; tathā-there; pāila daraśana-got His audience.

TRANSLATION

When the Lord stayed at the house of Mādhava dāsa, many hundreds and thousands of people came to see Him.

PURPORT

Mādhava dāsa is identified as follows. In the family of Śrīkara Caṭṭopādhyāya, Yudhiṣṭhira Caṭṭopādhyāya took his birth. Formerly, he and his family members lived in Bilvagrāma and Pāṭuli. From there he went to Kuliyā Pāhāḍapura, formerly known as Pāḍapura. The eldest son of Yudhiṣṭhira Caṭṭopādhyāya is known as Mādhava dāsa, the second son was called Haridāsa, and the youngest son was called Kṛṣṇasampatti Caṭṭopādhyāya. The three brothers' nicknames were Chakaḍi, Tinakaḍi and Dukaḍi. The grandson of Mādhava dāsa was named Vaṁśīvadana, and his grandson Rāmacandra and their descendants are still living at Vāghnāpāḍā, or Vaiñcī.

'hiraṇya', 'govardhana',–dui sahodara

saptagrāme bāra-lakṣa mudrāra īśvara

SYNONYMS

hiraṇya-Hiraṇya; govardhana-Govardhana; dui sahodara-two brothers; saptagrāme-in the village named Saptagrāma; bāra-lakṣa-1,200,000; mudrāra-of coins; īśvara-the masters.

TRANSLATION

Two brothers named Hiraṇya and Govardhana, who were residents of Saptagrāma, had an income of 1,200,000 rupees.

PURPORT

Hiraṇya and Govardhana were inhabitants of Saptagrāma in the district of Hugalī. Actually they were inhabitants not of Saptagrāma, but a nearby village named Kṛṣṇapura. They took their birth in a big kāyastha family, and although their family title has not been ascertained, it is known that they came from an aristocratic family. The elder brother's name was Hiraṇya Majumadāra, and the younger brother's name was Govardhana Majumadāra. Śrī Raghunātha dāsa was the son of Govardhana Majumadāra. Their family priest was Balarāma Ācārya, who was a favorite of Haridāsa Ṭhākura's, and the family's spiritual master was Yadunandana Ācārya, a favorite of Vāsudeva Datta's.

The village of Saptagrāma is located on the eastern railway from Calcutta to Burdwan, and presently the railway station is called Triśabighā. In those days there was a large river there known as the Sarasvatī, and present-day Triśabighā is a great port. In 1592, the Pāṭhānas invaded, and due to a flooding of the Sarasvatī River in the year 1632, this great port was partially destroyed. It is said that in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries, Portuguese businessmen used to come aboard their ships. In those days, Saptagrāma, situated on the southern side of Bengal, was very rich and popular. The merchants, who were the principal residents, were called Saptagrāma suvarṇa-vaṇik. There were very many rich people there, and Hiraṇya Majumadāra and Govardhana Majumadāra belonged to the kāyastha community. They also were very rich, so much so that it is mentioned in this verse that their annual income as landlords amounted to 1,200,000 rupees. In this connection, one may refer to Ādi-līlā (Chapter Eleven, verse 41), which describes Uddhāraṇa Datta, who also belonged to the Saptagrāmī suvarṇa-vaṇik community.

TRANSLATION

Since Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was omniscient, He could understand Raghunātha dāsa's mind. The Lord therefore instructed him with the following reassuring words.

TEXT 237

"sthira hañā ghare yāo, nā hao vātula krame krame pāya loka bhava-sindhu-kūla

SYNONYMS

sthira hañā-being patient; ghare yāo-go back home; nā-do not; hao-become; vātula-crazy; krame krame-gradually; pāya-gets; loka-a person; bhava-sindhu-kūla-the far shore of the ocean of material existence.

TRANSLATION

"Be patient and return home. Don't be a crazy fellow. By and by you will be able to cross the ocean of material existence.

PURPORT

As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.14.58):

samāśritā ye pada-pallava-plavaṁ
mahat-padaṁ puṇya-yaśo-murāreḥ bhavāmbudhir vatsa-padaṁ paraṁ padaṁ padaṁ padaṁ yad vipadāṁ na teṣām

This material world is just like a big ocean. It begins with Brahmaloka and extends to Pātālaloka, and there are many planets, or islands, in this ocean. Not knowing about devotional service, the living entity wanders about this ocean, just as a man tries to swim to reach the shore. Our struggle for existence is similar to this. Everyone is trying to get out of the ocean of material existence. One cannot immediately reach the coast, but if one endeavors, he can cross the ocean by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's mercy. One may be very eager to cross this ocean, but he cannot attain success by acting like a madman. He must swim over the ocean very patiently and intelligently under the instructions of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu or His representative. Then, one day, he will reach the shore and return home, back to Godhead.

markaṭa-vairāgya nā kara loka dekhāñā yathā-yogya viṣaya bhuñja' anāsakta hañā

SYNONYMS

markaṭa-vairāgya-monkey renunciation; nā kara-do not do; loka-to the people; dekhāñā-showing off; yathā-yogya-as it is befitting; viṣaya-material things; bhuñja'-enjoy; anāsakta-without attachment; hañā-being.

TRANSLATION

"You should not make yourself a showbottle devotee and become a false renunciant. For the time being, enjoy the material world in a befitting way and do not become attached to it."

PURPORT

The word markaṭa-vairāgya, indicating false renunciation, is very important in this verse. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, in commenting on this word, points out that monkeys make an external show of renunciation by not accepting clothing and by living naked in the forest. In this way they consider themselves renunciants, but actually they are very busy enjoying sense gratification with dozens of female monkeys. Such renunciation is called markaṭa-vairāgye-the renunciation of a monkey. One cannot be really renounced until one actually becomes disgusted with material activity and sees it as a stumbling block to spiritual advancement. Renunciation should not be phalgu, temporary, but should exist throughout one's life. Temporary renunciation, or monkey renunciation, is like the renunciation one feels at a cremation ground. When a man takes a dead body to the crematorium, he sometimes thinks, "This is the final end of the body. Why am I working so hard day and night?" Such sentiments naturally arise in the mind of any man who goes to a crematorial ghāṭa. However, as soon as he returns from the cremation grounds, he again engages in material activity for sense enjoyment. This is called śmaśāna-vairāgya, or markaṭa-vairāgya.

In order to render service to the Lord, one may accept necessary things. If one lives in this way, he may actually become renounced. In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.108), it is said:

yāvatā syāt sva-nirvāhaḥ svīkuryāt tāvad arthavit ādhikye nyūnatāyāṁ ca cyavate paramārthataḥ

"The bare necessities of life must be accepted, but one should not superfluously increase his necessities. Nor should they be unnecessarily decreased. One should simply accept what is necessary to help one advance spiritually."

In his Durgama-saṅgamanī, Śrī Jīva Gosvāmī comments that the word sva-nirvāhaḥ actually means sva-sva-bhakti-nirvāhaḥ. The experienced devotee will accept only those material things that will help him render service to the Lord. In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.256), markaṭa-vairāgya, or phalgu-vairāgya, is explained as follows:

prāpañcikatayā buddhyā
hari-sambandhi-vastunaḥ
mumukṣubhiḥ parityāgo
vairāgyaṁ phalgu kathyate

"Whatever is favorable for the rendering of service to the Lord should be accepted and should not be rejected as a material thing." Yukta-vairāgya, or befitting renunciation, is thus explained:

anāsaktasya viṣayān
yathārham upayuñjataḥ
nirbandhaḥ kṛṣṇa-sambandhe

yuktaṁ vairāgyam ucyate

"Things should be accepted for the Lord's service and not for one's personal sense gratification. If one accepts something without attachment and accepts it because it is related to Kṛṣṇa, one's renunciation is called yukta-vairāgya." Since Kṛṣṇa is the Absolute Truth, whatever is accepted for His service is also the Absolute Truth.

The word markaṭa-vairāgya is used by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to indicate so-called Vaiṣṇavas who dress themselves in loincloths trying to imitate Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī. Such people carry a beadbag and chant, but at heart they are always thinking about getting women and money. Unknown to others, these markaṭa-vairāgīs maintain women but externally present themselves as renunciants. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was very much opposed to these markaṭa-vairāgīs, or pseudo-Vaiṣṇavas.

TRANSLATION

"You may see me at Nīlācala, Jagannātha Purī, when I return after visiting Vṛndāvana. By that time you can think of some trick to escape.

TEXT 241

se chala se-kāle kṛṣṇa sphurābe tomāre kṛṣṇa-kṛpā yāṅre, tāre ke rākhite pāre"

SYNONYMS

se chala-that trick; se-kāle-at that time; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; sphurābe-will show; tomāre-unto you; kṛṣṇa-kṛpā-the mercy of Kṛṣṇa; yāṅre-upon whom; tāre-him; ke-who; rākhite-to keep; pāre-is able.

TRANSLATION

"What kind of means you will have to use at that time will be revealed by Kṛṣṇa. If one has Kṛṣṇa's mercy, no one can check him."

PURPORT

Although Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa was very anxious to join Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Lord advised him to wait for the mercy of Lord Kṛṣṇa. He recommended that Raghunātha dāsa keep his Kṛṣṇa consciousness firmly fixed in his heart while externally behaving like an ordinary man. This is a trick for everyone advanced in Kṛṣṇa consciousness. One can live in society like an ordinary human being, but at the same time one's own business should be to satisfy Kṛṣṇa and spread His glories. A Kṛṣṇa conscious person should not be absorbed in material things, for his only business is the devotional service of the Lord. If one is engaged in this way, Kṛṣṇa will certainly bestow His mercy. As Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu advised Raghunātha dāsa: yathā-yogya viṣaya bhuñja' anāsakta hañā. The same is repeated: antare niṣṭhā kara, bāhye loka-vyavahāra. This means that one must have no other desire within his heart than to serve Kṛṣṇa. On the basis of such a conviction, one can cultivate Kṛṣṇa consciousness. This is confirmed in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.200):

laukikī vaidikī vāpi yā kriyā kriyate mune hari-sevānukūlaiva
sā kāryā bhaktim icchatā

A devotee may act as an ordinary human being or as a strict follower of Vedic injunctions. In either case, everything he does is favorable for the advancement of devotional service because he is in Kṛṣṇa consciousness.

TRANSLATION

When Raghunātha dāsa's father and mother saw that their son was acting like a householder, they became very happy. Because of this, they slackened their guard.

PURPORT

When Raghunātha dāsa's father and mother saw that their son was no longer acting like a crazy fellow and was responsibly attending to his duties, they became very happy. The eleven people-five watchmen, four personal servants and two brāhmaṇas-who were guarding him became less strict in their vigilance. When Raghunātha dāsa actually took up his household affairs, his parents reduced the number of guards.

tāṅra dainya dekhi'-by seeing their humility; śuni'-or even hearing about it; pāṣāṇa-stone; bidare-becomes melted; āmi-I; tuṣṭa hañā-being very pleased; tabe-then; kahiluṅ doṅhāre-said to both of them; uttama hañā-being actually superior in every respect; hīna-inferior; kari'-proposing as; mānaha-you accept; āpanāre-yourselves; acire-very soon; karibe-will do; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; tomāra-of you; uddhāre-liberation.

TRANSLATION

"Indeed, the humility of these two brothers could even melt stone. Because I was very pleased with their behavior, I told them, 'Although you are both very exalted, you consider yourselves inferior, and because of this, Kṛṣṇa will very soon deliver you.'

PURPORT

Such are the qualifications of a pure devotee. Materially one may be very opulent, experienced, influential and educated, but if one still thinks himself lower than straw in the street, one attracts the attention of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu or Lord Kṛṣṇa. Although Mahārāja Pratāparudra was a king, he took up a broom to cleanse the road for Lord Jagannātha's Ratha chariot. Because of this humble service, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was very pleased with the King, and for that reason the Lord embraced him. According to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's instructions, a devotee should never be puffed up by material power. He should know that material power is the result of one's past good activities (karma) and is consequently transient. At any moment all one's material opulence can be finished; therefore a devotee is never proud of such opulence. He is always humble and meek, considering himself lower than a piece of straw. Because of this, the devotees are eligible to return home, back to Godhead.

SYNONYMS

tabu-still; vṛndāvana yāha'-You go to Vṛndāvana; loka śikhāite-to teach the people in general; seita-that; karibe-You will do; tomāra-of You; yei-what; laya-takes; citte-in the mind.

TRANSLATION

"Although wherever You stay is Vṛndāvana, You still go to Vṛndāvana just to instruct people. Otherwise, You do whatever You think best."

PURPORT

It was not essential for Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to go to Vṛndāvana, for wherever He stayed was immediately converted to Vṛndāvana. Indeed, there was also the River Ganges, the River Yamunā and all other places of pilgrimage. This was also expressed by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself when He danced in the Ratha-yātrā. At that time He said that His very mind was Vṛndāvana (mora-mana–vṛndāvana). Because His mind was Vṛndāvana, all the pastimes of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa were taking place within Himself. Nonetheless, just to teach people, He visited bhauma-vṛndāvana, Vṛndāvana-dhāma in this material world. In this way the Lord instructed everyone to visit Vṛndāvana-dhāma, which is a very holy place. Materialists consider Vṛndāvana-dhāma an unclean city because there are many monkeys and dogs there, and along the bank of the Yamunā there is refuse. Some time ago, a materialistic man asked me, "Why are you living in Vṛndāvana? Why have you selected such a dirty place to live after retiring?" Such a person cannot understand that Vṛndāvana-dhāma is always a representation of the original Vṛndāvana-dhāma. Consequently Vṛndāvana-dhāma is as worshipable as Lord Kṛṣṇa. Ārādhyo bhagavān vrajeśa-tanayas tad-dhāma vṛndāvanam: according to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's philosophy, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa and His abode, Vṛndāvana, are equally worshipable. Sometimes materialistic people who have no spiritual understanding go to Vṛndāvana as tourists. One who goes to Vṛndāvana with such materialistic vision cannot derive any spiritual benefit. Such a person is not convinced that Kṛṣṇa and Vṛndāvana are identical. Since they are identical, Vṛndāvana is as worshipable as Lord Kṛṣṇa. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's vision (mora-mana-vṛndāvana) is different from the vision of an ordinary materialistic person. At the Ratha-yātrā festival, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, absorbed in the ecstasy of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, dragged Lord Kṛṣṇa back to Vṛndāvana-dhāma. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu spoke of this in the verses beginning āhuś ca te (Madhya 13.136).

In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.84.13) it is stated:

yasyātma-buddhiḥ kuṇape tridhātuke
svadhīḥ kalatrādiṣu bhauma ijya-dhīḥ
yat-tīrtha-buddhiḥ salile na karhicij
janeṣv abhijñeṣu sa eva gokharaḥ

"A human being who identifies this body made of three elements with his self, who considers the by-products of the body to be his kinsmen, who considers the land of birth as worshipable, and who goes to the place of pilgrimage simply to take a bath rather than meet men of transcendental knowledge there, is to be considered like an ass or a cow."

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu personally renovated Vṛndāvana-dhāma and advised His chief disciples, Rūpa and Sanātana, to develop it and open it to attract the spiritual vision of the general populace. At present there are about five thousand temples in Vṛndāvana, and still our society, the International Society for Krishna Consciousness, is constructing a huge, magnificent temple for the worship of Lord Balarāma, Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa and Guru-Gaurāṅga. Since there is no prominent Kṛṣṇa-Balarāma temple in Vṛndāvana, we are attempting to construct one so that people will be attracted to Kṛṣṇa-Balarāma, or Nitāi-Gauracandra. Vrajendra-nandana yei, śacī suta haila sei. Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says that Balarāma and the son of Mahārāja Nanda have advented Themselves as Gaura-Nitāi. To propagate this fundamental principle, we are establishing a Kṛṣṇa-Balarāma temple to broadcast to the world that worship of Gaura-Nitāi is the same as worship of Kṛṣṇa-Balarāma.

Although it is very difficult to enter into the Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa pastimes, most of the devotees of Vṛndāvana are attracted to the Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa līlā. However, since Nitāi-Gauracandra are direct incarnations of Balarāma and Kṛṣṇa, we can be directly in touch with Lord Balarāma and Lord Kṛṣṇa through Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Nityānanda Prabhu. Those who are highly elevated in Kṛṣṇa consciousness can enter into the pastimes of Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa through the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. It is said: śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya rādhā-kṛṣṇa nahe anya. Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu is a combination of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa.

Sometimes materialists, forgetting the pastimes of Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa and Kṛṣṇa-Balarāma, go to Vṛndāvana, accept the land's spiritual facilities and engage in material activity. This is against the teachings of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The prākṛta-sahajiyās proclaim themselves vraja-vāsī or dhāma-vāsī, but they are mainly engaged in sense gratification. Thus they become more and more implicated in the materialistic way of life. Those who are pure devotees in Kṛṣṇa consciousness condemn their activities. The eternal vraja-vāsīs like Svarūpa Dāmodara did not even come to Vṛndāvana-dhāma. Śrī Puṇḍarīka Vidyānidhi, Śrī Haridāsa Ṭhākura, Śrīvāsa Paṇḍita, Śivānanda Sena, Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya, Śrī Śikhi Māhiti, Śrī Mādhavīdevī and Śrī Gadādhara Paṇḍita Gosvāmī never visited Vṛndāvana-dhāma. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura points out that we have no authorized documents stating that these exalted personalities visited Vṛndāvana. Nonetheless, we find many nondevotees, Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, prākṛta-sahajiyās, fruitive workers, mental speculators and many others with material motives going to Vṛndāvana to live. Many of these people go there to solve their economic problems by becoming beggars. Although anyone living in Vṛndāvana somehow or other is benefited, the real Vṛndāvana is appreciated only by a pure devotee. As stated in the Brahma-saṁhitā: premāñjana-cchurita-bhakti-vilocanena. When one has purified eyes, he can see that Śrī Vṛndāvana and the original Goloka Vṛndāvana planet in the spiritual sky are identical.

Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura, Śrīnivāsa Ācārya, Śrī Jagannātha dāsa Bābājī Mahārāja, Śrī Bhagavān dāsa Bābājī Mahārāja, Śrīla Gaurakiśora dāsa Bābājī Mahārāja and later Śrī Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura of Calcutta always engaged in nāma-bhajana and certainly did not live anywhere but Vṛndāvana. Presently, the members of the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement throughout the world live in materially opulent cities, such as London, New York, Los Angeles, Paris, Moscow, Zurich and Stockholm. However, we are satisfied with following in the footsteps of Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura and other ācāryas. Because we live in the temples of Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa and continuously hold hari-nāma-saṅkīrtana-the chanting of Hare Kṛṣṇa-we consequently live in Vṛndāvana and nowhere else. We are also following in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by attempting to construct a temple in Vṛndāvana for our disciples throughout the world to visit.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Sixteenth Chapter, describing Lord Caitanya’s attempt to go to Vṛndāvana.

18.5.17 Chapter 17

The Lord Travels to Vṛndāvana

The following summary of the Seventeenth Chapter is given by Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. After attending the Ratha-yātrā ceremony of Śrī Jagannātha, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu decided to start for Vṛndāvana. Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya and Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī selected a brāhmaṇa named Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya to personally assist Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Early in the morning before sunrise, the Lord started for the town of Kaṭaka. North of Kaṭaka, He penetrated a dense forest and visited many tigers and elephants, whom He engaged in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Whenever He had a chance to visit a village, He would beg alms and acquire some rice and vegetables. If there were no village, He would cook whatever rice remained and collect some spinach from the forest to eat. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was very pleased with the behavior of Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya.

In this way the Lord passed through the jungle of Jhārikhaṇḍa and finally reached Vārāṇasī. After taking His bath at the Maṇikarṇikā-ghāṭa at Vārāṇasī, He met Tapana Miśra, who took the Lord to his place and respectfully gave Him a comfortable residence. At Vārāṇasī, Vaidya Candraśekhara, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s old friend, also rendered service unto Him. Seeing the behavior of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, one Mahārāṣṭrīya brāhmaṇa informed Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī, the leader of the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs. Prakāśānanda made various accusations against the Lord. The Mahārāṣṭrīya brāhmaṇa was very sorry about this, and he brought the news to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, inquiring from Him why the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs did not utter the holy name of Kṛṣṇa. In reply, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said that they were offenders and that one should not associate with them. In this way the Lord bestowed His blessings upon the brāhmaṇa.

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu next passed through Prayāga and Mathurā and then took His lunch at the home of a Sānoḍiyā brāhmaṇa, a disciple of Mādhavendra Purī. He bestowed His blessings upon the brāhmaṇa by accepting lunch at his place. Thereafter the Lord visited the twelve forests of Vṛndāvana and was filled with great ecstatic love. As He toured the Vṛndāvana forests, He heard the chirping of parrots and other birds.

SYNONYMS

nūtana-new; saṅgī-associate; ha-ibeka-must be; snigdha-very peaceful; yāṅra-whose; mana-mind; aiche-such; yabe-if; pāi-I get; tabe-then; la-i-I take; eka jana-one person.

TRANSLATION

"Such a person must be a new man, and he must have a peaceful mind. If I can obtain such a man, I shall agree to take him with Me."

PURPORT

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu formerly went to South India, a brāhmaṇa named Kālā Kṛṣṇadāsa went with Him. It was Kālā Kṛṣṇadāsa who fell victim to a woman, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu had to take the trouble to free him from the clutches of the gypsies. Therefore the Lord here says that He wants a new man who is peaceful in mind. One whose mind is not peaceful is agitated by certain drives, especially sex desire, even though he be in the company of Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Such a man will become a victim of women and will fall down even in the company of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Māyā is so strong that unless one is determined not to fall victim, even the Supreme Personality of Godhead cannot give protection. The Supreme Lord and His representative always want to give protection, but a person must take advantage of their personal contact. If one thinks that the Supreme Personality of Godhead or His representative is an ordinary man, he will certainly fall down. Thus Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not want a person like Kālā Kṛṣṇadāsa to accompany Him. He wanted someone who was determined, who had a peaceful mind and who was not agitated by ulterior motives.

TEXT 15

svarūpa kahe,–ei balabhadra-bhaṭṭācārya tomāte susnigdha baḍa, paṇḍita, sādhu, ārya

SYNONYMS

svarūpa kahe-Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī said; ei-this; balabhadra-bhaṭṭācārya-Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; tomāte-unto You; su-snigdha-affectionate; baḍa-very; paṇḍita-educated; sādhu-honest; ārya-advanced in spiritual consciousness.

TRANSLATION

Svarūpa Dāmodara then said, ”Here is Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya, who has great love for You. He is an honest, learned scholar, and he is advanced in spiritual consciousness.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted a new man, not a person like Kālā Kṛṣṇadāsa who would fall for women. Svarūpa Dāmodara therefore immediately pointed out a new brāhmaṇa named Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya. Śrī Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī had studied this person very thoroughly and had seen that he had great love for Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Not only did he love the Lord, but he was also learned and honest. He was not duplicitous, and he was advanced in Kṛṣṇa consciousness. According to a Bengali proverb, ati bhakti corera lakṣaṇa: ”Too much devotion is a symptom of a thief.” A person who assumes himself to be a great devotee but mentally is thinking of something else is duplicitous. One who is not duplicitous is called sādhu. Svarūpa Dāmodara immediately pointed out that Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya was quite fit to accompany the Lord because he was a learned scholar and was simple and had great love for Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He was also advanced in Kṛṣṇa consciousness; therefore he was considered appropriate to accompany the Lord as a personal servant.

The word snigdha (very peaceful) and the word su-snigdha (affectionate) are used in verses fourteen and fifteen, and they are also found in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.1.8): brūyuḥ snigdhasya śiṣyasya guravo guhyam apy uta. ”A disciple who has actual love for his spiritual master is endowed, by the blessings of the spiritual master, with all confidential knowledge.” Śrīla Śrīdhara Svāmī has commented that the word snigdhasya means prema-vataḥ. The word prema-vataḥ indicates that one has great love for his spiritual master.

TEXT 16

TRANSLATION

”If You can also take him with You, we will be very happy. If two people go with You through the jungle, there will certainly be no difficulty or inconvenience.

TEXT 19

sei vipra vahi’ nibe vastrāmbu-bhājana bhaṭṭācārya bhikṣā dibe kari’ bhikṣāṭana sei vipra-the other brāhmaṇa; vahi’ nibe-will carry; vastra-ambu-bhājana-the cloth and waterpot; bhaṭṭācārya-Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; bhikṣā dibe-will arrange for cooking; kari’-performing; bhikṣā-aṭana-collecting alms.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”The other brāhmaṇa can carry Your cloth and waterpot, and Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya will collect alms and cook for You.”

TEXT 20

SYNONYMS

prātaḥ-kāle-early in the morning; bhakta-gaṇa-all the devotees; prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nā dekhiyā-not seeing; anveṣaṇa kari'-searching; phire-wander; vyākula hañā-becoming very anxious.

TRANSLATION

Because the Lord had departed, the devotees, unable to see Him early in the morning, began to search for Him with great anxiety.

TEXT 23

svarūpa-gosāñi sabāya kaila nivāraṇa nivṛtta hañā rahe sabe jāni' prabhura mana svarūpa-gosāñi-Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī; sabāya-unto everyone; kaila-did; nivāraṇa-forbidding; nivṛtta hañā-being restrained; rahe-remain; sabe-all; jāni'-knowing; prabhura mana-the mind of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

While all the devotees were searching for the Lord, Svarūpa Dāmodara restrained them. Then everyone fell silent, knowing the mind of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 24

matta-hasti-yūtha āila karite jala-pāna

SYNONYMS

āra dine-another day; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kare-does; nadī snāna-bathing in the river; matta-hasti-yūtha-a herd of maddened elephants; āila-came; karite-to do; jala-pāna-drinking water.

TRANSLATION

Another day, while Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was bathing in a river, a herd of maddened elephants came there to drink water.

TEXT 31

prabhu jala-kṛtya kare, āge hastī āilā
'kṛṣṇa kaha' bali' prabhu jala pheli' mārilā

SYNONYMS

prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jala-kṛtya kare-bathed and was chanting the Gāyatrī mantra within the water; āge-in front; hastī-the elephants; āilā-came; kṛṣṇa kaha-chant Hare Kṛṣṇa; bali'-saying; prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jala pheli'-throwing water; mārilā-struck.

TRANSLATION

While the Lord was bathing and murmuring the Gāyatrī mantra, the elephants came before Him. The Lord immediately splashed some water on the elephants and asked them to chant the name of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was the Supreme personality of Godhead playing the part of a very great advanced devotee. On the mahā-bhāgavata platform, the devotee makes no distinction between friends and enemies. On that platform he sees everyone as a servant of Kṛṣṇa. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā:

vidyā-vinaya-sampanne brāhmaṇe gavi hastini śuni caiva śvapāke ca paṇḍitāḥ sama-darśinaḥ

"The humble sage, by virtue of true knowledge, sees with equal vision a learned and gentle brāhmaṇa, a cow, an elephant, a dog, and a dog-eater [outcaste]." (Bg. 5.18)

A mahā-bhāgavata, being learned and advanced in spiritual consciousness, sees no difference between a tiger, an elephant or a learned scholar. The test of advanced spiritual consciousness is that one becomes fearless. He envies no one, and he is always engaged in the Lord's service. He sees every living entity as an eternal part and parcel of the Lord, rendering service according to his capacity by the will of the Supreme Lord. As Bhagavad-gītā confirms:

sarvasya cāhaṁ hṛdi sanniviṣṭo
mattaḥ smṛtir jñānam apohanaṁ ca

"I am seated in everyone's heart, and from Me come remembrance, knowledge and forgetfulness." (Bg. 15.15)

The mahā-bhāgavata knows that Kṛṣṇa is in everyone's heart. Kṛṣṇa is dictating, and the living entity is following His dictations. Kṛṣṇa is within the heart of the tiger, elephant and boar. Therefore Kṛṣṇa tells them, "Here is a mahā-bhāgavata. Please do not disturb him." Why, then, should the animals be envious of such a great personality? Those who are neophytes or even a little progressed in devotional service should not try to imitate the mahā-bhāgavata. Rather, they should only follow in their footsteps. The word anukara means "imitating," and anusara means "trying to follow in the footsteps." We should not try to imitate the activities of a mahā-bhāgavata or Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Our best efforts should be exerted in trying to follow them according to our ability. The mahā-bhāgavata's heart is completely freed from material contamination, and he can become very dear even to fierce animals like tigers and elephants. Indeed, the mahā-bhāgavata treats them as his very intimate friends. On this platform there is no question of envy. When the Lord was passing through the forest, He was in ecstasy, thinking the forest to be Vṛndāvana. He was simply searching for Kṛṣṇa.

sei jala-bindu-kaṇā lāge yāra gāya

SYNONYMS

dhanyāḥ-fortunate, blessed; sma-certainly; mūḍha-matayaḥ-foolish, without good sense; api-although; hariṇyaḥ-she-deer; etāḥ-these; yāḥ-who; nanda-nandanam-the son of Mahārāja Nanda; upātta-vicitra-veśam-dressed very attractively; ākarṇya-hearing; veṇu-raṇitam-the sound of His flute; saha-kṛṣṇa-sārāḥ-accompanied by the black deer (their husbands); pūjām dadhuḥ-they worshiped; viracitām-performed; praṇaya-avalokaiḥ-by their affectionate glances.

TRANSLATION

”Blessed are all these foolish deer because they have approached the son of Mahārāja Nanda, who is gorgeously dressed and is playing on His flute. Indeed, both the does and the bucks worship the Lord with looks of love and affection.”

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.21.11) spoken by the gopīs of Vṛndāvana.

TEXT 37

hena-kāle vyāghra tathā āila pāñca-sāta vyāghra-mṛgī mili’ cale mahāprabhura sātha

SYNONYMS

hena-kāle-at this time; vyāghra-tigers; tathā-there; āila-came; pāñca-sāta-five to seven; vyāghra-mṛgī-the tigers and deer; mili’-coming together; cale-go; mahāprabhura sātha-with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

While Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was passing through the jungle, five or seven tigers came. Joining the deer, the tigers began to follow the Lord.

TEXT 38

dekhi’ mahāprabhura ’vṛndāvana’-smṛti haila vṛndāvana-guṇa-varṇana śloka paḍila

SYNONYMS

dekhi’-seeing; mahāprabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; vṛndāvana-of the holy land of Vṛndāvana; smṛti haila-there was remembrance; vṛndāvana-of Śrī Vṛndāvana; guṇa-of the qualities; varṇana-description; śloka-verse; paḍila-recited.

TRANSLATION

Seeing the tigers and deer following Him, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu immediately remembered the land of Vṛndāvana. He then began to recite a verse describing the transcendental quality of Vṛndāvana.

TEXT 39

yatra naisarga-durvairāḥ

sahāsan nṛ-mṛgādayaḥ mitrāṇīvājitāvāsa-druta-ruṭ-tarṣaṇādikam

SYNONYMS

yatra-where; naisarga-by nature; durvairāḥ-living in enmity; saha-āsan-live together; nṛ-human beings; mṛga-ādayaḥ-and animals; mitrāṇi-friends; iva-like; ajita-of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa; āvāsa-residence; druta-gone away; ruj-anger; tarṣaṇa-ādikam-thirst and so on.

TRANSLATION

"Vṛndāvana is the transcendental abode of the Lord. There is no hunger, anger or thirst there. Though naturally inimical, both human beings and fierce animals live together there in transcendental friendship."

PURPORT

This is a statement from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.13.60). After stealing the cowherd boys, calves and cows of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Lord Brahmā kept them asleep and hid them. After a moment, Brahmā returned to see Kṛṣṇa's condition. When he saw that Kṛṣṇa was still busy with His cowherd boyfriends and animals and was not disturbed, Lord Brahmā appreciated the transcendental opulence of Vṛndāvana.

TEXT 40

'kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kaha' kari' prabhu yabe balila
'kṛṣṇa' kahi' vyāghra-mṛga nācite lāgila

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kaha-chant Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa; kari'-in this way; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yabe-when; balila-uttered; kṛṣṇa kahi'-chanting the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; vyāghra-mṛga-the tigers and deer; nācite lāgila-began to dance.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said,"Chant Kṛṣṇa! Kṛṣṇa!" the tigers and deer began to dance and chant, "Kṛṣṇa!"

TEXT 41

nāce, kunde vyāghra-gaṇa mṛgī-gaṇa-saṅge balabhadra-bhaṭṭācārya dekhe apūrva-raṅge

SYNONYMS

nāce-dance; kunde-jump; vyāghra-gaṇa-the tigers; mṛgī-gaṇa-saṅge-with the does; balabhadra-bhaṭṭācārya-Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; dekhe-sees; apūrva-raṅge-with great wonder.

TRANSLATION

When all the tigers and does danced and jumped, Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya saw them and was struck with wonder.

TEXT 42

vyāghra-mṛga anyonye kare āliṅgana mukhe mukha diyā kare anyonye cumbana

SYNONYMS

vyāghra-mṛga-the tigers and deer; anyonye-one another; kare-do; āliṅgana-embracing; mukhe mukha diyā-touching one anothers' mouths; kare-do; anyonye cumbana-kissing one another.

TRANSLATION

Indeed, the tigers and deer began to embrace one another, and, touching mouths, they began to kiss.

TEXT 43

kautuka dekhiyā prabhu hāsite lāgilā tā-sabāke tāhāṅ chāḍi' āge cali' gelā kautuka dekhiyā-seeing this fun; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; hāsite lāgilā-began to smile; tā-sabāke-all of them; tāhāṅ chāḍi'-leaving there; āge-forward; cali' gelā-advanced.

SYNONYMS

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu saw all this fun, He began to smile. Finally He left the animals and continued on His way.

TEXT 44

mayūrādi pakṣi-gaṇa prabhure dekhiyā saṅge cale, 'kṛṣṇa' bali' nāce matta hañā

SYNONYMS

mayūra-ādi-beginning with peacocks; pakṣi-gaṇa-different types of birds; prabhure-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dekhiyā-seeing; saṅge cale-go with Him; kṛṣṇa bali'-chanting the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; nāce-dance; matta hañā-becoming mad.

TRANSLATION

Various birds, including the peacock, saw Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and began to follow Him, chanting and dancing. They were all maddened by the holy name of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 45

'hari-bola' bali' prabhu kare ucca-dhvani vṛkṣa-latā–praphullita, sei dhvani śuni'

SYNONYMS

hari-bola-the vibration of Hari-bol; bali'-chanting; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kare-makes; ucca-dhvani-a loud sound; vṛkṣa-latā-the trees and creepers; praphullita-very jubilant; sei-that; dhvani-sound; śuni'-hearing.

TRANSLATION

When the Lord loudly chanted "Hari bol!" the trees and creepers became jubilant to hear Him.

PURPORT

The loud chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra is so powerful that it can even penetrate the ears of trees and creepers-what to speak of animals and human beings. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu once asked Haridāsa Ṭhākura how trees and plants could be delivered, and Haridāsa Ṭhākura replied that the loud chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra would benefit not only trees and plants but insects and all other living beings. One should therefore not be disturbed by the loud chanting of Hare Kṛṣṇa, for it is beneficial not only to the chanter but to everyone who gets an opportunity to hear.

TEXT 46

'jhārikhaṇḍe' sthāvara-jaṅgama āche yata kṛṣṇa-nāma diyā kaila premete unmatta

SYNONYMS

jhārikhaṇḍe-in the place known as Jhārikhaṇḍa; sthāvara-jaṅgama-moving and not moving; āche-there are; yata-all; kṛṣṇa-nāma diyā-giving them the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kaila-made; premete-in ecstasy; unmatta-mad.

TRANSLATION

Thus all living entities-some moving and some standing still in the forest of Jhārikhaṇḍa-became maddened by hearing the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa vibrated by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

The great forest of Jhārikhaṇḍa is a great tract of land including Āṭagaḍa, Ḍheṅkānala, Āṅgula, Lāhārā, Kiyañjhaḍa, Bāmaḍā, Bonāi, Gāṅgapura, Choṭa Nāgapura, Yaśapura and Saragujā. All these places, which are covered with mountains and jungles, are known as Jhārikhaṇḍa.

TEXT 47

yei grāma diyā yāna, yāhāṅ karena sthiti se-saba grāmera lokera haya 'prema-bhakti'

SYNONYMS

yei grāma-which villages; diyā yāna-the Lord goes through; yāhāṅ-where; karena-takes; sthiti-rest; se-saba-all those; grāmera-of the villages; lokera-of the people; haya-there is awakening of; prema-bhakti-ecstatic love of God.

TRANSLATION

In all the villages through which the Lord passed and in all the places He rested on His journey, everyone was purified and awakened to ecstatic love of God.

TEXTS 48-49

keha yadi tāṅra mukhe śune kṛṣṇa-nāma tāṅra mukhe āna śune tāṅra mukhe āna sabe 'kṛṣṇa' 'hari' bali' nāce, kānde, hāse paramparāya 'vaiṣṇava' ha-ila sarva deśe

SYNONYMS

keha-someone; yadi-when; tāṅra mukhe-from His mouth; śune-hears; kṛṣṇa-nāma-chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra; tāṅra mukhe-from the mouth of such chanters; āna śune-someone else hears; tāṅra mukhe-and from his mouth; āna-someone else; sabe-all of them; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa's holy name; hari-another holy name of the Lord; bali'-chanting; nāce-dance; kānde-cry; hāse-smile; paramparāya-by disciplic succession; vaiṣṇava-devotees; ha-ila-became; sarva-deśe-in all countries.

TRANSLATION

When someone heard the chanting of the holy name from the mouth of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and someone else heard this chanting from that second person, and someone again heard this chanting from the third person, everyone in all countries became a Vaiṣṇava through such disciplic succession. Thus everyone chanted the holy name of Kṛṣṇa and Hari, and they danced, cried and smiled.

PURPORT

The transcendental power or potency of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra is herein explained. First, the holy name is vibrated by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. When someone hears from Him directly, he is purified. When another person hears from that person, he also is purified. In this way the purification process is advanced among pure devotees. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and no one can claim His potency. Nonetheless, if one is a pure devotee, hundreds and thousands of men can be purified by his vibration. This potency is within every living being, provided he chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra offenselessly and without material motives. When a pure devotee chants offenselessly, another person will become a Vaiṣṇava, and from him another Vaiṣṇava will emerge. This is the paramparā system.

TEXT 50

yadyapi prabhu loka-saṅghaṭṭera trāse prema 'gupta' karena, bāhire nā prakāśe

SYNONYMS

yadyapi-although; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; loka-saṅghaṭṭera-of crowds of people; trāse-being afraid; prema-ecstasy; gupta karena-keeps hidden; bāhire-externally; nā-does not; prakāśe-manifest.

TRANSLATION

The Lord did not always manifest His ecstasy. Being afraid of a great assembly of people, the Lord kept His ecstasy concealed.

TEXT 51

tathāpi tāṅra darśana-śravaṇa-prabhāve sakala deśera loka ha-ila 'vaiṣṇave'

SYNONYMS

tathāpi-still; tāṅra-His; darśana-of seeing; śravaṇa-of hearing; prabhāve-by the potency; sakala-all; deśera-of countries; loka-people; ha-ila-became; vaiṣṇave-pure devotees of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

Although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not manifest His natural ecstatic love, everyone became a pure devotee simply by seeing and hearing Him.

PURPORT

Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī has described Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as mahā-vadānya-avatāra, the most munificent incarnation. Although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is not physically present now, simply by chanting His holy name (śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu nityānanda śrī-advaita gadādhara śrīvāsādi-gaura-bhakta-vṛnda) people throughout the world are becoming devotees. This is due to the ecstatic chanting of the holy name of the Lord. It is said that a pure devotee can see the Lord every moment, and because of this he is empowered by the Lord. This is confirmed in the Brahma-saṁhitā: premāñjana-cchurita-bhakti-vilocanena santaḥ sadaiva hṛdayeṣu vilokayanti. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu appeared five hundred years ago, but it cannot be said that now the potency of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra is less powerful than it was in His presence. By hearing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu through the paramparā system, one can be purified. Therefore in this verse it is said: tathāpi tāṅra darśana-śravaṇa-prabhāve. It is not that everyone is able to see Kṛṣṇa or Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu physically, but if one hears about Him through books like Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta and through the paramparā system of pure Vaiṣṇavas, there is no difficulty in becoming a pure Vaiṣṇava, free from mundane desires and personal motivations.

TEXT 52

gauḍa, baṅga, utkala, dakṣiṇa-deśe giyā lokera nistāra kaila āpane bhramiyā

SYNONYMS

gauḍa-Bengal; baṅga-East Bengal; utkala-Orissa; dakṣiṇa-deśe-southern India; giyā-going; lokera-of all the people; nistāra-liberation; kaila-did; āpane-personally; bhramiyā-touring.

TRANSLATION

In this way, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu personally toured Bengal, East Bengal, Orissa and the southern countries, and He delivered all kinds of people by spreading Kṛṣṇa consciousness.

TEXT 53

mathurā yāibāra chale āsena jhārikhaṇḍa bhilla-prāya loka tāhāṅ parama-pāṣaṇḍa mathurā-to Mathurā; yāibāra-of going; chale-on the pretext; āsena-came; jhārikhaṇḍa-to Jhārikhaṇḍa; bhilla-prāya-like the Bheels, a kind of low people; loka-people; tāhāṅ-there; parama-pāṣaṇḍa-without God consciousness.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu came to Jhārikhaṇḍa on His way to Mathurā, He found that the people there were almost uncivilized and were devoid of God consciousness.

PURPORT

The word bhilla refers to a class of men belonging to the Bheels. The Bheels are like Black Africans, and they are lower than śūdras. Such people generally live in the jungle, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu had to meet them.

TEXT 54

nāma-prema diyā kaila sabāra nistāra caitanyera gūḍha-līlā bujhite śakti kāra

SYNONYMS

nāma-prema diyā-bestowing upon them ecstatic love and the holy name; kaila-did; sabāra nistāra-liberation of all of them; caitanyera-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; gūḍha-līlā-confidential pastimes; bujhite-to understand; śakti-the power; kāra-who has.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu gave even the Bheels an opportunity to chant the holy name and come to the platform of ecstatic love. Thus He delivered all of them. Who has the power to understand the transcendental pastimes of the Lord?

PURPORT

As evidence of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's mercy, we are experiencing that the people of Africa are taking to Kṛṣṇa consciousness, chanting and dancing and taking prasāda like other Vaiṣṇavas. This is all due to the power of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Who can understand how His potency is working all over the world?

TEXT 55

vana dekhi' bhrama haya–ei 'vṛndāvana' śaila dekhi' mane haya–ei 'govardhana'

SYNONYMS

vana dekhi'-seeing the forest; bhrama haya-there is illusion; ei-this; vṛndāvana-Vṛndāvana forest; śaila dekhi'-seeing a hill; mane haya-considers; ei govardhana-this is Govardhana Hill.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu passed through the Jhārikhaṇḍa forest, He took it for granted that it was Vṛndāvana. When He passed over the hills, He took it for granted that they were Govardhana.

TEXT 56

yāhāṅ nadī dekhe tāhāṅ mānaye–'kālindī' mahā-premāveśe nāce prabhu paḍe kāndi'

SYNONYMS

yāhāṅ-wherever; nadī-river; dekhe-sees; tāhāṅ-there; mānaye-considers; kālindī-the River Yamunā; mahā-prema-āveśe-in great ecstatic love; nāce-dances; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; paḍe-falls down; kāndi'-crying.

TRANSLATION

Similarly, whenever Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu saw a river, He immediately accepted it as the River Yamunā. Thus while in the forest He was filled with great ecstatic love, and He danced and fell down crying.

TEXT 57

pathe yāite bhaṭṭācārya śāka-mūla-phala

SYNONYMS

pathe yāite-while passing on the way; bhaṭṭācārya-Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; śāka-spinach; mūla-roots; phala-fruits; yāhāṅ-wherever; yei-whatever; pāyena-he gets; tāhāṅ-there; layena-he takes; sakala-all.

TRANSLATION

Along the way, Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya collected all kinds of spinach, roots and fruit whenever possible.

TEXT 58

SYNONYMS

ye-grāme-in whatever village; rahena-stays; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tathāya-there; brāhmaṇa-brāhmaṇas; pāṅca-sāta jana-five or seven persons; āsi'-coming; kare-do; nimantraṇa-invitation.

TRANSLATION

Whenever Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu visited a village, a few brāhmaṇas-five or seven-would come and extend invitations to the Lord.

TEXT 59

keha anna āni' deya bhaṭṭācārya-sthāne keha dugdha, dadhi, keha ghṛta, khaṇḍa āne

SYNONYMS

keha-someone; anna-grains; āni'-bringing; deya-delivers; bhaṭṭācārya-sthāne-before Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; keha-someone; dugdha-milk; dadhi-yogurt; keha-someone; ghṛta-ghee; khaṇḍa-sugar; āne-brings.

TRANSLATION

Some people would bring grains and deliver them to Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya. Others would bring milk and yogurt, and still others would bring ghee and sugar.

TEXT 60

yāhāṅ vipra nāhi tāhāṅ 'śūdra-mahājana' āsi' sabe bhaṭṭācārye kare nimantraṇa

SYNONYMS

yāhāṅ-wherever; vipra-brāhmaṇa; nāhi-there is not; tāhāṅ-there; śūdra-mahā-jana-devotees born in families other than brāhmaṇa; āsi'-coming; sabe-all of them; bhaṭṭācārye-to Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; kare nimantraṇa-make invitation.

TRANSLATION

In some villages there were no brāhmaṇas; nonetheless, devotees born in non-brāhmaṇa families came and extended invitations to Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya.

PURPORT

Actually a sannyāsī or a brāhmaṇa will not accept an invitation extended by a person born in a lower family. However, there are many devotees who are raised to the platform of brāhmaṇa by their initiation. These people are called śūdra-mahājana. This indicates that one who is born in a non-brāhmaṇa family has accepted the brāhmaṇa status by initiation. Such devotees extended invitations to Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya. A Māyāvādī sannyāsī will accept an invitation only from a brāhmaṇa family, but a Vaiṣṇava does not accept an invitation from a brāhmaṇa if he does not belong to the Vaiṣṇava sect. However, a Vaiṣṇava will accept an invitation from a brāhmaṇa or śūdra-mahājana if that person is an initiated Vaiṣṇava. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself accepted invitations from śūdra-mahājanas, and this confirms the fact that anyone initiated by a Vaiṣṇava mantra can be accepted as a brāhmaṇa. One can accept an invitation from such a person.

TEXT 61

bhaṭṭācārya pāka kare vanya-vyañjana vanya-vyañjane prabhura ānandita mana bhaṭṭācārya-Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; pāka kare-cooks; vanya-vyañjana-all varieties of forest vegetables; vanya-vyañjane-by such forest vegetables; prabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ānandita mana-the mind is very happy.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya used to cook all kinds of vegetables gathered from the forest, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was very pleased to accept these preparations.

TRANSLATION

Finally the Lord with great happiness arrived at the holy place called Kāśī. There He took His bath in the bathing ghat known as Maṇikarṇikā.

PURPORT

Kāśī is another name for Vārāṇasī (Benares). It has been a place of pilgrimage since time immemorial. Two rivers named Asiḥ and Varuṇā merge there. Maṇikarṇikā is famous because, according to the opinion of great personalities, a bejeweled earring fell there from the ear of Lord Viṣṇu. According to some, it fell from the ear of Lord Śiva. The word maṇi means "jewel," and karṇika means "from the ear." According to some, Lord Viśvanātha is the great physician who cures the disease of material existence by delivering a person through the ear, which receives the vibration of the holy name of Lord Rāma. Because of this, this holy place is called Maṇi-karṇikā. It is said that there is no better place than where the River Ganges flows, and the bathing ghat known as Maṇikarṇikā is especially sanctified because it is very dear to Lord Viśvanātha. In the Kāśī-khaṇḍa it is said: saṁsāri-cintāmaṇir atra yasmāt tārakaṁ sajjana-karṇikāyām. śivo 'bhidhatte saha-sānta-kāle tad gīyate 'sau maṇi-karṇiketi. mukti-lakṣmī mahā-pīṭha-maṇis tac caraṇābjayoḥ. karṇikeyaṁ tataḥ prāhur yāṁ janā maṇi-karṇikām. According to the Kāśī-khaṇḍa, if one gives up his body at Maṇikarṇikā, he is liberated simply by remembering Lord Śiva's name.

TRANSLATION

Tapana Miśra then took Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to visit the temple of Viśveśvara. Coming from there, they saw the lotus feet of Lord Bindu Mādhava.

PURPORT

This Bindu Mādhava is the oldest Viṣṇu temple in Vārāṇasī. Presently this temple is known as Veṇī Mādhava, and it is situated on the banks of the Ganges. Formerly five rivers converged there, and they were named Dhūtapāpā, Kiraṇā, Sarasvatī, Gaṅgā and Yamunā. Now only the River Ganges is visible. The old temple of Bindu Mādhava, which was visited by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, was later dismantled by Aurangzeb, the great Hindu-hating emperor of the Mogul dynasty. In the place of this temple, he constructed a big majīda, or mosque. Later, another temple was constructed by the side of the mosque, and this temple is still existing. In the temple of Bindu Mādhava there are Deities of four-handed Nārāyaṇa and the goddess Lakṣmī. In front of these Deities is a column of Śrī Garuḍa, and along the side are deities of Lord Rāma, Sītā, Lakṣmaṇa and Śrī Hanumānjī.

In the province of Mahārāṣṭra is a state known as Sātārā. During the time of Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, the native prince belonged to the Vaiṣṇava cult. Being a brāhmaṇa, he took charge of worshiping the Deity. He was known as Śrīmanta Bālāsāheba Pantha Mahārāja. The state still bears the expenditure for temple maintenance. The first king in this dynasty to take charge of worship in the temple, two hundred years ago, was Mahārāja Jagatjīvana Rāo Sāheba.

prabhure nimantraṇa kari'-inviting the Lord; ghare-at home; bhikṣā dila-gave lunch; balabhadra-bhaṭṭācārye-Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; pāka karāila-he had cook.

TRANSLATION

Tapana Miśra invited Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to take lunch at his home, and he had Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya cook.

PURPORT

While at Vārāṇasī (Benares), Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu stayed at the house of Tapana Miśra. Near Tapana Miśra's house was a bathing ghat known as Pañcanadī-ghāṭa. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to take His bath daily at this ghat, and He used to see the temple of Bindu Mādhava. Then He took His lunch at Tapana Miśra's house. Near the Bindu Mādhava temple is a big banyan tree, and it is said that after eating, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu used to rest beneath the tree. That banyan tree is still known today as Caitanya-vaṭa. Gradually, due to changes in language, the name became Yatana-vaṭa. The local people still call that place Yatana-vaṭa.

Presently, beside a lane there is a tomb of Vallabhācārya, but there is no sign that Caitanya Mahāprabhu ever lived there. Vallabhācārya was also known as Mahāprabhu among his disciples. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu probably lived at Yatana-vaṭa, but there is no sign of Candraśekhara's or Tapana Miśra's house, nor is there sign of the Māyāvādī sannyāsī Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī, with whom Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu discussed Vedānta-sūtra. A little distance from Yatana-vaṭa is a temple of Gaura-Nityānanda established by Śaśibhūṣaṇa Niyogī Mahāśaya of Calcutta. This temple is now managed by the mother-in-law of Śaśibhūṣaṇa and his brother-in-law Nārāyaṇa-candra Ghosh.

'māyā', 'brahma' śabda vinā nāhi śuni kāṇe

SYNONYMS

āpana-prārabdhe-because of my past deeds; vasi'-staying; vārāṇasī-sthāne-in the place known as Vārāṇasī; māyā-māyā; brahma-and brahma; śabda-the words; vinā-except; nāhi śuni-I do not hear; kāṇe-in the ear.

TRANSLATION

"Due to my past deeds, I am residing at Vārāṇasī, but here I do not hear anything but the words māyā and Brahman."

PURPORT

The word prārabdhe (past deeds) is important in this verse. Since Candraśekhara was a devotee, he was always eager to hear about Kṛṣṇa and His transcendental pastimes. Most of the inhabitants of Benares were and are impersonalists, worshipers of Lord Śiva and followers of the pañcopāsanā method. The impersonalists imagine some form of the impersonal Brahman, and to facilitate meditation they concentrate upon the forms of Viṣṇu, Śiva, Gaṇeśa, Sūrya and goddess Durgā. Actually these pañcopāsakas are not devotees of anyone. As it is said, to be a servant of everyone is to be the servant of no one. Vārāṇasī, or Kāśī, is the chief holy place of pilgrimage for impersonalists, and it is not at all suitable for devotees. A Vaiṣṇava likes to live in a viṣṇu-tīrtha, a place where Lord Viṣṇu's temples are present. In Vārāṇasī there are many hundreds and thousands of Lord Śiva's temples, or pañcopāsaka temples. Consequently Candraśekhara expressed great unhappiness as he informed Lord Caitanya that he was obliged to live at Benares due to his past misdeeds. In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu it is also said, durjāty-ārambhakaṁ pāpaṁ yat syāt prārabdham eva tat. "According to one's past misdeeds, one takes birth on a lower platform." In the Brahma-saṁhitā (5.54) it is said: karmāṇi nirdahati kintu ca bhakti-bhājām. There is no karma attached to the past deeds or misdeeds of one in devotional service. A devotee is not subjected to karma-phala, the effect of fruitive activity. Karma-phala is applicable to karmīs, not bhaktas.

There are three kinds of devotees: those who are eternally on the transcendental platform (nitya-siddha), those elevated to the transcendental platform by the execution of devotional service (sādhana-siddha), and those who are neophytes advancing toward the perfectional platform (sādhaka). The sādhakas are gradually becoming free from fruitive reaction. Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.1.17) describes the symptoms of bhakti-yoga thus:

kleśa-ghnī śubhadā mokṣalaghutākṛt sudurlabhā sāndrānanda-viśeṣātmā śrī-kṛṣṇākarṣiṇī ca sā

Devotional service is kleśa-ghnī even for beginners. This means that it reduces or nullifies all kinds of suffering. The word śubhadā indicates that devotional service bestows all good fortune, and the words kṛṣṇa-ākarṣiṇī indicate that devotional service gradually attracts Kṛṣṇa toward the devotee. Consequently a devotee is not subject to any sinful reaction. In Bhagavad-gītā (18.66) Kṛṣṇa says:

sarva-dharmān parityajya
mām ekaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja
ahaṁ tvāṁ sarva-pāpebhyo
mokṣayiṣyāmi mā śucaḥ

"Abandon all varieties of religion and just surrender unto Me. I shall deliver you from all sinful reaction. Do not fear."

Thus a fully surrendered, sincere devotee immediately receives relief from all kinds of sinful reaction. There are three stages of fructification for sinful activity. At one stage, one commits the sinful act. Before that, the seed of this act exists, and before that there is ignorance whereby one commits the sin. Suffering is involved in all three stages. However, Kṛṣṇa is merciful to His devotee, and consequently He immediately nullifies all three stages-the sin, the seed of sin and the ignorance that leads one to sin. Padma Purāṇa confirms this:

aprārabdha-phalaṁ pāpaṁ kūṭaṁ bījaṁ phalonmukham krameṇaiva pralīyeta viṣṇu-bhakti-ratātmanām

For a further explanation of this, The Nectar of Devotion should be consulted.

miśra kṛpā kari' more śunāna kṛṣṇa-kathā

SYNONYMS

ṣaṭ-darśana-of six kinds of philosophical theses; vyākhyā-explanation; vinā-except; kathā-talk; nāhi-not; ethā-here; miśra-Tapana Miśra; kṛpā kari'-being very merciful; more-unto me; śunāna-explains; kṛṣṇa-kathā-topics of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

Candraśekhara continued, "There is no talk at Vārāṇasī other than discussions on the six philosophical theses. Nonetheless, Tapana Miśra has been very kind to me, for he speaks about topics relating to Lord Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

The six philosophical treatises are: (1) vaiśeṣika, propounded by Kaṇāda Ṛṣi, (2) nyāya, propounded by Gautama Ṛṣi, (3) yoga or mysticism, propounded by Patañjali Ṛṣi, (4) the philosophy of sāṅkhya, propounded by Kapila Ṛṣi, (5) the philosophy of karma-mīmāṁsā, propounded by Jaimini Ṛṣi, and (6) the philosophy of brahma-mīmāṁsā, or Vedānta, the ultimate conclusion of the Absolute Truth (janmādy asya yataḥ), propounded by Vedavyāsa. Actually Vedānta philosophy is meant for the devotees because in Bhagavad-gītā Lord Kṛṣṇa says, vedānta-kṛd veda-vid eva cāham: "I am the compiler of Vedānta, and I am the knower of the Vedas." (Bg. 15.15) Vyāsadeva is an incarnation of Kṛṣṇa, and consequently Kṛṣṇa is the compiler of Vedānta philosophy. Therefore Kṛṣṇa clearly knows the purport of Vedānta philosophy. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā, whoever hears Vedānta philosophy from Kṛṣṇa is actually aware of the real meaning of Vedānta. The Māyāvādīs who have called themselves Vedāntists do not at all understand the purport of Vedānta philosophy. Not being properly educated, people in general think that Vedānta means the Śaṅkarite interpretation.

nirantara duṅhe cinti tomāra caraṇa
'sarvajña īśvara' tumi dilā daraśana

SYNONYMS

nirantara-incessantly; duṅhe-we two; cinti-think of; tomāra caraṇa-Your lotus feet; sarva-jña-omniscient; īśvara-Supreme Personality of Godhead; tumi-You; dilā daraśana-gave Your audience.

TRANSLATION

"My dear Lord, we two think of Your lotus feet incessantly. Although You are the omniscient Supreme Personality of Godhead, You have granted us Your audience.

TEXT 98

dina kata rahi' tāra' bhṛtya dui-jane"

SYNONYMS

śuni-I hear; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yābena-will go; śrī-vṛndāvane-to Vṛndāvana; dina kata-for some days; rahi'-staying; tāra'-please deliver; bhṛtya-servants; dui-jane-two persons.

TRANSLATION

"My Lord, I have heard that You are going to Vṛndāvana. After You stay here at Vārāṇasī for some days, please deliver us, for we are Your two servants."

TEXT 99

miśra kahe,–'prabhu, yāvat kāśīte rahibā mora nimantraṇa vinā anya nā mānibā'

SYNONYMS

miśra kahe-Tapana Miśra said; prabhu-my Lord; yāvat-as long as; kāśīte rahibā-You will stay at Kāśī, Vārāṇasī; mora nimantraṇa-my invitation; vinā-besides; anya-others; nā mānibā-do not accept.

TRANSLATION

Tapana Miśra then said, "My dear Lord, as long as You stay at Vārāṇasī, please do not accept any invitation other than mine."

TEXT 100

ei-mata mahāprabhu dui bhṛtyera vaśe icchā nāhi, tabu tathā rahilā dina-daśe

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-in this way; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dui-two; bhṛtyera-by servants; vaśe-being obliged; icchā nāhi-there was no such desire; tabu-still; tathā-there; rahilā-remained; dina-daśe-for ten days.

TRANSLATION

Even though He had not made such a plan, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu remained for ten days at Vārāṇasī, being obligated by the requests of His two servants.

TEXT 101

mahārāṣṭrīya vipra āise prabhu dekhibāre prabhura rūpa-prema dekhi' haya camatkāre mahārāṣṭrīya-belonging to the Mahārāṣṭra state; vipra-one brāhmaṇa; āise-comes; prabhu dekhibāre-to see Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; prabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; rūpa-prema-beauty and ecstatic love; dekhi'-seeing; haya camatkāre-becomes astonished.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

At Vārāṇasī there was a Mahārāṣṭrīyan brāhmaṇa who used to come daily to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. This brāhmaṇa was simply astonished to see the Lord's personal beauty and ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 102

vipra saba nimantraya, prabhu nāhi māne prabhu kahe,–'āji mora hañāche nimantraṇe'

SYNONYMS

vipra-the brāhmaṇas; saba-all; nimantraya-invite; prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nāhi māne-does not accept; prabhu kahe-the Lord replies; āji-today; mora-My; hañāche-has been; nimantraṇe-invitation.

TRANSLATION

When the brāhmaṇas of Vārāṇasī would invite Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to lunch, the Lord would not accept their invitations. He would reply, "I have already been invited somewhere else."

TEXT 103

ei-mata prati-dina karena vañcana sannyāsīra saṅga-bhaye nā mānena nimantraṇa

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-in this way; prati-dina-daily; karena vañcana-denies other inviters; sannyāsīra-of the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs; saṅga-bhaye-from fear of the association; nā mānena-does not accept; nimantraṇa-invitation.

TRANSLATION

Every day Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu refused their invitation because He feared associating with Māyāvādī sannyāsīs.

PURPORT

A Vaiṣṇava sannyāsī never accepts an invitation from a party who considers Māyāvādī sannyāsīs and Vaiṣṇava sannyāsīs to be one and the same. In other words, Vaiṣṇava sannyāsīs do not at all like to associate with Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, to say nothing of eating together. This principle must be followed by the sannyāsīs of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. That is the instruction of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu given by His personal behavior.

'vedānta' paḍāna bahu śiṣya-gaṇa lañā prakāśānanda-Prakāśānanda; śrīpāda-a great sannyāsī; sabhāte-in the assembly; vasiyā-sitting down; vedānta-Vedānta philosophy; paḍāna-instructs; bahu-many; śiṣya-gaṇa-disciples; lañā-taking.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

There was a great Māyāvādī sannyāsī named Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī who used to teach Vedānta philosophy to a great assembly of followers.

PURPORT

Śrīpāda Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī was a Māyāvādī sannyāsī, and his characteristics have been described in Caitanya-bhāgavata (Madhya-khaṇḍa Chapter Three):

'hasta', 'pada', 'mukha' mora nāhika 'locana' veda more ei-mata kare viḍambana kāśīte paḍāya veṭā 'prakāśa-ānanda' sei veṭā kare mora aṅga khaṇḍa-khaṇḍa

'aja', 'bhava' ādi gāya yāṅhāra caritra
'puṇya' pavitratā pāya ye-aṅga-paraśe tāhā 'mithyā' bale veṭā kemana sāhase

In the Madhya-khaṇḍa, Chapter Twenty, it is said:

sannyāsī 'prakāśānanda' vasaye kāśīte more khaṇḍa-khaṇḍa veṭā kare bhāla-mate paḍāya 'vedānta', mora 'vigraha' nā māne kuṣṭha karāiluṅ aṅge, tabu nāhi jāne
'satya' mora 'līlā-karma', 'satya' mora 'sthāna' ihā 'mithyā' bale, more kare khān-khān

Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī used to explain impersonalism, the Absolute Truth, as being without hands, legs, mouths or eyes. In this way he used to cheat the people by denying the personal form of the Lord. Such a foolish person was Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī, whose only business was to sever the limbs of the Lord by proving the Lord impersonal. Although the Lord has form, Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī was attempting to cut off the hands and legs of the Lord. This is the business of demons. The Vedas state that people who do not accept the Lord's form are rascals. The form of the Lord is factual, for Kṛṣṇa states in Bhagavad-gītā (15.15): vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyaḥ. When Kṛṣṇa says aham, He says "I am," which means "I," the person. He adds the word eva, which is used for conclusive verification. It is by Vedānta philosophy that one has to know the Supreme Person. Whoever describes Vedic knowledge as impersonal is a demon. One becomes successful in life by worshiping the form of the Lord. The Māyāvādī sannyāsīs deny the form of the Lord, which delivers all fallen souls. Indeed, this form is cut to pieces by Māyāvādī demons.

The Personality of Godhead is worshiped by exalted demigods like Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva. The original Māyāvādī sannyāsī, Śaṅkarācārya, also accepted the fact that the Lord's form is transcendental. Nārāyaṇaḥ paro 'vyaktāt: "Nārāyaṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is beyond the avyakta, the unmanifested material energy." Avyaktād aṇḍa-sambhavaḥ: "This material world is a creation of that unmanifested material energy." However, Nārāyaṇa has His own eternal form, which is not created by material energy. Simply by worshiping the form of the Lord, one is purified. However, Māyāvādī sannyāsīs are impersonalist philosophers, and they describe the form of the Lord as māyā, or false. How can one be purified by worshiping something false? Māyāvādī philosophers have no sufficient reason for being impersonalists. They blindly follow a principle that cannot be supported by reason or argument. This was the situation with Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī, the chief Māyāvādī sannyāsī of Benares. He was supposed to teach Vedānta philosophy, but he would not accept the form of the Lord; therefore he was attacked with leprosy. Nonetheless, he continued to commit sins by describing the Absolute Truth as impersonal. The Absolute Truth, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, always displays pastimes and activities, but Māyāvādī sannyāsīs claim that these activities are false.

Some people falsely claim that Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī later became known as Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī, but this is not a fact. Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī was the uncle and spiritual master of Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī. In his gṛhastha life, Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī was a resident of Śrī Raṅga-kṣetra, and he belonged to the Vaiṣṇava Rāmānuja-sampradāya. It is a mistake to consider Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī and Prabodhānanda Sarasvatī the same man.

SYNONYMS

śuniyā-hearing; prakāśānanda-Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī; bahuta hāsilā-laughed very much; vipre-at the brāhmaṇa; upahāsa kari’-jokingly laughing; kahite lāgilā-began to speak.

TRANSLATION

Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī laughed very much to hear this description. Joking and laughing at the brāhmaṇa, he began to speak as follows.

TEXT 116

”śuniyāchi gauḍa-deśera sannyāsī–’bhāvuka’ keśava-bhāratī-śiṣya, loka-pratāraka

SYNONYMS

śuniyāchi-I have heard; gauḍa-deśera sannyāsī-the sannyāsī from Bengal; bhāvuka-sentimental; keśava-bhāratī-śiṣya-disciple of Keśava Bhāratī; loka-pratāraka-a first-class pretender.

TRANSLATION

Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī said, ”Yes, I have heard about Him. He is a sannyāsī from Bengal, and He is very sentimental. I have also heard that He belongs to the Bhāratī-sampradāya, for He is a disciple of Keśava Bhāratī. However, He is only a pretender.”

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was considered bhāvuka (sentimental) because He was always seen in the bhāva stage. That is, He always exhibited ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa. However, foolish people considered Him sentimental. In the material world, so-called devotees sometimes exhibit emotional symptoms. Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s ecstatic love cannot be compared to the imitative emotional exhibitions of pretenders. Such exhibitions do not continue for very long. They are temporary. We actually see that some emotional imitators exhibit certain symptoms, but immediately after their exhibition, they are attracted to smoking and other things. In the beginning, when Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī heard of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s activities, he considered them to be those of a pretender. Consequently he called Him a loka-pratāraka, a pretender. Māyāvādīs cannot understand the transcendental symptoms exhibited by a devotee; therefore when such symptoms are manifest, the Māyāvādīs equate them with temporary emotional feelings. However, Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī’s statement is offensive, and consequently he should be considered an atheist (pāṣaṇḍī). According to Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, since Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī was not engaged in the Lord’s devotional service, his sannyāsa is to be considered phalgu-vairāgya. This means that since he did not know how to use things for the Lord’s service, his renunciation of the world was artificial.

TEXT 117

’caitanya’-nāma tāṅra, bhāvuka-gaṇa lañā deśe deśe grāme grāme bule nācāñā

SYNONYMS

caitanya-Caitanya; nāma tāṅra-His name; bhāvuka-gaṇa lañā-accompanied by some sentimentalists; deśe deśe-from country to country; grāme grāme-from village to village; bule-travels; nācāñā-causing to dance.

TRANSLATION

Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī continued, ”I know that His name is Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya and that He is accompanied by many sentimentalists. His followers dance with Him, and He tours from country to country and village to village.

TEXT 118

yei tāṅre dekhe, sei īśvara kari’ kahe aiche mohana-vidyā–ye dekhe se mohe

SYNONYMS

yei-anyone who; tāṅre-Him; dekhe-sees; sei-that person; īśvara kari’-as the Supreme Personality of Godhead; kahe-says; aiche-such; mohana-vidyā-hypnotism; ye dekhe-anyone who sees; se mohe-he becomes illusioned.

TRANSLATION

”Whoever sees Him accepts Him as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Since He has some mystic power by which He hypnotizes people, everyone who sees Him is illusioned.

TEXT 119

sārvabhauma bhaṭṭācārya–paṇḍita prabala śuni’ caitanyera saṅge ha-ila pāgala

SYNONYMS

sārvabhauma bhaṭṭācārya-Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya; paṇḍita prabala-a learned scholar; śuni’-I have heard; caitanyera saṅge-in the association of Caitanya; ha-ila pāgala-has become a madman.

TRANSLATION

”Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya was a very learned scholar, but I have heard that he also has become a madman due to his association with this Caitanya.

TEXT 120

’sannyāsī’–nāma-mātra, mahā-indrajālī!
’kāśīpure’ nā vikābe tāṅra bhāvakāli

SYNONYMS

sannyāsī-in the renounced order of life; nāma-mātra-in name only; mahā-indrajālī-first-class magician; kāśīpure-in Kāśī; nā vikābe-will not sell; tāṅra-His; bhāvakāli-sentimental activities.

TRANSLATION

”This Caitanya is a sannyāsī in name only. Actually He is a first-class magician. In any case, His sentimentalism cannot be very much in demand here in Kāśī.

TEXT 121

’vedānta’ śravaṇa kara, nā yāiha tāṅra pāśa ucchṛṅkhala-loka-saṅge dui-loka-nāśa”

SYNONYMS

vedānta-the philosophy of Vedānta; śravaṇa kara-go on hearing; nā-do not; yāiha-go; tāṅra pāśa-near Him; ucchṛṅkhala-upstart; loka-people; saṅge-in the association of; dui-loka-nāśa-destruction in this world and the next.

TRANSLATION

”Do not go to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Just continue hearing Vedānta. If you associate with upstarts, you will be lost in this world and in the next.”

PURPORT

The word ucchṛṅkhala, meaning ”whimsical,” is significant in this verse. In Bhagavad-gītā (16.23), Lord Kṛṣṇa Himself says:

yaḥ śāstra-vidhim utsṛjya vartate kāma-kārataḥ na sa siddhim avāpnoti na sukhaṁ na parāṁ gatim

If one acts whimsically and does not follow the śāstric principles, he will never attain perfection, happiness or the spiritual world.

TEXT 122

eta śuni’ sei vipra mahā-duḥkha pāilā
’kṛṣṇa’ ’kṛṣṇa’ kahi’ tathā haite uṭhi’ gelā

SYNONYMS

eta śuni’-hearing this; sei vipra-that brāhmaṇa; mahā-duḥkha pāilā-became very much aggrieved; kṛṣṇa kṛṣṇa kahi’-uttering the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; tathā haite-from there; uṭhi’ gelā-got up and went away.

TRANSLATION

When the brāhmaṇa heard Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī speak like this about Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he became very grief-stricken. Chanting the holy name of Kṛṣṇa, he immediately left.

TEXT 123

prabhura daraśane śuddha hañāche tāṅra mana prabhu-āge duḥkhī hañā kahe vivaraṇa

SYNONYMS

prabhura daraśane-by seeing personally the Supreme Personality of Godhead; śuddha-purified; hañāche-was; tāṅra mana-his mind; prabhu-āge-before the Lord; duḥkhī hañā-being very much unhappy; kahe vivaraṇa-described the incidents.

TRANSLATION

The brāhmaṇa’s mind was already purified by seeing the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He therefore went to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and described what took place before the Māyāvādī sannyāsī Prakāśānanda.

TEXT 124

śuni’ mahāprabhu tabe īṣat hāsilā punarapi sei vipra prabhure puchilā

SYNONYMS

śuni’-hearing; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tabe-then; īṣat-mildly; hāsilā-smiled; punarapi-again indeed; sei-that; vipra-brāhmaṇa; prabhure puchilā-inquired from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu mildly smiled. The brāhmaṇa then spoke again to the Lord.

TEXT 125

”tāra āge yabe āmi tomāra nāma la-ila

seha tomāra nāma jāne,–āpane kahila

SYNONYMS

tāra āge-before him; yabe-when; āmi-I; tomāra-Your; nāma-name; laila-uttered; seha-he; tomāra-Your; nāma-name; jāne-knows; āpane kahila-he said himself.

TRANSLATION

The brāhmaṇa said,”As soon as I uttered Your name before him, he immediately confirmed the fact that he knew Your name.

TEXT 126

tomāra ’doṣa’ kahite kare nāmera uccāra
’caitanya’ ’caitanya’ kari’ kahe tina-bāra

SYNONYMS

tomāra doṣa-Your fault; kahite-describing; kare-does; nāmera-of the name; uccāra-utterances; caitanya caitanya-Caitanya, Caitanya; kari’-in that way; kahe tina-bāra-he uttered three times.

TRANSLATION

”While finding fault with You, he uttered Your name three times, saying, ’Caitanya, Caitanya, Caitanya.’

TEXT 127

tina-bāre ’kṛṣṇa-nāma’ nā āila tāra mukhe
’avajñā’te nāma laya, śuni’ pāi duḥkhe

SYNONYMS

tina-bāre-three times; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; nā āila-did not come; tāra mukhe-in his mouth; avajñā’te-in contempt; nāma laya-takes Your name; śuni’-hearing; pāi duḥkhe-I was very much aggrieved.

TRANSLATION

”Although he spoke Your name three times, he did not utter the name of Kṛṣṇa. Because he uttered Your name in contempt, I was very much aggrieved.

PURPORT

Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī vilified and blasphemed Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Words like brahma, caitanya, ātmā, paramātmā, jagadīśa, īśvara, virāṭ, vibhu, bhūmā, viśvarūpa and vyāpaka all indirectly indicate Kṛṣṇa. However, the chanter of these names is not actually attracted to the Supreme Personality of Godhead Kṛṣṇa and His transcendental pastimes. One may get a little light from these names, but one cannot understand that the holy name of the Lord is identical with the Lord. One considers the Lord’s names material due to a poor fund of knowledge. Māyāvādī philosophers and the pañcopāsakas cannot in the least understand the existence of the spiritual world and the blissful variegatedness there. They cannot understand the Absolute Truth and its spiritual varieties-name, form, qualities and pastimes. Consequently they conclude that Kṛṣṇa’s transcendental activities are māyā. Due to this, one has to directly cultivate knowledge about the holy name of the Lord. Māyāvādī philosophers do not know this fact, and therefore they commit great offenses. One should not hear anything about Kṛṣṇa or devotional service from the mouths of Māyāvādī impersonalists.

TEXT 128

ihāra kāraṇa more kaha kṛpā kari’ tomā dekhi’ mukha mora bale ’kṛṣṇa’ ’hari”

SYNONYMS

ihāra-of this; kāraṇa-cause; more-unto me; kaha-please speak; kṛpā kari’-by Your causeless mercy; tomā dekhi’-seeing You; mukha-mouth; mora-my; bale-says; kṛṣṇa hari-the holy names of Kṛṣṇa and Hari.

TRANSLATION

”Why could Prakāśānanda not utter the names of Kṛṣṇa and Hari? He chanted the name Caitanya thrice. As far as I am concerned, simply by seeing You I am moved to chant the holy names of Kṛṣṇa and Hari.”

TEXT 129

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; māyāvādī-the impersonalists; kṛṣṇe-unto Kṛṣṇa; aparādhī-great offenders; brahma-brahma; ātmā-ātmā; caitanya-caitanya; kahe-say; niravadhi-without stopping.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu replied, ”Māyāvādī impersonalists are great offenders unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; therefore they simply utter the words Brahman, ātmā and caitanya.

TEXT 130

SYNONYMS

deha-dehīra-of the body and the owner of the body; nāma-nāmīra-of the name and the owner of the name; kṛṣṇe-in Kṛṣṇa; nāhi bheda-there is no difference; jīvera dharma-the situation of the conditioned soul; nāma-name; deha-body; sva-rūpe-original form; vibheda-different.

TRANSLATION

”There is no difference between Kṛṣṇa’s body and Himself or between His name and Himself. As far as the conditioned soul is concerned, everything is different. One’s name is different from the body, from one’s original form and so on.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is herein pointing out to the brāhmaṇa that Māyāvādī philosophers cannot understand that the living entity is equal in quality with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Because they do not accept this, they think that the living entity has been falsely divided from the original Brahman due to being conditioned by māyā. Māyāvādīs believe that the Absolute Truth is ultimately impersonal. When an incarnation of God or God Himself comes, they think He is covered by māyā. In other words, Māyāvādī impersonalists think that the Lord’s form is also a product of this material world. Due to a poor fund of knowledge, they cannot understand that Kṛṣṇa has no body separate from Himself. His body and Himself are both the same Absolute Truth. Not having perfect knowledge of Kṛṣṇa, such impersonalists certainly commit offenses at His lotus feet. Therefore they do not utter the original name of the Absolute Truth, Kṛṣṇa. In their impersonal way, they utter the name of impersonal Brahman, spirit soul. In other words, they indulge in indirect indications of the Absolute Truth. Even if they happen to utter the name of Govinda, Kṛṣṇa or Mādhava, they still cannot understand that these names are as good as Govinda, Kṛṣṇa or Mādhava the person. Because they are ultimately impersonalists, their uttering of the personal name has no potency. Actually they do not believe in Kṛṣṇa but consider all these names to be material vibrations. Not being able to appreciate the holy name of the Lord, they simply utter indirect names like Brahman, ātmā and caitanya.

It is a fact, however, that the name of Kṛṣṇa and Kṛṣṇa the person are both spiritual. Everything about Kṛṣṇa is transcendental, blissful and objective. For a conditioned soul, the body is different from the soul, and the name given by the father is also different from the soul. The conditioned living entity’s identification with material objects keeps him from attaining his actual position. Although he is an eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa, he acts differently. The svarūpa, or actual identification of the living entity, is described by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as jīvera ’svarūpa’ haya-kṛṣṇera ’nitya-dāsa’. The conditioned soul has forgotten the real activities of his original position. However, this is not the case with Kṛṣṇa. Kṛṣṇa’s name and His person are identical. There is no such thing as māyā Kṛṣṇa because Kṛṣṇa is not a product of the material creation. There is no difference between Kṛṣṇa’s body and His soul. Kṛṣṇa is simultaneously both soul and body. The distinction between body and soul applies to conditioned souls. The body of the conditioned soul is different from the soul, and the conditioned soul’s name is different from his body. One may be named Mr. John, but if we call for Mr. John, Mr. John may never actually appear. However, if we utter the holy name of Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa is immediately present on our tongue. In the Padma Purāṇa, Kṛṣṇa says, mad-bhaktā yatra gāyanti tatra tiṣṭhāmi nārada: ”O Nārada, I am present wherever My devotees are chanting.” When the devotees chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa-Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare Hare Hare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare-Lord Kṛṣṇa is immediately present.

’bhinnatvān nāma-nāminoḥ

nāmaḥ-the holy name; cintāmaṇiḥ-transcendentally blissful giver of all spiritual benedictions; kṛṣṇaḥ-not different from Kṛṣṇa; caitanya-rasa-vigrahaḥ-the form of all transcendental mellows; pūrṇaḥ-complete; śuddhaḥ-pure, without material contamination; nitya-eternal; muktaḥ-liberated; abhinna-tvāt-due to not being different; nāma-of the holy name; nāminoḥ-and of the person who has the name.

TRANSLATION

” ’The holy name of Kṛṣṇa is transcendentally blissful. It bestows all spiritual benedictions, for it is Kṛṣṇa Himself, the reservoir of all pleasure. Kṛṣṇa’s name is complete, and it is the form of all transcendental mellows. It is not a material name under any condition, and it is no less powerful than Kṛṣṇa Himself. Since Kṛṣṇa’s name is not contaminated by the material qualities, there is no question of its being involved with māyā. Kṛṣṇa’s name is always liberated and spiritual; it is never conditioned by the laws of material nature. This is because the name of Kṛṣṇa and Kṛṣṇa Himself are identical.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Padma Purāṇa.

TEXT 134

ataeva kṛṣṇera ’nāma’, ’deha’, ’vilāsa’ prākṛtendriya-grāhya nahe, haya sva-prakāśa ataeva-therefore; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; nāma-the holy name; deha-the spiritual body; vilāsa-the pastimes; prākṛta-indriya-by the dull senses made of matter; grāhya-perceptible; nahe-not; haya-are; sva-prakāśa-self-manifested.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”The holy name of Kṛṣṇa, His body and His pastimes cannot be understood by blunt material senses. They are manifest independently.

PURPORT

The transcendental body of Kṛṣṇa, His name, form, qualities, pastimes and entourage all constitute the Absolute Truth and are as good as Kṛṣṇa (sac-cid-ānanda-vigraha). As long as the living entity is conditioned by the three modes of material nature-(goodness, passion and ignorance)-the objects of his material senses-material form, taste, smell, sound and touch-will not help him understand spiritual knowledge and bliss. Rather, these are revealed to the pure devotee. One’s material name, form and qualities are certainly different from one another. In the material world, there is no conception of absolute; however, when we come to Kṛṣṇa consciousness we find that there is no material difference between Kṛṣṇa’s body and His names, activities and entourage.

SYNONYMS

ataḥ-therefore (because Kṛṣṇa’s name, form, quality are all on the absolute platform); śrī-kṛṣṇa-nāma-ādi-Lord Kṛṣṇa’s name, form, quality, pastimes and so on; na-not; bhavet-can be; grāhyam-perceived; indriyaiḥ-by the blunt material senses; sevā-unmukhe-to one engaged in His service; hi-certainly; jihvā-ādau-beginning with the tongue; svayam-personally; eva-certainly; sphurati-become manifest; adaḥ-those (Kṛṣṇa’s name, form, quality, and so on).

TRANSLATION

” ’Therefore material senses cannot appreciate Kṛṣṇa’s holy name, form, qualities and pastimes. When a conditioned soul is awakened to Kṛṣṇa consciousness and renders service by using his tongue to chant the Lord’s holy name and taste the remnants of the Lord’s food, the tongue is purified, and one gradually comes to understand who Kṛṣṇa really is.’

PURPORT

This verse is recorded in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.234).

TEXT 137

brahmānanda haite pūrṇānanda līlā-rasa brahma-jñānī ākarṣiyā kare ātma-vaśa brahma-ānanda-the pleasure of self-realization; haite-from; pūrṇa-ānanda-complete pleasure; līlā-rasa-the mellows of the pastimes of the Lord; brahma-jñānī-those who are on the platform of Brahman understanding; ākarṣiyā-attracting; kare-make; ātma-vaśa-subordinate to Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”The mellows of Lord Kṛṣṇa’s pastimes, which are full of bliss, attract the jñānī from the pleasure of Brahman realization and conquer him.

PURPORT

When one understands that he belongs not to the material world but to the spiritual world, one is called liberated. Being situated in the spiritual world is certainly pleasurable, but those who realize the transcendental name, form, qualities and pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa enjoy transcendental bliss many times more than one who has simply realized the self. When one is situated on the platform of self-realization, he can certainly be easily attracted by Kṛṣṇa and become a servant of the Lord. This is explained in Bhagavad-gītā:

brahma-bhūtaḥ prasannātmā
na śocati na kāṅkṣati
samaḥ sarveṣu bhūteṣu
mad-bhaktiṁ labhate parām

”One who is thus transcendentally situated at once realizes the Supreme Brahman and becomes joyful. He never laments or desires to have anything; he is equally disposed to every living entity. In that state he attains pure devotional service unto Me.” (Bg. 18.54)

When one becomes spiritually realized (brahma-bhūta), he becomes happy (prasannātmā), for he is relieved from material conceptions. One who has attained this platform is not agitated by material action and reaction. He sees everyone on the platform of spirit soul (paṇḍitāḥ sama-darśinaḥ). When one is completely realized, he can rise to the platform of pure devotional service (mad-bhaktiṁ-labhate parām). When one comes to the platform of bhakti, devotional service, he automatically realizes who Kṛṣṇa is.

yāvān yaś cāsmi tattvataḥ
tato māṁ tattvato jñātvā
viśate tad-anantaram

"One can understand the Supreme Personality as He is only by devotional service. And when one is in full consciousness of the Supreme Lord by such devotion, he can enter into the kingdom of God." (Bg. 18.55)

It is only on the bhakti platform that one can understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead Kṛṣṇa and His transcendental name, form, qualities, pastimes and entourage. Being thus qualified spiritually (viśate tad-anantaram), one is allowed to enter the spiritual kingdom of God and return home, back to Godhead.

TRANSLATION

" 'Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto my spiritual master, the son of Vyāsadeva, Śukadeva Gosvāmī. It is he who defeats all inauspicious things within this universe. Although in the beginning he was absorbed in the happiness of Brahman realization and was living in a secluded place, giving up all other types of consciousness, he became attracted by the most melodious pastimes of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa. He therefore mercifully spoke the supreme Purāṇa, known as Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, which is the bright light of the Absolute Truth and which describes the activities of Lord Kṛṣṇa.'

SYNONYMS

tasya-of Him; aravinda-nayanasya-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whose eyes are like the petals of a lotus; pada-aravinda-of the lotus feet; kiñjalka-with saffron; miśra-mixed; tulasī-of tulasī leaves; makaranda-with the aroma; vāyuḥ-the air; antargataḥ-entered; sva-vivareṇa-through the nostrils; cakāra-created; teṣām-of them; saṅkṣobham-strong agitation; akṣara-juṣām-of the impersonally self-realized (Kumāras); api-also; citta-tanvoḥ-of the mind and body.

TRANSLATION

” ’When the breeze carrying the aroma of tulasī leaves and saffron from the lotus feet of the lotus-eyed Personality of Godhead entered through the nostrils into the hearts of those sages [the Kumāras], they experienced a change in both body and mind, even though they were attached to impersonal Brahman understanding.’

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.15.43). Vidura and Maitreya discussed the pregnancy of Diti. Diti’s pregnancy caused the demigods to be very much afraid, and the demigods went to see Lord Brahmā. Lord Brahmā explained the original incident involving the cursing of Jaya and Vijaya by the Catuḥ-sana Kumāras. Sometimes the Catuḥ-sana Kumāras went to Vaikuṇṭha to visit Nārāyaṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and once they were stopped from entering the palace at the seventh gate by two doorkeepers named Jaya and Vijaya. Due to their jealousy, Jaya and Vijaya would not allow the Kumāras entry, and consequently the Kumāras became angry and cursed Jaya and Vijaya, condemning them to take birth in a family of asuras in the material world. The omniscient Personality of Godhead could immediately understand the incident, and He came with His eternal consort the goddess of fortune. The Catuḥ-sana Kumāras immediately offered their obeisances unto the Lord. Simply by seeing the Lord and smelling the aroma of tulasī and saffron from His lotus feet, the Kumāras became devotees and abandoned their long-cherished impersonalism. Thus the four Kumāras were turned into Vaiṣṇavas simply by smelling the aromatic tulasī mixed with saffron. Those who are actually on the platform of Brahman realization and who have not offended the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa can immediately become Vaiṣṇavas simply by smelling the aroma of the Lord’s lotus feet. However, those who are offenders or demons are never attracted to the Lord’s personal feature, even though they may visit the Lord’s temple many times. In Vṛndāvana we have seen many Māyāvādī sannyāsīs who do not even come to the temple of Govindajī, Gopīnātha or Madana-mohana because they think that such temples are māyā. Therefore they are called Māyāvādīs. Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu therefore said that the Māyāvādīs are the greatest offenders.

TEXT 143

SYNONYMS

ataeva-therefore; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; nā-does not; āise-come; tāra mukhe-in their mouths; māyāvādi-gaṇa-all the Māyāvādīs; yāte-because; mahā bahiḥ-mukhe-great offenders by dint of strong atheism.

TRANSLATION

”Because the Māyāvādīs are great offenders and atheistic philosophers, the holy name of Kṛṣṇa does not come from their mouths.

PURPORT

Because they are constantly blaspheming the Supreme Personality of Godhead by saying that He has no head, hands or legs, Māyāvādī philosophers remain offenders for many, many births, even though they have partially realized Brahman. However, if such impersonalists are not offenders at the lotus feet of the Lord, they immediately become devotees in the association of a devotee. In other words, if an impersonalist is not an offender, he can become a devotee if he gets a chance to associate with other devotees. If he is an offender, he cannot be converted even by the association of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu was very much afraid of this Māyāvādī offender; therefore He spoke as follows.

TEXT 144

SYNONYMS

bhāvakāli-devotional sentiments; vecite-to sell; āmi-I; āilāṅa-came; kāśīpure-to the city of Kāśī; grāhaka nāhi-there is no customer; nā vikāya-do not sell; lañā yāba ghare-then I must take my commodity back home.

TRANSLATION

”I have come here to sell My emotional ecstatic sentiments in this city of Kāśī, but I cannot find any customers. If they are not sold, I must take them back home.

TEXT 145

bhārī bojhā lañā āilāṅa, kemane lañā yāba?

SYNONYMS

bhārī bojhā-heavy load; lañā-bearing; āilāṅa-I came; kemane-how; lañā yāba-shall I take it back; alpa-svalpa-mūlya-a fraction of the real price; pāile-if I get; ethāi-here; veciba-I shall sell.

TRANSLATION

”I have brought a heavy load to sell in this city. To take it back again is a very difficult job; therefore if I get but a fraction of the price, I shall sell it here in this city of Kāśī.”

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was selling the transcendental holy name of the Lord. However, Kāśī was a city of Māyāvādīs (impersonalists), and such people will never chant the holy names of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Consequently Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was feeling disappointed. How could He teach the Māyāvādīs the importance of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra? The attraction for chanting the holy name of the Lord belongs absolutely to pure devotees, and there was no possibility of finding pure devotees at Kāśī. Consequently Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's commodity was certainly very heavy. The Lord therefore suggested that even though there were no pure devotees in Kāśī, if someone was a little inclined to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, He would deliver this big load, although the proper price was not paid.

Actually we experienced this when we came to preach the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement in the West. When we came to New York in 1965, we never expected that the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra would be accepted in this country. Nonetheless, we invited people to our storefront to join in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, and the Lord's holy name is so attractive that simply by coming to our storefront in New York, fortunate young people became Kṛṣṇa conscious. Although this mission was started with insignificant capital, it is now going nicely. The spreading of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra in the West has become successful because the young people were not offenders. The youths who joined this movement were not very advanced as far as purity was concerned, nor were they very well educated in Vedic knowledge, but because they were not offenders, they could accept the importance of the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement. We are now very happy to see that this movement is advancing more and more in the Western countries. We therefore conclude that the so-called mlecchas and yavanas of the Western countries are more purified than offensive Māyāvādīs or atheistic impersonalists.

TEXT 146

SYNONYMS

eta bali'-saying this; sei vipre-that brāhmaṇa; ātmasātha kari'-accepting as His devotee; prāte uṭhi-rising early in the morning; mathurā calilā-started for Mathurā; gaurahari-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

After saying this, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted that brāhmaṇa as His devotee. The next morning, rising very early, the Lord started for Mathurā.

TEXT 147

SYNONYMS

sei tina-those three; saṅge-with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; cale-go; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; niṣedhila-forbade; dūra haite-from a distance; tina-jane-the three persons; ghare-home; pāṭhāila-sent back.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu started for Mathurā, all three devotees started to go with Him. However, the Lord forbade them to accompany Him, and from a distance He asked them to return home.

TEXT 148

SYNONYMS

prayāge-to Prayāga; āsiyā-coming; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kaila-did; veṇī-snāna-bathing in the confluence of the Ganges and Yamunā; mādhava-the predominating Deity there, Veṇī Mādhava; dekhiyā-seeing; preme-in ecstatic love; kaila-performed; nṛtya-gāna-dancing and chanting.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then went to Prayāga, where He bathed at the confluence of the Ganges and the Yamunā. He then visited the temple of Veṇī Mādhava and chanted and danced there in ecstatic love.

PURPORT

The city of Prayāga is situated a few miles from the city of Allahabad. The name Prayāga is given due to successful sacrifices performed there. It is said: prakṛṣṭaḥ yāgaḥ yāga-phalaṁ yasmāt. If one performs sacrifices at Prayāga, he certainly gets immediate results without difficulty. Prayāga is also called Tīrtharāja, the king of all places of pilgrimage. This holy place is situated on the confluence of the Rivers Ganges and Yamunā. Every year a fair takes place there known as Māgha-melā, and every twelve years a Kumbha-melā is also held. In any case, many people come to bathe there every year. During Māgha-melā, people from the local district generally come, and during Kumbha-melā people come from all over India to live there and bathe in the Ganges and Yamunā. Whoever goes there immediately feels the place's spiritual influence. A fort located there was constructed by the Emperor Akbar about five hundred years ago, and near the fort is a place called Triveṇī. On the other side of Prayāga is an old place known as Pratiṣṭhāna-pura. It is also well known as Jhuṅsi. Many saintly people live there, and consequently it is very attractive from the spiritual point of view.

TRANSLATION

When the Lord toured South India, He delivered many people, and when He traveled in the western sector, He similarly converted many people to Vaiṣṇavism.

PURPORT

Formerly Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu converted people when He toured southern and western India. Similarly, this Hare Kṛṣṇa movement is now delivering the people of the Western world wherever devotees are chanting the holy names. This is all being done by the Lord's mercy. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu predicted that He would deliver people in every city and village of the world by giving them a chance to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.

TEXT 154

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu entered the city of Mathurā, He took His bath at Viśrāma-ghāṭa. He then visited the birthplace of Kṛṣṇa and saw the Deity named Keśavajī. He offered His respectful obeisances to this Deity.

PURPORT

At the present moment, the temple of Keśavajī is very much improved. At one time, Keśavajī-mandira was attacked by the emperor Aurangzeb, who constructed such a big mosque there that the temple of Keśavajī was insignificant in comparison. However, with the help of many rich Maḍwaris, the temple has improved, and a very large temple is now being constructed so that the mosque is now appearing diminished in comparison. Many archeological discoveries have been made there, and many people from foreign countries are beginning to appreciate Kṛṣṇa's birthplace. This Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is attracting many foreigners to the Keśavajī temple, and now they will also be attracted by the Kṛṣṇa-Balarāma temple in Vṛndāvana.

TRANSLATION

As soon as Caitanya Mahāprabhu heard about Mādhavendra Purī's relationship with the brāhmaṇa, He immediately offered obeisances at his feet. Becoming fearful, the brāhmaṇa also immediately fell at the Lord's feet.

prabhu kahe,–"tumi 'guru', āmi 'śiṣya'-prāya

’guru’ hañā ’śiṣye’ namaskāra nā yuyāya

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; tumi-you; guru-My spiritual master; āmi-I; śiṣya-prāya-like your disciple; guru hañā-being the spiritual master; śiṣye-unto the disciple; namaskāra-obeisances; nā yuyāya-is not befitting.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, ”You are on the platform of My spiritual master, and I am your disciple. Since you are My spiritual master, it is not befitting that you offer Me obeisances.”

TEXT 171

TRANSLATION

”Whatever action is performed by a great man, common men follow. And whatever standards he sets by exemplary acts, all the world pursues.”

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Bhagavad-gītā (3.21).

TEXT 179

yadyapi ’sanoḍiyā’ haya seita brāhmaṇa sanoḍiyā-ghare sannyāsī nā kare bhojana

SYNONYMS

yadyapi-although; sanoḍiyā-a priest of the Sanoḍiyā community; haya-was; seita-that; brāhmaṇa-brāhmaṇa; sanoḍiyā-ghare-in the house of a Sanoḍiyā (goldsmith); sannyāsī-a person in the renounced order of life; nā kare bhojana-does not accept food.

TRANSLATION

The brāhmaṇa belonged to the Sanoḍiyā brāhmaṇa community, and a sannyāsī does not accept food from such a brāhmaṇa.

PURPORT

In northwestern India, vaiśyas are divided in various subdivisions. Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura points out that they are divided as Āgaraoyālā, Kālaoyāra and Sānoyāḍa. Out of them, the Āgaraoyālās are supposed to be first-class vaiśyas, and the Kālaoyāras and Sānoyāḍas are considered lower due to their occupational degradation. The Kālaoyāras generally take wine and other intoxicants. Although they are vaiśyas, they are considered to belong to a lower class. The priests who guide the Kālaoyāras and the Sānoyāḍas are called Sanoḍiyā brāhmaṇas. Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura states that the word sānoyāḍa in Bengal indicates suvarṇa-vaṇik. In Bengal there are priests who guide the suvarṇa-vaṇik community, which is also considered a low class. There is little difference between the Sānoyāḍa and the suvarṇa-vaṇik. Generally the suvarṇa-vaṇiks are bankers dealing in gold and silver. In western India, the Āgaraoyālās also belong to the banking profession. This is the original business of the suvarṇa-vaṇik or Āgaraoyālā community. Historically, the Āgaraoyālās came from the up-country named Ayodha, and the suvarṇa-vaṇik community came from Ayodha. It appears that the suvarṇa-vaṇiks and the Āgaraoyālās belong to the same community. The Sanoḍiyā brāhmaṇas were the guides of the Kālaoyāra and Sānoyāḍa. They are therefore considered to be lower-class brāhmaṇas, and a sannyāsī is not allowed to take alms or food from them. However, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted lunch cooked by a Sanoḍiyā brāhmaṇa simply because he belonged to Mādhavendra Purī’s community. Śrīla Mādhavendra Purī was the spiritual master of Īśvara Purī, who was the spiritual master of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Thus a spiritual relationship is established on the spiritual platform without consideration of material inferiority or superiority.

tathāpi purī dekhi’ tāṅra ’vaiṣṇava,-ācāra
’śiṣya’ kari’ tāṅra bhikṣā kaila aṅgīkāra

SYNONYMS

tathāpi-still; purī-Mādhavendra Purī; dekhi’-after seeing; tāṅra-of the brāhmaṇa; vaiṣṇava-ācāra-behavior like a Vaiṣṇava; śiṣya kari’-accepting him as his disciple; tāṅra bhikṣā-food offered by him; kaila aṅgīkāra-accepted.

TRANSLATION

Although the brāhmaṇa belonged to the Sanoḍiyā community, Śrīla Mādhavendra Purī saw that he behaved like a Vaiṣṇava and therefore accepted him as his disciple. The food he cooked was also accepted by Mādhavendra Purī.

TEXT 181

mahāprabhu tāṅre yadi ’bhikṣā’ māgila dainya kari’ sei vipra kahite lāgila

SYNONYMS

mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāṅre-from him; yadi-when; bhikṣā māgila-requested lunch; dainya kari’-out of humility; sei vipra-that brāhmaṇa; kahite lāgila-began to speak.

TRANSLATION

Therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu willingly requested food from the brāhmaṇa, and the brāhmaṇa, feeling a natural humility, began to speak as follows.

TEXT 182

tomāre ’bhikṣā’ diba–baḍa bhāgya se āmāra tumi–īśvara, nāhi tomāra vidhi-vyavahāra

SYNONYMS

tomāre-unto You; bhikṣā diba-I shall offer food; baḍa bhāgya-great fortune; se-that; āmāra-my; tumi-You; īśvara-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; nāhi-there is not; tomāra-of You; vidhi-vyavahāra-regulative behavior.

TRANSLATION

"It is a great fortune for me to offer You food. You are the Supreme Lord, and, being in the transcendental position, You are not restricted in any way.

TEXT 183

'mūrkha'-loka karibeka tomāra nindana sahite nā pārimu sei 'duṣṭe'ra vacana mūrkha-loka-foolish persons; karibeka-will do; tomāra nindana-blaspheming You; sahite nā pārimu-I shall not be able to tolerate; sei-those; duṣṭera vacana-words of mischievous persons.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Foolish people will blaspheme You, but I shall not tolerate the words of such mischievous people."

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura remarks that although the brāhmaṇa did not belong to a superior community, he fearlessly chastised so-called caste brāhmaṇas because he was situated on the platform of pure devotional service. There are people who are opposed to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's accepting a Vaiṣṇava belonging to a lower caste. Such people do not consider mahā-prasāda transcendental, and therefore they are described here as mūrkha (foolish) and duṣṭa (mischievous). A pure devotee has the power to challenge such high-caste people, and his brave statements are not to be considered proud or puffed up. On the contrary, he is to be considered straightforward. Such a person does not like to flatter high-class brāhmaṇas who belong to the non-Vaiṣṇava community.

TEXT 184

prabhu kahe,–śruti, smṛti, yata ṛṣi-gaṇa sabe 'eka'-mata nahe, bhinna bhinna dharma

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; śruti-the Vedas; smṛti-the Purāṇas; yata-all; ṛṣi-gaṇa-great sages; sabe-all of them; eka-mata nahe-do not agree; bhinna bhinna dharma-different grades of religious principles.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu replied, "The Vedas, Purāṇas and great learned sages are not always in agreement with one another. Consequently there are different religious principles.

PURPORT

Unless one comes to the Absolute Truth, there is no possibility of agreement. Nāsav ṛṣir yasya mataṁ na bhinnam: it is said that a great learned scholar or sage cannot be exalted unless he disagrees. On the material platform, there is no possibility of agreement; therefore there are different kinds of religious systems. However, the Absolute Truth is one, and when one is situated in the Absolute Truth, there is no disagreement. On that absolute platform the Supreme Personality of Godhead is worshipable. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā (18.55): bhaktyā mām abhijānāti yāvān yaś cāsmi tattvataḥ. On the absolute platform, the worshipful Deity is one, and the process of worship is also one. That process is bhakti.

There are many different religions throughout the world because they are not all on the absolute platform of devotional service. As confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā (18.66): sarva-dharmān parityajya mām ekaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja. The word ekam means "one," Kṛṣṇa. On this platform, there are no different religious systems. According to Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.1.2): dharmaḥ projjhita-kaitavo 'tra. On the material platform, religious systems are different. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam describes them from the very beginning as dharmaḥ kaitavaḥ, cheating religions. None of these religions are actually genuine. The genuine religious system is that which enables one to become a lover of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In the words of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.6):

sa vai puṁsāṁ paro dharmo
yato bhaktir adhokṣaje
ahaituky apratihatā
yayātmā suprasīdati

On this platform there is nothing but the service of the Lord. When a person has no ulterior motive, there is certainly oneness and agreement of principles. Since everyone has a different body and mind, different types of religions are needed. But when one is situated on the spiritual platform, there are no bodily and mental differences. Consequently on the absolute platform there is oneness in religion.

dharma-sthāpana-hetu sādhura vyavahāra purī-gosāñira ye ācaraṇa, sei dharma sāra

SYNONYMS

dharma-sthāpana-hetu-to establish the principles of religion; sādhura vyavahāra-behavior of a devotee; purī-gosāñira-of Mādhavendra Purī; ye ācaraṇa-the behavior; sei-that; dharma sāra-the essence of all religion.

TRANSLATION

"A devotee's behavior establishes the true purpose of religious principles. The behavior of Mādhavendra Purī Gosvāmī is the essence of such religious principles."

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura gives the following commentary on this passage. A sādhu or an honest man is called a mahājana or a mahātmā. The mahātmā is thus described in Bhagavad-gītā:

mahātmānas tu māṁ pārtha
daivīṁ prakṛtim āśritāḥ
bhajanty ananya-manaso
jñātvā bhūtādim avyayam

”O son of Pṛthā, those who are not deluded, the great souls, are under the protection of the divine nature. They are fully engaged in devotional service because they know Me as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, original and inexhaustible.” (Bg. 9.13)

In the material world, the word mahātmā is understood in different ways by different religionists. Mundaners also come up with their different angles of vision. For the conditioned soul busy in sense gratification, a mahājana is recognized according to the proportion of sense gratification he offers. For instance, a businessman may consider a certain banker to be a mahājana, and karmīs desiring material enjoyment may consider philosophers like Jaimini to be mahājanas. There are many yogīs who want to control the senses, and for them Patañjali Ṛṣi is a mahā-jana. For the jñānīs, the atheist Kapila, Vaśiṣṭha, Durvāsā, Dattātreya and other impersonalist philosophers are mahājanas. For the demons, Hiraṇyākṣa, Hiraṇyakaśipu, Rāvaṇa, Rāvaṇa’s son Meghanāda, Jarāsandha and others are accepted as mahājanas. For materialistic anthropologists speculating on the evolution of the body, a person like Darwin is a mahājana. The scientists who are bewildered by Kṛṣṇa’s external energy have no relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, yet they are accepted by some as mahājanas. Similarly, philosophers, historians, literary men, public speakers and social and political leaders are sometimes accepted as mahājanas. Such mahājanas are respected by certain men who have been described in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.3.19):

śva-viḍ-varāhoṣṭra-kharaiḥ saṁstutaḥ puruṣaḥ paśuḥ na yat-karṇa-pathopeto jātu nāma gadāgrajaḥ

”Men who are like dogs, hogs, camels and asses praise those men who never listen to the transcendental pastimes of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the deliverer from evils.”

Thus on the material platform animalistic leaders are worshiped by animals. Sometimes physicians, psychiatrists and social workers try to mitigate bodily pain, distress and fear, but they have no knowledge of spiritual identity and are bereft of a relationship with God. Yet they are considered mahājanas by the illusioned. Self-deceived persons sometimes accept leaders or spiritual masters from a priestly order that has been officially appointed by the codes of material life. In this way, they are deceived by official priests. Sometimes people accept as mahā-janas those who have been designated by Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura as ḍhaṅga-vipras (imposter brāhmaṇas). Such imposters imitate the characteristics of Śrīla Haridāsa Ṭhākura, and they envy Haridāsa Ṭhākura, who was certainly a mahājana. They make great artificial endeavors, advertising themselves as great devotees of the Lord or as mystic hypnotists knowledgeable in witchcraft, hypnotism and miracles. Sometimes people accept demons like Pūtanā, Tṛṇāvarta, Vatsa, Baka, Aghāsura and Dhenuka, Kālīya and Pralamba. Some people accept imitators and adversaries of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, such as Pauṇḍraka, Śṛgāla Vāsudeva, the spiritual master of the demons (Śukrācārya), or atheists like Cārvāka, King Vena, Sugata and Arhat. Such people have no faith in Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Rather, they accept godless cheaters who present themselves as incarnations of God and cheat foolish people within the material world by word jugglery. Thus many rascals are accepted as mahājanas.

In this material world a person may be famous as a karma-vīra, a successful fruitive worker, or one may be very successful in performing religious duties, or he may be known as a hero in mental speculation (jñāna-vīra), or he may be a very famous renunciant. In any case, Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.23.56) gives the following opinion in this matter.

neha yat karma dharmāya na virāgāya kalpate na tīrtha-pada-sevāyai jīvann api mṛto hi saḥ

”Anyone whose work is not meant to elevate him to religious life, anyone whose religious ritualistic performances do not raise him to renunciation, and anyone situated in renunciation that does not lead him to devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead must be considered dead, although he is breathing.”

The conclusion is that all pious activity, fruitive activity, religious principles and renunciation must ultimately lead to devotional service. There are different types of processes for rendering service. One may serve his country, people, society, the varṇāśrama-dharma, the sick, the poor, the rich, women, demigods and so on. All this comes under the heading of sense gratification, or enjoyment in the material world. It is most unfortunate that people are more or less attracted by such material activity and that the leaders of these activities are accepted as mahājanas, great ideal leaders. Actually they are only misleaders, but an ordinary man cannot understand how he is being misled.

Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says: sādhu-śāstra-guru-vākya, cittete kariyā aikya. A sādhu is a great personality like Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The śāstras are the injunctions of revealed scriptures. Those who are devoid of devotional service sometimes mistake those who have mundane motives for mahājanas. The only motive must be kṛṣṇa-bhakti, devotional service to the Lord. Sometimes fruitive workers, dry philosophers, nondevotees, mystic yogīs and persons attached to material opulence, women and money are considered mahājanas. However, Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (6.3.25) gives the following statements about such unauthorized mahājanas:

prāyeṇa veda tad idaṁ na mahājano ’yaṁ devyā vimohita-matir bata māyayālam trayyāṁ jaḍī-kṛta-matir madhu-puṣpitāyāṁ vaitānike mahati karmaṇi yujyamānaḥ

In this material world, karmīs (fruitive actors) are accepted as mahājanas by foolish people who do not know the value of devotional service. Their mundane intelligence and mental speculative methods are under the control of the three modes of material nature. Consequently they cannot understand unalloyed devotional service. They are attracted by material activities, and they become worshipers of material nature. Thus they are known as fruitive actors. They even become entangled in material activities disguised as spiritual activities. In Bhagavad-gītā, such people are described as veda-vāda-ratā. They do not understand the real purpose of the Vedas, yet they think of themselves as Vedic authorities. People versed in Vedic knowledge must know Kṛṣṇa as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyaḥ. (Bg. 15.15)

A man covered by illusion cannot understand the proper way; therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu says: dharma-sthāpana-hetu sādhura vyavahāra. The behavior of a devotee is the criterion for all other behavior. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself followed the devotional principles and taught others to follow them. Purī-gosāñira ye ācaraṇa, sei dharma sāra. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu personally followed the behavior of Mādhavendra Purī and advised others to follow his principles. Unfortunately, people have been attracted to the material body since time immemorial.

sva-dhīḥ kalatrādiṣu bhauma ijya-dhīḥ
yat-tīrtha-buddhiḥ salile na karhicij
janeṣv abhijñeṣu sa eva go-kharaḥ

”A human being who identifies this body made of three elements with his self, who considers the by-products of the body to be his kinsmen, who considers the land of birth worshipable, and who goes to the place of pilgrimage simply to take a bath rather than meet men of transcendental knowledge there is to be considered like an ass or a cow.” (Bhāg. 10.84.13) Those who accept the logic of gaḍ-ḍalikā-pravāha and follow in the footsteps of pseudo-mahājanas are carried away by the waves of māyā. Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura therefore warns:

miche māyāra vaśe, yāccha bhese’, khāccha hābuḍubu, bhāi jīva kṛṣṇa-dāsa, e viśvāsa, ka’rle ta’ āra duḥkha nāi

”Don’t be carried away by the waves of māyā. Just surrender to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, and all miseries will end.” Those who follow social customs and behavior forget to follow the path chalked out by the mahājanas; thus they are offenders at the feet of the mahājanas. Sometimes they consider such mahājanas very conservative, or they create their own mahājanas. In this way they ignore the principles of the paramparā system. This is a great misfortune for everyone. If one does not follow in the footsteps of a real mahājana, one’s plans for happiness will be frustrated. This is elaborately explained in Madhya-līlā (Chapter Twenty-five, verses 55, 56 and 58). It is there stated:

parama kāraṇa īśvare keha nāhi māne
sva-sva-mata sthāpe para-matera khaṇḍane
tāte chaya darśana haite ’tattva’ nāhi jāni
’mahājana’ yei kahe, sei ’satya’ māni
śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya-vāṇī–amṛtera dhāra
tiṅho ye kahaye vastu, sei ’tattva’–sāra

People are so unfortunate that they do not accept the instructions of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Instead, they want to be supported by so-called mahājanas, authorities. Tāte chaya darśana haite ’tattva’ nāhi jāni: we cannot ascertain the real truth simply by following speculators. We have to follow the footsteps of the mahājanas in the disciplic succession. Then our attempt will be successful. Śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya-vāṇī-amṛtera dhāra: ”Whatever is spoken by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is an incessant flow of nectar.” Whoever accepts His words as reality can understand the essence of the Absolute Truth. No one can ascertain the Absolute Truth by following the philosophy of Sāṅkhya or Patañjali, for the followers of Sāṅkhya or Patañjali do not accept Lord Viṣṇu as the Supreme Personality of Godhead (na te viduḥ svārtha-gatiṁ hi viṣṇum). The ambition of such people is never fulfilled; therefore they are attracted by the external energy. Although mental speculators may be renowned all over the world as great authorities, actually they are not. Such leaders are themselves conservative and not at all liberal. However, if we preach this philosophy, people will consider Vaiṣṇavas very sectarian. Śrīla Mādhavendra Purī was a real mahājana, but misguided people cannot distinguish the real from the unreal. However, a person who is awakened to Kṛṣṇa consciousness can understand the real religious path chalked out by the Lord and His pure devotees. Śrī Mādhavendra Purī was a real mahājana because he understood the Absolute Truth properly and throughout his life behaved like a pure devotee. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu approved the method of Śrī Mādhavendra Purī. Therefore, although from the material viewpoint the Sanoḍiyā brāhmaṇa was on a lower platform, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu considered him situated on the highest platform of spiritual realization.

Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (6.3.20) states that there are twelve mahājanas: Brahmā, Nārada, Śambhu, Kumāra, Kapila, Manu, Prahlāda, Janaka, Bhīṣma, Bali, Śukadeva and Yamarāja.

To select our mahājanas in the Gauḍīya-sampradāya, we have to follow in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His representatives. His next representative is Śrī Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī, and the next are the six Gosvāmīs-Śrī Rūpa, Śrī Sanātana, Bhaṭṭa Raghunātha, Śrī Jīva, Gopāla Bhaṭṭa and Dāsa Raghunātha. The follower of Viṣṇusvāmī was Śrīdhara Svāmī, the most well known commentator on Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. He was also a mahājana. Similarly, Caṇḍīdāsa, Vidyāpati and Jayadeva were all mahājanas. One who tries to imitate the mahājanas just to become an imitative spiritual master is certainly far away from following in the footsteps of the mahājanas. Sometimes people cannot actually understand how a mahājana follows other mahājanas. In this way people are inclined to fall from devotional service.

tarkaḥ-dry argument; apratiṣṭhaḥ-not fixed; śrutayaḥ-Vedas; vibhinnāḥ-possessing different departments; na-not; asau-that; ṛṣiḥ-great sage; yasya-whose; matam-opinion; na-not; bhinnam-separate; dharmasya-of religious principles; tattvam-truth; nihitam-placed; guhāyām-in the heart of a realized person; mahā-janaḥ-self-realized predecessors; yena-by which way; gataḥ-acted; saḥ-that; panthāḥ-the pure unadulterated path.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued," 'Dry arguments are inconclusive. A great personality whose opinion does not differ from others is not considered a great sage. Simply by studying the Vedas, which are variegated, one cannot come to the right path by which religious principles are understood. The solid truth of religious principles is hidden in the heart of an unadulterated self-realized person. Consequently, as the śāstras confirm, one should accept whatever progressive path the mahājanas advocate.' "

PURPORT

This is a verse spoken by Yudhiṣṭhira Mahārāja in the Mahābhārata, Vana-parva (313.117).

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu visited the different forests, including Madhuvana, Tālavana, Kumudavana and Bahulāvana. Wherever He went, He took His bath with great ecstatic love.

PURPORT

The word vana means ”forest.” Vṛndāvana is the name given to the forest where Śrīmatī Vṛndādevī (Tulasīdevī) grows profusely. Actually it is not a forest as we ordinarily consider a forest because it is very thick with green vegetation. There are twelve such vanas in Vṛndāvana. Some are located on the western side of the Yamunā and others on the eastern side. The forests situated on the eastern side are Bhadravana, Bilvavana, Lauhavana, Bhāṇḍīravana and Mahāvana. On the western side are Madhuvana, Tālavana, Kumudavana, Bahulāvana, Kāmyavana, Khadiravana and Vṛndāvana. These are the twelve forests of the Vṛndāvana area.

TRANSLATION

The male parrot sang: "The glorification of Lord Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is beneficial to everyone in the universe. His beauty is victorious over the gopīs of Vṛndāvana, and it subdues their patience. His pastimes astound the goddess of fortune, and His bodily strength turns Govardhana Hill into a small toy like a ball. His spotless qualities are unlimited, and His behavior satisfies everyone. Lord Kṛṣṇa is attractive to everyone. Oh, may our Lord maintain the whole universe!"

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Govinda-līlāmṛta (13.29).

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Seventeenth Chapter, describing the Lord's traveling to Vṛndāvana.

18.5.18 Chapter 18

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's Visit to Śrī Vṛndāvana

The following summary of the Eighteenth Chapter is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. In the village of Āriṭ-grāma, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu discovered the transcendental lakes known as Rādhā-kuṇḍa and Śyāma-kuṇḍa. He then saw the Deity Harideva at Govardhana Village. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu had no desire to climb Govardhana Hill because the hill is worshiped as Kṛṣṇa. The Gopāla Deity could understand the mind of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; therefore on the plea of being attacked by Muslims, Gopāla transferred Himself to the village of Gāṅṭhuli-grāma. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then went to Gāṅṭhuli-grāma to see Lord Gopāla. Some years later, Lord Gopāla also went to Mathurā to the temple of Viṭhṭhaleśvara and stayed there for one month just to give an audience to Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

After visiting Nandīśvara, Pāvana-sarovara, Śeṣaśāyī, Khelā-tīrtha, Bhāṇḍīravana, Bhadravana, Lohavana and Mahāvana, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to Gokula and then finally returned to Mathurā. Seeing a great crowd in Mathurā, He moved His residence near Akrūra-ghāṭa, and from there He went every day to Vṛndāvana to see Kālīya-hrada, Dvādaśāditya-ghāṭa, Keśī-ghāṭa, Rāsa-sthalī, Cīra-ghāṭa and Āmli-talā. At Kālīya Lake, many people mistook a fisherman for Kṛṣṇa. When some respectable people came to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, they expressed their opinion that when one takes sannyāsa, he becomes Nārāyaṇa. Their mistake was corrected by the Lord. In this way, their Kṛṣṇa consciousness was awakened, and they could understand that a sannyāsī is simply a living entity and not the Supreme personality of Godhead.

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu took His bath at Akrūra-ghāṭa, He submerged Himself in the water for a long time. Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya decided to take Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to Prayāga after visiting the holy place known as Sorokṣetra. While stopping near a village on the way to Prayāga, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu fainted in ecstatic love. Some Pāṭhāna soldiers who were passing through saw Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and falsely concluded that the Lord's associates, Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya and others, had killed the Lord with a poison named dhuturā and were taking His wealth. Thus the soldiers arrested them. However, when Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu regained His senses, His associates were released. He talked with a person who was supposed to be a holy man in the party. From the Koran, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu established devotional service to Kṛṣṇa. Thus the leader of the soldiers, named Vijalī Khān, surrendered to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and he and his party became devotees of Lord Kṛṣṇa. The same village today is known as the village of Pāṭhāna Vaiṣṇavas. After bathing in the Ganges at Soro, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu arrived at Prayāga at the confluence of three rivers-the Ganges, Yamunā and Sarasvatī.

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-in this way; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nācite nācite-dancing and dancing; āriṭ-grāme-in the village known as Āriṭ-grāma; āsi,-coming; bāhya-sense perception; haila-there was; ācambite-suddenly.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu danced in ecstasy, but when He arrived at Āriṭgrāma, His sense perception was awakened.

PURPORT

Āriṭ-grāma is also called Ariṣṭa-grāma. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu understood that in that village, Ariṣṭāsura was killed by Śrī Kṛṣṇa. While there, He inquired about Rādhā-kuṇḍa, but no one could tell Him where it was. The brāhmaṇa accompanying Him could also not ascertain its whereabouts. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu could then understand that the holy places known as Rādhā-kuṇḍa and Śyāma-kuṇḍa were at that time lost to everyone's vision. He therefore discovered Rādhā-kuṇḍa and Śyāma-kuṇḍa, which were two reservoirs of water in two paddy fields. Although there was very little water, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was omniscient and could understand that formerly these two ponds were called Śrī Rādhā-kuṇḍa and Śyāma-kuṇḍa. In this way Rādhā-kuṇḍa and Śyāma-kuṇḍa were discovered.

āriṭe rādhā-kuṇḍa-vārtā puche loka-sthāne keha nāhi kahe, saṅgera brāhmaṇa nā jāne

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked the local people,"Where is Rādhā-kunda?" No one could inform Him, and the brāhmaṇa accompanying Him did not know either.

TEXT 5

tīrtha 'lupta' jāni' prabhu sarvajña bhagavān dui dhānya-kṣetre alpa-jale kailā snāna

SYNONYMS

tīrtha-holy place; lupta-lost; jāni'-knowing; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sarva-jña-omniscient; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; dui-two; dhānya-kṣetre-in paddy fields; alpa-jale-in not very deep water; kailā snāna-took a bath.

TRANSLATION

The Lord then understood that the holy place called Rādhā-kuṇḍa was no longer visible. However, being the omniscient Supreme Personality of Godhead, He discovered Rādhā-kuṇḍa and Śyāma-kuṇḍa in two paddy fields. There was only a little water, but He took His bath there.

TEXT 6

TRANSLATION

Gopāla stayed in a village called Annakūṭa-grāma on Govardhana Hill. The villagers who lived in that village were mainly from Rajasthan.

PURPORT

The village named Annakūṭa-grāma is referred to in Bhakti-ratnākara (Fifth Wave):

gopa-gopī bhuñjāyena kautuka apāra ei hetu 'āniyora' nāma se ihāra annakūṭa-sthāna ei dekha śrīnivāsa e-sthāna darśane haya pūrṇa abhilāṣa

"It is here that all the gopīs and the gopas enjoyed wonderful pastimes with Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Therefore this place is also called Āniyora. The Annakūṭa ceremony was celebrated here. O Śrīnivāsa, whoever sees this place has all his desires fulfilled." It is also stated:

kuṇḍera nikaṭa dekha niviḍa-kānana ethāi 'gopāla' chilā hañā saṅgopana

”Look at the dense forest near the kuṇḍa. It was there that Gopāla was concealed.” Also, the Stavāvalī (8.75) by Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī states:

vrajendra-varyārpita-bhogam uccair dhṛtvā bṛhat-kāyam aghārir utkaḥ vareṇa rādhāṁ chalayan vibhuṅkte

TRANSLATION

As soon as the Lord saw the beauty of the Gopāla Deity, He was immediately overwhelmed by ecstatic love, and He recited the following verse. He then chanted and danced until the day ended.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura gives the following information about Govinda-kuṇḍa. There is a village named Āniyora on Govardhana Hill, a little distance from the village of Paiṭhā. Govinda-kuṇḍa is situated near here, and there are two temples to Govinda and Baladeva there. According to some, Queen Padmāvatī excavated this lake. In the Bhakti-ratnākara (Fifth Wave), the following statement is found:

ei śrī-govinda-kuṇḍa-mahimā aneka ethā indra kaila govindera abhiṣeka

"Govinda-kuṇḍa is exalted for its many spiritual activities. It was here that Indra was defeated by Lord Kṛṣṇa, and Indra offered his prayers and bathed Lord Govinda." In the book Stavāvalī (Vraja-vilāsa-stava 74) the following verse is found:

nīcaiḥ prauḍha-bhayāt svayaṁ surapatiḥ pādau vidhṛtyeha yaiḥ svar-gaṅgā-salilaiś cakāra surabhi-dvārābhiṣekotsavam govindasya navaṁ gavām adhipatā rājye sphuṭaṁ kautukāt tair yat prādurabhūt sadā sphuratu tad govinda-kuṇḍaṁ dṛśoḥ

In the Mathurā-khaṇḍa it is also stated:

yatrābhiṣikto bhagavān maghonā yadu-vairiṇā govinda-kuṇḍaṁ taj-jātaṁ snāna-mātreṇa mokṣadam

”Simply by bathing in Govinda-kuṇḍa, one is awarded liberation. This lake was produced when Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa was bathed by Lord Indra.”

Gāṅṭhuli-grāma is situated near the two villages Bilachu and Gopāla-pura. According to hearsay, Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa first met here. In the Bhakti-ratnākara (Fifth Wave), it is stated: sakhī duṅha vastre gāṅṭhi dila saṅgopane. It is also stated: phāguyā laiyā keha gāṅṭhi khuli' dilā. For this reason the village is known as Gāṅṭhuli.

eka-māsa rahila viṭhṭhaleśvara-ghare mleccha-bhaye-because of fear of the Muslims; āilā-came; gopāla-the Deity Gopāla; mathurā-nagare-to the city of Mathurā; eka-māsa-one month; rahila-stayed; viṭhṭhaleśvara-ghare-in the temple of Viṭhṭhaleśvara.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Due to fear of the Mohammedans, Gopāla went to Mathurā, where He remained in the temple of Viṭhṭhaleśvara for one full month.

PURPORT

When the two brothers Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī went to Vṛndāvana, they decided to live there. Following Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's example, they did not climb the hill because they considered it nondifferent from Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. On some pretext, the Gopāla Deity granted Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu an audience beneath the hill, and Gopāla similarly favored Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī. During his ripe old age, when Rūpa Gosvāmī could not go to Govardhana Hill because of invalidity, Gopāla kindly went to Mathurā and remained at the temple of Viṭhṭhaleśvara for one month. It was then that Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī could see Gopāla's beauty to his heart's content.

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereupon; rūpa gosāñi-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; saba-all; nija-gaṇa lañā-taking his associates with him; eka-māsa-for one month; daraśana kailā-saw the Deity; mathurāya rahiyā-staying at the city of Mathurā.

TRANSLATION

Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and his associates stayed in Mathurā for one month and saw the Deity Gopāla.

PURPORT

The following description of the temple of Viṭhṭhaleśvara is given in Bhakti-ratnākara (Fifth Wave):

viṭhṭhalera sevā kṛṣṇa-caitanya-vigraha tāhāra darśane haila parama āgraha śrī-viṭhṭhalanātha–bhaṭṭa-vallabha-tanaya karilā yateka prīti kahile nā haya śrī-viṭhṭhaleśvare kailā sevā-adhikārī pitā śrī-vallabha-bhaṭṭa tāṅra adarśane kata-dina mathurāya chilena nirjane

Śrī Vallabha Bhaṭṭa had two sons. The elder, Gopīnātha, was born in 1432 Śakābda Era, and the younger, Viṭhṭhalanātha, was born in 1437 and died in 1507. Viṭhṭhala had seven sons: Giridhara, Govinda, Bālakṛṣṇa, Gokuleśa, Raghunātha, Yadunātha and Ghanaśyāma. Viṭhṭhala completed many of his father's unfinished books, including his commentary on Vedānta-sūtra, the Subodhinī commentary on Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Vidvan-maṇḍana, Śṛṅgāra-rasa-maṇḍana and Nyāsādeśa-vivaraṇa. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to Vṛndāvana before the birth of Viṭhṭhala. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī was very old at the time Gopāla stayed at the house of Viṭhṭhalanātha.

TRANSLATION

When Rūpa Gosvāmī stayed at Mathurā, he was accompanied by Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī and Lokanātha dāsa Gosvāmī.

PURPORT

Śrī Lokanātha Gosvāmī was a personal associate of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and a great devotee of the Lord. He was a resident of a village named Tālakhaḍi in the district of Yaśohara in Bengal. Previously he lived in Kācnāpāḍā. His father's name was Padmanābha, and his only younger brother was Pragalbha. Following the orders of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Śrī Lokanātha went to Vṛndāvana to live. He established a temple named Gokulānanda. Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura selected Lokanātha dāsa Gosvāmī to be his spiritual master, and he was his only disciple. Because Lokanātha dāsa Gosvāmī did not want his name mentioned in Caitanya-caritāmṛta, we do not often see it in this celebrated book. On the E.B.R. Railroad, the Yaśohara station is located in Bangladesh. From the railway station one has to go by bus to the village of Sonākhāli and from there to Khejurā. From there one has to walk, or, during the rainy season, go by boat to the village of Tālakhaḍi. In this village there are still descendants of Lokanātha Gosvāmī's younger brother.

TRANSLATION

The great devotee Govinda, Vāṇī Kṛṣṇadāsa, Puṇḍarīkākṣa, Īśāna and Laghu Haridāsa also accompanied him.

PURPORT

Laghu Haridāsa should not be confused with Junior Haridāsa, who committed suicide at Prayāga. Generally a devotee is called Haridāsa, and consequently there are many Haridāsas. The chief was Ṭhākura Haridāsa. There was also a Madhyama Haridāsa.

In Bhakti-ratnākara (Sixth Wave), there is a list of many of the chief devotees who accompanied Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

gosvāmī gopāla-bhaṭṭa ati dayāmaya

TRANSLATION

During this time, a Vaiṣṇava named Kṛṣṇadāsa came to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He was a householder belonging to the kṣatriya caste, and his house was located on the other side of the Yamunā.

TEXT 83

'keśī' snāna kari' sei 'kālīya-daha' yāite āmli-talāya gosāñire dekhe ācambite

SYNONYMS

keśī snāna kari'-after taking his bath at the place known as Keśī-tīrtha; sei-that person; kālīya-daha yāite-going to the Kālīya-daha; āmli-talāya-at the place known as Āmli-talā; gosāñire-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dekhe-sees; ācambite-suddenly.

TRANSLATION

After bathing at Keśī-tīrtha, Kṛṣṇadāsa went toward Kālīya-daha and suddenly saw Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu sitting at Āmli-talā [Teṅtulī-talā].

kṛṣṇadāsa kahe,–mui gṛhastha pāmara

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-the Lord inquired; ke tumi-who are you; kāhāṅ-where; tomāra-your; ghara-residence; kṛṣṇadāsa kahe-Kṛṣṇadāsa replied; mui-I; gṛhastha-householder; pāmara-most fallen.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked Kṛṣṇadāsa, "Who are you? Where is your home?" Kṛṣṇadāsa replied, "I am a most fallen householder.

TEXT 86

rājaputa-jāti muñi, o-pāre mora ghara mora icchā haya–'haṅa vaiṣṇava-kiṅkara'

SYNONYMS

rājaputa-jāti-belong to the Rājaputa caste; muñi-I; o-pāre-on the other side of the Yamunā; mora ghara-my residence; mora icchā haya-I wish; haṅa-to become; vaiṣṇava-kiṅkara-the servant of a Vaiṣṇava.

TRANSLATION

"I belong to the Rājaputa caste, and my home is just on the other side of the River Yamunā. However, I wish to be the servant of a Vaiṣṇava.

TEXT 87

kintu āji eka muñi 'svapna' dekhinu

SYNONYMS

kintu-but; āji-today; eka-one; muñi-I; svapna-dream; dekhinu-saw; sei svapna-that dream; parateka-according to; tomā-You; āsi'-coming; pāinu-I have gotten.

TRANSLATION

"Today I have had a dream, and according to that dream I have come here and found You."

TEXT 88

prabhu tāṅre kṛpā kailā āliṅgana kari preme matta haila sei nāce, bale 'hari'

SYNONYMS

prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāṅre-unto him; kṛpā kailā-bestowed His mercy; āliṅgana kari-embracing; preme-in ecstatic love; matta haila-became mad; sei-that Kṛṣṇadāsa; nāce-dances; bale-chants; hari-the holy name of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then bestowed upon Kṛṣṇadāsa His causeless mercy by embracing him. Kṛṣṇadāsa became mad with ecstatic love and began to dance and chant the holy name of Hari.

TEXT 89

prabhu-saṅge madhyāhne akrūra tīrthe āilā prabhura avaśiṣṭa-pātra-prasāda pāilā prabhu-saṅge-with the Lord; madhyāhne-in the afternoon; akrūra tīrthe-to Akrūra-tīrtha; āilā-came; prabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; avaśiṣṭa-pātra-prasāda-remnants of food; pāilā-got.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Kṛṣṇadāsa returned to Akrūra-tīrtha with the Lord, and remnants of the Lord's food were given to him.

TEXT 90

prāte prabhu-saṅge āilā jala-pātra lañā prabhu-saṅge rahe gṛha-strī-putra chāḍiyā

SYNONYMS

prāte-in the morning; prabhu-saṅge-with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; āilā-came; jala-pātra lañā-carrying a waterpot; prabhu-saṅge rahe-remains with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; gṛha-home; strī-wife; putra-children; chāḍiyā-leaving aside.

TRANSLATION

The next morning, Kṛṣṇadāsa went with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to Vṛndāvana and carried His waterpot. Kṛṣṇadāsa thus left his wife, home and children in order to remain with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

vṛndāvane punaḥ 'kṛṣṇa' prakaṭa ha-ila yāhāṅ tāhāṅ loka saba kahite lāgila

SYNONYMS

vṛndāvane-at Vṛndāvana; punaḥ-again; kṛṣṇa-Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa; prakaṭa ha-ila-became manifested; yāhāṅ tāhāṅ-everywhere; loka-people; saba-all; kahite lāgila-began to speak.

TRANSLATION

Everywhere the Lord went, all the people said, "Kṛṣṇa has again manifest at Vṛndāvana."

TEXT 92

eka-dina akrūrete loka prātaḥ-kāle vṛndāvana haite āise kari' kolāhale

SYNONYMS

eka-dina-one day; akrūrete-at Akrūra-tīrtha; loka-people; prātaḥ-kāle-in the morning; vṛndāvana haite-from Vṛndāvana; āise-came; kari'-making; kolāhale-tumult.

TRANSLATION

One morning many people came to Akrūra-tīrtha. As they came from Vṛndāvana, they made a tumultuous sound.

TEXT 93

prabhu dekhi' karila loka caraṇa vandana prabhu kahe,–kāhāṅ haite karilā āgamana?

SYNONYMS

prabhu dekhi'-seeing Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; karila-offered; loka-people; caraṇa vandana-respect unto His lotus feet; prabhu kahe-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; kāhāṅ haite-from where; karilā āgamana-have you come.

TRANSLATION

Upon seeing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, all the people offered respects at His lotus feet. The Lord then asked them,"Where are you all coming from?"

TEXT 94

loke kahe,–kṛṣṇa prakaṭa kālīya-dahera jale!
kālīya-śire nṛtya kare, phaṇā-ratna jvale

SYNONYMS

loke kahe-all the people replied; kṛṣṇa prakaṭa-Kṛṣṇa is again manifest; kālīya-dahera jale-in the water of Lake Kālīya; kālīya-śire-on the head of the serpent Kālīya; nṛtya kare-dances; phaṇā-ratna jvale-the jewels on the hoods blaze.

TRANSLATION

The people replied,"Kṛṣṇa has again manifest Himself on the waters of the Kālīya Lake. He dances on the hoods of the serpent Kālīya, and the jewels on those hoods are blazing.

TEXT 95

sākṣāt dekhila loka–nāhika saṁśaya śuni' hāsi' kahe prabhu,–saba 'satya' haya

SYNONYMS

sākṣāt-directly; dekhila loka-all the people saw; nāhika saṁśaya-there is no doubt; śuni'-hearing; hāsi'-laughing; kahe prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; saba satya haya-all that you have said is correct.

TRANSLATION

"Everyone has seen Lord Kṛṣṇa Himself. There is no doubt about it." Hearing this, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu began to laugh. He then said, "Everything is correct."

TEXT 96

ei-mata tina-rātri lokera gamana sabe āsi' kahe,–kṛṣṇa pāiluṅ daraśana ei-mata-in this way; tina-rātri-three nights; lokera gamana-people went; sabe-all; āsi'-coming; kahe-say; kṛṣṇa pāiluṅ daraśana-we have seen Lord Kṛṣṇa directly.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

For three successive nights people went to Kālīya-daha to see Kṛṣṇa, and everyone returned saying, ”Now we have seen Kṛṣṇa Himself.”

TEXT 97

prabhu-āge kahe loka,–śrī-kṛṣṇa dekhila
’sarasvatī’ ei vākye ’satya’ kahāila

SYNONYMS

prabhu-āge-in front of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kahe loka-all the people began to say; śrī-kṛṣṇa dekhila-that they have seen Lord Kṛṣṇa; sarasvatī-the goddess of learning; ei vākye-this statement; satya-true; kahāila-caused the people to speak.

TRANSLATION

Everyone came before Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and said, ”Now we have directly seen Lord Kṛṣṇa.” Thus by the mercy of the goddess of learning they were made to speak the truth.

TEXT 98

mahāprabhu dekhi’ ’satya’ kṛṣṇa-daraśana nijājñāne satya chāḍi’ ’asatye satya-bhrama’

SYNONYMS

mahāprabhu dekhi’-by seeing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; satya-truly; kṛṣṇa-daraśana-seeing Kṛṣṇa; nija-ajñāne-by their personal lack of knowledge; satya chāḍi’-giving up the real truth; asatye-untruth; satya-bhrama-mistaking for the truth.

TRANSLATION

When the people saw Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, they actually saw Kṛṣṇa, but because they were following their own imperfect knowledge, they accepted the wrong thing as Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 99

bhaṭṭācārya tabe kahe prabhura caraṇe
’ājñā deha’, yāi’ kari kṛṣṇa daraśane!’

SYNONYMS

bhaṭṭācārya-Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; tabe-at that time; kahe-says; prabhura caraṇe-at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ājñā deha’-please give permission; yāi’-going; kari kṛṣṇa daraśane-I shall see Lord Kṛṣṇa directly.

TRANSLATION

At that time Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya placed a request at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He said, ”Please give me permission to go see Lord Kṛṣṇa directly.”

PURPORT

The puzzled people who visited Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu were actually seeing Lord Kṛṣṇa, but they were mistaken in thinking that Lord Kṛṣṇa had come to Kālīya Lake. They all said that they had seen Kṛṣṇa directly performing His pastimes on the hood of the serpent Kālīya and that the jewels on Kālīya’s hoods were blazing brilliantly. Because they were speculating with their imperfect knowledge, they saw Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as an ordinary human being and a boatman’s light in the lake as Kṛṣṇa. One must see things as they are through the mercy of a spiritual master; otherwise if one tries to see Kṛṣṇa directly, he may mistake an ordinary man for Kṛṣṇa or Kṛṣṇa for an ordinary man. Everyone has to see Kṛṣṇa according to the verdict of Vedic literatures presented by the self-realized spiritual master. A sincere person is able to see Kṛṣṇa through the transparent via medium of Śrī Gurudeva, the spiritual master. Unless one is enlightened by the knowledge given by the spiritual master, he cannot see things as they are, even though he remains constantly with the spiritual master. This incident at Kālīya-daha is very instructive for those eager to advance in Kṛṣṇa consciousness.

TEXT 100

tabe tāṅre kahe prabhu cāpaḍa māriyā
”mūrkhera vākye ’mūrkha’ hailā paṇḍita hañā

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; tāṅre-unto Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; kahe-says; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; cāpaḍa māriyā-slapping; mūrkhera vākye-by the words of some rascals and fools; mūrkha hailā-you became a fool; paṇḍita hañā-being a learned scholar.

TRANSLATION

When Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya asked to see Kṛṣṇa at Kālīya-daha, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu mercifully slapped him, saying, ”You are a learned scholar, but you have become a fool influenced by the statements of other fools.

PURPORT

Māyā is so strong that even a person like Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya, who was constantly staying with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, was influenced by the words of fools. He wanted to see Kṛṣṇa directly by going to Kālīya-daha, but Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, being the original spiritual master, would not allow His servant to fall into such foolishness. He therefore chastised him, slapping him just to bring him to a real sense of Kṛṣṇa consciousness.

TEXT 101

kṛṣṇa kene daraśana dibe kali-kāle?
nija-bhrame mūrkha-loka kare kolāhale

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; kene-why; daraśana-interview; dibe-would give; kali-kāle-in this Age of Kali; nija-bhrame-by their own mistake; mūrkha-loka-foolish persons; kare kolāhale-make a chaotic tumult.

TRANSLATION

”Why will Kṛṣṇa appear in the Age of Kali? Foolish people who are mistaken are simply causing agitation and making a tumult.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's first statement (kṛṣṇa kene daraśana dibe kali-kāle) refers to the scriptures. According to scripture, Kṛṣṇa appears in Dvāpara-yuga, but He never appears as Himself in Kali-yuga. Rather, He appears in Kali-yuga in a covered form. As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.5.32): kṛṣṇa-varṇaṁ tviṣākṛṣṇaṁ sāṅgopāṅgāstra-pārṣadam. Kṛṣṇa appears in the Age of Kali in the garb of a devotee, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who always associates with His internal soldiers-Śrī Advaita Prabhu, Śrī Nityānanda Prabhu, Śrīvāsa Prabhu and Gadādhara Prabhu. Although Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya was personally serving Lord Kṛṣṇa in His role as a devotee (Caitanya Mahāprabhu), he mistook Lord Kṛṣṇa for an ordinary man and an ordinary man for Lord Kṛṣṇa because he did not follow the rules set down by śāstra and guru.

TEXT 102

'vātula' nā ha-io, ghare rahata vasiyā
'kṛṣṇa' daraśana kariha kāli rātrye yāñā"

SYNONYMS

vātula-mad; nā ha-io-do not become; ghare-at home; rahata-keep; vasiyā-sitting; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; daraśana-seeing; kariha-you may do; kāli-tomorrow; rātrye-at night; yāñā-going.

TRANSLATION

"Do not become mad. Simply sit down here, and tomorrow night you will go see Kṛṣṇa."

TEXT 103

prātaḥ-kāle bhavya-loka prabhu-sthāne āilā
'kṛṣṇa dekhi' āilā?'–prabhu tāṅhāre puchilā

SYNONYMS

prātaḥ-kāle-the next morning; bhavya-loka-respectable gentlemen; prabhu-sthāne-at the place of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; āilā-came; kṛṣṇa dekhi'-seeing Lord Kṛṣṇa; āilā-have you come; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāṅhāre puchilā-inquired from them.

TRANSLATION

The next morning some respectable gentlemen came to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and the Lord asked them, "Have you seen Kṛṣṇa?"

TEXT 104

loka kahe,–rātrye kaivartya naukāte caḍiyā kālīya-dahe matsya māre, deuṭī jvāliyā

SYNONYMS

loka kahe-the sensible respectable persons said; rātrye-at night; kaivartya-a fisherman; naukāte-on a boat; caḍiyā-getting up; kālīya-dahe-in the lake of Kālīya; matsya māre-catches fish; deuṭī jvāliyā-lighting a torch.

TRANSLATION

These respectable gentlemen replied, "At night in the Kālīya Lake a fisherman lighting a torch in his boat catches many fish.

TEXT 105

dūra haite tāhā dekhi' lokera haya 'bhrama'
'kālīyera śarīre kṛṣṇa kariche nartana'!

SYNONYMS

dūra haite-from a distant place; tāhā dekhi'-seeing that; lokera-of people in general; haya-there is; bhrama-mistake; kālīyera-of the snake Kālīya; śarīre-on the body; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; kariche nartana-is dancing.

TRANSLATION

"From a distance, people mistakenly think that they are seeing Kṛṣṇa dancing on the body of the Kālīya serpent.

TEXT 106

naukāte kālīya-jñāna, dīpe ratna-jñāne!
jāliyāre mūḍha-loka 'kṛṣṇa' kari' māne!

SYNONYMS

naukāte-on the boat; kālīya-jñāna-knowledge as the Kālīya snake; dīpe-on the torch; ratna-jñāne-consideration as jewels; jāliyāre-the fisherman; mūḍha-loka-foolish men; kṛṣṇa kari' māne-accept as Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"These fools think that the boat is the Kālīya serpent and the torchlight the jewels on his hoods. People also mistake the fisherman to be Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 107

vṛndāvane 'kṛṣṇa' āilā,–sei 'satya' haya kṛṣṇere dekhila loka,–ihā 'mithyā' naya

SYNONYMS

vṛndāvane-to Vṛndāvana; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; āilā-has come back; sei-that; satya haya-is true; kṛṣṇere-Kṛṣṇa; dekhila-saw; loka-the people; ihā mithyā naya-this is not false.

TRANSLATION

"Actually Lord Kṛṣṇa has again returned to Vṛndāvana. That also is a truth, and people have seen Him.

TEXT 108

kintu kāhoṅ 'kṛṣṇa' dekhe, kāhoṅ 'bhrama' māne sthāṇu-puruṣe yaiche viparīta-jñāne

SYNONYMS

kintu-but; kāhoṅ-where; kṛṣṇa-Kṛṣṇa; dekhe-one sees; kāhoṅ-where; bhrama māne-mistakes; sthāṇu-puruṣe-the dry tree and a person; yaiche-as; viparīta-jñāne-by understanding one to be the other.

TRANSLATION

”But where they are seeing Kṛṣṇa is their mistake. It is like considering a dry tree to be a person.”

PURPORT

The word sthāṇu means ”a dry tree without leaves.” From a distance one may mistake such a tree for a person. This is called sthāṇu-puruṣa. Although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was living in Vṛndāvana, the inhabitants considered Him an ordinary human being, and they mistook the fisherman to be Kṛṣṇa. Every human being is prone to make such mistakes. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was mistaken for an ordinary sannyāsī, the fisherman was mistaken for Kṛṣṇa, and the torchlight was mistaken for bright jewels on Kālīya's hoods.

prabhu kahe,–’kāhāṅ pāilā ’kṛṣṇa daraśana?’
loka kahe,–’sannyāsī tumi jaṅgama-nārāyaṇa prabhu kahe-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu further inquired; kāhāṅ pāilā-where have you gotten; kṛṣṇa daraśana-sight of Kṛṣṇa; loka kahe-the respectable persons replied; sannyāsī tumi-You are a sannyāsī; jaṅgama-nārāyaṇa-moving Nārāyaṇa.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then asked them,”Where have you seen Kṛṣṇa directly?” The people replied,”You are a sannyāsī, a renunciant; therefore You are a moving Nārāyaṇa [jaṅgama-nārāyaṇa].”

PURPORT

This is the viewpoint of Māyāvāda philosophy. Māyāvāda philosophy supports the impersonalist view that Nārāyaṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, has no form. One can imagine impersonal Brahman in any form-as Viṣṇu, Lord Śiva, Vivasvān, Gaṇeśa or Devī Durgā. According to the Māyāvāda philosophy, when one becomes a sannyāsi he is to be considered a moving Nārāyaṇa. Māyāvāda philosophy holds that the real Nārāyaṇa does not move because, being impersonal, He has no legs. Thus according to Māyāvāda philosophy, whoever becomes a sannyāsī declares himself Nārāyaṇa. Foolish people accept such ordinary human beings as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is called vivarta-vāda.

In this regard, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments that jaṅgama-nārāyaṇa means that the impersonal Brahman takes a shape and moves here and there in the form of a Māyāvādī sannyāsī. The Māyāvāda philosophy confirms this. Daṇḍa-grahaṇa-mātreṇa naro nārāyaṇo bhavet: ”Simply by accepting the daṇḍa of the order of sannyāsa, one is immediately transformed into Nārāyaṇa.” Therefore Māyāvādī sannyāsīs address themselves by saying, oṁ namo nārāyaṇāya. In this way one Nārāyaṇa worships another Nārāyaṇa.

Actually an ordinary human being cannot become Nārāyaṇa. Even the chief Māyāvādī sannyāsī, Śrī Śaṅkarācārya, says, nārāyaṇaḥ paro ’vyaktāt: ”Nārāyaṇa is not a creation of this material world. Nārāyaṇa is above the material creation.” Due to their poor fund of knowledge, Māyāvādī sannyāsīs think that Nārāyaṇa, the Absolute Truth, takes birth as a human being and that when He realizes this, He becomes Nārāyaṇa again. They never consider why Nārāyaṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, accepts an inferior position as a human being and then again becomes Nārāyaṇa when He is perfect. Why should Nārāyaṇa be imperfect? Why should He appear as a human being? Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu very nicely explained these points while at Vṛndāvana.

vṛndāvane ha-ilā tumi kṛṣṇa-avatāra tomā dekhi’ sarva-loka ha-ila nistāra

SYNONYMS

vṛndāvane-at Vṛndāvana; ha-ilā-became; tumi-You; kṛṣṇa-avatāra-incarnation of Kṛṣṇa; tomā dekhi’-by seeing You; sarva-loka-all people; ha-ila nistāra-become liberated.

TRANSLATION

The people then said, ”You have appeared in Vṛndāvana as an incarnation of Kṛṣṇa. Just by seeing You, everyone is now liberated.”

TEXT 111

prabhu kahe,–’viṣṇu’ ’viṣṇu’ ihā nā kahibā!
jīvādhame ’kṛṣṇa’-jñāna kabhu nā karibā!

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu replied; viṣṇu viṣṇu-O Viṣṇu, Viṣṇu; ihā-this; nā kahibā-do not speak; jīva-adhame-fallen conditioned souls; kṛṣṇa-jñāna-accepting as Lord Kṛṣṇa; kabhu-ever; nā karibā-do not do.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu immediately exclaimed,”Viṣṇu! Viṣṇu! Do not call Me the Supreme Personality of Godhead. A jīva cannot become Kṛṣṇa at any time. Do not even say such a thing!

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu immediately stated that a living being, however exalted he may be, should never be compared to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. All of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's preaching protests the monistic philosophy of the Māyāvāda school. The central point of Kṛṣṇa consciousness is that the jīva, the living entity, can never be accepted as Kṛṣṇa or Viṣṇu. This viewpoint is elaborated in the following verses.

TEXT 112

sannyāsī–cit-kaṇa jīva, kiraṇa-kaṇa-sama ṣaḍ-aiśvarya-pūrṇa kṛṣṇa haya sūryopama

SYNONYMS

sannyāsī-a person in the renounced order of life; cit-kaṇa jīva-a small fragmental living being; kiraṇa-of sunshine; kaṇa-small particle; sama-like; ṣaṭ-aiśvarya-pūrṇa-full in six opulences; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; haya-is; sūrya-upama-compared to the sun.

TRANSLATION

”A sannyāsī in the renounced order is certainly part and parcel of the complete whole, just as a shining molecular particle of sunshine is part and parcel of the sun itself. Kṛṣṇa is like the sun, full of six opulences, but the living entity is only a fragment of the complete whole.

jīva, īśvara-tattva–kabhu nahe ’sama’ jvalad-agni-rāśi yaiche sphuliṅgera ’kaṇa’

SYNONYMS

jīva-a living being; īśvara-tattva-and the Supreme Personality of Godhead; kabhu-at any time; nahe-not; sama-equal; jvalat-agni-rāśi-large flame; yaiche-as; sphuliṅgera-of a spark; kaṇa-fragmental portion.

TRANSLATION

”A living entity and the Absolute Personality of Godhead are never to be considered equal, just as a fragmental spark can never be considered the original flame.

PURPORT

Māyāvādī sannyāsīs consider themselves Brahman, and they superficially speak of themselves as Nārāyaṇa. The monistic disciples of the Māyāvāda school (known as smārta-brāhmaṇas) are generally householder brāhmaṇas who accept the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs as Nārāyaṇa incarnate; therefore they offer their obeisances to them. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu immediately protested this unauthorized system, specifically mentioning that a sannyāsī (cit-kaṇa jīva) is nothing but a fragmental portion of the Supreme. In other words, he is nothing more than an ordinary living being. He is never Nārāyaṇa, just as a molecular portion of sunshine is never the sun itself. The living entity is nothing but a fragmental part of the Absolute Truth; therefore at no stage of perfection can a living entity become the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This Māyāvāda viewpoint is always condemned by the Vaiṣṇava school. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself protested this philosophy. When the Māyāvādīs accept sannyāsa and consider themselves Nārāyaṇa, they become so puffed up that they do not even enter the temple of Nārāyaṇa to offer respects, for they falsely think themselves Nārāyaṇa Himself. Although Māyāvādī sannyāsīs may offer respects to other sannyāsīs and address them as Nārāyaṇa, they do not go to a Nārāyaṇa temple and offer respects. These Māyāvādī sannyāsīs are always condemned and are described as demons. The Vedas clearly state that living entities are subordinate parts and parcels of the supreme. Eko bahūnāṁ yo vidadhāti kāmān: the Supreme Being, Kṛṣṇa, maintains all living entities.

SYNONYMS

hlādinyā-by the hlādinī potency; saṁvit-by the samvit potency; āśliṣṭaḥ-surrounded; sat-cit-ānandaḥ-always transcendentally blissful; īśvaraḥ-the supreme controller; sva-own; avidyā-by ignorance; saṁvṛtaḥ-surrounded; jīvaḥ-the living entity; saṅkleśa-of the threefold miseries; nikara-of the multitude; ākaraḥ-the mine.

TRANSLATION

” ’The Supreme Personality of Godhead, the supreme controller, is always full of transcendental bliss and is accompanied by the potencies known as hlādinī and samvit. The conditioned soul, however, is always covered by ignorance and embarrassed by the threefold miseries of life. Thus he is a treasure-house of all kinds of tribulations.’

SYNONYMS

yei mūḍha-any foolish person who; kahe-says; jīva-the living entity; īśvara-the supreme controller; haya-are; sama-equal; seita-he; pāṣaṇḍī haya-is a first-class atheist; daṇḍe-punishes; tāre-him; yama-the superintendent of death, Yamarāja.

TRANSLATION

”A foolish person who says that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the same as the living entity is an atheist, and he becomes subject to punishment by the superintendent of death, Yamarāja.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that the word pāṣaṇḍī refers to one who considers the living entity under the control of the illusory energy to be equal with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is transcendental to all material qualities. Another kind of pāṣaṇḍī is one who does not believe in the spirit soul, the superior potency of the Lord, and therefore does not distinguish between spirit and matter. While describing one of the offenses against chanting the holy names, an offense called śruti-śāstra-nindana (blaspheming the Vedic literature), Jīva Gosvāmī states in his Bhakti-sandarbha: yathā pāṣaṇḍa-mārgeṇa dattātreyarṣabha-devopāsakānāṁ pāṣaṇḍīnām. Worshipers of impersonalists like Dattātreya are also pāṣaṇḍīs. Concerning the offense of ahaṁ-mama-buddhi, or dehātma-buddhi (considering the body to be the self), Jīva Gosvāmī states: deva-draviṇādi-nimittaka-’pāṣaṇḍa’-śabdena ca daśāparādhā eva lakṣyante, pāṣaṇḍamayatvāt teṣām. ”Those who are overly absorbed in the conception of the body and the bodily necessities are also called pāṣaṇḍīs.” Elsewhere in Bhakti-sandarbha it is stated:

uddiśya devatā eva juhoti ca dadāti ca sa pāṣaṇḍīti vijñeyaḥ svatantro vāpi karmasu

”A pāṣaṇḍī is one who considers the demigods and the Supreme Personality of Godhead to be one; therefore a pāṣaṇḍī worships any kind of demigod as the Supreme Personality of Godhead.” One who disobeys the orders of the spiritual master is also considered a pāṣaṇḍī. The word pāṣaṇḍī has been described in many places in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, including 4.2.28, 30, 32; 5.6.9 and 12.2.13, 43.

On the whole, a pāṣaṇḍī is a nondevotee who does not accept the Vedic conclusions. In the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa (1.117) there is a verse quoted from Padma Purāṇa describing the pāṣaṇḍī. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu quotes this verse as the following text.

yas tu nārāyaṇaṁ devaṁ

SYNONYMS

yaḥ-any person who; tu-however; nārāyaṇam-the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the master of such demigods as Brahmā and Śiva; devam-the Lord; brahma-Lord Brahmā; rudra-Lord Śiva; ādi-and others; daivataiḥ-with such demigods; samatvena-on an equal level; eva-certainly; vīkṣeta-observes; saḥ-such a person; pāṣaṇḍī-pāṣaṇḍī; bhavet-must be; dhruvam-certainly.

TRANSLATION

” ’A person who considers demigods like Brahmā and Śiva to be on an equal level with Nārāyaṇa is to be considered an offender and a pāṣaṇḍī.’ ”

TRANSLATION

” ’To say nothing of the spiritual advancement of persons who see the Supreme Person face to face, even a person born in a family of dog-eaters becomes immediately eligible to perform Vedic sacrifices if he once utters the holy name of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, or chants about Him, hears about His pastimes, offers Him obeisances or even remembers Him.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.33.6). According to this verse, it doesn’t matter what position a person holds. One may be the lowest of the low-a caṇḍāla, or dog-eater-but if he takes to chanting and hearing the holy name of the Lord, he is immediately eligible to perform Vedic sacrifices. This is especially true in this Age of Kali.

harer nāma harer nāma
harer nāmaiva kevalam
kalau nāsty eva nāsty eva
nāsty eva gatir anyathā

A person born in a brāhmaṇa family cannot perform Vedic sacrifices until he is properly purified and has attained his sacred thread. However, according to this verse, it is understood that even a lowborn person can immediately perform sacrifices if he sincerely chants and hears the holy name of the Lord. Sometimes envious people ask how Europeans and Americans in this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement can become brāhmaṇas and perform sacrifices. They do not know that the Europeans and Americans have already been purified by chanting the holy name of the Lord-Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare HareHare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare. This is the proof. Śvādo ’pi sadyaḥ savanāya kalpate. One may be born in a family of dog-eaters, but he can perform sacrifices simply by chanting the mahā-mantra.

Those who find fault in the Western Vaiṣṇavas should consider this statement from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and the commentary on this verse by Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī. In this regard, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī has stated that to become a brāhmaṇa, one has to wait for purification and undergo the sacred thread ceremony, but a chanter of the holy name does not have to wait for the sacred thread ceremony. We do not allow devotees to perform sacrifices until they are properly initiated in the sacred thread ceremony. Yet according to this verse, an offenseless chanter of the holy name is already fit to perform a fire ceremony, even though he is not doubly initiated by the sacred thread ceremony. This is the verdict given by Lord Kapiladeva in His instructions to His mother, Devahūti. It was Lord Kapiladeva who instructed Devahūti in pure Sāṅkhya philosophy.

’svarūpa’-lakṣaṇe tumi–’vrajendra-nandana’

SYNONYMS

eita’-all these; mahimā-glories; tomāra-Your; taṭastha-lakṣaṇa-marginal characteristics; sva-rūpa-original; lakṣaṇe-by characteristics; tumi-You; vrajendra-nandana-the son of Mahārāja Nanda.

TRANSLATION

"These glories of Yours are only marginal. Originally You are the son of Mahārāja Nanda."

PURPORT

The original characteristics of a substance are called svarūpa, and the subsequent corollaries are called taṭastha-lakṣaṇa, or marginal characteristics. The glories of the Lord's marginal characteristics prove Him to be the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, the son of Mahārāja Nanda. As soon as one understands this, one accepts Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 127

TRANSLATION

In the morning they would come to Akrūra-tīrtha and cook food. After offering it to the śālagrāma-śilā, they offered it to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

There are brāhmaṇas known as pañca-gauḍa-brāhmaṇas who come from five places in northern India, and there are brāhmaṇas known as pañca-dākṣiṇātya-brāhmaṇas who come from five places in southern India. In northern India the places are Kānyakubja, Sārasvata, Gauḍa, Maithila and Utkala. In southern India the places are Āndhra, Karṇāta, Gurjara, Drāviḍa and Mahārāṣṭra. The brāhmaṇas from these places are considered to be very strict followers of the Vedic principles, and they are accepted as pure brāhmaṇas. They strictly observe Vedic principles and are not polluted by tantric misdeeds. All of these brāhmaṇas respectfully invited Caitanya Mahāprabhu for lunch.

TRANSLATION

One day Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu sat at the bathing ghat of Akrūra-tīrtha and thought the following thoughts.

Akrūra-tīrtha is located on the road between Vṛndāvana and Mathurā. When Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma were being taken to Mathurā by Akrūra, the Lord rested at this place and took His bath in the Yamunā. When Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma took Their baths, Akrūra saw the entire world of Vaikuṇṭha within the water. The inhabitants of Vṛndāvana also saw the Vaikuṇṭha planets within the water.

TEXT 136

SYNONYMS

māgha-māsa lāgila-the month of Māgha has begun; ebe-now; yadi-if; yāiye-we go; makare-during the Makara-saṅkrānti; prayāga-snāna-bathing at Prayāga; kata dina-for a few days; pāiye-we shall get.

TRANSLATION

"It is now the beginning of the month of Māgha. If we go to Prayāga at this time, we shall have an opportunity to bathe for a few days during Makara-saṅkrānti."

PURPORT

Bathing during the month of Māgha at Māgha-melā still takes place. This has been a very old melā (assembly) from time immemorial. It is said that the Lord in the form of Mohinī took a bucket of nectar and kept it at Prayāga. Consequently Māgha-melā has been observed, and there is an assembly of holy men there every year. Every twelfth year there is a Kumbha-melā, a great festival, and all the holy men from all over India assemble there. The brāhmaṇa wanted to take advantage of the Māgha-melā and bathe there.

Bathing at the confluence of the Ganges and Yamunā near the fort at Allahabad, Prayāga, is mentioned in revealed scriptures:

māghe māsi gamiṣyanti gaṅgā-yāmuna-saṅgamam gavāṁ śata-sahasrasya prayāge māgha-māse vai tryahaṁ snātasya tat-phalam

"If one goes to Prayāga and bathes at the confluence of the Ganges and Yamunā in the month of Māgha, he attains the result of giving hundreds and thousands of cows in charity. Simply by bathing for three days there, he attains the results of such a pious activity." Because of this, the Sanoḍiyā brāhmaṇa was very eager to go to Prayāga and bathe. Generally karmīs (fruitive laborers) take advantage of bathing there during the month of Māgha, thinking that they will be rewarded in the future. Those who are situated in devotional service do not very strictly follow this karma-kāṇḍīya process.

SYNONYMS

sṛṣṭi-creation; sthiti-maintenance; pralaya-dissolution; tāṅhā-Him; haite-from; haya-becomes possible; sthūla-gross; sūkṣma-subtle; jagatera-of the cosmic manifestation; teṅho-He; samāśraya-the only shelter.

TRANSLATION

"Creation, maintenance and dissolution come from Him. He is the original shelter of all gross and subtle cosmic manifestations.

TEXT 193

sarva-śreṣṭha, sarvārādhya, kāraṇera kāraṇa tāṅra bhaktye haya jīvera saṁsāra-tāraṇa

SYNONYMS

sarva-śreṣṭha-the Supreme Truth; sarva-ārādhya-worshipable by everyone; kāraṇera kāraṇa-the cause of all causes; tāṅra-His; bhaktye-by devotional service; haya-becomes; jīvera-of the living entity; saṁsāra-tāraṇa-deliverance from material existence.

TRANSLATION

"The Lord is the Supreme Truth worshipable by everyone. He is the cause of all causes. By engaging in His devotional service, the living entity is relieved from material existence.

TEXT 194

tāṅra sevā vinā jīvera nā yāya 'saṁsāra' tāṅhāra caraṇe prīti–'puruṣārtha-sāra'

SYNONYMS

tāṅra-His; sevā-service; vinā-without; jīvera-of the conditioned soul; nā-not; yāya-finishes; saṁsāra-material bondage; tāṅhāra-His; caraṇe-at the lotus feet; prīti-love; puruṣārtha-sāra-the ultimate goal of life.

TRANSLATION

"No conditioned soul can get out of material bondage without serving the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Love at His lotus feet is the ultimate goal of life.

PURPORT

According to the Mohammedan scripture, without evādat, offering prayers at a mosque or elsewhere five times daily (namāja), one cannot be successful in life. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu pointed out that in the revealed scripture of the Mohammedans, love of Godhead is the ultimate goal. Karma-yoga and jñāna-yoga are certainly described in the Koran, but ultimately the Koran states that the ultimate goal is the offering of prayers to the Supreme Person (evādat).

TEXT 195

mokṣādi ānanda yāra nahe eka 'kaṇa' pūrṇānanda-prāpti tāṅra caraṇa-sevana

SYNONYMS

mokṣa-ādi-liberation and so on; ānanda-transcendental bliss; yāra-whose; nahe-not; eka-even; kaṇa-a fragment; pūrṇa-ānanda-prāpti-attainment of completely blissful life; tāṅra caraṇa-sevana-service to His lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

"The happiness of liberation, whereby one merges into the Lord's existence, cannot even be compared to a fragment of the transcendental bliss obtained by service unto the Lord's lotus feet.

TEXT 196

'karma', jñāna', 'yoga' āge kariyā sthāpana saba khaṇḍi' sthāpe 'īśvara', 'tāṅhāra sevana' karma-fruitive activities; jñāna-speculative knowledge; yoga-mystic power; āge-in the beginning; kariyā sthāpana-establishing; saba khaṇḍi'-refuting everything; sthāpe-establishes; īśvara-the Personality of Godhead; tāṅhāra sevana-His service.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"In the Koran there are descriptions of fruitive activity, speculative knowledge, mystic power and union with the Supreme, but ultimately everything is refuted as the Lord's personal feature and His devotional service is established.

TEXT 197

tomāra paṇḍita-sabāra nāhi śāstra-jñāna pūrvāpara-vidhi-madhye 'para'–balavān

SYNONYMS

tomāra paṇḍita-sabāra-of the learned scholars of your community; nāhi-there is not; śāstra-jñāna-knowledge of revealed scripture; pūrva-āpara-former and latter; vidhi-regulative principles; madhye-among; para-the conclusion at the end; balavān-most powerful.

TRANSLATION

"The scholars of the Koran are not very advanced in knowledge. Although there are many methods prescribed, they do not know that the ultimate conclusion should be considered the most powerful.

TEXT 198

nija-śāstra dekhi' tumi vicāra kariyā ki likhiyāche śeṣe kaha nirṇaya kariyā

SYNONYMS

nija-śāstra-your own scripture; dekhi'-seeing; tumi-you; vicāra kariyā-deliberating; ki likhiyāche-what was written; śeṣe-at the end; kaha-say; nirṇaya kariyā-ascertaining.

TRANSLATION

"Seeing your own Koran and deliberating over what is written there, what is your conclusion?"

TEXT 199

mleccha kahe,–yei kaha, sei 'satya' haya śāstre likhiyāche, keha la-ite nā pāraya

SYNONYMS

mleccha kahe-the Mohammedan replied; yei kaha-what You say; sei-that; satya haya-is true; śāstre-in the Koran; likhiyāche-it has been written; keha-anyone; la-ite-to take; nā pāraya-is not able.

TRANSLATION

The saintly Mohammedan replied, "All that You have said is true. This has certainly been written in the Koran, but our scholars can neither understand nor accept it.

TEXT 200

'nirviśeṣa-gosāñi' lañā karena vyākhyāna
'sākāra-gosāñi'–sevya, kāro nāhi jñāna

SYNONYMS

nirviśeṣa-gosāñi-the Supreme Personality of Godhead as impersonal; lañā-taking; karena vyākhyāna-they describe; sa-ākāra-gosāñi-the personal feature of the Lord; sevya-worshipable; kāro nāhi jñāna-no one has this knowledge.

TRANSLATION

"Usually they describe the Lord's impersonal aspect, but they hardly know that the Lord's personal feature is worshipable. They are undoubtedly lacking this knowledge.

PURPORT

The saintly Mohammedan admitted that those who were supposedly conversant in the teachings of the Koran could not ultimately understand the essence of the Koran. Because of this, they accepted only the Lord's impersonal feature. Generally they recite and explain this portion only. Although the transcendental body of the Lord is worshipable, most of them are unaware of this.

seita 'gosāñi' tumi–sākṣāt 'īśvara' more kṛpā kara, muñi–ayogya pāmara

SYNONYMS

seita-that; gosāñi-Personality of Godhead; tumi-You; sākṣāt-directly; īśvara-the Personality of Godhead; more-upon me; kṛpā kara-kindly be merciful; muñi-I; ayogya pāmara-very fallen and unfit.

TRANSLATION

"Since You are that very same Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself, please be merciful upon me. I am fallen and unfit.

TEXT 202

aneka dekhinu muñi mleccha-śāstra haite
'sādhya-sādhana-vastu' nāri nirdhārite

SYNONYMS

aneka-many; dekhinu-have studied; muñi-I; mleccha-śāstra-Mohammedan scripture; haite-from; sādhya-the ultimate goal of life; sādhana-how to approach it; vastu-matter; nāri nirdhārite-I cannot decide conclusively.

TRANSLATION

"I have studied the Mohammedan scripture very extensively, but from it I cannot conclusively decide what the ultimate goal of life is or how I can approach it.

TEXT 203

tomā dekhi' jihvā mora bale 'kṛṣṇa-nāma'
'āmi–baḍa jñānī'–ei gela ābhimāna

SYNONYMS

tomā dekhi'-by seeing You; jihvā-tongue; mora-my; bale kṛṣṇa-nāma-chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra; āmi-I; baḍa jñānī-very learned scholar; ei-this; gela ābhimāna-false prestige has gone away.

TRANSLATION

"Now that I have seen You, my tongue is chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā mantra. The false prestige I felt from being a learned scholar is now gone."

TEXT 204

kṛpā kari' bala more 'sādhya-sādhane' eta bali' paḍe mahāprabhura caraṇe

SYNONYMS

kṛpā kari'-by Your causeless mercy; bala-speak; more-to me; sādhya-sādhane-the ultimate object of life and the process to achieve it; eta bali'-saying this; paḍe-falls down; mahāprabhura caraṇe-at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

Saying this, the saintly Mohammedan fell at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and requested Him to speak of life's ultimate goal and the process by which it could be obtained.

TEXT 205

prabhu kahe,–uṭha, kṛṣṇa-nāma tumi la-ilā koṭi-janmera pāpa gela, 'pavitra' ha-ilā

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; uṭha-please get up; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; tumi-you; la-ilā-have taken; koṭi-janmera-of many millions of births; pāpa gela-your sinful reactions have gone; pavitra ha-ilā-you have become pure.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "Please get up. You have chanted the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; therefore the sinful reactions you have accrued for many millions of lives are now gone. You are now pure."

TEXT 206

'kṛṣṇa' kaha, 'kṛṣṇa' kaha,–kailā upadeśa sabe'kṛṣṇa' kahe, sabāra haila premāveśa

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa kaha-just chant "Kṛṣṇa"; kṛṣṇa kaha-just chant "Kṛṣṇa"; kailā upadeśa-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu instructed; sabe-all; kṛṣṇa kahe-chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; sabāra-of all of them; haila-there was; prema-āveśa-ecstatic love.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then told all the Mohammedans there, "Chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa! Chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa!" As they all began to chant, they were overwhelmed by ecstatic love.

TEXT 207

'rāmadāsa' bali' prabhu tāṅra kaila nāma
āra eka pāṭhāna, tāṅra nāma–'vijulī-khāṅna'

SYNONYMS

rāmadāsa bali'-of the name Rāmadāsa; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāṅra-his; kaila-made; nāma-name; āra eka pāṭhāna-another Mohammedan; tāṅra nāma-his name; vijulī-khāṅna-Vijulī Khān.

TRANSLATION

In this way Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu indirectly initiated the saintly Mohammedan by advising him to chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa. The Mohammedan's name was changed to Rāmadāsa. There was also another Pāṭhāna Moslem present whose name was Vijulī Khān.

PURPORT

After being initiated, the devotees in the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement change their names. Whenever a person in the Western world becomes interested in this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, he is initiated by this process. In India we are falsely accused of converting mlecchas and yavanas into the Hindu religion. In India there are many Māyāvādī sannyāsīs known as jagad-guru, although they have hardly visited the whole world. Some are not even sufficiently educated, yet they make accusations against our movement and accuse us of destroying the principles of the Hindu religion by accepting Mohammedans and yavanas as Vaiṣṇavas. Such people are simply envious. We are not spoiling the Hindu system of religion but are simply following in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by traveling all over the world and accepting those who are interested in understanding Kṛṣṇa as Kṛṣṇadāsa or Rāmadāsa. By the process of a bona fide initiation, their names are changed.

TEXT 208

alpa vayasa tāṅra, rājāra kumāra
'rāmadāsa' ādi pāṭhāna–cākara tāṅhāra

SYNONYMS

alpa vayasa tāṅra-his age is very young; rājāra kumāra-son of the king; rāmadāsa-Rāmadāsa; ādi-heading the list; pāṭhāna-the Mohammedans; cākara tāṅhāra-servants of him.

TRANSLATION

Vijulī Khān was very young, and he was the son of the king. All the other Mohammedans, Pāṭhānas, headed by Rāmadāsa, were his servants.

TEXT 209

'kṛṣṇa' bali' paḍe sei mahāprabhura pāya prabhu śrī-caraṇa dila tāṅhāra māthāya kṛṣṇa bali'-chanting the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; paḍe-falls down; sei-that Vijulī Khān; mahāprabhura pāya-at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; śrī-caraṇa dila-placed His foot; tāṅhāra māthāya-on his head.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Vijulī Khān also fell down at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and the Lord placed His foot on his head.

TEXT 210

tāṅ-sabāre kṛpā kari' prabhu ta' calilā seita pāṭhāna saba 'vairāgī' ha-ilā

SYNONYMS

tāṅ-sabāre-to all of them; kṛpā kari'-bestowing mercy; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ta'-indeed; calilā-departed; seita-they; pāṭhāna-the Mohammedans of the Pāṭhāna community; saba-all; vairāgī ha-ilā-became mendicants.

TRANSLATION

Bestowing His mercy upon them in this way, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu left. All the Pāṭhāna Mohammedans then became mendicants.

TEXT 211

pāṭhāna-vaiṣṇava bali' haila tāṅra khyāti sarvatra gāhiyā bule mahāprabhura kīrti

SYNONYMS

pāṭhāna-vaiṣṇava bali'-known as Pāṭhāna Vaiṣṇavas; haila-became; tāṅra-their; khyāti-reputation; sarvatra-everywhere; gāhiyā bule-travel while chanting; mahāprabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kīrti-glorious activities.

TRANSLATION

Later these very Pāṭhānas became celebrated as the Pāṭhāna Vaiṣṇavas. They toured all over the country and chanted the glorious activities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 212

sei vijulī-khāṅna haila 'mahā-bhāgavata' sarva-tīrthe haila tāṅra parama-mahattva sei-that; vijulī-khāṅna-Vijulī Khān; haila-became; mahā-bhāgavata-most advanced devotee; sarva-tīrthe-in all places of pilgrimage; haila-became; tāṅra-his; parama-great; mahattva-importance.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Vijulī Khān became a greatly advanced devotee, and his importance was celebrated at every holy place of pilgrimage.

TEXT 213

aiche līlā kare prabhu śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya
'paścime' āsiyā kaila yavanādi dhanya

SYNONYMS

aiche-in that way; līlā-pastimes; kare-performed; prabhu-the Lord; śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; paścime-to the western part of India; āsiyā-coming; kaila-made; yavana-ādi-meat-eaters and others; dhanya-fortunate.

TRANSLATION

In this way Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu performed His pastimes. Coming to the western part of India, He bestowed good fortune upon the yavanas and mlecchas.

PURPORT

The word yavana means "meat-eater." Anyone from a meat-eating community is called a yavana. One who does not strictly observe the Vedic regulative principles is called a mleccha. These words do not refer to any particular man. Even if a person is born in a brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya or śūdra family, he is a mleccha or yavana if he does not strictly follow the regulative principles or if he eats meat.

TEXT 214

SYNONYMS

mleccha-deśa-this is a country occupied by the Mohammedans; keha-anyone; kāhāṅ-anywhere; karaye utpāta-can create a disturbance; bhaṭṭācārya-Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya; paṇḍita-learned scholar; kahite-to speak; nā jānena-does not know; vāt-language.

TRANSLATION

"This country is mainly occupied by Mohammedans. At any place someone can create a disturbance, and although Your companion Balabhadra Bhaṭṭācārya is a learned scholar, he does not know how to speak the local language."

TEXT 218

śuni' mahāprabhu īṣat hāsite lāgilā sei dui-jana prabhura saṅge cali' āilā śuni'-hearing; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; īṣat-mildly; hāsite lāgilā-began to smile; sei-those; dui-jana-two persons; prabhura saṅge-with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; cali' āilā-came.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Hearing this, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted their proposal by smiling mildly. Thus those two persons continued to accompany Him.

TEXT 219

yei yei jana prabhura pāila daraśana sei preme matta haya, kare kṛṣṇa-saṅkīrtana

SYNONYMS

yei yei-anyone who; jana-person; prabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; pāila daraśana-got the sight; sei-that person; preme-with ecstatic love; matta haya-becomes overwhelmed; kare-performs; kṛṣṇa-saṅkīrtana-chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

Whoever got to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would feel himself overwhelmed with ecstatic love and would begin to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra.

TEXT 220

SYNONYMS

tāṅra saṅge-with Him; anyonye-other; tāṅra saṅge-and with him; āna-another; ei-mata-in this way; vaiṣṇava-Vaiṣṇava; kailā-made; saba-all; deśa-grāma-villages and towns.

TRANSLATION

Whoever met Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu became a Vaiṣṇava, and whoever met that Vaiṣṇava also became a Vaiṣṇava. In this way, all the towns and villages one after the other became Vaiṣṇava.

TEXT 221

dakṣiṇa yāite yaiche śakti prakāśilā sei-mata paścima deśa, preme bhāsāilā

SYNONYMS

dakṣiṇa yāite-while touring in the southern part of India; yaiche-as; śakti prakāśilā-manifested His spiritual energy; sei-mata-in that way; paścima deśa-the western part of India; preme bhāsāilā-inundated with love of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

Just as the Lord inundated South India on His tour there, He also inundated the western part of the country with love of Godhead.

PURPORT

According to some opinions, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu visited Kurukṣetra while going to Prayāga from Vṛndāvana. There is a temple of Bhadra-kālī in Kurukṣetra, and near that temple there is a temple containing the Deity of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 222

ei-mata cali' prabhu 'prayāga' āilā daśa-dina triveṇīte makara-snāna kailā

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-in this way; cali'-walking; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; prayāga-the holy place named Prayāga; āilā-reached; daśa-dina-ten days; triveṇīte-at the confluence of the Rivers Ganges and Yamunā; makara-snāna kailā-bathed during the festival of Makara, or Māgha-melā.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu finally arrived at Prayāga and for ten successive days bathed in the confluence of the Rivers Yamunā and Ganges during the festival of Makara-saṅkrānti [Māgha-melā].

PURPORT

Actually the word triveṇī indicates the confluence of three rivers-namely the Ganges, Yamunā and Sarasvatī. Presently the Sarasvatī River is not visible, but the River Ganges and the River Yamunā merge at Allahabad.

TEXT 223

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Eighteenth Chapter, describing the Lord's visit to Śrī Vṛndāvana and His conversion of the Mohammedan soldiers on the way to Prayāga.

18.5.19 Chapter 19

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Instructs Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī

A summary of this chapter is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. Meeting Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in a village called Rāmakeli, two brothers, Rūpa and Sanātana, began to devise means to get out of their government service. Both brothers appointed some brāhmaṇas to perform puraścaraṇa ceremonies and chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī deposited ten thousand gold coins with a grocer, and the balance he brought in two boats to a place called Bāklā Candradvīpa. There he divided this money among the brāhmaṇas, Vaiṣṇavas and his relatives, and a portion he kept for emergency measures and personal needs. He was informed that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was going to Vṛndāvana from Jagannātha Purī through the forest of Madhya Pradesh; therefore he sent two people to Jagannātha Purī to find out when the Lord would leave for Vṛndāvana. In this way Rūpa Gosvāmī retired, but Sanātana Gosvāmī told the Nawab that he was sick and could not attend to his work. Giving this excuse, he sat home and studied Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam with learned brāhmaṇa scholars. The Nawab Hussain Shah first sent his personal physician to see what the real facts were; then he personally came to see why Sanātana was not attending to official business. Knowing that he wanted to resign his post, the Nawab had him arrested and imprisoned. The Nawab then went off to attack Orissa.

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu started for Vṛndāvana through the forest of Madhya Pradesh (Jhārikhaṇḍa), Rūpa Gosvāmī left home and sent news to Sanātana that he was leaving home with his younger brother (Anupama Mallika) to meet Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī finally reached Prayāga and met with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu for ten successive days. During this time, Vallabha Bhaṭṭa extended an invitation to the Lord with great respect. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu introduced Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī to Vallabha Bhaṭṭa. After this, a brāhmaṇa scholar named Raghupati Upādhyāya arrived and discussed Kṛṣṇa consciousness with the Lord. Kavirāja Gosvāmī then extensively describes the living condition of Śrī Rūpa and Sanātana at Vṛndāvana. During the ten days at Prayāga, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī was instructed by the Lord, who gave him the basic principles of the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu. The Lord then sent Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī to Vṛndāvana. The Lord Himself returned to Vārāṇasī and stayed at the home of Candraśekhara.

vṛndāvanīyāṁ rasa-keli-vārtāṁ kālena luptāṁ nija-śaktim utkaḥ sañcārya rūpe vyatanot punaḥ sa prabhur vidhau prāg iva loka-sṛṣṭim vṛndāvanīyām-related to Vṛndāvana; rasa-keli-vārtām-talks about the pastimes of Śrī Kṛṣṇa; kālena-with the course of time; luptām-lost; nija-śaktim-His personal potency; utkaḥ-being eager; sañcārya-infusing; rūpe-to Rūpa Gosvāmī; vyatanot-manifested; punaḥ-again; saḥ-He; prabhuḥ-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; vidhau-unto Lord Brahmā; prāk iva-as formerly; loka-sṛṣṭim-the creation of this cosmic manifestation.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Before the creation of this cosmic manifestation, the Lord enlightened the heart of Lord Brahmā with the details of the creation and manifested the Vedic knowledge. In exactly the same way, the Lord, being anxious to revive the Vṛndāvana pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa, impregnated the heart of Rūpa Gosvāmī with spiritual potency. By this potency, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī could revive the activities of Kṛṣṇa in Vṛndāvana, activities almost lost to memory. In this way, He spread Kṛṣṇa consciousness throughout the world.

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-mantre-in the holy mantra Hare Kṛṣṇa; karāila-caused to perform; dui-two; puraścaraṇa-religious ceremonies; acirāt-without delay; pāibāre-to get; caitanya-caraṇa-the shelter of the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

The brāhmaṇas performed religious ceremonies and chanted the holy name of Kṛṣṇa so that the two brothers might attain shelter at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu very soon.

PURPORT

A puraścaraṇa is a ritualistic ceremony performed under the guidance of an expert spiritual master or a brāhmaṇa. It is performed for the fulfillment of certain desires. One rises early in the morning, chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, performs arcana by the ārati ceremony and worships the Deities. These activities are described in the Fifteenth Chapter, verse 108.

TRANSLATION

On the pretext of bad health, Sanātana Gosvāmī remained home. Thus he gave up government service and did not go to the royal court.

TEXT 16

lobhī kāyastha-gaṇa rāja-kārya kare āpane svagṛhe kare śāstrera vicāre

SYNONYMS

lobhī-greedy; kāyastha-gaṇa-persons engaged in secretarial and clerical work; rāja-kārya kare-executed the government service; āpane-personally; sva-gṛhe-at home; kare-did; śāstrera vicāre-discussion of the revealed scriptures.

TRANSLATION

The greedy masters of his clerical and secretarial staff performed the government duties while Sanātana personally remained home and discussed revealed scriptures.

PURPORT

Sanātana Gosvāmī was the minister in charge of the government secretariat, and his assistants-the undersecretaries and clerks-all belonged to the kāyastha community. Formerly the kāyasthas belonged to the clerical and secretarial staff of the government, and later if one served in such a post, he was called a kāyastha. Eventually if a person could not identify himself as a brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya or śūdra, he used to introduce himself as a kāyastha to get a wealthy and honorable position. In Bengal it is said that if one cannot give the identity of his caste, he calls himself a kāyastha. On the whole, the kāyastha community is a mixture of all castes, and it especially includes those engaged in clerical or secretarial work. Materially such people are always busy occupying responsible government posts.

When Sanātana Gosvāmī was relaxing and feeling inclined to retire from government service, many kāyasthas on his secretarial staff were very eager to occupy his post. In this regard, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura states that when Sanātana Gosvāmī was a government minister and the kāyasthas who assisted him saw that he was reluctant to continue, they became very expert in their duties. Sanātana Gosvāmī was a brāhmaṇa belonging to the Sārasvata brāhmaṇa community. It is said that when he resigned, an underworker named Purandara Khān, who was a kāyastha, occupied his post.

bhāgavata vicāra karena sabhāte vasiyā

SYNONYMS

bhaṭṭācārya paṇḍita-learned scholars known as bhaṭṭācāryas; biśa triśa-twenty or thirty; lañā-taking with him; bhāgavata vicāra-discussion of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; karena-does; sabhāte vasiyā-sitting in an assembly.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī used to discuss Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam in an assembly of twenty or thirty learned brāhmaṇa scholars.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura gives the following commentary on the words bhāgavata vicāra. As confirmed in the Muṇḍaka Upaniṣad (1.1.4,5), there are two kinds of educational systems:

dve vidye veditavya iti, ha sma yad brahma-vido vadanti-parā caivāparā ca. tatrāparā ṛg-vedo yajur-vedaḥ sāma-vedo 'tharva-vedaḥ śikṣā kalpo vyākaraṇaṁ niruktaṁ chando jyotiṣam iti. atha parā yayā tad-akṣaram adhigamyate.

"There are two kinds of educational systems. One deals with transcendental knowledge [parā vidyā] and the other with material knowledge [aparā vidyā]. All the Vedas-Ṛg Veda, Yajur Veda, Sāma Veda, Atharva Veda and their corollaries known as śikṣā, kalpa, vyākaraṇa, nirukta, chanda and jyotiṣa-belong to the inferior system of material knowledge [aparā vidyā]. By parā vidyā, one can understand the akṣara, Brahman or the Absolute Truth." As far as Vedic literature is concerned, Vedānta-sūtra is accepted as the parā vidyā. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is an explanation of that parā vidyā. Those who aspire for liberation (mukti or mokṣa) and introduce themselves as vaidāntika are also equal to those groups aspiring to improve religion (dharma), economic development (artha) and sense gratification (kāma). Dharma, artha, kāma and mokṣa are called catur-varga. They are all within the system of inferior material knowledge. Any literature giving information about the spiritual world, spiritual life, spiritual identity and the spirit soul is called parā vidyā. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam does not have anything to do with the materialistic way of life; it gives transcendental information to educate people in the superior system of parā vidyā. Sanātana Gosvāmī was engaged in discussing the bhāgavata-vidyā, which means he discussed transcendental superior knowledge. Those who are karmīs, jñānīs or yogīs are not actually fit to discuss Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Only Vaiṣṇavas or pure devotees are fit to discuss that literature. As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam itself (12.13.18):

śrīmad-bhāgavataṁ purāṇam amalaṁ yad vaiṣṇavānāṁ priyaṁ yasmin pāramahaṁsyam ekam amalaṁ jñānaṁ paraṁ gīyate yatra jñāna-virāga-bhakti-sahitaṁ naiṣkarmyam āviṣkṛtaṁ tac chṛṇvan supaṭhan vicāraṇa-paro bhaktyā vimucyen naraḥ

Although Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is counted among the Purāṇas, it is called the spotless Purāṇa. Because it does not discuss anything material, it is liked by transcendental Vaiṣṇava devotees. The subject matter found in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is meant for paramahaṁsas. As it is said: paramo-nirmatsarāṇām. A paramahaṁsa is one who does not live in the material world and who does not envy others. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, devotional service is discussed to arouse the living entity to the transcendental position of jñāna (knowledge) and vairāgya (renunciation). As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.12):

tac chraddadhānāḥ munayo jñāna-vairāgya-yuktayā paśyanty ātmani cātmānaṁ bhaktyā śruta-gṛhītayā

"That Absolute Truth is realized by the seriously inquisitive student or sage who is well equipped with knowledge and who has become detached by rendering devotional service and hearing the Vedānta-śruti."

This is not sentiment. Knowledge and renunciation can be obtained through devotional service (bhaktyā śruta-gṛhītayā), that is, by arousing one's dormant devotional consciousness, Kṛṣṇa consciousness. When Kṛṣṇa consciousness is aroused, it relieves one from fruitive activity, activity for economic improvement and material enjoyment. This relief is technically called naiṣkarma, and when one is relieved, he is no longer interested in working hard for sense gratification. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is Śrīla Vyāsadeva's last mature contribution, and one should read and hear it in an assembly of realized souls while engaging in devotional service. At such a time one can be liberated from all material bondage. This was the course taken by Sanātana Gosvāmī, who retired from government service to study Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam with learned scholars.

āra dina gauḍeśvara, saṅge eka-jana ācambite gosāñi-sabhāte kaila āgamana

SYNONYMS

āra dina-one day; gauḍeśvara-the Nawab of Bengal; saṅge-with; eka-jana-one other person; ācambite-suddenly; gosāñi-sabhāte-in the assembly of Sanātana Gosvāmī; kaila āgamana-came.

TRANSLATION

While Sanātana Gosvāmī was studying Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam in the assembly of learned brāhmaṇas, one day the Nawab of Bengal and another person suddenly appeared.

The full name of the Nawab of Bengal (Hussain Shah) was Ālāuddīna Saiyada Husena Sāha Seripha Makkā, and he ruled Bengal for twenty-three years, from 1420 to 1443 Śakābda Era. Sanātana Gosvāmī was studying Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam with the scholars in the year 1424.

TEXT 19

pātsāha dekhiyā sabe sambhrame uṭhilā sambhrame āsana diyā rājāre vasāilā pātsāha dekhiyā-seeing the Nawab; sabe-all of them; sambhrame-in great respect; uṭhilā-stood up; sambhrame-with great respect; āsana diyā-giving a sitting place; rājāre-the King; vasāilā-made to sit.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

As soon as all the brāhmaṇas and Sanātana Gosvāmī saw the Nawab appear, they all stood up and respectfully gave him a sitting place to honor him.

PURPORT

Although Nawab Hussain Shah was a mleccha-yavana, he was nonetheless the governor of the country, and the learned scholars and Sanātana Gosvāmī offered him all the respect due a king or a governor. When a person occupies an exalted executive post, one should consider that he has acquired the grace of the Lord. In Bhagavad-gītā it is said:

yad yad vibhūtimat sattvaṁ śrīmad ūrjitam eva vā tat tad evāvagaccha tvaṁ mama tejo 'ṁśa-saṁbhavam

"Know that all beautiful, glorious and mighty creations spring from but a spark of My splendor." (Bg. 10.41)

Whenever we see something exalted, we must consider it part of the power of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. A powerful man (vibhūtimat sattvam) is one who has obtained the grace of the Lord or has derived some power from Him. In Bhagavad-gītā (7.10) Kṛṣṇa says, tejas tejasvinām aham: "I am the power of the powerful." The learned brāhmaṇa scholars showed respect to Nawab Hussain Shah because he represented a fraction of Kṛṣṇa's power.

SYNONYMS

eta śuni’-hearing this; gauḍa-īśvara-the Nawab of Bengal; uṭhi’-standing up; ghare gelā-went back home; palāiba-I shall run away; bali’-because of this; sanātanere bāndhilā-he arrested Sanātana.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this, the Nawab of Bengal stood up and returned to his home. He ordered the arrest of Sanātana Gosvāmī so that he would not be able to leave.

PURPORT

It is said that the relationship between the Nawab of Bengal and Sanātana Gosvāmī was very intimate. The Nawab used to consider Sanātana Gosvāmī his younger brother, and when Sanātana Gosvāmī showed a very strong intention to resign, the Nawab, feeling familial affection, essentially said, ”I am your elder brother, but I do not look after the state management. My only business is attacking other states with my soldiers and fighting everywhere as a plunderer. Because I am a meat-eater [yavana], I am used to hunting all kinds of living beings. In this way I am destroying all kinds of living entities in Bengal. While engaged in this destructive business, I am hoping that you will tend to the administration of the state. Since I, your elder brother, am engaged in such a destructive business, you, being my younger brother, should look after the state management. If you do not, how will things continue?” This talk was based on a family relationship, and Sanātana Gosvāmī also replied in an intimate and joking way. Essentially he told the Nawab, ”My dear brother, you are the independent ruler of Bengal. You can act in whatever way you like, and if someone commits fault, you can punish him accordingly.” In other words, Sanātana Gosvāmī was saying that since the Nawab was accustomed to acting like a plunderer, he should go ahead and take action. Since Sanātana was not showing much enthusiasm in performing his duty, the Nawab should dismiss him from his service. The Nawab could understand the intention of Sanātana Gosvāmī’s statement. He therefore left in an angry mood and ordered Sanātana Gosvāmī’s arrest.

TEXT 28

SYNONYMS

hena-kāle-at this time; gela-went; rājā-the King; uḍiyā mārite-to attack the Orissa province; sanātane kahe-he said to Sanātana Gosvāmī; tumi cala-you come; mora sāthe-along with me.

TRANSLATION

At this time, the Nawab was going to attack the province of Orissa, and he told Sanātana Gosvāmī, ”Come along with me.”

PURPORT

Hussain Shah attacked the province of Orissa in 1424 Śakābda Era. At that time he conquered the feudal princes of neighboring Orissa.

TEXT 29

teṅho kahe,–yābe tumi devatāya duḥkha dite

TRANSLATION

At that time, Śrī Vallabha Bhaṭṭa was staying at Āḍāila-grāma, and when he heard that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu had arrived, he went to His place to see Him.

PURPORT

Vallabha Bhaṭṭa was a great learned scholar of Vaiṣṇavism. In the beginning he was very much devoted to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, but since he thought that he could not receive proper respect from Him, he later joined the Viṣṇusvāmī sect and became ācārya of that sect. His sect is celebrated as the Vallabhācārya-sampradāya. This sampradāya has had great influence in Vṛndāvana near Gokula and in Bombay. Vallabha Bhaṭṭa wrote many books, including a commentary on Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam called Subodhinī-ṭīkā, and notes on the Vedānta-sūtra, in the form of an Anubhāṣya. He also wrote a combination of sixteen short works called Ṣoḍaśa-grantha. Āḍāila-grāma, where he was staying, was near the confluence of the Rivers Ganges and Yamunā on the other side of the Yamunā about one mile from the river. The village there is called Aḍelī-grāma, or Āḍāila-grāma. A temple of Lord Viṣṇu there still belongs to the Vallabha-sampradāya.

Vallabha Bhaṭṭa was originally from a place in southern India called Trailaṅga. There is a railway station there called Niḍāḍābhalu. Sixteen miles from that station is a village called Kāṅkaḍabāḍa, or Kākuṅrapāḍhu. A learned brāhmaṇa named Lakṣmaṇa Dīkṣita used to live there, and Vallabha Bhaṭṭa was his son. There are five sections of the brāhmaṇa community of Āndhra Pradesh known as bella-nāṭī, vegī-nāṭī, muraki-nāṭi telagu-nāṭī and kāśala-nāṭī. Out of these five brahminical communities, Vallabhācārya took his birth in the community of bella-nāṭī in the year 1400 Śakābda Era. According to some people, Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya's father took sannyāsa before Vallabha's birth, and he returned home to take Vallabhācārya as his son. According to the opinion of others, Vallabhācārya was born in 1400 Śakābda Era on the Ekādaśī day of the dark moon in the month of Caitra, and he took his birth in a brāhmaṇa family surnamed Khambhaṁpāṭībāru. According to this account, his father's name was Lakṣmaṇa Bhaṭṭa Dīkṣita, and he was born in Campakāraṇya. In someone else's opinion, Vallabhācārya appeared near the village named Cāṅpā-jhāra-grāma, which is near a railway station named Rājima in Madhya Pradesh.

After studying for eleven years at Vārāṇasī, Vallabhācārya returned home. On his return, he heard that his father had departed from the material world. Keeping his brother and mother at home, he went to the banks of the River Tuṅgabhadrā in a village called Vidyānagara, and it was there that he enlightened Kṛṣṇadeva, the grandson of King Bukkarāja. After that, he traveled throughout India thrice on trips lasting six years. Thus he passed eighteen years and became victorious in his discussions of revealed scripture. When he was thirty years old, he married Mahālakṣmī, who belonged to the same brāhmaṇa community. Near Govardhana Hill he established a Deity in the valley. Finally he came to Āḍāila, which is on the other side of Prayāga.

Vallabhācārya had two sons, Gopīnātha and Viṭhṭhaleśvara, and in his old age he accepted the renounced order. In 1452 Śakābda Era, he passed away from the material world at Vārāṇasī. His book known as Ṣoḍaśa-grantha and his commentaries on Vedānta-sūtra (Anubhāṣya) and Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (Subodhinī) are very famous. He has written many other books besides.

vaidika, yājñika tumi kulīna pravīṇa!'

SYNONYMS

iṅho-him; nā sparśiha-do not touch; iṅho-he; jāti-caste; ati-hīna-very low; vaidika-a follower of Vedic principles; yājñika-a performer of many sacrifices; tumi-you; kulīna-aristocratic brāhmaṇa; pravīṇa-an experienced person.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "Don't touch him, for he belongs to a very low caste. You are a follower of Vedic principles and are a well experienced performer of many sacrifices. You also belong to the aristocracy."

PURPORT

Generally brāhmaṇas are puffed up with false prestige because they belong to the aristocracy and perform many Vedic sacrifices. In South India especially, this fastidious position is most prominent. At any rate, this was the case five hundred years ago. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu actually started a revolution against this brahminical system by inaugurating the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. By this chanting, one can be delivered regardless of caste, creed, color or social position. Whoever chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra is immediately purified due to the transcendental position of devotional service. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is here hinting to Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya that an exalted brāhmaṇa who makes sacrifices and follows Vedic principles should not neglect a person who is engaged in devotional service by chanting the holy name of the Lord.

Actually Rūpa Gosvāmī did not belong to a lower caste. He was from a highly aristocratic brāhmaṇa family, but due to his association with the Mohammedan Nawab, he was considered fallen and excommunicated from brāhmaṇa society. However, due to his advanced devotional service, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted him as a gosvāmī. Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya knew all this. One who is a devotee is above caste and creed, yet Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya felt himself prestigious.

The present head of the Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya sampradāya of Bombay is named Dīkṣita Mahārāja. He is very friendly to our movement, and whenever we meet him, this learned brāhmaṇa scholar highly praises the activities of the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement. He is a life member of our Society, and although he is a learned scholar in the brahminical caste tradition, he accepts our Society and considers its members bona fide devotees of Lord Viṣṇu.

duṅhāra mukhe nirantara kṛṣṇa-nāma śuni' bhaṭṭa kahe, prabhura kichu iṅgita-bhaṅgī jāni' duṅhāra mukhe-in the mouths of both Rūpa Gosvāmī and his brother Vallabha; nirantara-continuously; kṛṣṇa-nāma śuni'-hearing the chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; bhaṭṭa kahe-Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya said; prabhura-of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kichu-some; iṅgita-indications; bhaṅgī-hints; jāni'-understanding.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Hearing the holy name constantly vibrated by the two brothers, Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya could understand the hints of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 71

'duṅhāra mukhe kṛṣṇa-nāma kariche nartana ei-dui 'adhama' nahe, haya 'sarvottama'

SYNONYMS

duṅhāra mukhe-in the mouths of both; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kariche-is doing; nartana-dancing; ei-dui-both of them; adhama nahe-not fallen; haya-are; sarva-uttama-the most exalted.

TRANSLATION

Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya admitted, "Since these two are constantly chanting the holy name of Kṛṣṇa, how can they be untouchable? On the contrary, they are most exalted."

PURPORT

Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya's admission of the brothers' exalted position should serve as a lesson to one who is falsely proud of his position as a brāhmaṇa. Sometimes so-called brāhmaṇas do not recognize our European and American disciples as devotees or brāhmaṇas, and some brāhmaṇas are so proud that they do not allow them to enter temples. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu herein gives a great lesson. Although Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya was a great authority on brahmanism and a learned scholar, he admitted that those who chant the Lord's holy name are bona fide brāhmaṇas and Vaiṣṇavas and are therefore exalted.

TEXT 72

aho bata śva-paco 'to garīyān yaj-jihvāgre vartate nāma tubhyam tepus tapas te juhuvuḥ sasnur āryā brahmānūcur nāma gṛṇanti ye te

SYNONYMS

aho bata-how wonderful it is; śva-pacaḥ-dog-eaters; ataḥ-than the initiated brāhmaṇa; garīyān-more glorious; yat-of whom; jihvā-agre-on the tongue; vartate-remains; nāma-the holy name; tubhyam-of You, my Lord; tepuḥ-have performed; tapaḥ-austerity; te-they; juhuvuḥ-have performed sacrifices; sasnuḥ-have bathed in all holy places; āryāḥ-really belonging to the Āryan race; brahma-all the Vedas; anūcuḥ-have studied; nāma-the holy name; gṛṇanti-chant; ye-who; te-they.

TRANSLATION

Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya then recited the following verse: " 'My dear Lord, one who always keeps Your holy name on his tongue becomes greater than an initiated brāhmaṇa. Although he may be born in a family of dog-eaters and may therefore, by material calculation, be the lowest among men, he is still glorious. This is the wonderful effect of chanting the holy name of the Lord. It is therefore concluded that one who chants the holy name of the Lord should be understood to have performed all kinds of austerities and great sacrifices mentioned in the Vedas. He has already taken his bath in all the holy places of pilgrimage. He has studied all the Vedas, and he is actually an Āryan.' "

PURPORT

This verse is quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.33.7).

TEXT 73

śuni' mahāprabhu tāṅre bahu praśaṁśilā premāviṣṭa hañā śloka paḍite lāgilā

SYNONYMS

śuni'-hearing; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāṅre-him; bahu-very much; praśaṁśilā-praised; prema-āviṣṭa hañā-becoming ecstatic in love of Godhead; śloka-verses; paḍite lāgilā-began to recite.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was very pleased to hear Vallabha Bhaṭṭa quoting from śāstra about the position of a devotee. The Lord praised him personally, and, feeling ecstatic love of Godhead, began to quote many verses from śāstra.

TEXT 74

śuciḥ sad-bhakti-dīptāgnidagdha-durjāti-kalmaṣaḥ śvapāko 'pi budhaiḥ ślāgyo na vedajño 'pi nāstikaḥ

SYNONYMS

śuciḥ-a brāhmaṇa purified internally and externally; sat-bhakti-of devotional service without motives; dīpta-agni-by the blazing fire; dagdha-burnt to ashes; durjāti-such as birth in a low family; kalmaṣaḥ-whose sinful reactions; śva-pākaḥ api-even though born in a family of dog-eaters; budhaiḥ-by learned scholars; ślāgyaḥ-recognized; na-not; veda-jñaḥ api-even though completely conversant in Vedic knowledge; nāstikaḥ-an atheist.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, " 'A person who has the pure characteristics of a brāhmaṇa due to devotional service, which is like a blazing fire burning to ashes all the sinful reactions of past lives, is certainly saved from the consequences of sinful acts, such as taking birth in a lower family. Even though he may be born in a family of dog-eaters, he is recognized by learned scholars. However, although a person may be a learned scholar in Vedic knowledge, he is not recognized if he is an atheist.

PURPORT

This verse and the next are quoted from the Hari-bhakti-sudhodaya (3.11,12), a transcendental literature extracted from the Purāṇas.

TEXT 75

bhagavad-bhakti-hīnasya jātiḥ śāstraṁ japas tapaḥ aprāṇasyeva dehasya maṇḍanaṁ loka-rañjanam

SYNONYMS

bhagavat-bhakti-hīnasya-of a person devoid of devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead; jātiḥ-birth in a high caste; śāstram-knowledge in revealed scriptures; japaḥ-pronunciation of mantras; tapaḥ-austerities and penances; aprāṇasya-which is dead; iva-like; dehasya-of a body; maṇḍanam-decoration; loka-to the whims of people in general; rañjanam-simply pleasing.

TRANSLATION

" 'For a person devoid of devotional service, birth in a great family or nation, knowledge of revealed scripture, performance of austerities and penance, and chanting of Vedic mantras are all like ornaments on a dead body. Such ornaments simply serve the concocted pleasures of the general populace.' "

TEXT 76

SYNONYMS

śrutim-Vedic literature; apare-someone; smṛtim-corollary to the Vedic literature; itare-others; bhāratam-Mahābhārata; anye-still others; bhajantu-let them worship; bhava-bhītāḥ-those who are afraid of material existence; aham-I; iha-here; nandam-Mahārāja Nanda; vande-worship; yasya-whose; alinde-in the courtyard; param brahma-the Supreme Brahman, Absolute Truth.

TRANSLATION

Raghupati Upādhyāya recited: "Those who are afraid of material existence worship Vedic literature. Some worship smṛti, the corollaries to Vedic literature, and others worship the Mahābhārata. As far as I am concerned, I worship Mahārāja Nanda, the father of Kṛṣṇa, in whose courtyard the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the Absolute Truth, is playing."

PURPORT

This verse recited by Raghupati Upādhyāya was later included in Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī's Padyāvalī (126).

TEXT 97

'āge kaha'–prabhu-vākye upādhyāya kahila raghupati upādhyāya namaskāra kaila

SYNONYMS

āge kaha-please speak further; prabhu-vākye-on the request of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; upādhyāya-Raghupati Upādhyāya; kahila-said; raghupati upādhyāya-Raghupati Upādhyāya; namaskāra kaila-offered Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu obeisances.

TRANSLATION

When Raghupati Upādhyāya was requested by the Lord to recite more, he immediately offered his respects to the Lord and granted His request.

TEXT 98

TRANSLATION

"To whom can I speak who will believe me when I say that Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is hunting the gopīs in the bushes by the banks of the River Yamunā? In this way the Lord demonstrates His pastimes."

PURPORT

This verse was also later included in padyāvalī (98).

TEXT 99

prabhu kahena,–kaha, teṅho paḍe kṛṣṇa-līlā premāveśe prabhura deha-mana āyuyāilā

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahena-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; kaha-please go on speaking; teṅho-he; paḍe-recites; kṛṣṇa-līlā-the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa; prema-āveśe-in great ecstasy of love; prabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; deha-mana-body and mind; āyuyāilā-became slackened.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu requested Raghupati Upādhyāya to continue speaking about the pastimes of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Thus the Lord was absorbed in ecstatic love, and His mind and body slackened.

PURPORT

Our minds and bodies are always engaged in material activities. When they are activated on the spiritual platform, they slacken on the material platform.

TEXT 100

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked Raghupati Upādhyāya, "According to your decision, who is the foremost being?" Raghupati Upādhyāya replied,"Lord Śyāmasundara is the supreme form."

TEXT 102

śyāma-rūpera vāsa-sthāna śreṣṭha māna' kāya?
'purī madhu-purī varā'–kahe upādhyāya

SYNONYMS

śyāma-rūpera-of the supreme form, Śyāmasundara; vāsa-sthāna-residence; śreṣṭha-the supreme; māna'-you accept; kāya-which; purī-the city; madhu-purī-Mathurā; varā-best; kahe-said; upādhyāya-Raghupati Upādhyāya.

TRANSLATION

"Of all Kṛṣṇa's abodes, which do you think is the best?" Raghupati Upādhyāya said,"Madhu-purī, or Mathurā-dhāma, is certainly the best."

PURPORT

Lord Kṛṣṇa has many forms, as stated in the Brahma-saṁhitā (5.33): advaitam acyutam anādim ananta-rūpam. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked Raghupati Upādhyāya which form was the best of Lord Kṛṣṇa's millions of forms, and he immediately replied that the supreme form was the Śyāmasundara form. In that form, Kṛṣṇa stands curved in three places and holds His flute. The Śyāmasundara form is also described in the Brahma-saṁhitā (5.38):

premāñjana-cchurita-bhakti-vilocanena santaḥ sadaiva hṛdayeṣu vilokayanti yaṁ śyāmasundaram acintya-guṇa-svarūpaṁ
govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

"I worship the primeval Lord, Govinda, who is always seen by the devotee whose eyes are anointed with the pulp of love. He is seen in His eternal form of Śyāmasundara situated within the heart of the devotee."

Those who are filled with ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa always see the form of Śyāmasundara within their hearts. Raghupati Upādhyāya confirms that the Absolute Truth, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, has many incarnations-Nārāyaṇa, Nṛsiṁha, Varāha and others-but Kṛṣṇa is distinguished as the supermost. According to Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam: kṛṣṇas tu bhagavān svayam. "Kṛṣṇa is the original Personality of Godhead." Kṛṣṇa means Śyāmasundara, who plays His flute in Vṛndāvana. Of all forms, this form is the best of all. Kṛṣṇa lives sometimes in Mathurā and sometimes in Dvārakā, but Mathurā is considered the better place. This is also confirmed by Rūpa Gosvāmī in his Upadeśāmṛta (9): vaikuṇṭhāj janito varā madhu-purī. "Madhu-purī, or Mathurā, is far superior to the Vaikuṇṭhalokas in the spiritual world."

TRANSLATION

Vallabha Bhaṭṭācārya avoided the River Yamunā. Putting the Lord on a boat in the River Ganges, he went with Him to Prayāga.

TEXT 114

loka-bhiḍa-bhaye prabhu 'daśāśvamedhe' yāñā rūpa-gosāñire śikṣā karā'na śakti sañcāriyā

SYNONYMS

loka-bhiḍa-bhaye-from fear of the great crowd of people; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; daśāśvamedhe-to Daśāśvamedha-ghāṭa; yāñā-going; rūpa-gosāñire-Rūpa Gosvāmī; śikṣā karā'na-teaches; śakti sañcāriyā-endowing him with potency.

TRANSLATION

Due to the great crowds in Prayāga, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to a place called Daśāśvamedha-ghāṭa. It was there that the Lord instructed Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī and empowered him in the philosophy of devotional service.

PURPORT

Parāsya śaktir vividhaiva śrūyate. The Supreme Lord has multi-potencies, which the Lord bestows on His fortunate devotees. The Lord has a special potency by which He spreads the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. This is also explained in Caitanya-caritāmṛta (Antya 7.11). Kṛṣṇa-śakti vinā nahe tāra pravartana: "One cannot spread the holy name of Kṛṣṇa without being specifically empowered by Lord Kṛṣṇa." A devotee who receives this power from the Lord must be considered very fortunate. The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is spreading to enlighten people about their real position, their original relationship with Kṛṣṇa. One requires Kṛṣṇa's special power in order to be able to do this. People forget their relationship with Kṛṣṇa and work under the spell of māyā life after life, transmigrating from one body to another. This is the process of material existence. The Supreme Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa personally descends to teach people that their position in the material world is a mistaken one. The Lord again comes as Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to induce people to take to Kṛṣṇa consciousness. The Lord also empowers a special devotee to teach people their constitutional position.

TEXT 115

kṛṣṇatattva-bhaktitattva-rasatattva-prānta saba śikhāila prabhu bhāgavata-siddhānta

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-tattva-of the truth about Lord Kṛṣṇa; bhakti-tattva-of the truth about devotional service; rasa-tattva-of the truth about transcendental mellows; prānta-the ultimate limit; saba-all; śikhāila-taught; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bhāgavata-siddhānta-the conclusions of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu taught Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī the ultimate limit of the truth about Lord Kṛṣṇa, the truth about devotional service and the truth about transcendental mellows, consummating in conjugal love between Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. Finally He told Rūpa Gosvāmī about the ultimate conclusions of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

TEXT 116

rāmānanda-pāśe yata siddhānta śunilā rūpe kṛpā kari' tāhā saba sañcārilā

SYNONYMS

rāmānanda-pāśe-from Rāmānanda Rāya; yata-all; siddhānta-the ultimate conclusions; śunilā-he heard; rūpe-unto Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī; kṛpā kari'-showing His causeless mercy; tāhā saba-all those; sañcārilā-infused.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu taught Rūpa Gosvāmī all the conclusions He had heard from Rāmānanda Rāya and duly empowered him so that he could understand them.

TEXT 117

śrī-rūpa-hṛdaye prabhu śakti sañcārilā sarva-tattva-nirūpaṇe 'pravīṇa' karilā

SYNONYMS

śrī-rūpa-hṛdaye-in the heart of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; śakti sañcārilā-infused spiritual strength; sarva-tattva-all conclusive truths; nirūpaṇe-in ascertaining; pravīṇa karilā-made him fully experienced.

TRANSLATION

By entering the heart of Rūpa Gosvāmī, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu empowered him to ascertain properly the conclusions of all truths. He made him an experienced devotee whose decisions correctly agreed with the verdicts of the disciplic succession. Thus Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī was personally empowered by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

The principles of devotional service are only apparently under the jurisdiction of material activity. To be rightly guided, one must be personally guided by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. This was the case with Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, Sanātana Gosvāmī and other ācāryas.

TEXT 118

SYNONYMS

kālena-in the course of time; vṛndāvana-keli-vārtā-topics concerning the transcendental mellows of the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa in Vṛndāvana; luptā-almost lost; iti-thus; tām-all those; khyāpayitum-to enunciate; viśiṣya-making specific; kṛpā-amṛtena-with the nectar of mercy; abhiṣiṣeca-sprinkled; devaḥ-the Lord; tatra-there; eva-indeed; rūpam-Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; ca-and; sanātanam-Sanātana Gosvāmī; ca-as well as.

TRANSLATION

”In the course of time, the transcendental news of Kṛṣṇa’s pastimes in Vṛndāvana was almost lost. To enunciate explicitly those transcendental pastimes, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, at Prayāga, empowered Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī with the nectar of His mercy to carry out this work in Vṛndāvana.

PURPORT

This verse and the following two verses are from Act Nine (38,29,30) of Caitanya-candrodaya by Śrī Kavi-karṇapūra.

TEXT 120

yaḥ prāg eva priya-guṇa-gaṇair gāḍha-baddho ’pi mukto

SYNONYMS

yaḥ-who; prāk eva-previously; priya-guṇa-gaṇaiḥ-by the desirable transcendental qualities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; gāḍha-deeply; baddhaḥ-attached; api-although; muktaḥ-liberated; geha-adhyāsāt-from the bondage of family life; rasaḥ-transcendental mellows; iva-like; paraḥ-transcendental; mūrtaḥ-personal form; eva-certainly; api-although; amūrtaḥ-without having a material form; prema-ālāpaiḥ-by discussions of transcendental love of the Supreme; dṛḍhatara-firm; pariṣvaṅga-of embracing; raṅgaiḥ-with great pleasure; prayāge-at Prayāga; tam-to him; śrī-rūpam-Rūpa Gosvāmī; samam-with; anupamena-Anupama; anujagrāha-showed mercy; devaḥ-the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

”From the very beginning, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī was deeply attracted by the transcendental qualities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Thus he was permanently relieved from family life. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and his younger brother, Vallabha, were blessed by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Although the Lord was transcendentally situated in His transcendental eternal form, at Prayāga He told Rūpa Gosvāmī about transcendental ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa. The Lord then embraced him very fondly and bestowed all His mercy upon him.

TRANSLATION

”Indeed, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, whose dear friend was Svarūpa Dāmodara, was the exact replica of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and he was very, very dear to the Lord. Being the embodiment of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s ecstatic love, Rūpa Gosvāmī was naturally very beautiful. He very carefully followed the principles enunciated by the Lord, and he was a competent person to explain properly the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu expanded His mercy to Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī just so he could render service by writing transcendental literatures.”

TEXT 122

TRANSLATION

When the personal associates of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would hear of the activities of Rūpa and Sanātana Gosvāmīs, they would say, "What is wonderful for a person who has been granted the Lord's mercy?"

PURPORT

Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī had no fixed residence. They stayed beneath a tree for one day only and wrote huge volumes of transcendental literature. They not only wrote books but chanted, danced, discussed Kṛṣṇa and remembered Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes. Thus they executed devotional service.

In Vṛndāvana there are prākṛta-sahajiyās who say that writing books or even touching books is taboo. For them, devotional service means being relieved from these activities. Whenever they are asked to hear a recitation of Vedic literature, they refuse, saying, "What business do we have reading or hearing transcendental literatures? They are meant for neophytes." They pose themselves to be too elevated to exert energy for reading, writing and hearing. However, pure devotees under the guidance of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī reject this sahajiyā philosophy. It is certainly not good to write literature for money or reputation, but to write books and publish them for the enlightenment of the general populace is real service to the Lord. That was Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī's opinion, and he specifically told his disciples to write books. He actually preferred to publish books rather than establish temples. Temple construction is meant for the general populace and neophyte devotees, but the business of advanced and empowered devotees is to write books, publish them and distribute them widely. According to Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, distributing literature is like playing on a great mṛdaṅga. Consequently we always request members of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness to publish as many books as possible and distribute them widely throughout the world. By thus following in the footsteps of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, one can become a rūpānuga devotee.

SYNONYMS

hṛdi-within the heart; yasya-of whom (the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who gives His pure devotees intelligence with which to spread the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement); preraṇayā-by the inspiration; pravartitaḥ-engaged; aham-I; varāka-insignificant and low; rūpaḥ-Rūpa Gosvāmī; api-although; tasya-of Him; hareḥ-who is Lord Hari, the Supreme Personality of Godhead; pada-kamalam-to the lotus feet; vande-let me offer my prayers; caitanya-devasya-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

”Although I am the lowest of men and have no knowledge, the inspiration to write transcendental literatures about devotional service has been mercifully bestowed upon me. Therefore I am offering my obeisances at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who has given me the chance to write these books.”

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-in this way; daśa-dina-for ten days; prayāge-at Prayāga; rahiyā-staying; śrī-rūpe-to Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; śikṣā-instructions; dila-imparted; śakti sañcāriyā-bestowing upon him the necessary potency.

TRANSLATION

For ten days Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu stayed at Prayāga and instructed Rūpa Gosvāmī, empowering him with the necessary potency.

PURPORT

This is a confirmation of the statement kṛṣṇa-śakti vinā nahe tāra pravartana. Unless one is specifically empowered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he cannot spread the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. An empowered devotee sees and feels himself to be the lowest of men, for he knows that whatever he does is due to the inspiration given by the Lord in the heart. This is also confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā:

teṣāṁ satata-yuktānāṁ
bhajatāṁ prīti-pūrvakam dadāmi buddhi-yogaṁ taṁ yena mām upayānti te

”To those who are constantly devoted and worship Me with love, I give the understanding by which they can come to Me.” (Bg. 10.10)

To be empowered by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, one has to qualify himself. This means that one must engage twenty-four hours daily in the loving devotional service of the Lord. The material position of a devotee doesn’t matter because devotional service is not dependent on material considerations. In his earlier life, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī was a government officer and a gṛhastha. He was not even a brahmacārī or sannyāsī. He associated with mlecchas and yavanas, but because he was always eager to serve, he was a qualified recipient for the Lord’s mercy. A sincere devotee can therefore be empowered by the Lord regardless of his situation. In the preceding verse from the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī has described how he was personally empowered by the Lord. He further states in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.187):

īhā yasya harer dāsye karmaṇā manasā girā nikhilāsv apy avasthāsu jīvan-muktaḥ sa ucyate

”A person acting in the service of Kṛṣṇa with his body, mind and words is a liberated person even in the material world, although he may be engaged in many so-called material activities.”

To keep oneself free from material contamination and attain the Lord’s favor, one must be sincerely anxious to render service to the Lord. This is the only qualification necessary. As soon as one is favored by the mercy of the spiritual master and the Lord, one is immediately given all the power necessary to write books and propagate the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement without being hampered by material considerations.

SYNONYMS

ei-ta-in this way; brahmāṇḍa-the whole universe; bhari'-filling; ananta-unlimited; jīva-gaṇa-living entities; caurāśī-lakṣa-8,400,000; yonite-in species of life; karaye-do; bhramaṇa-wandering.

TRANSLATION

"In this universe there are limitless living entities in 8,400,000 species, and all are wandering within this universe.

PURPORT

This is a challenge to so-called scientists and philosophers who presume that there are living entities on this planet only. So-called scientists are going to the moon, and they say that there is no life there. This does not tally with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's version. He says that everywhere within the universe there are unlimited numbers of living entities in 8,400,000 different forms. In Bhagavad-gītā (2.24) we find that the living entities are sarva-gataḥ, which means that they can go anywhere. This indicates that there are living entities everywhere. They exist on land, in water, in air, in fire and in ether. Thus there are living entities in all types of material elements. Since the entire material universe is composed of five elements-earth, water, fire, air and ether-why should there be living entities on one planet and not others? Such a foolish version can never be accepted by Vedic students. From the Vedic literatures we understand that there are living entities on each and every planet, regardless of whether the planet is composed of earth, water, fire or ether. These living entities may not have the same forms that are found on this planet earth, but they have different forms composed of different elements. Even on this earth we can see that the forms of land animals are different from the forms of aquatics. According to the circumstance, living conditions differ, but undoubtedly there are living entities everywhere. Why should we deny the existence of living entities on this or that planet? Those who have claimed to have gone to the moon have not gone there, or else their imperfect vision cannot actually perceive the particular type of living entities there.

Living entities are described as ananta, or unlimited; nonetheless, they are said to belong to 8,400,000 species. As stated in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa:

jalajā nava-lakṣāṇi sthāvarā lakṣa-viṁśati kṛmayo rudra-saṅkhyakāḥ pakṣiṇāṁ daśa-lakṣaṇam triṁśal-lakṣāṇi paśavaḥ catur-lakṣāṇi mānuṣāḥ

"There are 900,000 species living in the water. There are also 2,000,000 non-moving living entities (sthāvara) such as trees and plants. There are also 1,100,000 species of insects and reptiles, and there are 1,000,000 species of birds. As far as quadrupeds are concerned there are 3,000,000 varieties, and there are 400,000 human species." Some of these species may exist on one planet and not on another, but in any case within all the planets of the universe-and even in the sun-there are living entities. This is the verdict of Vedic literatures. As Bhagavad-gītā (2.20) confirms:

na jāyate mriyate vā kadācin nāyaṁ bhūtvā bhavitā vā na bhūyaḥ ajo nityaḥ śāśvato 'yaṁ purāṇo na hanyate hanyamāne śarīre

"For the soul there is never birth nor death. Nor, having once been, does he ever cease to be. He is unborn, eternal, ever-existing, undying and primeval. He is not slain when the body is slain."

Since the living entities are never annihilated, they simply transmigrate from one life form to another. Thus there is an evolution of forms according to the degree of developed consciousness. One experiences different degrees of consciousness in different forms. A dog's consciousness is different from a man's. Even within a species we find that a father's consciousness is different from his son's and that a child's consciousness is different from a youth's. Just as we find different forms, we find different states of consciousness. When we see different states of consciousness, we may take it for granted that the bodies are different. In other words, different types of bodies depend on different states of consciousness. This is also confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā (8.6): yaṁ yaṁ vāpi smaran bhāvam. One's consciousness at the time of death determines a type of body of the living entity. This is the process of transmigration of the soul. A variety of bodies is already there; we change from one body to another in terms of our consciousness.

SYNONYMS

keśa-agra-of the tip of a hair; śata-bhāgasya-of one hundredth; śata-aṁśa-a hundredth part; sadṛśa-equal to; ātmakaḥ-whose nature; jīvaḥ-the living entity; sūkṣma-very fine; sva-rūpaḥ-identification; ayam-this; saṅkhya-atītaḥ-numbering beyond calculation; hi-certainly; cit-kaṇaḥ-spiritual particle.

TRANSLATION

” ’If we divide the tip of a hair into a hundred parts and then take one of these parts and divide it again into a hundred parts, that very fine division is the size of but one of the numberless living entities. They are all cit-kaṇa, particles of spirit, not matter.’

PURPORT

This is quoted from the commentary on the portion of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam wherein the Vedas personified offer their obeisances unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā (15.7). Mamaivāṁśo jīva-loke jīva-bhūtaḥ sanātanaḥ: ”The living entities in this conditioned world are My eternal, fragmental parts.”

Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa personally identifies Himself with the minute living entities. Lord Kṛṣṇa is the supreme spirit, the Supersoul, and the living entities are His very minute parts and parcels. Of course, we cannot divide the tip of a hair into such fine particles, but spiritually such small particles can exist. Spiritual strength is so powerful that a mere atomic portion of spirit can be the biggest brain in the material world. The same spiritual spark is within an ant and within the body of Brahmā. According to his karma, material activities, the spiritual spark attains a certain type of body. Material activities are carried out in goodness, passion and ignorance or a combination of these. According to the mixture of the modes of material nature, the living entity is awarded a particular type of body. This is the conclusion.

TRANSLATION

” ’Among minute particles, I am the living entity.’

PURPORT

The living entity is one with and different from the Supreme Personality of Godhead. As spirit soul, the living entity is one in quality with the Supreme Lord; however, the Supreme Lord is bigger than the biggest, and the living entity is the smallest of the small. This quote is the third pada of a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.16.11).

TRANSLATION

” ’O Lord, although the living entities who have accepted material bodies are spiritual and unlimited in number, if they were all-pervading there would be no question of their being under Your control. If they are accepted, however, as particles of the eternally existing spiritual entity-as part of You, who are the supreme spirit whole-we must conclude that they are always under Your control. If the living entities are simply satisfied with being identical with You as spiritual particles, then they will be happy being controllers of so many things. The conclusion that the living entities and the Supreme Personality of Godhead are one and the same is a faulty conclusion. It is not a fact.’

tāra madhye 'sthāvara', jaṅgama'–dui bheda jaṅgame tiryak-jala-sthalacara-vibheda

SYNONYMS

tāra madhye-among the living entities who are conditioned within the material world; sthāvara-immovable; jaṅgama-movable; dui bheda-two divisions; jaṅgame-among the living entities who can move; tiryak-the living entities who can move in the air (the birds); jala-or living entities who can move within the water; sthala-cara-living entities who can move on land; vibheda-three divisions.

TRANSLATION

"The unlimited living entities can be divided into two divisions-those that can move and those that cannot move. Among living entities that can move, there are birds, aquatics and animals.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is giving clear instructions on how the living entities live under different conditions. There are trees, plants and stones that cannot move, but still they must be considered living entities, or spiritual sparks. The soul is present in bodies like those of trees, plants and stones. They are all living entities. Among moving living entities such as birds, aquatics and animals, the same spiritual spark is there. As stated herein, there are living entities that can fly, swim and walk. We must also conclude that there are living entities that can move within fire and ether. Living entities have different material bodies composed of earth, water, air, fire and ether. The words tāra madhye mean "within this universe." The entire material universe is composed of five material elements. It is not true that living entities reside only within this planet and not within others. Such a conclusion is completely contradictory to the Vedas. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā (2.24):

acchedyo 'yam adāhyo 'yam akledyo 'śoṣya eva ca nityaḥ sarva-gataḥ sthāṇur acalo 'yaṁ sanātanaḥ

"This individual soul is unbreakable and insoluble, and can be neither burned nor dried. He is everlasting, all-pervading, unchangeable, immovable and eternally the same."

The soul has nothing to do with the material elements. Any material element can be cut to pieces, especially earth. As far as the living entity is concerned, however, it can neither be burned nor cut to pieces. It can therefore live within fire. We can conclude that there are also living entities within the sun. Why should living entities be denied this planet or that planet? According to the Vedas, the living entities can live anywhere and everywhere-on land, in water, in air and in fire. Whatever the condition, the living entity is unchangeable (sthāṇu). From the statements of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Bhagavad-gītā, we are to conclude that living entities are everywhere throughout the universes. They are distributed as trees, plants, aquatics, birds, human beings and so on.

SYNONYMS

tāra madhye-among all such living entities; manuṣya-jāti-entities born as human beings; ati-very; alpatara-small in quantity; tāra madhye-among the small quantity of human beings; mleccha-uncivilized men who cannot follow the Vedic principles; pulinda-unregulated; bauddha-followers of Buddhist philosophy; śabara-the lowest of men (the hunter class).

TRANSLATION

"Although the living entities known as human beings are very small in quantity, that division may be still further subdivided, for there are many uncultured human beings like mlecchas, pulindas, bauddhas and śabaras.

TEXT 146

veda-niṣṭha-madhye ardheka veda 'mukhe' māne veda-niṣiddha pāpa kare, dharma nāhi gaṇe

SYNONYMS

veda-niṣṭha-madhye-among persons who are followers of the Vedas; ardheka-almost half; veda-Vedic scriptures; mukhe-in the mouth; māne-accept; veda-niṣiddha-forbidden in the Vedas; pāpa-sins; kare-perform; dharma-religious principles; nāhi-not; gaṇe-count.

TRANSLATION

"Among human beings, those who are followers of the Vedic principles are considered civilized. Among these, almost half simply give lip service while committing all kinds of sinful activities against these principles. Such people do not care for the regulative principles.

PURPORT

The word veda means "knowledge." Supreme knowledge consists of understanding the Supreme Personality of Godhead and our relationship with Him and acting according to that relationship. Action in accordance with the Vedic principles is called religion. Religion means following the orders of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The Vedic principles are the injunctions given by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Āryans are civilized human beings who have been following the Vedic principles since time immemorial. No one can trace out the history of the Vedic principles set forth so that man might understand the Supreme Being. Literature or knowledge that seeks the Supreme Being can be accepted as a bona fide religious system, but there are many different types of religious systems according to the place, the disciples and the people's capacity to understand.

The highest type of religious system is described in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.6) thus: sa vai puṁsāṁ paro dharmo yato bhaktir adhokṣaje. The highest form of religion is that by which one becomes fully conscious of the existence of God, His form, name, qualities, pastimes, abode and all-pervasive features. When everything is completely known, that is the perfection of Vedic knowledge. The fulfillment of Vedic knowledge is systematic knowledge of the characteristics of God. This is confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā (15.15): vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyaḥ. The aim of Vedic knowledge is to understand God. Those who are actually following Vedic knowledge and searching after God cannot commit sinful activities against the Supreme Lord's order. However, in this Age of Kali, although men profess to belong to so many different kinds of religion, most of them commit sinful activities against the orders of the Vedic scriptures. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu therefore says herein: veda-niṣiddha pāpa kare, dharma nāhi gaṇe. In this age, men may profess a religion, but they actually do not follow the principles. Instead, they commit all kinds of sin.

koṭi-karma-niṣṭha-madhye eka jñānī' śreṣṭha dharma-ācāri-madhye-among persons who actually follow the Vedic principles or religious system; bahuta-many of them; karma-niṣṭha-attracted to fruitive activities; koṭi-karma-niṣṭha-madhye-among millions of such performers of fruitive activities according to Vedic principles; eka-one; jñānī-wise man; śreṣṭha-the chief.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Among the followers of Vedic knowledge, most are following the process of fruitive activity and distinguishing between good and bad work. Out of many such sincere fruitive actors, there may be one who is actually wise.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura states that the word karma-niṣṭha refers to one who aspires to enjoy the results of his good work and pious activity. Some followers of Vedic principles offer everything to the Absolute Truth and do not aspire to enjoy the results of their pious actions. These are also considered among the karma-niṣṭhas. Sometimes we see pious men earn money with great hardship and then spend the money for some pious cause by opening public charities, schools and hospitals. Whether one earns money for himself or for the public benefit, he is called a karma-niṣṭha. Out of millions of karma-niṣṭhas there may be one who is wise. Those who try to avoid fruitive activity and who become silent in order to merge into the spiritual existence of the Absolute Truth are generally known as jñānīs, wise men. They are not interested in fruitive activity but in merging into the Supreme. In either case, both are interested in personal benefit. The karmīs are directly interested in personal benefit within the material world, and the jñānīs are interested in merging into the existence of the Supreme. The jñānīs maintain that fruitive activity is imperfect. For them, perfection is the cessation of work and the merging into the supreme existence. That is their goal in life. The jñānī wants to extinguish the distinction between knowledge, the knower and the aim of knowledge. This philosophy is called monism, or oneness, and is characterized by spiritual silence.

TEXT 148

koṭi-jñāni-madhye haya eka-jana 'mukta' koṭi-mukta-madhye 'durlabha' eka kṛṣṇa-bhakta

SYNONYMS

koṭi-jñāni-madhye-out of many millions of such wise men; haya-there is; eka-jana-one person; mukta-actually liberated; koṭi-mukta-madhye-out of many millions of such liberated persons; durlabha-very rare; eka-one; kṛṣṇa-bhakta-pure devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"Out of many millions of such wise men, one may actually become liberated [mukta], and out of many millions of such liberated persons, a pure devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa is very difficult to find.

PURPORT

In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam it is said that due to their poor fund of knowledge, the jñānīs are not actually liberated. They simply think that they are liberated. The perfection of knowledge culminates when one comes to the platform of knowing the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Brahmeti paramātmeti bhagavān iti śabdyate. The Absolute Truth (satya-vastu) is described as Brahman, Paramātmā and Bhagavān. Knowledge of impersonal Brahman and the Supersoul is imperfect until one comes to the platform of knowing the Supreme Personality of Godhead. It is therefore clearly said in this verse: koṭi-mukta-madhye 'durlabha' eka kṛṣṇa-bhakta. Those who search after the knowledge of impersonal Brahman or localized Paramātmā are certainly accepted as liberated, but due to their imperfect knowledge they are described in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam as vimukta-māninaḥ. Since their knowledge is imperfect, their conception of liberation is imperfect. Perfect knowledge is possible when one knows the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is supported in Bhagavad-gītā (5.29):

bhoktāraṁ yajña-tapasāṁ
sarva-loka-maheśvaram
suhṛdaṁ sarva-bhūtānāṁ
jñātvā māṁ śāntim ṛcchati

"The sages, knowing Me as the ultimate purpose of all sacrifices and austerities, the Supreme Lord of all planets and demigods and the benefactor and well-wisher of all living entities, attain peace from the pangs of material miseries."

Research is going on for the karmīs, jñānīs and yogīs, but until the search is complete, no one can attain peace. Therefore Bhagavad-gītā says, jñātvā māṁ śāntim ṛcchati: one can actually attain peace when he knows Kṛṣṇa. This is described in the next verse.

kṛṣṇa-bhakta–niṣkāma, ataeva 'śānta' bhukti-mukti-siddhi-kāmī–sakali 'aśānta'

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-bhakta-a devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa; niṣkāma-actually desireless; ataeva-therefore; śānta-peaceful; bhukti-of material enjoyment; mukti-of liberation from material activities; siddhi-of perfection in yogic performance; kāmī-those who are desirous; sakali-all of them; aśānta-not peaceful.

TRANSLATION

"Because a devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa is desireless, he is peaceful. Fruitive workers desire material enjoyment, jñānīs desire liberation, and yogīs desire material opulence; therefore they are all lusty and cannot be peaceful.

PURPORT

The devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa has no desire other than serving Kṛṣṇa. Even so-called liberated people are full of desires. Fruitive actors desire better living accommodations, and jñānīs want to be one with the Supreme. Yogīs desire material opulence, yogic perfections and magic. All of these are lusty (kāmī). Because they desire something, they cannot have peace.

The peace formula is given by Kṛṣṇa in Bhagavad-gītā:

bhoktāraṁ yajña-tapasāṁ
sarva-loka-maheśvaram
suhṛdaṁ sarva-bhūtānāṁ
jñātvā māṁ śāntim ṛcchati

If one can understand that the only supreme enjoyer is Kṛṣṇa, one will perform all kinds of sacrifices, penances and austerities in order to attain Kṛṣṇa's devotional service. Kṛṣṇa is the Supreme Being, the proprietor of all the material worlds; therefore throughout the entire universe He is the only enjoyer and beneficiary. He is the only friend who can actually do good to all living entities (suhṛdaṁ sarva-bhūtānām). If one understands Kṛṣṇa, he immediately becomes desireless (niṣkāma) because a kṛṣṇa-bhakta knows that his friend and protector in all respects is Kṛṣṇa, who is able to do anything for His devotee. Kṛṣṇa says, kaunteya pratijānīhi na me bhaktaḥ praṇaśyati: "O son of Kuntī, declare it boldly that My devotee never perishes." Since Kṛṣṇa gives this assurance, the devotee lives in Kṛṣṇa and has no desire for personal benefit. The background for the devotee is the all-good Himself. Why should the devotee aspire for something good for himself? His only business is to please the Supreme by rendering service as much as possible. A kṛṣṇa-bhakta has no desire for his own personal benefit. He is completely protected by the Supreme. Avaśya rakṣibe kṛṣṇa viśvāsa pālana. Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says that he is desireless because Kṛṣṇa will give him protection in all circumstances. It is not that he expects any assistance from Kṛṣṇa; he simply depends on Kṛṣṇa just as a child depends on his parents. The child does not know how to expect service from his parents, but he is always protected nevertheless. This is called niṣkāma (desirelessness).

Although karmīs, jñānīs and yogīs fulfill their desires by performing various activities, they are never satisfied. A karmī may work very hard to acquire a million dollars, but as soon as he gets a million dollars he desires another million. For the karmīs, there is no end of desire. The more the karmī gets, the more he desires. The jñānīs cannot be desireless because their intelligence is unsound. They want to merge into the Brahman effulgence, but even though they may be raised to that platform, they cannot be satisfied there. There are many jñānīs or sannyāsīs who give up the world as false, but after taking sannyāsa they return to the world to engage in politics or philanthropy or to open schools and hospitals. This means that they could not attain the real Brahman (brahma satyam). They have to come down to the material platform to engage in philanthropic activity. Thus they again cultivate desires, and when these desires are exhausted, they desire something different. Therefore the jñānī cannot be niṣkāma, desireless. Nor can the yogīs be desireless, for they desire yogic perfections in order to exhibit some magical feats and gain popularity. People gather around these yogīs, and the yogīs desire more and more adulation. Because they misuse their mystic power, they fall down again onto the material platform. It is not possible for them to become niṣkāma, desireless.

The conclusion is that only the devotees who are simply satisfied in serving the Lord can actually become desireless. Therefore it is written: kṛṣṇa-bhakta niṣkāma. Since the kṛṣṇa-bhakta, the devotee of Kṛṣṇa, is satisfied with Kṛṣṇa, there is no possibility of falldown.

muktānām-of persons liberated or freed from the bondage of ignorance; api-even; siddhānām-of persons who have achieved perfection; nārāyaṇa-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; parāyaṇaḥ-the devotee; su-durlabhaḥ-very rare; praśānta-ātmā-completely satisfied, desireless; koṭiṣu-among many millions; api-certainly; mahā-mune-O great sage.

TRANSLATION

" 'O great sage, out of many millions of materially liberated people who are free from ignorance, and out of many millions of siddhas who have nearly attained perfection, there is hardly one pure devotee of Nārāyaṇa. Only such a devotee is actually completely satisfied and peaceful.'

PURPORT

This verse is quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (6.14.5). The nārāyaṇa-parāyaṇa, the devotee of Lord Nārāyaṇa, is the only blissful person. One who becomes a nārāyaṇa-parāyaṇa is already liberated from material bondage. He already possesses all the perfections of yoga. Unless one comes to the platform of nārāyaṇa-parāyaṇa and passes over the platform of bhukti-mukti-siddhi, he cannot be fully satisfied. That is the pure devotional stage.

anyābhilāṣitā-śūnyaṁ
jñāna-karmādy-anāvṛtam
ānukūlyena kṛṣṇānu-
śīlanaṁ bhaktir uttamā

One who has no other desire but Kṛṣṇa and who is not influenced by the process of jñāna-mārga (cultivation of knowledge) actually becomes free from ignorance. A first-class person is one who is not influenced by karma (fruitive activity) or yoga (mystic power). He simply depends on Kṛṣṇa and is satisfied in his devotional service. According to Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (6.17.28): nārāyaṇa-parāḥ sarve na kutaścana bibhyati. Such a person is never afraid of anything. For him, heaven and hell are the same. Not knowing the situation of a nārāyaṇa-parāyaṇa, rascals become envious. By the grace of Nārāyaṇa, a devotee is situated in the most opulent position in the material world. Rascals are envious of Nārāyaṇa and His devotee, but the devotee knows how to please another devotee of Nārāyaṇa because he knows that by pleasing Nārāyaṇa's representative, one directly pleases Lord Nārāyaṇa. Therefore a devotee offers the best facilities to his spiritual master because he knows that by pleasing Nārāyaṇa's representative, he can please Lord Nārāyaṇa. Outsiders who have no knowledge of Nārāyaṇa are envious both of Nārāyaṇa and of His devotee. Consequently when they see that Nārāyaṇa's devotee is opulently situated, they become envious. But when the devotee of Nārāyaṇa asks such foolish people to come live with him in the same comfortable situation, they do not agree because they cannot give up illicit sex, meat eating, intoxication and gambling. Therefore the materialist refuses the company of a nārāyaṇa-parāyaṇa, although he is envious of the devotee's material situation. In Western countries when ordinary men-storekeepers and workers-see our devotees living and eating sumptuously and yet not working, they become very anxious to know where they get the money. Such people become envious and ask, "How is it possible to live so comfortably without working? How is it you have so many cars, bright faces and nice clothes?" Not knowing that Kṛṣṇa looks after His devotees, such people become surprised, and some become envious.

brahmāṇḍa bhramite kona bhāgyavān jīva guru-kṛṣṇa-prasāde pāya bhakti-latā-bīja

SYNONYMS

brahmāṇḍa bhramite-wandering in this universe; kona-some; bhāgyavān-most fortunate; jīva-living being; guru-of the spiritual master; kṛṣṇa-of Kṛṣṇa; prasāde-by the mercy; pāya-gets; bhakti-latā-of the creeper of devotional service; bīja-the seed.

TRANSLATION

"According to their karma, all living entities are wandering throughout the entire universe. Some of them are being elevated to the upper planetary systems, and some are going down into the lower planetary systems. Out of many millions of wandering living entities, one who is very fortunate gets an opportunity to associate with a bona fide spiritual master by the grace of Kṛṣṇa. By the mercy of both Kṛṣṇa and the spiritual master, such a person receives the seed of the creeper of devotional service.

PURPORT

When we speak of brahmāṇḍa, we refer to the whole universe, or to the cluster of many millions of universes. In all universes, there are innumerable planets and innumerable living entities upon those planets in the air and in the water. There are millions and trillions of living entities everywhere, and they are engaged by māyā in suffering and enjoying the results of their fruitive activity life after life. This is the position of the materially conditioned living entities. Out of many of these living entities, if one is actually fortunate (bhāgyavān), he comes in contact with a bona fide spiritual master by Kṛṣṇa's mercy.

Kṛṣṇa is situated in everyone's heart, and if one desires something, Kṛṣṇa fulfills one's desire. If the living entity by chance or fortune comes in contact with the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement and wishes to associate with that movement, Kṛṣṇa, who is situated in everyone's heart, gives him the chance to meet a bona fide spiritual master. This is called guru-kṛṣṇa-prasāda. Kṛṣṇa is prepared to bestow His mercy upon all living entities, and as soon as a living entity desires the Lord's mercy, the Lord immediately gives him an opportunity to meet a bona fide spiritual master. Such a person is fortified by both Kṛṣṇa and the spiritual master. He is helped from within by Kṛṣṇa and from without by the spiritual master. Both are prepared to help the sincere living being become free from this material bondage.

How one can become this fortunate can be seen in the life of Śrīla Nārada Muni. In his previous life he was born of a maidservant. Although he was not born into a prestigious position, his mother was fortunately engaged in rendering service to some Vaiṣṇavas. When these Vaiṣṇavas were resting during the Cāturmāsya period, the boy Nārada took the opportunity to engage in their service. Taking compassion upon the boy, the Vaiṣṇavas offered him the remnants of their food.

By serving them and obeying their orders, the boy became the object of sympathy for the Vaiṣṇavas, and, by the Vaiṣṇavas' unknown mercy, he gradually became a pure devotee. In the next life he was Nārada Muni, the most exalted of Vaiṣṇavas and the most important guru and ācārya of Vaiṣṇavas.

Following in the footsteps of Nārada Muni, this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is rendering service to humanity by giving everyone a chance to come in contact with Kṛṣṇa. If one is fortunate, he becomes intimately related with this movement. Then, by the grace of Kṛṣṇa, one's life becomes successful. Everyone has dormant kṛṣṇa-bhakti-love for Kṛṣṇa-and in the association of good devotees, that love is revealed. As stated in Caitanya-caritāmṛta (Madhya 22.107):

nitya-siddha-kṛṣṇa-prema 'sādhya' kabhu naya śravaṇādi-śuddha-citte karaye udaya

Dormant devotional service to Kṛṣṇa is within everyone. Simply by associating with devotees, hearing their good instructions and chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, dormant love for Kṛṣṇa is awakened. In this way one acquires the seed of devotional service. Guru-kṛṣṇa-prasāde pāya bhakti-latā-bīja.

mālī hañā kare sei bīja āropaṇa śravaṇa-kīrtana-jale karaye secana

SYNONYMS

mālī hañā-becoming a gardener; kare-does; sei-that; bīja-seed of devotional service; āropaṇa-sowing; śravaṇa-of hearing; kīrtana-of chanting; jale-with the water; karaye-does; secana-sprinkling.

TRANSLATION

”When a person receives the seed of devotional service, he should take care of it by becoming a gardener and sowing the seed in his heart. If he waters the seed gradually by the process of śravaṇa and kīrtana [hearing and chanting], the seed will begin to sprout.

PURPORT

To live with devotees or to live in a temple means to associate with the śravaṇa-kīrtana process. Sometimes neophyte devotees think that they can continue the śravaṇa-kīrtana process without worshiping the Deity, but the execution of śravaṇa-kīrtana is meant for highly developed devotees like Haridāsa Ṭhākura, who engaged in the śravaṇa-kīrtana process without worshiping the Deity. However, one should not falsely imitate Haridāsa Ṭhākura and abandon Deity worship just to try to engage in śravaṇa-kīrtana. This is not possible for neophyte devotees.

The word guru-prasāda indicates that the spiritual master is very merciful in bestowing the boon of devotional service upon the disciple. That is the best possible gift the spiritual master has to offer. Those with a background of pious life are eligible to receive life’s supreme benefit, and to bestow this benefit, the Supreme Personality of Godhead sends His representative to impart His mercy. Endowed with the mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the spiritual master distributes the mercy to those who are elevated and pious. Thus the spiritual master trains his disciples to render devotional service unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is called guru-kṛpā. It is kṛṣṇa-prasāda, Kṛṣṇa’s mercy, that He sends a bona fide spiritual master to the deserving disciple. By the mercy of Kṛṣṇa, one meets the bona fide spiritual master, and by the mercy of the spiritual master, the disciple is fully trained in the devotional service of the Lord.

Bhakti-latā-bīja means ”the seed of devotional service.” Everything has an original cause, or seed. For any idea, program, plan or device, there is first of all the contemplation of the plan, and that is called bīja, or the seed. The methods, rules and regulations by which one is perfectly trained in devotional service constitute the bhakti-latā-bīja, or seed of devotional service. This bhakti-latā-bīja is received from the spiritual master by the grace of Kṛṣṇa. Other seeds are called anyābhilāṣa-bīja, karma-bīja and jñāna-bīja. If one is not fortunate enough to receive the bhakti-latā-bīja from the spiritual master, he instead cultivates the seeds of karma-bīja, jñāna-bīja, or political and social or philanthropic bīja. However, bhakti-latā-bīja is different from these other bījas. Bhakti-latā-bīja can be received only through the mercy of the spiritual master. Therefore one has to satisfy the spiritual master to get bhakti-latā-bīja (yasya prasādād bhagavat-prasādaḥ). Bhakti-latā-bīja is the origin of devotional service. Unless one satisfies the spiritual master, he gets the bīja, or root cause, of karma, jñāna and yoga without the benefit of devotional service. However, one who is faithful to his spiritual master gets the bhakti-latā-bīja. This bhakti-latā-bīja is received when one is initiated by the bona fide spiritual master. After receiving the spiritual master’s mercy, one must repeat his instructions, and this is called śravaṇa-kīrtana-hearing and chanting. One who has not properly heard from the spiritual master or who does not follow the regulative principles is not fit for chanting (kīrtana). This is explained in Bhagavad-gītā (2.41): vyavasāyātmikā buddhir ekeha kuru-nandana. One who has not listened carefully to the instructions of the spiritual master is unfit to chant or preach the cult of devotional service. One has to water the bhakti-latā-bīja after receiving instructions from the spiritual master.

upajiyā bāḍe latā ’brahmāṇḍa’ bhedi’ yāya
’virajā’ ’brahma-loka’ bhedi’ ’para-vyoma’ pāya

SYNONYMS

upajiyā-being cultivated; bāḍe-increases; latā-the creeper of devotional service; brahmāṇḍa-the whole universe; bhedi’-penetrating; yāya-goes; virajā-the river between the spiritual world and the material world; brahma-loka-the Brahman effulgence; bhedi’-penetrating; para-vyoma-the spiritual sky; pāya-attains.

TRANSLATION

”As one waters the bhakti-latā-bīja, the seed sprouts, and the creeper gradually increases to the point where it penetrates the walls of this universe and goes beyond the Virajā River between the spiritual world and the material world. It attains brahma-loka, the Brahman effulgence, and, penetrating through that stratum, it reaches the spiritual sky and the spiritual planet Goloka Vṛndāvana.

PURPORT

A creeper generally takes shelter of a big tree, but the bhakti-latā, being the creeper of spiritual energy, cannot take shelter of any material planet, for there is no tree on any material planet that the bhakti-latā creeper can utilize for shelter. In other words, devotional service cannot be utilized for any material purpose. Devotional service is meant only for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Sometimes men with a poor fund of knowledge maintain that bhakti can be applied to material things also. In other words, they say that devotional service can be rendered to one’s country or to the demigods, but this is not a fact. Devotional service is especially meant for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and it is beyond this material range. There is a river, or causal ocean, between the spiritual and material natures, and this river is free from the influence of the three modes of material nature; therefore it is called Virajā. The word vi means vigata (completely eradicated), and rajaḥ means ”the influence of the material world.” On this platform, a living entity is completely free from material entanglement. For the jñānīs who want to merge into the Brahman effulgence, there is brahma-loka. Bhakti-latā, however, has no shelter in the material world, nor has it shelter in brahma-loka, although brahma-loka is beyond the material world. The bhakti-latā increases until it reaches the spiritual sky, where Goloka Vṛndāvana is situated.

TEXT 154

tabe-thereafter; yāya-goes; tat-upari-to the top of that (the spiritual sky); goloka-vṛndāvana-to the planet known as Goloka Vṛndāvana where Kṛṣṇa lives; kṛṣṇa-caraṇa-of the lotus feet of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kalpa-vṛkṣe-on the desire tree; kare ārohaṇa-climbs.

TRANSLATION

”Being situated in one’s heart and being watered by śravaṇa-kīrtana, the bhakti creeper grows more and more. In this way it attains the shelter of the desire tree of the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, who is eternally situated in the planet known as Goloka Vṛndāvana in the topmost region of the spiritual sky.

PURPORT

In the Brahma-saṁhitā (5.37) it is said:

ānanda-cinmaya-rasa-pratibhāvitābhis tābhir ya eva nija-rūpatayā kalābhiḥ goloka eva nivasaty akhilātma-bhūto
govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

”I worship Govinda, the primeval Lord. He resides in His own realm, Goloka, with Rādhā, who resembles His own spiritual figure and who embodies the ecstatic potency [hlādinī]. Their companions are Her confidantes, who embody extensions of Her bodily form and who are imbued and permeated with ever-blissful spiritual rasa.” In the spiritual world, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, has expanded Himself in His spiritual potency. He has His eternal form of bliss and knowledge (sac-cid-ānanda-vigraha). Everything in the Goloka Vṛndāvana planet is a spiritual expansion of sac-cid-ānanda. Everyone there is of the same potency-ānanda-cinmaya-rasa. The relationship between the Supreme Personality of Godhead and His servitor is cinmaya-rasa. Kṛṣṇa and His entourage and paraphernalia are of the same cinmaya potency. When the cinmaya-rasa potency goes through the material potency, it becomes all-pervading. Although the Supreme Personality of Godhead exists on His own planet Goloka Vṛndāvana, He is present everywhere. Aṇḍāntara-stha-paramāṇu-cayāntara-stham. He is present within all universes, although they are innumerable. He is present within the atom. Īśvaraḥ sarva-bhūtānāṁ hṛd-deśe ’rjuna tiṣṭhati: He is also present within the heart of all living entities. This is His all-pervasive potency.

Goloka Vṛndāvana is the highest planet in the spiritual world. In order to go to the spiritual world after penetrating the cover of the material universe, one must penetrate brahma-loka, the spiritual effulgence. Then one can come to the Goloka Vṛndāvana planet. There are also other planets in the spiritual world called Vaikuṇṭha planets, and on these planets Lord Nārāyaṇa is worshiped with awe and veneration. On these planets the śānta-rasa is prevalent, and some of the devotees are also connected with the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the dāsya-rasa, the mellow of servitorship. As far as the mellow of fraternity is concerned, the Vaikuṇṭha rasa is represented by gaurava-sakhya, friendship in awe and veneration. The other fraternity rasa is exhibited as viśrambha (friendship in equality), and this is found in the Goloka Vṛndāvana planet. Above that is service to the Lord in vātsalya-rasa (paternal love), and above all is the relationship with the Lord in the mādhurya-rasa (conjugal love). These five rasas are fully exhibited in the spiritual world in one’s relationship with the Lord. Therefore in the spiritual world the bhakti-latā creeper finds its resting place at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa.

tāhāṅ vistārita hañā phale prema-phala ihāṅ mālī sece nitya śravaṇādi jala

SYNONYMS

tāhāṅ-there in the spiritual world (in the Goloka Vṛndāvana planet); vistārita-expanded; hañā-becoming; phale-produces; prema-phala-the fruit known as love of Godhead; ihāṅ-in the material world, where the devotee is still present; mālī-exactly like a gardener; sece-sprinkles; nitya-regularly, without fail; śravaṇa-ādi jala-the water of śravaṇa, kīrtana and so on.

TRANSLATION

”The creeper greatly expands in the Goloka Vṛndāvana planet, and there it produces the fruit of love for Kṛṣṇa. Although remaining in the material world, the gardener regularly sprinkles the creeper with the water of hearing and chanting.

PURPORT

In Goloka Vṛndāvana the devotees have very intimate relationships with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The devotee engages in the Lord’s service in great ecstatic love. Such love was exhibited personally by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in His teachings to the people of the material world. The fruit of the devotional creeper is pure desire to serve and please the senses of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Kṛṣṇendriya-prīti-icchā dhare ’prema’ nāma. (Cc. Ādi 4.165) In the spiritual world one has no desire other than to please the senses of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The conditioned soul within the material world can neither understand nor appreciate how the devotee in the material world can render confidential service to the Lord out of feelings of ecstatic love and always engage in pleasing the Supreme Lord’s senses. Although seen within this material world, the pure devotee always engages in the confidential service of the Lord. An ordinary neophyte devotee cannot realize this; therefore it is said, vaiṣṇavera kriyā-mudrā vijñāneha nā bujhaya. The activities of a pure Vaiṣṇava cannot be understood even by a learned scholar in the material world.

Every living entity is wandering within this universe in different species and on different planetary systems according to his fruitive activities. Out of many millions of living entities, one may be fortunate enough to receive the seed of bhakti-latā, the creeper of devotional service. By the grace of the spiritual master and Kṛṣṇa, one nourishes the bhakti-latā by regularly sprinkling it with the water of śravaṇa-kīrtana, hearing and chanting. In this way the seed of bhakti-latā sprouts and grows up and up through the whole universe until it penetrates the covering of the material universe and reaches the spiritual world. The bhakti-latā continues to grow until it reaches the topmost planetary system, Goloka Vṛndāvana, where Kṛṣṇa lives. There the creeper takes shelter at the lotus feet of the Lord, and that is its final destination. At that time the creeper begins to grow the fruits of ecstatic love of God. It is the duty of the devotee who nourishes the creeper to be very careful. It is said that the watering of the creeper must continue: ihāṅ mālī sece nitya śravaṇādi jala. It is not that at a certain stage one can stop chanting and hearing and become a mature devotee. If one stops, one certainly falls down from devotional service. Although one may be very exalted in devotional service, he should not give up the watering process of śravaṇa-kīrtana. If one gives up that process, it is due to an offense. This is described in the following verse.

yadi vaiṣṇava-aparādha uṭhe hātī mātā upāḍe vā chiṇḍe, tāra śukhi’ yāya pātā

SYNONYMS

yadi-if; vaiṣṇava-aparādha-an offense at the feet of a Vaiṣṇava; uṭhe-arises; hātī-an elephant; mātā-mad; upāḍe-uproots; vā-or; chiṇḍe-breaks; tāra-of the creeper; śukhi'-shriveling up; yāya-goes; pātā-the leaf.

TRANSLATION

"If the devotee commits an offense at the feet of a Vaiṣṇava while cultivating the creeper of devotional service in the material world, his offense is compared to a mad elephant that uproots the creeper and breaks it. In this way the leaves of the creeper are dried up.

PURPORT

One's devotional attitude increases in the association of a Vaiṣṇava.

tāṅdera caraṇa sevi bhakta-sane vāsa
janame janame haya, ei abhilāṣa

By his personal example, Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura stresses that a devotee must always remember to please his predecessor ācārya. The Gosvāmīs are represented by one's spiritual master. One cannot be an ācārya (spiritual master) without following strictly in the disciplic succession of the ācāryas. One who is actually serious in advancing in devotional service should desire only to satisfy the previous ācāryas. Ei chaya gosāñi yāra, mui tāra dāsa. One should always think of oneself as a servant of the servant of the ācāryas, and thinking this, one should live in the society of Vaiṣṇavas. However, if one thinks that he has become very mature and can live separate from the association of Vaiṣṇavas and thus gives up all the regulative principles due to offending a Vaiṣṇava, one's position becomes very dangerous. Offenses against the holy name are explained in Ādi-līlā (Chapter Eight, verse 24). Giving up the regulative principles and living according to one's whims are compared to a mad elephant, which by force uproots the bhakti-latā and breaks it to pieces. In this way the bhakti-latā shrivels up. Such an offense is especially created when one disobeys the instructions of the spiritual master. This is called guru-avajñā. The devotee must therefore be very careful not to commit offenses against the spiritual master. As soon as one is deviated from the spiritual master, the uprooting of the bhakti-latā begins, and gradually all the leaves dry up.

tāte mālī yatna kari' kare āvaraṇa aparādha-hastīra yaiche nā haya udgama

SYNONYMS

tāte-therefore; mālī-the gardener devotee; yatna kari'-with great attention; kare-makes; āvaraṇa-protective fencing; aparādha-of offenses; hastīra-of the elephant; yaiche-so that; nā-not; haya-there is; udgama-birth.

TRANSLATION

"The gardener must defend the creeper by fencing it all around so that the powerful elephant of offenses may not enter.

PURPORT

While the bhakti-latā creeper is growing, the devotee must protect it by fencing it all around. The neophyte devotee must be protected by being surrounded by pure devotees. In this way he will not give the maddened elephant a chance to uproot his bhakti-latā creeper. When one associates with nondevotees, the maddened elephant is set loose. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has said: asat-saṅga-tyāga,-ei vaiṣṇava-ācāra. The first business of a Vaiṣṇava is to give up the company of nondevotees. A so-called mature devotee, however, commits a great offense by giving up the company of pure devotees. The living entity is a social animal, and if one gives up the society of pure devotees, he must associate with nondevotees (asat-saṅga). By contacting nondevotees and engaging in nondevotional activities, a so-called mature devotee will fall victim to the mad elephant offense. Whatever growth has taken place is quickly uprooted by such an offense. One should therefore be very careful to defend the creeper by fencing it in-that is, by following the regulative principles and associating with pure devotees.

If one thinks that there are many pseudo devotees or nondevotees in the Kṛṣṇa Consciousness Society, one can keep direct company with the spiritual master, and if there is any doubt, one should consult the spiritual master. However, unless one follows the spiritual master's instructions and the regulative principles governing chanting and hearing the holy name of the Lord, one cannot become a pure devotee. By one's mental concoctions, one falls down. By associating with nondevotees, one breaks the regulative principles and is thereby lost. In the Upadeśāmṛta of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, it is said:

atyāhāraḥ prayāsaś ca
prajalpo niyamāgrahaḥ jana-saṅgaś ca laulyaṁ ca ṣaḍbhir bhaktir vinaśyati

"One's devotional service is spoiled when he becomes too entangled in the following six activities: (1) eating more than necessary or collecting more funds than required, (2) overendeavoring for mundane things that are very difficult to attain, (3) talking unnecessarily about mundane subject matters, (4) practicing the scriptural rules and regulations only for the sake of following them and not for the sake of spiritual advancement, or rejecting the rules and regulations of the scriptures and working independently or whimsically, (5) associating with worldly-minded persons who are not interested in Kṛṣṇa consciousness, and (6) being greedy for mundane achievements."

SYNONYMS

niṣiddha-ācāra-behavior not to be exhibited by a person desiring to become perfect; kuṭīnāṭī-diplomacy; jīva-hiṁsana-unnecessarily killing animals or the soul; lābha-profit according to material calculations; pūjā-adoration achieved by satisfying mundane people; pratiṣṭha-ādi-becoming an important man in material calculations, and so on; yata-all these; upaśākhā-gaṇa-unnecessary creepers.

TRANSLATION

”Some unnecessary creepers growing with the bhakti creeper are the creepers of behavior unacceptable for those trying to attain perfection, diplomatic behavior, animal killing, mundane profiteering, mundane adoration and mundane importance. All these are unwanted creepers.

PURPORT

There is a certain pattern of behavior prescribed for those actually trying to become perfect. In our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement we advise our students not to eat meat, not to gamble, not to engage in illicit sex and not to indulge in intoxication. People who indulge in these activities can never become perfect; therefore these regulative principles are for those interested in becoming perfect and going back to Godhead. Kuṭīnāṭī, or diplomatic behavior, cannot satisfy the ātmā, the soul. It cannot even satisfy the body or the mind. The culprit mind is always suspicious; therefore our dealings should always be straightforward and approved by Vedic authorities. If we treat people diplomatically or duplicitously, our spiritual advancement is obstructed. Jīva-hiṁsana refers to the killing of animals or to envy of other living entities. The killing of poor animals is undoubtedly due to envy of those animals. The human form is meant for the understanding of Kṛṣṇa consciousness (athāto brahma-jijñāsā), for inquiring about the Supreme Brahman. In the human form, everyone has a chance to understand the Supreme Brahman. The so-called leaders of human society do not know the real aim of human life and are therefore busy with economic development. This is misleading. Every state and every society is busy trying to improve the quality of eating, sleeping, mating and defending. This human form of life is meant for more than these four animal principles. Eating, sleeping, mating and defending are problems found in the animal kingdom, and the animals have solved their problems without difficulty. Why should human society be so busy trying to solve these problems? The difficulty is that people are not educated to understand this simple philosophy. They think that advancement of civilization means increasing sense gratification.

There are many religious propagandists who do not know how the ultimate problems of life can be solved, and they also try to educate people in a form of sense gratification. This is also jīva-hiṁsana. Real knowledge is not given, and religionists mislead the general populace. As far as material profits are concerned, one should know that whatever material profit one has must be abandoned at the time of death. Unfortunately people do not know that there is life after death; therefore mundane people waste their time amassing material profit which has to be left behind at the time of death. Such profit has no eternal benefit. Similarly, adoration by mundane people is valueless because after death one has to accept another body. Material adoration and title are decorations that cannot be carried over to the next body. In the next life, everything is forgotten.

All these obstructions have been described in this verse as unwanted creepers. They simply present obstacles for the real creeper, bhakti-latā-bīja. One should be very careful to avoid all these unwanted things. Sometimes these unwanted creepers look exactly like the bhakti-latā creeper. They appear to be of the same size and the same species when they are packed together with the bhakti-latā creeper, but in spite of this, the creepers are called upaśākhā. A pure devotee can distinguish between the bhakti-latā creeper and a mundane creeper, and he is very alert to distinguish them and keep them separate.

”If one does not distinguish between the bhakti-latā creeper and the other creepers, the sprinkling of water is misused because the other creepers are nourished while the bhakti-latā creeper is curtailed.

PURPORT

If one chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra while committing offenses, these unwanted creepers will grow. One should not take advantage of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra for some material profit. As mentioned in verse 159:

’niṣiddhācāra’, ’kuṭīnāṭī’, jīva-hiṁsana’
’lābha’, ’pūjā’, ’pratiṣṭhādi’ yata upaśākhā-gaṇa

The unwanted creepers have been described by Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura. He states that if one hears and chants without trying to give up offenses, one becomes materially attached to sense gratification. One may also desire freedom from material bondage like the Māyāvādīs, or one may become attached to the yoga-siddhis and desire wonderful yogic powers. If one is attached to wonderful material activities, one is called siddhi-lobhī, greedy for material perfection. One may also be victimized by diplomatic or crooked behavior, or one may associate with women for illicit sex. Others may make a show of devotional service like the prākṛta-sahajiyās, or one may try to support his philosophy by joining some caste or identifying himself with a certain dynasty, claiming a monopoly on spiritual advancement. Thus with the support of family tradition, one may become a pseudo guru or so-called spiritual master. One may become attached to the four sinful activities-illicit sex, intoxication, gambling and meat eating, or one may consider a Vaiṣṇava to belong to a mundane caste or creed. One may think, ”This is a Hindu Vaiṣṇava, and this is a European Vaiṣṇava. A European Vaiṣṇava is not allowed to enter the temples.” In other words, one may consider Vaiṣṇavas in terms of birth, thinking one a brāhmaṇa Vaiṣṇava, a śūdra Vaiṣṇava, a mleccha Vaiṣṇava and so on. One may also try to carry out a professional business while chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra or reading Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, or one may try to increase his monetary strength by illegal means. One may also try to be a cheap Vaiṣṇava by chanting in a secluded place for material adoration, or one may desire mundane reputation by making compromises with nondevotees, compromising one’s philosophy or spiritual life, or one may become a supporter of a hereditary caste system. All these are pitfalls of personal sense gratification. Just to cheat some innocent people, one makes a show of advanced spiritual life and becomes known as a sādhu, mahātmā or religious person. All this means that the so-called devotee has become victimized by all these unwanted creepers and that the real creeper of bhakti-latā-bīja has been stunted.

prathamei upaśākhāra karaye chedana tabe mūla-śākhā bāḍi’ yāya vṛndāvana

SYNONYMS

prathamei-from the very beginning; upaśākhāra-of the unwanted creepers; karaye-does; chedana-the cutting away; tabe-then only; mūla-śākhā-the chief creeper; bāḍi’-increasing; yāya-goes; vṛndāvana-to the lotus feet of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa in Vṛndāvana.

TRANSLATION

”As soon as an intelligent devotee sees an unwanted creeper growing beside the original creeper, he must cut it down instantly. Then the real creeper of bhakti-latā-bīja grows nicely, returns home, back to Godhead, and seeks shelter under the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

If one is misled by unwanted creepers and is victimized, he cannot make progress back to Godhead. Rather, he remains within the material world and engages in activities having nothing to do with pure devotional service. Such a person may be elevated to the higher planetary systems, but because he remains within the material world, he is subjected to the threefold material miseries.

TEXT 162

’prema-phala’ pāki’ paḍe, mālī āsvādaya latā avalambi’ mālī ’kalpa-vṛkṣa’ pāya

SYNONYMS

prema-phala-the fruit of love of God; pāki’-becoming mature; paḍe-falls down; mālī-the gardener; āsvādaya-tastes; latā avalambi’-taking advantage of the growing bhakti-latā; mālī-the gardener; kalpa-vṛkṣa pāya-reaches the desire tree in Goloka Vṛndāvana.

TRANSLATION

”When the fruit of devotional service becomes ripe and falls down, the gardener tastes the fruit and thus takes advantage of the creeper and reaches the desire tree of the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa in Goloka Vṛndāvana.

TEXT 163

tāhāṅ sei kalpa-vṛkṣera karaye sevana sukhe prema-phala-rasa kare āsvādana

SYNONYMS

tāhāṅ-there (in Goloka Vṛndāvana); sei kalpa-vṛkṣera-of the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, which are compared to a desire tree; karaye sevana-engages in the service; sukhe-in transcendental bliss; prema-phala-rasa-the juice of the fruit of devotional service; kare-does; āsvādana-tasting.

TRANSLATION

”There the devotee serves the lotus feet of the Lord, which are compared to a wish-fulfilling tree. With great bliss he tastes the juice of the fruit of love and becomes eternally happy.

PURPORT

The word tāhāṅ indicates that in the spiritual world one can taste the juice of the fruit of devotional service and thus become blissful.

TEXT 164

eita parama-phala ’parama-puruṣārtha’ yāṅra āge tṛṇa-tulya cāri puruṣārtha

SYNONYMS

eita-this; parama-phala-the supreme goal of life; parama-supreme; puruṣa-artha-interest of the living being; yāṅra āge-in the presence of which; tṛṇa-tulya-very insignificant; cāri-four; puruṣa-artha-the different types of human interests.

TRANSLATION

”To taste the fruit of devotional service at Goloka Vṛndāvana is the highest perfection of life, and in the presence of such perfection, the four material perfections-religion, economic development, sense gratification and liberation-are very insignificant achievements.

PURPORT

The highest achievement attained by the jñānīs or impersonalists is becoming one with the Supreme, generally known as mokṣa, liberation. The highest achievements of the yogīs are the eight material perfections such as aṇimā, laghimā and prāpti. Yet these are nothing compared to the eternal bliss of the devotee who returns back to Godhead and tastes the fruit of devotional service to the lotus feet of the Lord. The material perfections up to the point of liberation are very insignificant in comparison; therefore the pure devotee is never interested in such things. His only interest is in perfecting his devotional service to the Lord. The pleasure of the impersonalist monist philosophers is condemned in the following verse, which is also found in Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī’s Lalita-mādhava.

TEXT 165

ṛddhā siddhi-vraja-vijayitā satya-dharmā samādhir yāvat premṇāṁ madhu-ripu-vaśīkāra-siddhauṣadhīnāṁ gandho ’py antaḥ-karaṇa-saraṇī-pānthatām na prayāti

SYNONYMS

ṛddhā-excellent; siddhi-vraja-of the groups of material perfections of the yogīs (aṇimā, laghimā, prāpti and so on); vijayitā-the victory; satya-dharmā-the religious principles of perfection (satya, śama, titikṣā and so on); samādhiḥ-the yogic perfection of meditation; brahma-ānandaḥ-the spiritually blissful life of the monist; guruḥ-very high in material considerations; api-although; camatkārayati-they appear very important; eva-only; tāvat-that long; yāvat-as long as; premṇām-of love of Kṛṣṇa; madhu-ripu-of Kṛṣṇa, the enemy of the Madhu demon; vaśīkāra-in the controlling; siddha-auṣadhīnām-which is like perfect herbs that can control snakes; gandhaḥ-a light fragrance; api-even; antaḥ-karaṇa-saraṇī-pānthatām-a traveler on the path of the heart; na prayāti-does not become.

TRANSLATION

”As long as there is not the slightest fragrance of pure love of Kṛṣṇa, which is the perfected medicinal herb for controlling Lord Kṛṣṇa within the heart, the opulences of material perfection-known as the siddhis, the brahminical perfections [satya, śama, titikṣā and so on], the trance of the yogīs and the monistic bliss of Brahman-all seem wonderful for men.

PURPORT

There are different types of material perfection known as siddhi-vraja, brahminical qualifications, yogic trance and merging into the Supreme. All these are certainly very attractive for a mundane person, but their brilliance exists only as long as one does not take to devotional service. Devotional service can control the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the supreme controller of all universal affairs. The five rasas (mellows) in the transcendental world are practiced by the inhabitants of Goloka Vṛndāvana in neutrality, servitorship, friendship, paternal affection and conjugal love. All these please the Lord so much that He is controlled by the devotees. For instance, mother Yaśodā was so advanced in devotional service that Kṛṣṇa agreed to be controlled by her stick. In other words, the five principal mellows are so great and glorious that they are able to control the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In the material world, however, the so-called siddhis, or perfections, manifest their brightness only as long as one is not interested in devotional service. In other words, the perfection of the karmīs, jñānīs, yogīs and others remains attractive only as long as one does not come to the point of devotional service, which is so great and significant that it can control the supreme controller, Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 166

’śuddha-bhakti’ haite haya ’premā’ utpanna

SYNONYMS

śuddha-bhakti-pure devotional service without material contaminations; haite-from; haya-is; premā-love of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; utpanna-produced; ataeva-therefore; śuddha-bhaktira-of pure devotional service; kahiye-let me explain; lakṣaṇa-the symptoms.

TRANSLATION

”When one is situated in pure devotional service, he develops love of Godhead; therefore let me describe some of the symptoms of pure devotional service.

PURPORT

In Bhagavad-gītā (18.55) it is said: bhaktyā mām abhijānāti yāvān yaś cāsmi tattvataḥ. One cannot understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead in truth unless he takes to devotional service.

TEXT 167

jñāna-karmādy-anāvṛtam
ānukūlyena kṛṣṇānu-
śīlanaṁ bhaktir uttamā

SYNONYMS

anya-abhilāṣitā-śūnyam-without desires other than those for the service of Lord Kṛṣṇa, or without material desires (such as those for meat-eating, illicit sex, gambling and addiction to intoxicants); jñāna-by the knowledge of the philosophy of the monist Māyāvādīs; *.karma-by fruitive activities; ādi-by artificially practicing detachment, by the mechanical practice of yoga, by studying the Sāṅkhya philosophy, and so on; anāvṛtam-uncovered; ānukūlyena-favorable; kṛṣṇa-anuśīlanam-cultivation of service in relationship to Kṛṣṇa; bhaktiḥ uttamā-first-class devotional service.

TRANSLATION

”When first-class devotional service develops, one must be devoid of all material desires, knowledge obtained by monistic philosophy, and fruitive action. The devotee must constantly serve Kṛṣṇa favorably, as Kṛṣṇa desires.

PURPORT

This verse is also found in Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī’s Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.1.11). As we can understand from Bhagavad-gītā (9.34 and 18.65), the Supreme Personality of Godhead wants everyone to think of Him always (man-manā bhava mad-bhaktaḥ). Everyone should become His devotee, not the devotee of a demigod. Everyone should engage in devotional service or arcana Deity worship in the temple. Man-manā bhava mad-bhakto mad-yājī māṁ namaskuru. Everyone should offer obeisances, from moment to moment, to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. These are the desires of the Supreme Lord, and one who fulfills His desires favorably is actually a pure devotee. Kṛṣṇa wants everyone to surrender unto Him, and devotional service means preaching this gospel all over the world. The Lord says openly in Bhagavad-gītā (18.69): na ca tasmān manuṣyeṣu kaścin me priya-kṛttamaḥ. One should preach the gospel of Bhagavad-gītā for the benefit of all. Bhagavad-gītā is spoken by the Lord so that human society can be perfectly organized from all angles of vision-politically, socially, economically, philosophically and religiously. From any point of view, human society can be reformed by the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement; therefore one who spreads this philosophy of Kṛṣṇa consciousness for the benefit of all conditioned souls in the universe is perfect in pure devotional service.

The criterion is that a devotee must know what Kṛṣṇa wants him to do. This can be achieved through the medium of the spiritual master who is a bona fide representative of Kṛṣṇa. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī advises, ādau gurv-āśrayam. One who is serious in wanting to render pure devotional service to the Lord must take shelter of the spiritual master who comes in the disciplic succession from Kṛṣṇa. Evaṁ paramparā-prāptam imaṁ rājarṣayo viduḥ. Without accepting a bona fide spiritual master coming in the disciplic succession, one cannot find out the real purpose of devotional service. Therefore one has to accept the shelter of a bona fide spiritual master and agree to be directed by him. The first business of a pure devotee is to satisfy his spiritual master, whose only business is to spread Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Yasya prasādād bhagavat-prasādaḥ: if one can satisfy the spiritual master, Kṛṣṇa is automatically satisfied. This is the success of devotional service. This is the meaning of the word ānukūlyena-that is, favorable devotional service to the Lord. A pure devotee has no plans other than those for the Lord's service. He is not interested in attaining success in mundane activities. He simply wants success in the progress of devotional service. For a devotee, there cannot be worship of others or demigod worship. A pure devotee does not engage himself in such pseudo-devotional service. He is interested only in satisfying Kṛṣṇa. If one lives only for the satisfaction of Kṛṣṇa, he does not have to accept this order or that order. One's only business should be to satisfy Kṛṣṇa. This process is completely manifest in the activities of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. It has been actually proved that the entire world can accept devotional service without failure. One simply has to follow the instructions of the representative of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 168

SYNONYMS

anya-vāñchā-other desires; anya-pūjā-other types of worship; chāḍi'-giving up; jñāna-material knowledge; karma-material activities; ānukūlye-favorably; sarva-indriye-with all the senses; kṛṣṇa-anuśīlana-cultivation of Kṛṣṇa consciousness.

TRANSLATION

"A pure devotee must not cherish any other desire than to serve Kṛṣṇa. He should not offer worship to the demigods or to mundane personalities. He should not cultivate artificial knowledge, which is devoid of Kṛṣṇa consciousness, and he should not engage himself in anything other than Kṛṣṇa conscious activities. One must engage all one's purified senses in the service of the Lord. This is the favorable execution of Kṛṣṇa conscious activities.

SYNONYMS

ei-this; śuddha-bhakti-pure devotional service; ihā haite-from which; premā-unalloyed love of Kṛṣṇa; haya-there is; pañcarātre-in the Vedic literature known as the Pañcarātras; bhāgavate-also in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; ei-these; lakṣaṇa-symptoms; kaya-are described.

TRANSLATION

"These activities are called śuddha-bhakti, pure devotional service. If one renders such pure devotional service, he develops his original love for Kṛṣṇa in due course of time. In Vedic literatures like the Pañcarātras and Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, these symptoms are described.

PURPORT

One has to develop his devotional service under the directions of a pure devotee, the spiritual master, and in accordance with the Vedic directions given in the Pañcarātra and Bhāgavatam systems. The Pañcarātra system includes methods of temple worship, and the Bhāgavatam system includes the spreading of Kṛṣṇa conscious philosophy through the recitation of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and the discussion of philosophy with people who are interested. Through discussion, one can create an interest and understanding of the Pañcarātra and Bhāgavatam systems.

TRANSLATION

" 'Bhakti, or devotional service, means engaging all our senses in the service of the Lord, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the master of all the senses. When the spirit soul renders service unto the Supreme, there are two side effects. One is freed from all material designations, and, simply by being employed in the service of the Lord, one's senses are purified.'

SYNONYMS

bhukti-material enjoyment; mukti-to become liberated from material bondage; ādi-and so on; vāñchā-desires; yadi-if; mane-in the mind; haya-are; sādhana karile-even executing devotional service according to the regulative routine; prema-real love of Kṛṣṇa; utpanna-awakened; nā-not; haya-is.

TRANSLATION

"If one is infected with the desire for material enjoyment or material liberation, he cannot rise to the platform of pure loving service unto the Lord, even though he may superficially render devotional service according to the routine regulative principles.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura mentions that if one maintains within his heart the desire to enjoy the result of good work, or, being embarrassed by the material world, the desire to get out of material entanglement, one will never be able to attain the transcendental mellows of devotional service. In other words, one must not desire material profit when rendering devotional service. Even if one follows all the sixty-four regulative principles, he cannot attain pure devotional service with a contaminated heart.

bhukti-for material enjoyment; mukti-and for liberation from material existence; spṛhā-desire; yāvat-as long as; piśācī-the witches; hṛdi-within the heart; vartate-remain; tāvat-that long; bhakti-of devotional service; sukhasya-of the happiness; atra-here; katham-how; abhyudayaḥ-awakening; bhavet-can there be.

TRANSLATION

"The material desire to enjoy the material world and the desire to become liberated from material bondage are considered to be two witches, and they haunt one like ghosts. As long as these witches remain within the heart, how can one feel transcendental bliss? As long as these two witches remain in the heart, there is no possibility of enjoying the transcendental bliss of devotional service.

This verse is found in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.22).

sādhana-bhakti haite haya 'rati'ra udaya rati gāḍha haile tāra 'prema' nāma kaya

SYNONYMS

sādhana-bhakti-the process of regularly rendering devotional service; haite-from; haya-there is; ratira-of attachment; udaya-the awakening; rati-such attachment; gāḍha haile-becoming thick; tāra-of this; prema-love of Godhead; nāma-the name; kaya-is said.

TRANSLATION

"By regularly rendering devotional service, one gradually becomes attached to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. When that attachment is intensified, it becomes love of Godhead.

PURPORT

Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.2) gives the following information about sādhana-bhakti:

kṛti-sādhyā bhavet sādhya-bhāvā sā sādhanābhidhā nitya-siddhasya bhāvasya prākaṭyaṁ hṛdi sādhyatā

The process of devotional service-beginning with chanting and hearing-is called sādhana-bhakti. This includes the regulative principles that are intended to awaken one to devotional service. Devotional service is always dormant in everyone's heart, and by the offenseless chanting of the holy names of the Lord, one's original dormant Kṛṣṇa consciousness is awakened. This awakening to Kṛṣṇa consciousness is the beginning of sādhana-bhakti. This can be divided into many different parts, including faith, association with devotees, initiation by the spiritual master, engagement in devotional service under the instructions of a spiritual master, steadiness in devotional service and the awakening of a taste for devotional service. In this way, one can become attached to Kṛṣṇa and His service, and when this attachment is intensified, it results in ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa. The word rati is explained in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.3.41) as follows:

vyaktaṁ masṛṇatevāntar-lakṣyate rati-lakṣaṇam mumukṣu-prabhṛtīnāṁ ced
bhaved eṣā ratir na hi

"When a tenderness of the heart is manifest, there is rati, or attachment. Those who are interested in being liberated from material bondage must manifest this tenderness called rati." This attachment is not like material attachment. When one is liberated from material contamination, the awakening of attachment for Kṛṣṇa's service is called rati. In the material world there is attachment for material enjoyment, but this is not rati. Transcendental rati can be awakened only on the spiritual platform. Ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa (prema) is described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.41) as follows:

samyaṅ masṛṇita-svānto mamatvātiśayāṅkitaḥ bhāvaḥ sa eva sāndrātmā budhaiḥ premā nigadyate

"When the heart is completely softened and devoid of all material desires and when one's emotional feelings become very strong, one becomes very much attached to Kṛṣṇa. Such purified emotion is known as pure love."

TEXT 178

prema vṛddhi-krame nāma–sneha, māna, praṇaya rāga, anurāga, bhāva, mahābhāva haya

SYNONYMS

prema-ecstatic love for God; vṛddhi-krame-in terms of progressive increase; nāma-named; sneha-affection; māna-abhorrence; praṇaya-love; rāga-attachment; anurāga-further attachment; bhāva-ecstasy; mahā-bhāva-great ecstasy; haya-are.

TRANSLATION

"The basic aspects of prema, when gradually increasing to different states, are affection, abhorrence, love, attachment, further attachment, ecstasy and great ecstasy.

PURPORT

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (3.2.84) sneha (affection) is described as follows:

sāndraś citta-dravaṁ kurvan premā 'sneha' itīryate kṣaṇikasyāpi neha syād

visleṣasya sahiṣṇutā

”That aspect of prema in which the melting of the heart for the lover is concentrated is called sneha, or affection. The symptom of such affection is that the lover cannot for a moment remain without the association of the beloved.” A description of māna can be found in Madhya-līlā (Chapter Two, verse 66). Similarly, a description of praṇaya is also there. As far as rāga is concerned, Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (3.2.87) says:

snehaḥ sa rāgo yena syāt sukhaṁ duḥkham api sphuṭam tat-sambandha-lave ’py atra prītiḥ prāṇa-vyayair api

”That stage at which affection for the beloved converts unhappiness into happiness is called rāga, or attachment. When one has such attachment for Kṛṣṇa, he can give up his own life to satisfy his beloved Kṛṣṇa.” Anurāga, bhāva and mahābhāva are described in the Sixth Chapter of Madhya-līlā, verse 13. The purport to that verse explains adhirūḍha-mahābhāva.

TRANSLATION

”The gradual development of love may be compared to different states of sugar. First there is the seed of the sugarcane, then sugarcane and then the juice extracted from the cane. When this juice is boiled, it forms a liquid molasses, then a solid molasses, then sugar, candy, rock candy and finally lozenges.

ei saba kṛṣṇa-bhakti-rasera sthāyibhāva sthāyibhāve mile yadi vibhāva, anubhāva

SYNONYMS

ei saba-all these; kṛṣṇa-bhakti-of devotional service to Kṛṣṇa; rasera-of the mellows; sthāyi-bhāva-continuous existence; sthāyi-bhāve-in this continuous existence; mile-one meets; yadi-if; vibhāva-special ecstasy; anubhāva-subecstasy.

TRANSLATION

”All these stages combined are called sthāyibhāva, or continuous love of Godhead in devotional service. In addition to these stages, there are vibhāva and anubhāva.

PURPORT

Attachment for Kṛṣṇa never wanes; it increases more and more as one attains different stages. All the stages together are called sthāyibhāva, or continuous existence. The nine forms of devotional service are śravaṇaṁ kīrtanaṁ viṣṇoḥ smaraṇaṁ pāda-sevanam arcanaṁ vandanaṁ dāsyaṁ sakhyam ātma-nivedanam. When continuous love of Godhead is mixed with the processes of devotional service, it is called vibhāva, anubhāva, sāttvika and vyabhicārī. The devotee thus enjoys a variety of transcendental bliss. In his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura states that anubhāva can be divided into thirteen categories: (1) dancing, (2) rolling on the ground, (3) singing, (4) yelling, (5) jumping, (6) making loud noises, (7) yawning, (8) heavy breathing, (9) not caring for public opinion, (10) discharging saliva, (11) roaring laughter, (12) unsteadiness and (13) hiccupping. These are the symptoms of anubhāva. Thus the transcendental mellows are experienced in different stages. Similarly, there are many other forms of expression that have been analytically studied by the Gosvāmīs. In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, Rūpa Gosvāmī gives each and every symptom a particular name.

TRANSLATION

"According to the devotee, attachment falls within the five categories of śānta-rati, dāsya-rati, sakhya-rati, vātsalya-rati and madhura-rati. These five categories arise from the devotees' different attachments to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The transcendental mellows derived from devotional service are also of five varieties.

PURPORT

Śānta-rati is described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (2.5.16, 17, 18) as follows:

mānase nirvikalpatvaṁ śama ity abhidhīyate

"When one is completely free from all doubts and material attachments, he attains the neutral position called śānta."

vihāya viṣayonmukhyaṁ nijānanda-sthitir yataḥ ātmanaḥ kathyate so 'tra svabhāvaḥ śama ity asau prāyaḥ śama-pradhāñanāṁ mamatā-gandha-varjitā paramātmatayā kṛṣṇe jātā śānta-ratir matā

The śānta-rati realization of Kṛṣṇa is in the neutral stage between the conception of impersonalism and personalism. This means that one is not very strongly attached to the personal feature of the Lord. An appreciation of the greatness of the Lord is called śānta-rati. This is attachment not to the personal feature but to the impersonal feature. Generally, one in this stage is attached to the Paramātmā feature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

īśvaraḥ sarva-bhūtānāṁ
hṛd-deśe 'rjuna tiṣṭhati
bhrāmayan sarva-bhūtāni
yantrārūḍhāni māyayā

"The Supreme Lord is situated in everyone's heart, O Arjuna, and is directing the wanderings of all living entities, who are seated as on a machine, made of the material energy." (Bg. 18.61)

On the strength of this statement from Bhagavad-gītā, we can understand that in the śānta-rasa, a devotee sees the Lord's representation everywhere. Dāsya-rati is explained in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (2.5.27) thus:

svasmād bhavanti ye nyūnās te 'nugrāhyā harer matāḥ ārādhyatvātmikā teṣāṁ ratiḥ prītir itīritā tatrāsaktikṛd anyatra prīti-saṁhāriṇī hy asau

When the Supreme Lord in His localized aspect is appreciated and a great devotee understands his subordinate position, not only does he surrender to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but, due to his subordinate position, he wishes to render some service and thus become favored by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. A devotee in the śānta-rati is not very much willing to render service to the Lord, but a devotee in the dāsya-rati voluntarily wants to render service. Due to this attitude, the devotee in the dāsya-rati realizes the Supreme Personality of Godhead more fully than a devotee in the śānta-rati. He considers the Lord to be a worshipable object, and this means that his attachment for the Lord increases. On the dāsya-rati platform a devotee is attached to rendering service to the Lord, and he is detached from material activities. The śānta-rati is neither material nor spiritual, but the dāsya-rati is actually on the spiritual platform. There is no attachment for material things on the spiritual platform. A devotee in dāsya-rati has no attachment for anything but Kṛṣṇa's service.

Sakhya-rati is described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (2.5.30) as follows:

ye syus tulyā mukundasya te sakhāyaḥ satāṁ matāḥ sāmyād viśrambha-rūpaiṣāṁ ratiḥ sakhyam ihocyate

According to the opinion of advanced devotees and learned scholars, a devotee in sakhya-rati feels equal to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is a relationship in friendship. Due to having a friendly relationship with the Lord, not only is one free from material attachment, but one believes in equal dealings with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is called sakhya-rati. The sakhya-rati devotee is so advanced that he treats the Lord on an equal level and even exchanges joking words. Although one is never equal to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the sakhya-rati devotee feels equal to the Lord, and he does not feel guilty because of this. Actually it is offensive to consider oneself equal to the Lord. The Māyāvādīs consider themselves equal to the Lord, but such feelings entail bereavement because they are material. The sakhya-rati, however, is a feeling experienced in the mind by a pure devotee, and he is eternally related with the Supreme Personality of Godhead in that feeling.

Vātsalya-rati is described as follows in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (2.5.33):

guravo ye harer asya te pūjyā iti viśrutāḥ anugrahamayī teṣāṁ ratir vātsalyam ucyate idaṁ lālana-bhavyāśīś cibuka-sparśanādi-kṛt

When a living entity is situated on the platform of vātsalya-rati, he thinks of the Supreme Personality of Godhead in His childhood feature. In this feature, the Lord has to be protected by the devotee, and at this time the devotee takes the position of being worshiped by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The feelings of paternal love are called vātsalya-rati. When the devotee is situated on this platform, he wants to maintain the Lord like a son, and he desires all good fortune for the Lord. He offers blessings to the Lord by touching His feet and head.

Madhura-rati, or attachment in conjugal love, is described as follows:

mitho harer mṛgākṣyāś ca sambhogasyādi-kāraṇam madhurāpara-paryāyā priyatākhyoditā ratiḥ asyāṁ kaṭākṣa-bhrūkṣepapriya-vāṇī-smitādayaḥ

The conjugal relationship is experienced between the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the young damsels of Vrajabhūmi, and due to their conjugal love they continuously exist in eight kinds of remembrances called madhura-rati. This intimate relationship brought about by conjugal love produces movements of the eyebrows, glancing, sweet words and exchanges of joking words.

PURPORT

Sānta-bhakti-rasa is described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (3.1.4, 5, 6)as follows:

vakṣyamāṇair vibhāvādyaiḥ
śamināṁ svādyatāṁ gataḥ sthāyī śānti-ratir dhīraiḥ śānta-bhakti-rasaḥ smṛtaḥ prāyaḥ svasukha-jātīyaṁ sukhaṁ syād atra yoginām kintv ātma-saukhyam aghanaṁ ghanaṁ tv īśam ayaṁ sukham tatrāpīśa-svarūpānubhavasyaivoru-hetutā dāsādi-van-mano-jñatva-līlāder na tathā matā

When śānta-rati (neutral attraction) is continuously existent and mixed with ecstatic emotion, and when the devotee relishes that neutral position, it is called śānta-bhakti-rasa. Sānta-bhakti-rasa devotees generally relish the impersonal feature of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Since their taste of transcendental bliss is incomplete, it is called aghana, or not concentrated. A comparison is made between ordinary milk and concentrated milk. When the same devotee goes beyond the impersonal and tastes the service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead in His original form as sac-cid-ānanda-vigraha, the taste is called concentrated (ghana) transcendental bliss. Sometimes the devotees in the śānta-rasa relish transcendental bliss after meeting the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but this is not comparable to the transcendental bliss relished by the devotees situated in dāsya-rasa, the transcendental mellow in which one renders service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Dāsya-rasa, or dāsya-bhakti-rasa, is described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (3.2.4,5) as follows:

ātmocitair vibhāvādyaiḥ prītir āsvādanīyatām nītā cetasi bhaktānāṁ prīti-bhakti-raso mataḥ anugrāhyasya dāsatvāl lālyatvād apy ayaṁ dvidhā bhidyate sambhrama-prīto gaurava-prīta ity api

When according to the desires of the spirit soul the living entity develops love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, this beginning of love is called dāsya-bhakti-rasa. Dāsya-bhakti-rasa is divided into two categories called sambhrama-dāsya and gaurava-dāsya. In the sambhrama-dāsya, the devotee renders respectful service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but in the more advanced gaurava-dāsya, his service takes the form of giving protection to the Lord.

Sakhya-bhakti-rasa is described as follows in Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (3.3.1):

sthāyibhāvo vibhāvādyaiḥ sakhyam ātmocitair iha nītaś citte satāṁ puṣṭiṁ rasaḥ preyānudīryate

”According to one’s original consciousness, ecstatic emotions are exhibited as continuously existing in eternity. When this stage of Kṛṣṇa consciousness is mature, it is called preyo-rasa or sakhya-bhakti-rasa.”

Vātsalya-bhakti-rasa is described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (3.4.1) as follows:

vibhāvādyais tu vātsalyaṁ sthāyī puṣṭim upāgataḥ eṣa vatsala-nāmātra prokto bhakti-raso budhaiḥ

”When eternally existing love of Godhead transforms into paternal love and is mixed with corresponding emotions, that stage of spiritual existence is described by learned devotees as vātsalya-bhakti-rasa.”

Madhura-bhakti-rasa is described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (3.5.1) as follows:

ātmocitair vibhāvādyaiḥ
puṣṭiṁ nītā satāṁ hṛdi madhurākhyo bhaved bhaktir aso ’sau madhurā ratiḥ

”If in accordance with one’s own natural development in Kṛṣṇa consciousness one’s attraction leans toward conjugal love within the heart, that is called attachment in conjugal love, or madhura-rasa.”

Similarly, hāsya, adbhuta, vīra, karuṇa, raudra, bhaya and bībhatsa-the seven indirect mellows-are explained in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu. The hāsya-bhakti-rasa, laughing devotion, is explained as follows (Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu 4.1.6):

vakṣyamāṇair vibhāvādyaiḥ
puṣṭiṁ hāsa-ratir gatā hāsya-bhakti-raso nāma budhair eṣa nigadyate

”When through devotional service a laughing attachment to Kṛṣṇa is developed, it is called hāsya-bhakti-rasa by learned scholars.”

Similarly, adbhuta-rasa is described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (4.2.1):

ātmocitair vibhāvādyaiḥ
svādyatvaṁ bhakta-cetasi sā vismaya-ratir nītād-bhuto-bhakti-raso bhavet

”When one’s general attachment is fixed in wonder, it is called adbhuta-bhakti-rasa.”

Vīra-bhakti-rasa is described (Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu 4.3.1):

saivotsāha-ratiḥ sthāyī vibhāvādyair nijocitaḥ ānīyamānā svādyatvaṁ vīra-bhakti-raso bhavet yuddha-dāna-dayā-dharmaiś caturdhā-vīra ucyate

”When attachment to Kṛṣṇa mixes with the bellicose tendency, the charitable tendency or the merciful tendency in the heart of the devotee, such devotion is called vīra-bhakti-rasa.”

Karuṇa-bhakti-rasa is described as follows (Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu 4.4.1):

ātmocitair vibhāvādyair nītā puṣṭiṁ satāṁ hṛdi bhavec choka-ratir bhakti-raso hi karuṇābhidhaḥ

”When one’s devotional attitude and attachment for Kṛṣṇa is mixed with lamentation, it is called karuṇa-bhakti-rasa.”

Similarly, raudra-bhakti-rasa is described as follows (Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu 4.5.1):

nītā krodha-ratiḥ puṣṭiṁ vibhāvādyair nijocitaiḥ hṛdi bhakta-janasyāsau raudra-bhakti-raso bhavet

”When devotion is mixed with anger in the heart of the devotee, the taste is called raudra-bhakti-rasa.”

Bhayānaka-bhakti-rasa is described as follows (Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu 4.6.1):

vakṣyamāṇair vibhāvādyaiḥ
puṣṭiṁ bhaya-ratir gatā bhayānakābhidho bhakti-raso dhīrair udīryate

”When devotion is mixed with fear, it is called bhayānaka-bhakti-rasa.”

Bībhatsa-bhakti-rasa is described as follows (Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu 4.7.1):

puṣṭiṁ nija-vibhāvādyair jugupsā-ratir āgatā asau bhakti-raso dhīrair bībhatsākhya itīryate

”When one’s attachment for Kṛṣṇa develops in an abominable way, and the devotee enjoys it, that is called bībhatsa-bhakti-rasa.”

In conclusion, when a pure devotee is situated in any of the five principal mellows (śānta, dāsya, sakhya, vātsalya and madhura), and the mellow is mixed with the seven indirect bhakti-rasas (hāsya, adbhuta, vīra, karuṇa, raudra, bhayānaka and bībhatsa), the indirect mellows become prominent.

TRANSLATION

" 'When Devakī and Vasudeva understood that their two sons Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, who had paid obeisances to them, were the Supreme Personality of Godhead, they became fearful and did not embrace Them.'

PURPORT

This verse quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.44.51) refers to the killing of Kaṁsa by Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma. Vasudeva and Devakī saw their son kill the powerful demon Kaṁsa, and after this they were immediately released from their shackles. Balarāma and Kṛṣṇa then offered respects to Devakī and Vasudeva. Both father and mother wanted to embrace their sons, but they understood that Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma were the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and they therefore hesitated to embrace Them. Their parental love for Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma was therefore hampered and decreased by awe and reverence.

SYNONYMS

tasyāḥ-of her; su-duḥkha-bhaya-due to great distress and fear; śoka-and lamentation; vinaṣṭa-lost; buddheḥ-whose intelligence; hastāt-from the hand; ślathat-being loose; valayataḥ-bangles; vyajanam-the fan; papāta-fell down; dehaḥ-body; ca-also; viklava-paralyzed by fear; dhiyaḥ-whose understanding; sahasā eva-suddenly; muhyan-fainting; rambhā iva-like a banana tree; vāta-vihatā-dashed by a high wind; pravikīrya-scattering; keśān-the hair.

TRANSLATION

" 'While Kṛṣṇa was joking with Rukmiṇī in Dvārakā, she was full of distress, fear and lamentation. She had also lost her intelligence. She dropped her hand bangles and the fan she was using to fan the Lord. Her hair became disarrayed, and she fainted and fell suddenly, appearing like a banana tree knocked down by high winds.'

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.60.24) refers to Kṛṣṇa's speaking to Rukmiṇī in His bedroom. Just to test her sincerity, He began to joke with her, presenting Himself as poor, incapable and unfit to be her lover. Not understanding that He was joking, Rukmiṇī took Him seriously and thought that He wanted to leave her company. This misunderstanding made her very unhappy, and her whole body was affected. Her fan and bangles fell to the floor, and she also fell down like a banana tree knocked down by high winds.

’kevalā’ra śuddha-prema ’aiśvarya’ nā jāne aiśvarya dekhileo nija-sambandha se māne

SYNONYMS

kevalāra-of unmixed attraction for Kṛṣṇa; śuddha-prema-unalloyed love; aiśvarya-opulence; nā jāne-does not know; aiśvarya-opulence; dekhileo-in spite of experiencing; nija-sambandha-one’s own relationship with Kṛṣṇa; se māne-he takes very seriously.

TRANSLATION

”In the stage of kevalā [unalloyed devotion] a devotee does not consider the unlimited opulence of Kṛṣṇa, even though he experiences it. He takes seriously only his own relationship with Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

When a devotee reaches the stage of pure unalloyed devotion, especially in friendship with Kṛṣṇa, he forgets the Lord’s opulences, although he sees them, and he considers himself equal to Kṛṣṇa. There is no question of actually comparing oneself to Kṛṣṇa, but because the devotee is so advanced in Kṛṣṇa consciousness, he is able to behave with Kṛṣṇa as he would with an ordinary man.

SYNONYMS

trayyā-by followers of three Vedas who perform great sacrifices (like the demigod Indra); ca-also; upaniṣadbhiḥ-by the followers of the Upaniṣads, the most exalted portion of Vedic knowledge (as Brahman); ca-also; sāṅkhya-by the philosophers who analytically study the universe (as the puruṣa); yogaiḥ-by mystic yogīs (as the Paramātmā situated everywhere); ca-and; sātvataiḥ-by devotees who follow the method of worship mentioned in the Pañcarātra and other Vedic literature (as Bhagavān); upagīyamāna-being sung; māhātmyam-whose glories; harim-unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead; sā-she (mother Yaśodā); amanyata-considered; ātmajam-as her own son, born of her body.

TRANSLATION

” ’When mother Yaśodā saw all the universes within Kṛṣṇa’s mouth, she was astonished for the time being. The Lord is worshiped like Indra and other demigods by the followers of the three Vedas, who offer Him sacrifices. He is worshiped as impersonal Brahman by saintly persons who understand His greatness through studying the Upaniṣads, as the puruṣa by great philosophers who analytically study the universe, as the all-pervading Supersoul by great yogīs, and as the Supreme Personality of Godhead by devotees. Nevertheless, mother Yaśodā considered the Lord her own son.’

PURPORT

This verse is quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.8.45). Those who are spiritually advanced forget Kṛṣṇa’s opulence by the mercy of yogamāyā. For instance, mother Yaśodā considered Kṛṣṇa an ordinary child.

TRANSLATION

” ’Although Kṛṣṇa is beyond sense perception and is unmanifest to human beings, he takes up the guise of a human being with a material body. Thus mother Yaśodā thought Him to be her son, and she bound Lord Kṛṣṇa with rope to a wooden mortar, as if He were an ordinary child.’

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.9.14) is in reference to Lord Kṛṣṇa’s exhibiting Himself like an ordinary child before mother Yaśodā. He was playing like a naughty boy stealing butter and breaking butter pots. Mother Yaśodā became disturbed and wanted to bind the Lord to a mortar used for pounding spices. In other words, she considered the Supreme Personality of Godhead an ordinary child.

TRANSLATION

” ’When Kṛṣṇa was defeated by Śrīdāmā, He had to carry him on His shoulders. Similarly, Bhadrasena carried Vṛṣabha, and Pralamba carried Balarāma, the son of Rohiṇī.’

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.18.24). When all the cowherd boys were playing in the forest of Vṛndāvana, the demon Pralambāsura appeared to kidnap Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma. The asura appeared disguised in the form of a cowherd boy, but Kṛṣṇa could understand his trick. Kṛṣṇa therefore divided all the cowherd boys into two parties. One party belonged to Balarāma, and the other party belonged to Kṛṣṇa Himself. Ultimately Kṛṣṇa was defeated in this play, and according to the wager, the defeated party had to carry the victorious party on their shoulders. Kṛṣṇa had to carry Śrīdāmā on His shoulders, and Bhadrasena had to carry Vṛṣabha. The demon Pralambāsura had to carry Balarāma, and when Balarāma mounted his shoulders, the demon ran far away. Finally the demon began to expand his body to a gigantic size, and Balarāma understood that he intended to kill Him. Balarāma immediately struck the demon’s head with His strong fist, and the demon fell down dead as if he were a snake whose head had been smashed.

TRANSLATION

” ’ ”My dearmost Kṛṣṇa, You are worshiping Me and giving up the company of all the other gopīs who wanted to enjoy themselves with You.” Thinking like this, Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī considered Herself Kṛṣṇa’s most beloved gopī. She had become proud and had left the rāsa-līlā with Kṛṣṇa. In the deep forest She said, ”My dear Kṛṣṇa, I cannot walk any more. You can take Me wherever You like.” When Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī petitioned Kṛṣṇa in this way, Kṛṣṇa said, ”Just get up upon My shoulders.” As soon as Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī began to do so, He disappeared. Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī then began to grieve over Her request and Kṛṣṇa’s disappearance.’

PURPORT

These three verses are quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.30.36-38).

TRANSLATION

” ’Dear Kṛṣṇa, neglecting the order of our husbands and sons, family, brothers and friends and leaving their company, we gopīs have come to You. You know everything about our desires. We have only come because we are attracted by Your supremely musical flute. However, You are a great cheater. Who else would give up the company of young girls like us in the dead of night?’

PURPORT

This verse, quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.31.16), describes how the gopīs exposed themselves for Kṛṣṇa’s enjoyment in the dead of night. The gopīs approached Kṛṣṇa to enjoy themselves with Him in the rāsa dance. Kṛṣṇa knew this very well, but He was superficially trying to avoid them. He is therefore addressed by the gopīs as kitava, a great cheater, because He first attracted them to come dance with Him, and yet when they actually came, neglecting the orders of their friends and relatives, He tried to avoid them by giving them good instructions. These cunning instructions were too much for the gopīs to tolerate; they therefore had a right to address Kṛṣṇa as kitava, a great cheater. They were all young girls, and they had come to Him to be enjoyed. How could He avoid them? The gopīs therefore expressed great disappointment in this verse. They came voluntarily, but Kṛṣṇa was so cunning that He wanted to avoid their company. The gopīs’ lamentation was certainly very appropriate, and in this way Kṛṣṇa tested their sincerity.

"śamo man-niṣṭhatā buddheḥ" iti śrī-mukha-gāthā

śānta-rase-on the stage of śānta-rasa, or neutrality; svarūpa-buddhye-by self-realization; kṛṣṇa-eka-niṣṭhatā-fully devoted to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa; śamaḥ-equilibrium; mat-to Me; niṣṭhatā-the quality of attachment; buddheḥ-of the mind; iti-thus; śrī-mukha-from the mouth of the Supreme Lord; gāthā-a verse.

TRANSLATION

"When one is fully attached to Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet, one attains the śamatā stage. The word śamatā is derived from the word śama; therefore śānta-rasa, the position of neutrality, means being fully attached to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa. This is the verdict from the mouth of the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. This state is called self-realization.

PURPORT

The word śama is explained by the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the following verse.

TEXT 212

śamo man-niṣṭhatā buddher

SYNONYMS

śamaḥ-equality or neutrality; mat-niṣṭhatā-being fixed in My lotus feet; buddheḥ-of the intelligence; iti-thus; śrī-bhagavat-vacaḥ-words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; tat-niṣṭhā-attachment or attraction for Him; durghaṭā-very difficult to achieve; buddheḥ-of intelligence; etām-thus; śānta-ratim-attachment on the platform of śānta-rasa; vinā-without.

TRANSLATION

"These are the words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead: 'When one's intelligence is fully attached to My lotus feet but one does not render practical service, one has attained the stage called śānta-rati, or śama. Without śānta-rati, attachment to Kṛṣṇa is very difficult to achieve.'

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (3.1.47).

SYNONYMS

śamaḥ-neutrality; mat-niṣṭhatā-attachment for Me; buddheḥ-of intelligence; damaḥ-self-control; indriya-saṁyamaḥ-controlling the activities of the senses; titikṣā-tolerance; duḥkha-of unhappiness; sammarṣaḥ-endurance; jihvā-tongue; upastha-and the urge of the genitals; jayaḥ-conquering; dhṛtiḥ-control.

TRANSLATION

" 'The word śama or śānta-rasa indicates that one is attached to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa. Dama means controlling the senses and not being deviated from the Lord's service. Endurance of unhappiness is titikṣā, and dhṛti means controlling the tongue and the genitals.'

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.19.36). The conditioned soul under the clutches of māyā, the material energy, is very much agitated by the urges of the tongue and the genitals. Control of the urges of the tongue, the belly and the genitals (which are situated in a straight line) is called dhṛti. Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says, tāra madhye jihvā ati, lobhamaya sudurmati. Among the senses, the tongue is the most formidable enemy of the conditioned soul. Urged by the tongue, one commits many sinful activities. Although Kṛṣṇa has given human beings nice food, people still commit sins by killing poor animals for the satisfaction of the tongue. Not being able to control the tongue, the conditioned soul eats more than he needs. Of course, everyone must eat to keep the body fit for the Lord's service, but when one cannot control the senses, he falls victim to the dictations of the tongue and the belly. Naturally, genital agitation follows, and one seeks illicit sex. However, if one is fixed at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, he can control the tongue. Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura further states, kṛṣṇa baḍa dayāmaya, karibāre jihvā jaya, sva-prasāda-anna dilā bhāi: in order to conquer the tongue, Kṛṣṇa has been very merciful and has given us nice food that has been offered to Him. When a person is attached to Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet, he does not eat anything not offered to Kṛṣṇa. Sei annāmṛta khāo, rādhā-kṛṣṇa-guṇa gāo, preme ḍāka caitanya-nitāi. Since a devotee only eats prasāda, he conquers the dictations of the tongue, belly and genitals. One can control the dictates of the senses when situated in the position of śānta-rasa. Then one's advancement in Kṛṣṇa consciousness is assured.

kṛṣṇa vinā tṛṣṇā-tyāga–tāra kārya māni ataeva 'śānta' kṛṣṇa-bhakta eka jāni

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa vinā-without Kṛṣṇa; tṛṣṇā-tyāga-giving up all desires; tāra-of śānta-rasa; kārya-the business; māni-I accept; ataeva-therefore; śānta-the position of equilibrium; kṛṣṇa-bhakta-a devotee of Kṛṣṇa; eka-only; jāni-I know.

TRANSLATION

"Giving up all desires not connected with Kṛṣṇa is the business of one who is in the śānta-rasa. Only a devotee of Kṛṣṇa can be situated on that platform. He is thus called a śānta-rasa-bhakta.

PURPORT

In this position, one is freed from all material enjoyment. When one is not agitated or disturbed, he can immediately realize his relationship with Kṛṣṇa. A śānta-rasa devotee is therefore always fixed in realization. This instruction was given by the Lord Himself to Uddhava. The beginning of pure devotional service is called anyābhilāṣitā-śūnya. When one is situated on the platform of neutrality, he is freed from the material platform and fully situated in spiritual life. The word dama used in verse 213 means indriya-saṁyama-curbing one's senses. The word dama can also mean curbing one's enemies. A king has to take steps to curb the criminal activities of his citizens. Great rājarṣis, devotee kings, used to control undesirable elements in their states, and this also may be called dama. However, dama here refers to the conditioned soul who must control his senses. Real dama means controlling the undesirable activities of the senses.

kṛṣṇa-niṣṭhā, tṛṣṇā-tyāga–śāntera 'dui' guṇe

svarga-the heavenly kingdom; mokṣa-liberation from material bondage; kṛṣṇa-bhakta-a devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa; naraka kari' māne-considers as good as hell; kṛṣṇa-niṣṭhā-being fixed at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa; tṛṣṇa-tyāga-giving up all material desires; śāntera-of one on the neutrality platform; dui guṇe-two transcendental qualities.

TRANSLATION

"When a devotee is situated on the platform of śānta-rasa, he desires neither elevation to the heavenly planets nor liberation. These are the results of karma and jñāna, and the devotee considers them no better than hell. A person situated on the śānta-rasa platform manifests the two transcendental qualities of detachment from all material desire and full attachment to Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 216

SYNONYMS

nārāyaṇa-parāḥ-persons who are attached to the Supreme Personality of Godhead; sarve-all; na-not; kutaścana-from any quarter; bibhyati-are afraid; svarga-in heavenly planets; apavarga-in liberation; narakeṣu-or in hell; api-although; tulya-artha-results as equal; darśinaḥ-who see.

TRANSLATION

" 'A person who is devoted to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Nārāyaṇa, is not afraid of anything. Elevation to the heavenly kingdom, condemnation to hell and liberation from material bondage all appear the same to a devotee.'

PURPORT

This verse is quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (6.17.28). Elevation to the heavenly planets, liberation from material bondage, and condemnation to hell are all equal to the devotee. The devotee's only desire is to be attached to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa and to engage in His transcendental loving service.

SYNONYMS

ei dui-these two; guṇa-transcendental qualities; vyāpe-expand; saba bhakta-jane-in the lives of all devotees; ākāśera-of the sky; śabda-guṇa-the quality of sound; yena-like; bhūta-gaṇe-other material elements.

TRANSLATION

"These two qualities of the śānta stage spread through the lives of all devotees. They are like the quality of sound in the sky. Sound vibration is found in all material elements.

PURPORT

The qualities of śānta-rasa are present in all kinds of devotees, whether they are in the dāsya-rasa, sakhya-rasa, vātsalya-rasa or madhura-rasa. The example of sound is given herein. Sound not only exists in the sky, or ether, but it is also present in air, fire, water and earth. This is a scientific explanation of devotional service. just as sound is present in all material elements, śānta-rasa is present in all devotees, whether they are on the platform of dāsya-rasa, sakhya-rasa, vātsalya-rasa or madhura-rasa.

SYNONYMS

śāntera sva-bhāva-the characteristic of śānta-rasa; kṛṣṇe-in Kṛṣṇa; mamatā-gandha-hīna-not even the smallest quantity of intimacy; param-brahma-impersonal Brahman; paramātmā-the localized situation of the Lord; jñāna-knowledge; pravīṇa-prominence.

TRANSLATION

"It is the nature of śānta-rasa that not even the smallest intimacy exists. Rather, knowledge of impersonal Brahman and localized Paramātmā is prominent.

PURPORT

Because of an impersonal impression of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, a devotee in the śānta-rasa relationship worships the impersonal Brahman or localized aspect of the Absolute Truth (Paramātmā). He does not develop a personal relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Śrī Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 219

SYNONYMS

īśvara-jñāna-knowledge of the supreme controller; sambhrama-gaurava-awe and veneration; pracura-abundant; sevā-service; kari’-performing; kṛṣṇe-unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; sukha-happiness; dena-gives; nirantara-constantly.

TRANSLATION

”On the dāsya-rasa platform, knowledge of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is revealed with awe and veneration. By rendering service unto Lord Kṛṣṇa, the devotee in dāsya-rasa gives constant happiness to the Lord.

TEXT 221

śāntera guṇa dāsye āche, adhika–’sevana’

SYNONYMS

śāntera-of the platform of śānta-rasa; guṇa-the qualities; dāsye-on the platform of servitude; āche-are; adhika-additional; sevana-serving; ataeva-therefore; dāsya-rasera-of the platform of dāsya-rasa; ei dui guṇa-these two qualities (namely śānta and dāsya).

TRANSLATION

”The qualities of śānta-rasa are also present in dāsya-rasa, but service is added. Thus the dāsya-rasa platform contains the qualities of both śānta-rasa and dāsya-rasa.

TEXT 222

śāntera guṇa, dāsyera sevana–sakhye dui haya dāsyera ’sambhrama-gaurava’-sevā, sakhye ’viśvāsa’-maya śāntera guṇa-qualities of śānta-rasa; dāsyera sevana-the service of the dāsya-rasa; sakhye-on the platform of fraternity; dui-two qualities; haya-there are; dāsyera-of the dāsya platform; sambhrama-gaurava-with awe and veneration; sevā-service; sakhye-on the platform of fraternity; viśvāsa-maya-spread with confidence.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”The qualities of śānta-rasa and the service of dāsya-rasa are both present on the platform of sakhya-rasa. On the platform of fraternity, the qualities of dāsya-rasa are mixed with the confidence of fraternity instead of awe and veneration.

TEXT 223

kāndhe caḍe, kāndhe caḍāya, kare krīḍā-raṇa kṛṣṇe seve, kṛṣṇe karāya āpana-sevana!

SYNONYMS

kāndhe-on the shoulders; caḍe-gets up; kāndhe caḍāya-sometimes takes on his own shoulders; kare-performs; krīḍā-raṇa-mock fighting; kṛṣṇe seve-serves Kṛṣṇa; kṛṣṇe-from Kṛṣṇa; karāya-causes; āpana-sevana-his own service.

TRANSLATION

”On the sakhya-rasa platform, the devotee sometimes offers the Lord service and sometimes makes Kṛṣṇa serve him in exchange. In their mock fighting, the cowherd boys would sometimes climb on Kṛṣṇa’s shoulders, and sometimes they would make Kṛṣṇa climb on their shoulders.

TEXT 224

viśrambha-pradhāna sakhya–gaurava-sambhrama-hīna ataeva sakhya-rasera ’tina’ guṇa–cihna

SYNONYMS

viśrambha-pradhāna sakhya-on the platform of fraternity, in which confidence is prominent; gaurava-sambhrama-awe and veneration; hīna-without; ataeva-therefore; sakhya-rasera-of the platform of fraternity; tina guṇa-three qualities, namely śānta, dāsya and sakhya; cihna-the symptom.

TRANSLATION

”Since the platform of fraternity is predominated by confidential service, awe and veneration are absent. Therefore sakhya-rasa is characterized by three qualities.

TEXT 225

’mamatā’ adhika, kṛṣṇe ātma-sama jñāna ataeva sakhya-rasera vaśa bhagavān

SYNONYMS

mamatā-intimacy; adhika-increase; kṛṣṇe-with Kṛṣṇa; ātma-sama jñāna-the notion of equality; ataeva-therefore; sakhya-rasera-by the mellow of fraternity; vaśa-subjected; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

”On the platform of sakhya-rasa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is obliged to the devotees who are intimate with Kṛṣṇa and think themselves equal to Him.

TEXT 226

vātsalye śāntera guṇa, dāsyera sevana sei sei sevanera ihāṅ nāma–’pālana’

SYNONYMS

vātsalye-on the platform of parental love; śāntera guṇa-the qualities of śānta-rasa; dāsyera sevana-the service of dāsya-rasa; sei sei sevanera-the service of śānta-rasa, dāsya-rasa and sakhya-rasa; ihāṅ-on this platform; nāma-named; pālana-maintenance.

TRANSLATION

”On the platform of parental love, the qualities of śānta-rasa, dāsya-rasa and sakhya-rasa are transformed into a form of service called maintenance.

TEXT 227

sakhyera guṇa–’asaṅkoca’, ’agaurava’ sāra mamatādhikye tāḍana-bhartsana-vyavahāra

SYNONYMS

sakhyera guṇa-the quality of fraternity; asaṅkoca-without any formality; agaurava-without any veneration; sāra-the essence; mamatā-adhikye-on account of greater intimacy; tāḍana-of chastisement; bhartsana-of rebuking; vyavahāra-behavior.

TRANSLATION

”The essence of fraternal love is intimacy devoid of the formality and veneration found in the dāsya-rasa. Due to a greater sense of intimacy, the devotee functioning in paternal love chastises and rebukes the Lord in an ordinary way.

TEXT 228

āpanāre ’pālaka’ jñāna, kṛṣṇe ’pālya’-jñāna
’cāri’ guṇe vātsalya rasa–amṛta-samāna

SYNONYMS

āpanāre-unto himself; pālaka jñāna-the notion of a caretaker; kṛṣṇe-in Lord Kṛṣṇa; pālya-as object of protection; jñāna-notion; cāri-four; guṇe-in qualities; vātsalya rasa-the mellow of parental love; amṛta-samāna-like nectar.

TRANSLATION

”On the platform of paternal love, the devotee considers himself the Lord’s maintainer. Thus the Lord is the object of maintenance, like a son, and therefore this mellow is full of the four qualities of śānta-rasa, dāsya-rasa, fraternity and parental love. This is more transcendental nectar.

PURPORT

In his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura gives us a short summary of this complicated description of the different rasas. He states that by becoming firmly fixed in the Lord’s service, one is devoid of all material desires. There are two transcendental qualities on the śānta-rasa platform. In all the material elements, sound vibration is found. Similarly, śānta-rasa is spread over all the other transcendental mellows, which are known as dāsya-rasa, sakhya-rasa, vātsalya-rasa and madhura-rasa. Although there is attachment for Kṛṣṇa in awe and veneration in the śānta-rasa along with two valuable transcendental qualities - attachment for Kṛṣṇa and detachment from material desires-nonetheless the sense of intimacy is lacking. Therefore in the śānta-rasa, attachment for impersonal Brahman and localized Paramātmā is prominent. The sense of intimacy is lacking. By that intimacy one thinks of Kṛṣṇa as one’s only shelter and only friend. In the śānta-rasa one accepts Kṛṣṇa as the impersonal Param Brahma or the localized Paramātmā. This is based on the speculative knowledge of the jñānī. However, when this knowledge is further developed, one is convinced that Paramātmā, the Supreme Lord, is master and that the living entity is His eternal servant. One then attains the platform of dāsya-rasa. In dāsya-rasa the Lord is accepted with awe and veneration. However, although in the śānta-rasa there is no active service, in the dāsya-rasa active service is prominent. Thus in the dāsya-rasa, the qualities of śānta-rasa and service are predominantly visible. Similarly, when this same rasa is developed into fraternity (sakhya-rasa), a friendly intimacy is added. There is no awe or veneration in the sakhya-rasa.The sakhya-rasa is invested with three qualities-śānta, dāsya, and sakhya. Similarly, on the platform of parental love, the qualities of śānta-rasa and dāsya-rasa are fully developed in another form-the sense of maintaining the Lord. Therefore on the platform of parental love there exists a combination of four transcendental qualities-śānta, dāsya, sakhya, and the qualities of paternity, which put the devotee in the position of a maintainer. Thus on the platform of parental love the four qualities of transcendental love are present.

se amṛtānande bhakta saha ḍubena āpane
’kṛṣṇa–bhakta-vaśa’ guṇa kahe aiśvarya-jñāni-gaṇe

SYNONYMS

se-that Lord Kṛṣṇa; amṛta-ānande-in spiritual happiness; bhakta-the devotee; saha-with; ḍubena-plunges; āpane-Himself; kṛṣṇa-Kṛṣṇa; bhakta-vaśa-of being subjugated by the devotee; guṇa-the quality; kahe-say; aiśvarya-jñāni-gaṇe-learned scholars knowing the opulence of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”The exchange of spiritual happiness between Kṛṣṇa and His devotee, in which Kṛṣṇa is controlled by His devotee, is compared to an ocean of nectar into which the devotee and Kṛṣṇa plunge. This is the verdict of learned scholars who appreciate Kṛṣṇa’s opulence.

SYNONYMS

iti-thus; īdṛk-sva-līlābhiḥ-by this Dāmodara in His transcendental pastimes; ānanda-kuṇḍe-in the ocean of transcendental bliss; sva-ghoṣam-His personal associates; nimajjantam-plunging; ākhyāpayantam-declaring; tadīya-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; īśita-jñeṣu-among learned scholars expert in the knowledge of the opulences; bhaktaiḥ-by the devotees; jitatvam-the subjugation; punaḥ-again; prematāḥ-with love; tam-unto Him; śata-āvṛtti-hundreds of times; vande-I offer my respectful obeisances.

TRANSLATION

" 'Again let me offer my respectful obeisances unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead. O my Lord, I offer my obeisances hundreds and thousands of times with all affection because by Your personal pastimes You plunge the gopīs into an ocean of nectar. Appreciating Your opulence, devotees generally declare that You are always subjugated by their feelings.'

PURPORT

This verse is from the Dāmodarāṣṭaka in the Padma Purāṇa. Attachment for Kṛṣṇa in śānta-rasa, rendering service to the Lord in dāsya-rasa, rendering relaxed service in fraternity, and serving in parental love with feelings of maintenance all combine on the platform of conjugal love when the devotee wants to serve the Lord by offering Him his personal body. Thus the qualities of the other rasas combine to form the nectar of conjugal love. On this platform, all the different feelings of a devotee are amalgamated.

TEXT 231

madhura-rase–kṛṣṇa-niṣṭhā, sevā atiśaya sakhyera asaṅkoca, lālana-mamatādhikya haya

SYNONYMS

madhura-rase-on the platform of conjugal love; kṛṣṇa-niṣṭhā-attachment for Kṛṣṇa; sevā atiśaya-an improved rendering service; sakhyera-of the platform of fraternity; asaṅkoca-relaxation; lālana-maintenance; mamatā-adhikya-increase of intimacy; haya-there is.

TRANSLATION

"On the platform of conjugal love, attachment for Kṛṣṇa, rendering service unto Him, the relaxed feelings of fraternity and the feelings of maintenance all increase in intimacy.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Nineteenth Chapter, describing the Lord's instructions to Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī at Prayāga in the science of devotional service.

18.5.20 Chapter 20

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Instructs Sanātana Gosvāmī in the Science of the Absolute Truth

The following summary study of this chapter is given by Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. When Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī was imprisoned by Nawab Hussain Shah, he received news from Rūpa Gosvāmī that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu had gone to Mathurā. Sanātana Gosvāmī thereafter satisfied the superintendent of the jail by sweet solicitations and bribery. After giving the jailer seven thousand gold coins, Sanātana Gosvāmī was released. He then crossed the Ganges and fled. One of his servants, Īśāna, followed him, carrying eight gold coins. Sanātana Gosvāmī and his servant then spent the night in a small hotel on the way to Benares. The hotel owner knew that Sanātana Gosvāmī and his servant had eight gold coins, and he decided to kill them and take the money. Making plans in this way, the hotel owner received them as honorable guests. Sanātana Gosvāmī, however, asked his servant how much money he had, and, taking seven of the gold coins, Sanātana offered them to the hotel owner. Thus the owner helped them reach the hilly tract toward Vārāṇasī. On the way, Sanātana Gosvāmī met his brother-in-law, Śrīkānta, at Hājipura, and Śrīkānta helped him after he had heard about all Sanātana's troubles. Thus Sanātana Gosvāmī finally arrived at Vārāṇasī and stood before the door of Candraśekhara. Caitanya Mahāprabhu called him in and ordered him to change his dress so that he could look like a gentleman. For his garment, he used an old cloth of Tapana Miśra's. Later, he exchanged his valuable blanket for a torn quilt. At this time Caitanya Mahāprabhu was very pleased with him, and thus Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī received knowledge of the Absolute Truth from the Lord Himself.

First they discussed the constitutional position of the living entities, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu explained to Sanātana Gosvāmī how the living entity is one of Lord Kṛṣṇa's energies. After this, the Lord explained the way of devotional service. While discussing the Absolute Truth, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Lord analyzed Brahman, Paramātmā and Bhagavān, as well as the expansions of the Lord called svayaṁ-rūpa, tad-ekātma and āveśa, which are divided into various branches known as vaibhava and prābhava. Thus the Lord described the many forms of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He also described the incarnations of God within the material world, incarnations such as the puruṣa-avatāras, manvantara-avatāras, guṇa-avatāras and saktyāveśa-avatāras. The Lord also discussed the divisions of Kṛṣṇa's different ages, such as bālya and paugaṇḍa, and the different pastimes of the different ages. He explained how Kṛṣṇa attained His permanent form when He reached youth. In this way Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu explained and described everything to Sanātana Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

While Sanātana Gosvāmī was imprisoned in Bengal, a letter arrived from Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura informs us that this letter from Rūpa Gosvāmī to Sanātana Gosvāmī is mentioned by the annotator of Udbhaṭa-candrikā. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī wrote a note to Sanātana Gosvāmī from Bāklā. This note indicated that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was coming to Mathurā, and it stated:

yadu-pateḥ kva gatā mathurā-purī raghu-pateḥ kva gatottara-kośalā iti vicintya kurusva manaḥ sthiraṁ na sad idaṁ jagad ity avadhāraya

"Where has the Mathurā Purī of Yadupati gone? Where has the northern Kośalā of Raghupati gone? By reflection, make the mind steady, thinking, 'This universe is not eternal.' " eka bandī-one imprisoned person; chāḍe-one releases; yadi-if; nija-dharma-one's own religion; dekhiyā-consulting; saṁsāra ha-ite-from material bondage; tāre-him; mukta karena-releases; gosāñā-the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

"If one releases a conditioned soul or imprisoned person according to religious principles, he himself is also released from material bondage by the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

PURPORT

It appears from this statement that Sanātana Gosvāmī, who was formerly a minister of the Nawab, was trying to cheat the Mohammedan superintendent. A jail superintendent had only an ordinary education, or practically no education, and he was certainly not supposed to be very advanced in spiritual knowledge. However, just to satisfy him, Sanātana Gosvāmī praised him as a very learned scholar of the scriptures. The jailkeeper could not deny that he was a learned scholar because when one is elevated to an exalted position, one thinks oneself fit for that position. Sanātana Gosvāmī was correctly explaining the effects of spiritual activity, and the jailkeeper connected his statement with his release from jail. There are innumerable conditioned souls rotting in the material world, imprisoned by māyā under the spell of sense gratification. The living entity is so entranced by the spell of māyā that in conditioned life even a pig feels satisfied.

There are two kinds of covering powers exhibited by māyā. One is called prakṣepātmikā, and the other is called āvaraṇātmikā. When one is determined to get out of material bondage, the prakṣepātmikā-śakti, the spell of diversion, impels one to remain in conditioned life fully satisfied by sense gratification. Due to the other power (āvaraṇātmikā), a conditioned soul feels satisfied even if he is rotting in the body of a pig or a worm in stool. To release a conditioned soul from material bondage is very difficult because the spell of māyā is so strong. Even when the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself descends to deliver conditioned souls, asking them to surrender unto Him, the conditioned souls do not agree to the Lord's proposals. Therefore Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī said, "Somehow or other, if one helps another gain release from the bondage of māyā, he is certainly recognized immediately by the Supreme Personality of Godhead." As stated in Bhagavad-gītā (18.69):

na ca tasmān manuṣyeṣu kaścin me priya-kṛttamaḥ bhavitā na ca me tasmād anyaḥ priyataro bhuvi

The greatest service one can render to the Lord is to try to infuse devotional service into the heart of the conditioned soul so that the conditioned soul may be released from conditional life. Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura has said that a Vaiṣṇava is recognized by his preaching work-that is, by convincing the conditioned soul about his eternal position, which is explained here as nija-dharma. It is the living entity's eternal position to serve the Lord; therefore to help one get release from material bondage is to awaken one to the dormant understanding that he is the eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa. jīvera 'svarūpa' haya-kṛṣṇera 'nitya-dāsa'. This will be further explained by the Lord Himself to Sanātana Gosvāmī.

bhavad-vidhā bhāgavatās tīrtha-bhūtāḥ svayaṁ prabho tīrthī-kurvanti tīrthāni svāntaḥ-sthena gadā-bhṛtā

SYNONYMS

bhavat-vidhāḥ-like you; bhāgavatāḥ-advanced devotees; tīrtha-bhūtāḥ-personified holy places of pilgrimage; svayam-personally; prabho-my lord; tīrthī-kurvanti-make into holy places; tīrthāni-all the holy places of pilgrimage; sva-antaḥ-sthena-situated within their hearts; gadā-bhṛtā-by Lord Viṣṇu, who carries a club.

TRANSLATION

" 'Saints of your caliber are themselves places of pilgrimage. Because of their purity, they are constant companions of the Lord, and therefore they can purify even the places of pilgrimage.'

PURPORT

This verse was spoken by Mahārāja Yudhiṣṭhira to Vidura in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.13.10). Vidura was returning home after visiting sacred places of pilgrimage, and Mahārāja Yudhiṣṭhira was receiving his saintly uncle. In essence, Mahārāja Yudhiṣṭhira was saying, "My dear Lord Vidura, you yourself are a holy place because you are an advanced devotee. People like you always carry Lord Viṣṇu in their hearts. You can revitalize all holy places after they have been polluted by the pilgrimages of sinners."

A sinful person goes to a holy place of pilgrimage to be purified. In a holy place, there are many saintly people and temples of Lord Viṣṇu; however, the holy place becomes infected with the sins of many visitors. When an advanced devotee goes to a holy place, he counteracts all the sins of the pilgrims. Therefore Mahārāja Yudhiṣṭhira addressed Vidura in this way.

Since an advanced devotee carries Lord Viṣṇu within his heart, he is a moving temple and a moving Viṣṇu. An advanced devotee does not need to go to holy places, for wherever he stays is a holy place. In this connection, Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura states, tīrtha-yātrā pariśrama, kevala manera bhrama: visiting holy places is simply another type of bewilderment. Since an advanced devotee does not need to go to a holy place, why does he go? The answer is that he goes simply to purify the place.

SYNONYMS

na-not; me-My; abhaktaḥ-devoid of pure devotional service; catuḥ-vedī-a scholar in the four Vedas; mat-bhaktaḥ-My devotee; śva-pacaḥ-even from a family of dog-eaters; priyaḥ-very dear; tasmai-to him (a pure devotee, even though born in a very low family); deyam-should be given; tataḥ-from him; grāhyam-should be accepted (remnants of food); saḥ-that person; ca-also; pūjyaḥ-worshipable; yathā-as much as; hi-certainly; aham-I.

TRANSLATION

" 'Even though a person is a very learned scholar of the Sanskrit Vedic literatures, he is not accepted as My devotee unless he is pure in devotional service. However, even though a person is born in a family of dog-eaters, he is very dear to Me if he is a pure devotee who has no motive to enjoy fruitive activity or mental speculation. Indeed, all respects should be given to him, and whatever he offers should be accepted. Such devotees are as worshipable as I am.'

SYNONYMS

viprāt-than a brāhmaṇa; dvi-ṣaṭ-guṇa-yutāt-who is qualified with twelve brahminical qualifications; aravinda-nābha-of Lord Viṣṇu, who has a lotuslike navel; pāda-aravinda-unto the lotus feet; vimukhāt-than a person bereft of devotion; śva-pacam-a caṇḍāla, or a person accustomed to eating dogs; variṣṭham-more glorified; manye-I think; tat-arpita-dedicated unto Him; manaḥ-mind; vacana-words; īhita-activities; artha-wealth; prāṇam-life; punāti-purifies; saḥ-he; kulam-his family; na tu-but not; bhūri-mānaḥ-a brāhmaṇa proud of possessing such qualities.

TRANSLATION

" 'One may be born in a brāhmaṇa family and have all twelve brahminical qualities, but if he is not devoted to the lotus feet of Lord Kṛṣṇa, who has a navel shaped like a lotus, he is not as good as a caṇḍāla who has dedicated his mind, words, activities, wealth and life to the service of the Lord. Simply to take birth in a brāhmaṇa family or to have brahminical qualities is not sufficient. One must become a pure devotee of the Lord. If a śva-paca or caṇḍāla is a devotee, he delivers not only himself but his whole family, whereas a brāhmaṇa who is not a devotee but simply has brahminical qualifications cannot even purify himself, not to speak of his family.' "

PURPORT

This verse is spoken by Prahlāda Mahārāja in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.9.10). A brāhmaṇa is supposed to be qualified with twelve qualities. As stated in the Mahābhārata:

dharmaś ca satyaṁ ca damas tapaś ca amātsaryaṁ hrīs titikṣānasūyā yajñaś ca dānaṁ ca dhṛtiḥ śrutaṁ ca vratāni vai dvādaśa brāhmaṇasya

"A brāhmaṇa must be perfectly religious. He must be truthful, and he must be able to control his senses. He must execute severe austerities, and he must be detached, humble and tolerant. He must not envy anyone, and he must be expert in performing sacrifices and giving whatever he has in charity. He must be fixed in devotional service and expert in the knowledge of the Vedas. These are the twelve qualifications for a brāhmaṇa."

Bhagavad-gītā describes the brahminical qualities in this way:

śamo damas tapaḥ śaucam kṣāntir ārjavam eva ca
jñānaṁ vijñānam āstikyaṁ
brahma-karma svabhāva-jam

"Peacefulness, self-control, austerity, purity, tolerance, honesty, wisdom, knowledge, and religiousness-these are the qualities by which the brāhmaṇas work." (Bg. 18.42)

In the Muktāphala-ṭīkā, it is said:

śamo damas tapaḥ śaucaṁ
kṣānty-ārjava-virakta yaḥ jñāna-vijñāna-santoṣāḥ satyāstikye dviṣaḍ guṇāḥ

"Mental equilibrium, sense control, austerity, cleanliness, tolerance, simplicity, detachment, theoretical and practical knowledge, satisfaction, truthfulness and firm faith in the Vedas are the twelve qualities of a brāhmaṇa."

TEXT 60

SYNONYMS

tomā dekhi-by seeing you; tomā sparśi-by touching you; gāi tomāra guṇa-praising your transcendental qualities; sarva-indriya-phala-the fulfillment of the activities of all the senses; ei-this; śāstra-nirūpaṇa-the verdict of the revealed scriptures.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued, "By seeing you, by touching you and by glorifying your transcendental qualities, one can perfect the purpose of all sense activity. This is the verdict of the revealed scriptures.

PURPORT

This is confirmed in the following verse from the Hari-bhakti-sudhodaya (13.2).

TEXT 61

akṣṇoḥ phalaṁ tvādṛśa-darśanaṁ hi tanoḥ phalaṁ tvādṛśa-gātra-saṅgaḥ jihvā-phalaṁ tvādṛśa-kīrtanaṁ hi

SYNONYMS

akṣṇoḥ-of the eyes; phalam-the perfect result of the action; tvā-dṛśa-a person like you; darśanam-to see; hi-certainly; tanoḥ-of the body; phalam-the perfection of activities; tvā-dṛśa-of a person like you; gātra-saṅgaḥ-touching the body; jihvā-phalam-the perfection of the tongue; tvā-dṛśa-a person like you; kīrtanam-glorifying; hi-certainly; su-durlabhāḥ-very rare; bhāgavatāḥ-pure devotees of the Lord; hi-certainly; loke-in this world.

TRANSLATION

" 'My dear Vaiṣṇava, seeing a person like you is the perfection of one's eyesight. Touching your lotus feet is the perfection of the sense of touch. Glorifying your good qualities is the tongue's real activity, for in the material world it is very difficult to find a pure devotee of the Lord.' "

SYNONYMS

mahā-raurava haite-from the deepest hellish condition of life; tomā-you; karilā uddhāra-has delivered; kṛpāra samudra-the ocean of mercy; kṛṣṇa-Kṛṣṇa; gambhīra-very grave; apāra-unlimitedly.

TRANSLATION

"My dear Sanātana, Kṛṣṇa has saved you from Mahāraurava, life's deepest hell. He is an ocean of mercy, and His activities are very grave."

PURPORT

As stated in Bhagavad-gītā, īśvaraḥ sarva-bhūtānāṁ hṛd-deśe 'rjuna tiṣṭhati. Staying within everyone's heart, Lord Kṛṣṇa works very gravely. No one can understand how He is working, but as soon as the Lord understands the sincere activity of a person in devotional service, He helps him in such a way that the devotee cannot understand how things are happening. If the devotee is determined to serve the Lord, the Lord is always prepared to help him (dadāmi buddhi-yogaṁ taṁ yena mām upayānti te). Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is telling Sanātana Gosvāmī how merciful the Lord is. Sanātana Gosvāmī was a minister in the service of Nawab Hussain Shah. He was always mixing with people materially inclined, particularly with Mohammedans, meat-eaters. Although he was in intimate touch with them, by Kṛṣṇa's mercy he came to find such association distasteful. Therefore he left them. As stated by Śrīnivāsa Ācārya: tyaktvā tūrṇam aśeṣa-man-dala-pati-śreṇīṁ sadā tuccha-vat. Kṛṣṇa enlightened Sanātana Gosvāmī in such a way that he was able to give up his exalted post as minister. Thinking his material position insignificant, Sanātana was prepared to become a mendicant. Appreciating the activities of Sanātana Gosvāmī, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu praised his action and thanked Kṛṣṇa for His mercy upon him.

TEXT 64

sanātana kahe,–'kṛṣṇa āmi nāhi jāni

TRANSLATION

After this, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu called Candraśekhara and asked him to take Sanātana Gosvāmī with him. He also asked him to take away Sanātana's present dress.

TEXT 70

bhadra karāñā tāṅre gaṅgā-snāna karāila śekhara āniyā tāṅre nūtana vastra dila

SYNONYMS

bhadra karāñā-making gentle; tāṅre-him; gaṅgā-snāna-bathing in the Ganges; karāila-caused to do; śekhara-Candraśekhara; āniyā-bringing; tāṅre-to him; nūtana-new; vastra-clothing; dila-delivered.

TRANSLATION

Candraśekhara then made Sanātana Gosvāmī look like a gentleman. He took him to bathe in the Ganges, and afterwards he brought him a new set of clothes.

PURPORT

The words bhadra karāñā are significant in this verse. Due to his long hair, moustache and beard, Sanātana Gosvāmī looked like a daraveśa, or hippie. Since Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not like Sanātana Gosvāmī's hippie features, he immediately asked Candraśekhara to get him shaved clean. If anyone with long hair or a beard wants to join this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement and live with us, he must similarly shave himself clean. The followers of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu consider long hair objectionable. Sanātana Gosvāmī was saved from a hellish condition (Mahāraurava) by the grace of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Mahāraurava is a hell wherein animal killers are placed. In this regard, refer to Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (5.26.10-12).

SYNONYMS

sanātana kahe-Sanātana replied; āmi-I; mādhukarī kariba-shall practice acceptance of food by mādhukarī means; brāhmaṇera ghare-in the house of a brāhmaṇa; kene-why; ekatra-in one place; bhikṣā laba-I should accept lunch.

TRANSLATION

Sanātana replied,”I shall practice the process of mādhukarī. Why should I accept full meals in the house of a brāhmaṇa?”

PURPORT

The word mādhukarī comes from the word madhukara, which refers to bees collecting honey from flower to flower. A mādhukarī is a saintly person or a mendicant who does not accept a full meal at one house but begs from door to door, taking a little food from each householder’s place. In this way he does not overeat or give householders unnecessary trouble. A person in the renounced order may beg but not cook. His begging should not be a burden for the householders. The mādhukarī process is strictly to be followed by a bābājī, that is, one who has attained the paramahaṁsa stage. This practice is still current in Vṛndāvana, and there are many places where alms are offered. Unfortunately, there are many beggars who have come to Vṛndāvana to accept alms but not follow the principles of Sanātana Gosvāmī. People try to imitate him and lead an idle life by practicing mādhukarī. It is almost impossible to strictly follow Sanātana Gosvāmī or Rūpa Gosvāmī. It is better to accept food offered to Kṛṣṇa in the temple than to try to imitate Sanātana Gosvāmī and Rūpa Gosvāmī.

yuktāhāra-vihārasya

”He who is temperate in his habits of eating, sleeping, working and recreation can mitigate all material pains by practicing the yoga system.” (Bg. 6.17)

The ideal sannyāsī strictly follows the ways practiced by the Gosvāmīs.

TEXT 82

sanātanera vairāgye prabhura ānanda apāra bhoṭa-kambala pāne prabhu cāhe bāre bāra sanātanera-of Sanātana Gosvāmī; vairāgye-by the renunciation; prabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ānanda-happiness; apāra-unlimited; bhoṭa-kambala-the woolen blanket; pāne-towards; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; cāhe-looks; bāre bāra-repeatedly.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu felt unlimited happiness to observe Sanātana Gosvāmī’s strict following of the principles of sannyāsa. However, He repeatedly glanced at the woolen blanket Sanātana Gosvāmī was wearing.

TEXT 83

sanātana jānila ei prabhure nā bhāya bhoṭa tyāga karibāre cintilā upāya sanātana jānila-Sanātana Gosvāmī could understand; ei-this; prabhure-by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nā bhāya-is not approved; bhoṭa-the woolen blanket; tyāga-giving up; karibāre-to do; cintilā-considered; upāya-a means.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Because Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was repeatedly glancing at this valuable woolen blanket, Sanātana Gosvāmī could understand that the Lord did not approve of it. He then began to consider a way to give it up.

TEXT 84

eta cinti’ gelā gaṅgāya madhyāhna karite eka gauḍiyā kānthā dhuñā diyāche śukāite eta cinti’-thinking this; gelā-went; gaṅgāya-to the bank of the Ganges; madhyāhna-bathing at noon; karite-to do; eka-one; gauḍiyā-Bengali Vaiṣṇava; kānthā-quilt; dhuñā-washing; diyāche-spread out; śukāite-to dry.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Thinking in this way, Sanātana went to the bank of the Ganges to bathe. While there, he saw that a mendicant from Bengal had washed his quilt and had spread it out to dry.

TEXT 85

tāre kahe,–"ore bhāi, kara upakāre

SYNONYMS

tāre kahe-he said to him; ore bhāi-O my brother; kara upakāre-kindly do a favor; ei bhoṭa-this woolen blanket; lañā-taking; ei-this; kāṅthā-quilt; deha'-give; more-to me.

TRANSLATION

Sanātana Gosvāmī then told the Bengali mendicant, "My dear brother, please do me a favor. Trade me your quilt for this woolen blanket."

TEXT 86

sei kahe,–"rahasya kara prāmāṇika hañā?
bahu-mūlya bhoṭa dibā kena kāṅthā lañā?"

SYNONYMS

sei kahe-he said; rahasya-joking; kara-you do; prāmāṇika hañā-although being a man of authority; bahu-mūlya-very valuable; bhoṭa-woolen blanket; dibā-you would give; kena-why; kāṅthā lañā-taking this quilt.

TRANSLATION

The mendicant replied, "Sir, you are a respectable gentleman. Why are you joking with me? Why would you trade your valuable blanket for my torn quilt?"

TEXT 87

teṅho kahe,–"rahasya nahe, kahi satya-vāṇī bhoṭa laha, tumi deha' more kāṅthā-khāni"

SYNONYMS

teṅho kahe-he said; rahasya nahe-there is no joking; kahi satya-vāṇī-I am speaking the truth; bhoṭa laha-take this blanket; tumi-you; deha'-give; more-to me; kāṅthā-khāni-the quilt.

TRANSLATION

Sanātana said, "I am not joking; I am speaking the truth. Kindly take this blanket in exchange for your torn quilt."

TEXT 88

eta bali' kāṅthā la-ila, bhoṭa tāṅre diyā gosāñira ṭhāṅi āilā kāṅthā gale diyā eta bali'-saying this; kāṅthā la-ila-he took the quilt; bhoṭa-the blanket; tāṅre-unto him; diyā-giving; gosāñira ṭhāṅi-to Caitanya Mahāprabhu; āilā-returned; kāṅthā-quilt; gale-onto the shoulder; diyā-keeping.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Saying this, Sanātana Gosvāmī exchanged the blanket for the quilt. He then returned to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu with the quilt on his shoulder.

TEXT 89

prabhu kahe,–'tomāra bhoṭa-kambala kothā gela?' prabhu-pade saba kathā gosāñi kahila

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; tomāra-your; bhoṭa-kambala-woolen blanket; kothā gela-where did it go; prabhu-pade-unto the lotus feet of Lord Caitanya; saba-all; kathā-narration; gosāñi-Sanātana Gosvāmī; kahila-said.

TRANSLATION

When Sanātana Gosvāmī returned, the Lord asked, "Where is your woolen blanket?" Sanātana Gosvāmī then narrated the whole story to the Lord.

TEXTS 90-91

prabhu kahe,–"ihā āmi kariyāchi vicāra viṣaya-roga khaṇḍāila kṛṣṇa ye tomāra se kene rākhibe tomāra śeṣa viṣaya-bhoga?
roga khaṇḍi' sad-vaidya nā rākhe śeṣa roga prabhu kahe-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; ihā-this; āmi-I; kariyāchi vicāra-considered deliberately; viṣaya-roga-the disease of material attraction; khaṇḍāila-has now nullified; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; ye-since; tomāra-your; se-Lord Kṛṣṇa; kene-why; rākhibe-should allow you to keep; tomāra-your; śeṣa-last; viṣaya-bhoga-attraction for material things; roga khaṇḍi'-vanquishing the disease; sat-vaidya-a good physician; nā rākhe-does not keep; śeṣa-the last part; roga-disease.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then said, "I have already deliberately considered this matter. Since Lord Kṛṣṇa is very merciful, He has nullified your attachment for material things. Why should Kṛṣṇa allow you to maintain a last bit of material attachment? After vanquishing a disease, a good physician does not allow any of the disease to remain.

TEXT 92

tina mudrāra bhoṭa gāya, mādhukarī grāsa dharma-hāni haya, loka kare upahāsa"

SYNONYMS

tina mudrāra bhoṭa-a woolen blanket costing three gold coins; gāya-on the body; mādhukarī grāsa-and practicing the mādhukarī system; dharma-hāni haya-that is a religious discrepancy; loka kare upahāsa-people will joke.

TRANSLATION

”It is contradictory to practice mādhukarī and at the same time wear a valuable blanket. One loses his spiritual strength by doing this, and one will also become an object for jokes.”

TEXT 93

gosāñi kahe,–’ye khaṇḍila kuviṣaya-bhoga tāṅra icchāya gela mora śeṣa viṣaya-roga”

SYNONYMS

gosāñi kahe-Sanātana Gosvāmī said; ye khaṇḍila-the person who has vanquished; ku-viṣaya-bhoga-enjoyment of sinful material life; tāṅra icchāya-by His desire; gela-has gone; mora-my; śeṣa-last bit; viṣaya-roga-material disease.

TRANSLATION

Sanātana Gosvāmī replied, ”The Supreme Personality of Godhead has saved me from the sinful life of material existence. By His desire, my last piece of material attraction is now gone.”

TEXT 94

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-svarūpa-of the real identity of Śrī Kṛṣṇa; mādhurya-of conjugal love; aiśvarya-of opulence; bhakti-of devotional service; rasa-of transcendental mellows; āśrayam-the shelter; tattvam-the truth; sanātanāya-unto Śrī Sanātana; īśaḥ-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Supreme Lord; kṛpayā-by His causeless mercy; upadideśa-instructed; saḥ-He.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, personally told Sanātana Gosvāmī about Lord Kṛṣṇa’s real identity. He also told him about the Lord’s conjugal love, His personal opulence and the mellows of devotional service. All these truths were explained to Sanātana Gosvāmī by the Lord Himself out of His causeless mercy.

TEXT 98

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; sanātana-Sanātana Gosvāmī; prabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; caraṇe-the lotus feet; dhariyā-catching; dainya-humility; vinati-bowing; kare-does; dante-in the teeth; tṛṇa-a straw; lañā-taking.

TRANSLATION

Putting a straw in his mouth and bowing down, Sanātana Gosvāmī clasped the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and humbly spoke as follows.

TEXT 99

”nīca jāti, nīca-saṅgī, patita adhama kuviṣaya-kūpe paḍi’ goṅāinu janama!

SYNONYMS

nīca jāti-born of a low family; nīca-saṅgī-associated with low men; patita-fallen; adhama-the lowest; ku-viṣaya-kūpe-in a well of material enjoyment; paḍi'-having fallen down; goṅāinu-I have passed; janama-my life.

TRANSLATION

Sanātana Gosvāmī said, "I was born in a low family, and my associates are all low-class men. I myself am fallen and am the lowest of men. Indeed, I have passed my whole life fallen in the well of sinful materialism.

PURPORT

Actually Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī belonged to a brāhmaṇa family because he belonged to the Sārasvata division of the brāhmaṇas and was well cultured and well educated. Somehow or other he accepted a ministership in the Muslim government; therefore he had to associate with meat-eaters, drunkards and gross materialists. Sanātana Gosvāmī considered himself fallen, for in the association of such men, he also fell victim to material enjoyment. Having passed his life in that way, he considered that he had wasted his valuable time. This statement about how one can become fallen in this material world is made by the greatest authority in the Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇava-sampradāya. Actually the whole world is presently fallen into material existence. Everyone is a meat-eater, drunkard, woman hunter, gambler and whatnot. People are enjoying material life by committing the four basic sins. Although they are fallen, if they simply submit themselves at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, they will be saved from sinful reactions.

TEXT 100

āpanāra hitāhita kichui nā jāni!
grāmya-vyavahāre paṇḍita, tāi satya māni āpanāra-of my personal self; hita-welfare; ahita-inauspiciousness; kichui-anything; nā jāni-I do not know; grāmya-vyavahāre-in ordinary dealings; paṇḍita-a learned man; tāi satya māni-I accept that as truth.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"I do not know what is beneficial for me and what is detrimental. Nonetheless, in ordinary dealings people consider me a learned scholar, and I am also thinking of myself as such.

TEXT 101

SYNONYMS

kṛpā kari'-by Your causeless mercy; yadi-if; more-unto me; kariyācha-You have done; uddhāra-deliverance; āpana-kṛpāte-by Your own mercy; kaha-please speak; kartavya āmāra-my duty.

TRANSLATION

"Out of Your causeless mercy, You have delivered me from the materialistic path. Now, by the same causeless mercy, please tell me what my duty is.

TEXT 102

'ke āmi', 'kene āmāya jāre tāpa-traya' ihā nāhi jāni–'kemane hita haya'

SYNONYMS

ke āmi-who am I; kene-why; āmāya-unto me; jāre-give trouble; tāpa-traya-the three kinds of miserable conditions; ihā-this; nāhi jāni-I do not know; kemane-how; hita-my welfare; haya-there is.

TRANSLATION

"Who am I? Why do the threefold miseries always give me trouble? If I do not know this, how can I be benefited?

PURPORT

The threefold material miseries are miseries arising from the body and the mind, miseries arising from dealings with other living entities, and miseries arising from natural disturbances. Sometimes we suffer bodily when we are attacked by a fever, and sometimes we suffer mentally when a close relative dies. Other living entities also cause us misery. There are living entities born of the human embryo, of eggs, perspiration and vegetation. Miserable conditions brought about by natural catastrophes are controlled by the higher demigods. There may be severe cold or thunderbolts, or a person may be haunted by ghosts. These threefold miseries are always before us, and they entrap us in a dangerous situation. Padaṁ padaṁ yad vipadām. There is danger in every step of life.

TEXT 103

'sādhya'-'sādhana'-tattva puchite nā jāni

SYNONYMS

sādhya-of the goal of spiritual life; sādhana-of the process of obtaining that goal; tattva-truth; puchite-to inquire; nā jāni-I do not know; kṛpā kari'-by Your causeless mercy; saba tattva-all such truths; kaha ta' āpani-please personally explain to me.

TRANSLATION

"Actually I do not know how to inquire about the goal of life and the process for obtaining it. Being merciful upon me, please explain all these truths."

TEXT 104

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-śakti-the energy of Lord Kṛṣṇa; dhara-process; tumi-you; jāna-know; tattva-bhāva-the factual position; jāni'-although knowing all these things; dārḍhya lāgi'-for the sake of strictness; puche-he inquires; sādhura-of the saintly persons; sva-bhāva-the nature.

TRANSLATION

”Since you possess Lord Kṛṣṇa's potency, you certainly know these things. However, it is the nature of a sādhu to inquire. Although he knows these things, the sādhu inquires for the sake of strictness.

TEXT 106

SYNONYMS

acirāt-very soon; eva-certainly; sarva-arthaḥ-the goal of life; sidhyati-becomes fulfilled; eṣām-of these persons; abhīpsitaḥ-desired; sat-dharmasya-of the path of progressive devotional service; avabodhāya-for understanding; yeṣām-those whose; nirbandhinī-unflinching; matiḥ-intelligence.

TRANSLATION

” 'Those who are anxious to awaken their spiritual consciousness, who have unflinching intelligence and who are not deviated, certainly attain the desired goal.'

PURPORT

This verse, quoted from the Nāradīya Purāṇa, is found in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.103).

SYNONYMS

jīvera-of the living entity; sva-rūpa-the constitutional position; haya-is; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; nitya-dāsa-eternal servant; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; taṭasthā-marginal; śakti-potency; bheda-abheda-one and different; prakāśa-manifestation; sūrya-aṁśa-part and parcel of the sun; kiraṇa-a ray of sunshine; yaiche-as; agni-jvālā-ca ya-molecular particle of fire; svābhāvika-naturally; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; tina-prakāra-three varieties; śakti-energies; haya-there are.

TRANSLATION

”It is the living entity's constitutional position to be an eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa because he is the marginal energy of Kṛṣṇa and a manifestation simultaneously one and different from the Lord, like a molecular particle of sunshine or fire. Kṛṣṇa has three varieties of energy.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura paraphrases these verses as follows: Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī asked Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, ”Who am I?” In answer, the Lord replied, ”You are a pure living entity. You are neither the material body nor the subtle body composed of mind and intelligence. Actually you are a spirit soul, eternal part and parcel of the Supreme Soul, Kṛṣṇa. Therefore you are His eternal servant. You belong to Kṛṣṇa's marginal potency. There are two worlds-the spiritual world and the material world-and you are situated between the material and spiritual potencies. You have a relationship with both the material and spiritual worlds; therefore you are called the marginal potency. You are related with Kṛṣṇa as one and simultaneously different. Because you are spirit soul, you are one in quality with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but because you are a very minute particle of spirit soul, you are different from the Supreme Soul. Therefore your position is simultaneously one with and different from the Supreme Soul. The examples given are those of the sun itself and the small particles of sunshine and of a blazing fire and the small particles of fire.” Another explanation of these verses can be found in Ādi-līlā (Chapter Two, verse 96).

TRANSLATION

" 'O King, the kṣetra-jña-śakti is the living entity. Although he has the facility to live in either the material or spiritual world, he suffers the threefold miseries of material existence because he is influenced by the avidyā [nescience] potency, which covers his constitutional position.

PURPORT

This and the following verse are also quoted from the Viṣṇu Purāṇa (6.7.62-63).

This is a verse from Bhagavad-gītā (7.5). It is also quoted in the Ādi-līlā (Chapter Seven, verse 118).

TEXT 117

kṛṣṇa bhuli' sei jīva anādi-bahirmukha ataeva māyā tāre deya saṁsāra-duḥkha

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa bhuli'-forgetting Kṛṣṇa; sei jīva-that living entity; anādi-from time immemorial; bahiḥ-mukha-attracted by the external feature; ataeva-therefore; māyā-illusory energy; tāre-to him; deya-gives; saṁsāra-duḥkha-miseries of material existence.

TRANSLATION

"Forgetting Kṛṣṇa, the living entity has been attracted by the external feature from time immemorial. Therefore the illusory energy [māyā] gives him all kinds of misery in his material existence.

PURPORT

When the living entity forgets his constitutional position as an eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa, he is immediately entrapped by the illusory, external energy. The living entity is originally part and parcel of Kṛṣṇa and is therefore the superior energy of Kṛṣṇa. He is endowed with inconceivable minute energy that works inconceivably within the body. However, the living entity, forgetting his position, is situated in material energy. The living entity is called the marginal energy because by nature he is spiritual but by forgetfulness he is situated in the material energy. Thus he has the power to live either in the material energy or in the spiritual energy, and for this reason he is called marginal energy. He is sometimes attracted by the external illusory energy when he stays in the marginal position, and this is the beginning of his material life. When he enters the material energy, he is subjected to the threefold time measurement-past, present and future. Past, present and future belong only to the material world; they do not exist in the spiritual world. The living entity is eternal, and he existed before the creation of this material world. Unfortunately he has forgotten his relationship with Kṛṣṇa. The living entity's forgetfulness is described herein as anādi, which indicates that it has existed since time immemorial. One should understand that due to his desire to enjoy himself in competition with Kṛṣṇa, the living entity comes into material existence.

daṇḍya-jane rājā yena nadīte cubāya

SYNONYMS

kabhu-sometimes; svarge-to higher planetary systems; uṭhāya-he rises; kabhu-sometimes; narake-in hellish conditions of life; ḍubāya-he is drowned; daṇḍya-jane-a criminal; rājā-a king; yena-as; nadīte-in the river; cubāya-dunks.

TRANSLATION

"In the material condition, the living entity is sometimes raised to higher planetary systems and material prosperity and sometimes drowned in a hellish situation. His state is exactly like that of a criminal whom a king punishes by submerging him in water and then raising him again from the water.

PURPORT

In the Vedas it is stated, asaṅgo 'yaṁ puruṣaḥ: the living entity is always free from the contamination of the material world. One who is not materially infected and who does not forget Kṛṣṇa as his master is called nitya-mukta. In other words, one who is eternally liberated from material contamination is called nitya-mukta. From time immemorial the nitya-mukta living entity has always been a devotee of Kṛṣṇa, and his only attempt has been to serve Kṛṣṇa. Thus he never forgets his eternal servitorship to Kṛṣṇa. Any living entity who forgets his eternal relationship with Kṛṣṇa is under the sway of the material condition. Bereft of the Lord's transcendental loving service, he is subjected to the reactions of fruitive activity. When he is elevated to the higher planetary systems due to worldly pious activities, he considers himself well situated, but when he is subjected to punishment, he thinks himself improperly situated. Thus material nature awards and punishes the living entity. When the living entity is materially opulent, material nature is rewarding him. When he is materially embarrassed, material nature is punishing him.

SYNONYMS

bhayam-fear; dvitīya-abhiniveśataḥ-from the misconception of being a product of material energy; syāt-arises; īśāt-from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa; apetasya-of one who has withdrawn (the conditioned soul); viparyayaḥ-reversal of the position; asmṛtiḥ-no conception of his relationship with the Supreme Lord; tat-māyayā-because of the illusory energy of the Supreme Lord; ataḥ-therefore; budhaḥ-one who is wise; ābhajet-must worship; tam-Him; bhaktyā-by devotional service; ekayā-undiverted to karma and jñāna; īśam-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; guru-as the spiritual master; devatā-the worshipable Lord; ātmā-the Supersoul.

TRANSLATION

" 'When the living entity is attracted by the material energy, which is separate from Kṛṣṇa, he is overpowered by fear. Because he is separated from the Supreme Personality of Godhead by the material energy, his conception of life is reversed. In other words, instead of being the eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa, he becomes Kṛṣṇa's competitor. This is called viparyayo 'smṛtiḥ. To nullify this mistake, one who is actually learned and advanced worships the Supreme Personality of Godhead as his spiritual master, worshipful Deity and source of life. He thus worships the Lord by the process of unalloyed devotional service.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.37). It is an instruction given by Kavi Ṛṣi, one of the nine saintly personalities called the nine Yogendras. When Vasudeva, Kṛṣṇa's father, asked Devarṣi Nārada in Dvārakā about devotional service, it was mentioned that previously King Nimi, who was the King of Videha, was instructed by the nine Yogendras. When Śrī Nārada Muni discoursed on bhāgavata-dharma, devotional service, he indicated how a conditioned soul can be liberated by engaging in the loving transcendental service of the Lord. The Lord is the Supersoul, spiritual master and worshipable Deity of all conditioned souls. Not only is Kṛṣṇa the supreme worshipful Deity for all living entities, but He is also the guru, or caitya-guru, the Supersoul who always gives the living entity good counsel. Unfortunately the living entity neglects the Supreme Person's instructions. He thus identifies with material energy and is consequently overpowered by a kind of fear resulting from accepting himself as the material body and considering paraphernalia related to the material body to be his property. All types of fruitive results actually come from the spirit soul, but because he has forgotten his real duty, he is embarrassed by many material consequences such as fear and attachment. The only remedy is to revert to the service of the Lord and thus be saved from material nature's unwanted harassment.

sādhu-śāstra-kṛpāya yadi kṛṣṇonmukha haya sei jīva nistare, māyā tāhāre chāḍaya

SYNONYMS

sādhu-of saintly persons; śāstra-of scriptures; kṛpāya-by the mercy; yadi-if; kṛṣṇa-unmukha haya-one becomes Kṛṣṇa conscious; sei-that; jīva-living entity; nistare-becomes liberated; māyā-the illusory energy; tāhāre-him; chāḍaya-gives up.

TRANSLATION

"If the conditioned soul becomes Kṛṣṇa conscious by the mercy of saintly persons who voluntarily preach scriptural injunctions and help him to become Kṛṣṇa conscious, the conditioned soul is liberated from the clutches of māyā, who gives him up.

PURPORT

A conditioned soul is one who has forgotten Kṛṣṇa as his eternal master. Thinking that he is enjoying the material world, the conditioned soul suffers the threefold miseries of material existence. Saintly persons (sādhus), Vaiṣṇava devotees of the Lord, preach Kṛṣṇa consciousness on the basis of Vedic literature. It is only by their mercy that the conditioned soul is awakened to Kṛṣṇa consciousness. When awakened, he is no longer eager to enjoy the materialistic way of life. Instead, he devotes himself to the loving transcendental service of the Lord. When one engages in the Lord's devotional service, he becomes detached from material enjoyment.

bhaktiḥ pareśānubhavo viraktir anyatra caiṣa trika eka-kālaḥ (Bhāg. 11.2.42)

This is the test by which one can tell whether he is advancing in devotional service. One must be detached from material enjoyment. Such detachment means that māyā has actually given the conditioned soul liberation from illusory enjoyment. When one is advanced in Kṛṣṇa consciousness, he does not consider himself as good as Kṛṣṇa. Whenever he thinks that he is the enjoyer of material advantages, he is imprisoned in the bodily conception. However, when he is freed from the bodily conception, he can engage in devotional service, which is his actual position of freedom from the clutches of māyā. This is all explained in the following verse from Bhagavad-gītā (7.14).

TEXT 121

TRANSLATION

" 'This divine energy of Mine, consisting of the three modes of material nature, is difficult to overcome. But those who have surrendered unto Me can easily cross beyond it.'

TEXT 122

jīvere kṛpāya kailā kṛṣṇa veda-purāṇa

SYNONYMS

māyā-mugdha-enchanted by the illusory energy; jīvera-of the conditioned soul; nāhi-there is not; svataḥ-automatically; kṛṣṇa-jñāna-knowledge of Kṛṣṇa; jīvere-unto the conditioned soul; kṛpāya-out of mercy; kailā-presented; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; veda-purāṇa-the Vedic literature and the Purāṇas (supplements to the Vedic literature).

TRANSLATION

"The conditioned soul cannot revive his Kṛṣṇa consciousness by his own effort. But out of causeless mercy, Lord Kṛṣṇa compiled the Vedic literature and its supplements, the Purāṇas.

PURPORT

A conditioned soul is bewildered by the Lord's illusory energy (māyā). Māyā's business is to keep the conditioned soul forgetful of his real relationship with Kṛṣṇa. Thus the living entity forgets his real identity as spirit soul, Brahman, and instead of realizing his factual position thinks himself the product of the material energy. According to Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.7.5):

yayā sammohito jīva ātmānaṁ tri-guṇātmakam paro 'pi manute 'narthaṁ tat-kṛtaṁ cābhipadyate

"Due to this external energy, the living entity, although transcendental to the three modes of material nature, thinks of himself as a material product and thus undergoes the reactions of material miseries."

This is a description of māyā's action upon the conditioned soul. Thinking himself a product of the material energy, the conditioned soul engages in the service of material energy in so many ways. He becomes the servant of lust, anger, greed and envy. In this way one totally becomes a servant of the illusory energy. Later, the bewildered soul becomes a servant of mental speculation, but in any case he is simply covered by the illusory energy. Out of his causeless mercy and compassion, Kṛṣṇa has compiled various Vedic literatures in His incarnation as Vyāsadeva. Vyāsadeva is a śaktyāveśa-avatāra of Lord Kṛṣṇa. He has very kindly presented these literatures to awaken the conditioned soul to his senses. Unfortunately, at the present moment the conditioned souls are guided by demons who do not care to read the Vedic literatures. Although there is an immense treasure-house of knowledge, people are engaged in reading useless literature that will give them no information on how to get out of the clutches of māyā. The purpose of the Vedic literatures is explained in the following verses.

'śāstra-guru-ātma'-rūpe āpanāre jānāna
'kṛṣṇa mora prabhu, trātā'–jīvera haya jñāna

SYNONYMS

śāstra-guru-ātma-rūpe-in the form of Vedic literature, the spiritual master and the Supersoul; āpanāre jānāna-informs about Himself; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; mora-my; prabhu-Lord; trātā-deliver; jīvera-of the conditioned soul; haya-there is; jñāna-knowledge.

TRANSLATION

"The forgetful conditioned soul is educated by Kṛṣṇa through the Vedic literatures, the realized spiritual master and the Supersoul. Through these, he can understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead as He is, and he can understand that Lord Kṛṣṇa is his eternal master and deliverer from the clutches of māyā. In this way one can acquire real knowledge of his conditioned life and can come to understand how to attain liberation.

PURPORT

Being forgetful of his real position, the conditioned soul may take help from śāstra, guru and the Supersoul within his heart. Kṛṣṇa is situated within everyone's heart as the Supersoul. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā:

īśvaraḥ sarva-bhūtānām
hṛd-deśe 'rjuna tiṣṭhati
bhrāmayan sarva-bhūtāni
yantrārūḍhāni māyayā

"The Supreme Lord is situated in everyone's heart, O Arjuna, and is directing the wanderings of all living entities, who are seated as on a machine, made of the material energy." (Bg. 18.61)

As the śaktyāveśa-avatāra Vyāsadeva, Kṛṣṇa teaches the conditioned soul through Vedic literatures. Kṛṣṇa externally appears as the spiritual master and trains the conditioned soul to come to Kṛṣṇa consciousness. When his original Kṛṣṇa consciousness is revived, the conditioned soul is delivered from the material clutches. Thus a conditioned soul is always helped by the Supreme Personality of Godhead in three ways-by the scriptures, the spiritual master and the Supersoul within the heart. The Lord is the deliverer of the conditioned soul and is accepted as the Supreme Lord of all living entities. Kṛṣṇa says in Bhagavad-gītā (18.66):

sarva-dharmān parityajya
mām ekaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja
ahaṁ tvāṁ sarva-pāpebhyo
mokṣayiṣyāmi mā śucaḥ

This same instruction is found throughout all Vedic literature. Sādhu, śāstra and guru act as the representatives of Kṛṣṇa, and the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is also taking place all over the universe. Whoever takes advantage of this opportunity becomes liberated.

TEXT 124

veda-śāstra kahe–'sambandha' 'abhidheya' 'prayojana'
'kṛṣṇa'–prāpya sambandha, 'bhakti'–prāptyera sādhana veda-śāstra kahe-the Vedic literature instructs; sambandha-the conditioned soul's relationship with the Lord; abhidheya-the regulated activities of the conditioned soul for reviving that relationship; prayojana-and the ultimate goal of life to be attained by the conditioned soul; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; prāpya-to be awakened; sambandha-the original relationship; bhakti-devotional service; prāptyera sādhana-the means of attaining Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"The Vedic literatures give information about the living entity's eternal relationship with Kṛṣṇa, which is called sambandha. The living entity's understanding of this relationship and acting accordingly is called abhidheya. Returning home, back to Godhead, is the ultimate goal of life and is called prayojana.

TEXT 125

abhidheya-nāma 'bhakti' 'prema'–prayojana puruṣārtha-śiromaṇi prema mahā-dhana abhidheya-activities to revive one's relationship; nāma-named; bhakti-devotional service; prema-love of Godhead; prayojana-the ultimate goal of life; puruṣa-artha-śiromaṇi-the topmost interest of the living entity; prema-love of Godhead; mahā-dhana-the greatest wealth.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Devotional service, or sense activity for the satisfaction of the Lord, is called abhidheya because it can develop one's original love of Godhead, which is the goal of life. This goal is the living entity's topmost interest and greatest wealth. Thus one attains the platform of transcendental loving service unto the Lord.

PURPORT

The conditioned soul is bewildered by the external material energy, which fully engages him in a variety of sense gratification. Due to engagement in material activities, one's original Kṛṣṇa consciousness is covered. However, as the supreme father of all living entities, Kṛṣṇa wants His sons to return home, back to Godhead; therefore He personally comes to deliver Vedic literatures like Bhagavad-gītā. He engages His confidential servants who serve as spiritual masters and enlighten the conditioned living entities. Being present in everyone's heart, the Lord gives the living entities the conscience whereby they can accept the Vedas and the spiritual master. In this way the living entity can understand his constitutional position and his relationship with the Supreme Lord. As personally enunciated by the Lord Himself in Bhagavad-gītā (15.15), vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyaḥ: through the study of Vedānta, one may become fully aware of his relationship with the Supreme Lord and act accordingly. In this way one may ultimately attain the platform of loving service to the Lord. It is in the living entity's best interest to understand the Supreme Lord. Unfortunately, the living entities have forgotten; therefore Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam says: na te viduḥ svārtha-gatiṁ hi viṣṇum (Bhāg. 7.5.31).

Everyone wants to achieve life's ultimate goal, but due to being absorbed in the material energy, we waste our time with sense gratification. Through the study of Vedic literatures-of which the essence is Bhagavad-gītā-one comes to Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Thus one engages in devotional service, called abhidheya. When actually developed, love of Godhead is called prayojana, the living entity's ultimate goal. When one becomes fully Kṛṣṇa conscious, he has attained the perfection of life.

SYNONYMS

ihāte-in this connection; dṛṣṭānta-the example; yaiche-just as; daridrera ghare-in the house of a poor man; sarva-jña-an astrologer; āsi'-coming; duḥkha-distressed condition; dekhi'-seeing; puchaye tāhāre-inquires from him.

TRANSLATION

"The following example may be given. Once a learned astrologer came to the house of a poor man and, seeing his distressed condition, questioned him.

PURPORT

Sometimes we go to an astrologer or palmist when we are in a distressed condition or when we want to know the future. The living entity in conditioned life is always distressed by the threefold miseries of material existence. Under the circumstances, he is inquisitive about his position. For instance, Sanātana Gosvāmī approached the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, to ask Him why he was in a distressed condition. This is the position of all conditioned souls. We are always in a distressed condition, and an intelligent man naturally becomes inquisitive. This position is called brahma-jijñāsā. Athāto brahma-jijñāsā (Vedānta-sūtra 1.1.1). Brahma here refers to Vedic literature. One should consult Vedic literature to know why the conditioned soul is always in a distressed condition. Vedic literatures are meant to free the conditioned soul from the miserable conditions of material existence. In this chapter, the story of the astrologer Sarvajña and the poor man is very instructive.

TEXT 128

SYNONYMS

tumi-you; kene-why; duḥkhī-distressed; tomāra-your; āche-there is; pitṛ-dhana-the riches of your father; tomāre-unto you; nā kahila-he did not disclose; anyatra-somewhere else; chāḍila-gave up; jīvana-his life.

TRANSLATION

"The astrologer asked, 'Why are you unhappy? Your father was very wealthy, but he did not disclose his wealth to you because he died elsewhere?'

TEXT 129

TRANSLATION

"Just as the words of the astrologer Sarvajña gave news of the poor man's treasure, Vedic literatures advise one about Kṛṣṇa consciousness when one is inquisitive to know why he is in a distressed material condition.

TEXT 130

sarvajñera vākye mūla-dhana anubandha sarva-śāstre upadeśe, 'śrī-kṛṣṇa'–sambandha

SYNONYMS

sarvajñera-of the astrologer; vākye-by the assurance; mūla-dhana-with the treasure; anubandha-connection; sarva-śāstre-all Vedic literatures; upadeśe-instruct; śrī-kṛṣṇa-Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead; sam-bandha-the central connection.

TRANSLATION

"By the words of the astrologer, the poor man's connection with the treasure was established. Similarly, Vedic literature advises us that our real connection is with Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

PURPORT

In Bhagavad-gītā (7.26), Śrī Kṛṣṇa says:

vedāhaṁ samatītāni vartamānāni cārjuna bhaviṣyāṇi ca bhūtāni māṁ tu veda na kaścana

"O Arjuna, as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, I know everything that has happened in the past, all that is happening in the present, and all things that are yet to come. I also know all living entities, but Me no one knows."

Thus Kṛṣṇa knows the cause of the distressed condition of the conditioned soul. He therefore descends from His original position to instruct the conditioned soul and inform him about his forgetfulness of his relationship with Kṛṣṇa. Kṛṣṇa exhibits Himself in His relationships in Vṛndāvana and at the Battle of Kurukṣetra so that people will be attracted to Him and will again return home, back to Godhead. Kṛṣṇa also says in Bhagavad-gītā that He is the proprietor of all universes, the enjoyer of everything that be and the friend of everyone. Suhṛdaṁ sarva-bhūtānāṁ jñātvā māṁ śāntim ṛcchati (Bg. 5.29). If we revive our original intimate relationship with Kṛṣṇa, our distressed condition in the material world will be mitigated. Everyone is trying to adjust to the distressed conditions of material existence, but the basic problems cannot be solved unless one is in an intimate relationship with Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

” ’However, if you dig up a small quantity of dirt on the eastern side, your hands will immediately touch the pot of treasure.’

PURPORT

The Vedic literatures, including the Purāṇas, state that according to the position of the conditioned soul, there are different processes-karma-kāṇḍa, jñāna-kāṇḍa, the yogic process and the bhakti-yoga process. Karma-kāṇḍa is compared to wasps and drones that will simply bite if one takes shelter of them. jñāna-kāṇḍa, the speculative process, is simply like a ghost who creates mental disturbances. Yoga, the mystic process, is compared to a black snake that devours people by the impersonal cultivation of kaivalya. However, if one takes to bhakti-yoga, he becomes quickly successful. In other words, through bhakti-yoga, one’s hands touch the hidden treasure without difficulty.

Therefore it is said in Bhagavad-gītā: vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyaḥ. One has to take to devotional service. Although the Vedas enjoin one to search out Kṛṣṇa and take shelter at His lotus feet, other Vedic processes will not help. According to Bhagavad-gītā, only the bhakti process is said to be definitive. Bhaktyā mām abhijānāti. This is the conclusive statement of the Vedas, and one has to accept this process if one is serious in searching for Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. In this connection, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura gives the following statement. The eastern side represents devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa. The southern side represents the process of fruitive activity (karma-kāṇḍa), which ends in material gain. The western side represents jñāna-kāṇḍa, the process of mental speculation, sometimes called siddhi-kāṇḍa. The northern side represents the speculative method sometimes known as the mystic yoga system. It is only the eastern side, devotional service, that enables one to attain life’s real goal. On the southern side, there are fruitive activities by which one is subject to the punishment of Yamarāja. When one follows the system of fruitive activity, his material desires remain prominent. Consequently the results of this process are compared to wasps and drones. The living entity is bitten by the wasps and drones of fruitive activity and thus suffers in material existence birth after birth. One cannot be free from material desires by following this process. The propensity for material enjoyment never ends. Therefore the cycle of birth and death continues, and the spirit soul suffers perpetually.

The mystic yoga process is compared to a black snake that devours the living entity and injects him with poison. The ultimate goal of the yoga system is to become one with the Absolute. This means finishing one’s personal existence. However, the spiritual part and parcel of the Supreme Personality of Godhead has an eternal individual existence. Bhagavad-gītā confirms that the individual soul existed in the past, is existing in the present and will continue to exist as an individual in the future. Artificially trying to become one with the Absolute is suicidal. One cannot annihilate his natural condition.

A yakṣa, a protector of riches, will not allow anyone to take away riches for enjoyment. Such a demon will simply create disturbances. In other words, a devotee will not depend on his material resources but on the mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who can give real protection. This is called rakṣiṣyatīti viśvāsaḥ or (in the Bengali poetry of Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura’s Śaraṇāgati), 'avaśya rakṣibe kṛṣṇa'-viśvāsa pālana. The surrendered soul must accept the fact that his real protector is Kṛṣṇa, not his material acquisitions.

Considering all these points, devotional service to Kṛṣṇa is the real treasure house for the living entity. When one comes to the platform of devotional service, he always remains opulent in the association of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. One who is bereft of devotional service is swallowed by the black snake of the yoga system and bitten by the wasps and drones of fruitive activity, and he suffers consequent material miseries. Sometimes the living entity is misled into trying to merge into spiritual existence, thinking himself as good as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This means that when he comes to the spiritual platform, he will be disturbed and will again return to the material platform. According to Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.32):

ye 'nye 'ravindākṣa vimukta-māninas
tvayy asta-bhāvād aviśuddha-buddhayaḥ āruhya kṛcchreṇa paraṁ padaṁ tataḥ
patanty adho 'nādṛta-yuṣmad-aṅghrayaḥ

Such people may become sannyāsīs, but unless they take shelter of Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet, they will return to the material platform to perform philanthropic activities. In this way, one's spiritual life is lost. This is to be understood as being devoured by the black snake.

na-never; sādhayati-causes to remain satisfied; mām-Me; yogaḥ-the process of control; na-nor; sāṅkhyam-the process of gaining philosophical knowledge about the Absolute Truth; dharmaḥ-such an occupation; uddhava-My dear Uddhava; na-nor; svādhyāyaḥ-study of the Vedas; tapaḥ-austerities; tyāgaḥ-renunciation, acceptance of sannyāsa, or charity; yathā-as much as; bhaktiḥ-devotional service; mama-unto Me; ūrjitā-developed.

TRANSLATION

[The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, said:] " 'My dear Uddhava, neither through aṣṭāṅga-yoga [the mystic yoga system to control the senses], nor through impersonal monism or an analytical study of the Absolute Truth, nor through study of the Vedas, nor through practice of austerities, nor through charity, nor through acceptance of sannyāsa can one satisfy Me as much as one can by developing unalloyed devotional service unto Me.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.14.20). The explanation for this verse is given in Ādi-līlā (17.76).

śva-pākān api sambhavāt

SYNONYMS

bhaktyā-by devotional service; aham-I, the Supreme Personality of Godhead; ekayā-unflinching; grāhyaḥ-obtainable; śraddhayā-by faith; ātmā-the most dear; priyaḥ-to be served; satām-by the devotees; bhaktiḥ-the devotional service; punāti-purifies; mat-niṣṭhā-fixed only on Me; śva-pākān-the lowest of human beings, who are accustomed to eat dogs; api-certainly; sambhavāt-from all faults due to birth and other circumstances.

TRANSLATION

" 'Being very dear to the devotees and sādhus, I am attained through unflinching faith and devotional service. This bhakti-yoga system, which gradually increases attachment for Me, purifies even a human being born among dog-eaters. That is to say, everyone can be elevated to the spiritual platform by the process of bhakti-yoga.'

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.14.21).

TEXT 139

ataeva 'bhakti'–kṛṣṇa-prāptyera upāya
'abhidheya' bali' tāre sarva-śāstre gāya

SYNONYMS

ataeva-therefore; bhakti-devotional service; kṛṣṇa-prāptyera-of achieving the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa; upāya-the only means; abhidheya-abhidheya; bali'-calling; tāre-this system; sarva-śāstre-in all revealed scriptures; gāya-is described.

TRANSLATION

”The conclusion is that devotional service is the only means to approach the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This system is therefore called abhidheya. This is the verdict of all revealed scriptures.

PURPORT

As stated in Bhagavad-gītā (18.55).

bhaktyā mām abhijānāti
yāvān yaś cāsmi tattvataḥ
tato māṁ tattvato jñātvā
viśate tad-anantaram

”One can understand the Supreme Personality as He is only by devotional service. And when one is in full consciousness of the Supreme Lord by such devotion, he can enter the kingdom of God.”

The aim of life is to get rid of the material conditioning and enter into spiritual existence. Although the śāstras prescribe different methods for different men, the Supreme Personality of Godhead says that one ultimately must accept the path of devotional service as the assured path of spiritual advancement. Devotional service to the Lord is the only process actually confirmed by the Lord. Sarva-dharmān parityajya mām ekaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja (Bg. 18.66). One must become a devotee if one wants to return home, back to Godhead, and become eternally blissful.

dhana pāile-when one gets riches; yaiche-just as; sukha-bhoga-enjoyment of happiness; phala-result; pāya-one gets; sukha-bhoga-real enjoyment of happiness; haite-from; duḥkha-all distresses; āpani-themselves; palāya-run away.

TRANSLATION

”When one actually becomes rich, he naturally enjoys all kinds of happiness. When one is actually in a happy mood, all distressful conditions go away by themselves. No extraneous endeavor is needed.

TEXT 141

taiche bhakti-phale kṛṣṇe prema upajaya

SYNONYMS

taiche-similarly; bhakti-phale-by the result of devotional service; kṛṣṇe-unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; prema-love; upajaya-arises; preme-in devotional love; kṛṣṇa-āsvāda-tasting the association of Lord Kṛṣṇa; haile-when there is; bhava-the distress of the repetition of birth and death; nāśa-annihilation; pāya-obtains.

TRANSLATION

”Similarly, as a result of bhakti, one’s dormant love for Kṛṣṇa awakens. When one is so situated that he can taste the association of Lord Kṛṣṇa, material existence, the repetition of birth and death, comes to an end.

TEXT 142

dāridrya-nāśa, bha va-kṣa ya,–premera ’phala’ naya prema-sukha-bhoga–mukhya prayojana haya

SYNONYMS

dāridrya-nāśa-the end of poverty-stricken life; bhava-kṣaya-annihilation of material existence; premera-of love of Godhead; phala-the result; naya-certainly is not; prema-sukha-bhoga-enjoyment of the happiness of love of God; mukhya-chief; prayojana-goal of life; haya-is.

TRANSLATION

”The goal of love of Godhead is not to become materially rich or free from material bondage. The real goal is to be situated in devotional service to the Lord and to enjoy transcendental bliss.

PURPORT

The results of devotional service are certainly not material benefits or liberation from material bondage. The goal of devotional service is to be eternally situated in the loving service of the Lord and to enjoy spiritual bliss from that service. One is said to be in a poverty-stricken condition when one forgets the Supreme Personality of Godhead. One has to end such a life of poverty in order to automatically end the miserable conditions of material existence. One is automatically liberated from material enjoyment when one tastes the service of Kṛṣṇa. One does not have to endeavor separately for opulence. Opulence automatically comes to the pure devotee, even though he does not desire material happiness.

TRANSLATION

" 'There are many types of Vedic literatures and supplementary Purāṇas. In each of them there are particular demigods who are spoken of as the chief demigods. This is just to create an illusion for moving and nonmoving living entities. Let them perpetually engage in such imaginations. However, when one analytically studies all these Vedic literatures collectively, he comes to the conclusion that Lord Viṣṇu is the one and only Supreme Personality of Godhead.'

TRANSLATION

" 'What is the direction of all Vedic literatures? On whom do they set focus? Who is the purpose of all speculation? Outside of Me no one knows these things. Now you should know that all these activities are aimed at ordaining and setting forth Me. The purpose of Vedic literature is to know Me by different speculations, either by indirect understanding or by dictionary understanding. Everyone is speculating about Me. The essence of all Vedic literatures is to distinguish Me from māyā. By considering the illusory energy, one comes to the platform of understanding Me. In this way one becomes free from speculation about the Vedas and comes to Me as the conclusion. Thus one is satisfied.'

PURPORT

These two verses are quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.21.42,43). When Uddhava asked Kṛṣṇa about the purpose of Vedic speculation, the Lord informed him of the process of understanding Vedic literature. The Vedas are composed of karma-kāṇḍa, jñāna-kāṇḍa and upāsanā-kāṇḍa. If one analytically studies the purpose of the Vedas, he understands that by karma-kāṇḍa, sacrificial activity, one comes to the conclusion of jñāna-kāṇḍa, speculative knowledge. After speculation, one comes to the conclusion that worship of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the ultimate. When one comes to this conclusion, he becomes fully satisfied.

TRANSLATION

” ’The Tenth Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam reveals the tenth object, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is the shelter of all surrendered souls. He is known as Śrī Kṛṣṇa, and He is the ultimate source of all the universes. Let me offer my obeisances unto Him.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Bhāvārtha-dīpikā, Śrīdhara Svāmī’s commentary on Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.1.1). In the Tenth Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam there is a description of the āśraya-tattva, Śrī Kṛṣṇa. There are two tattvas-āśraya-tattva and āśrita-tattva. Āśraya-tattva is the objective, and āśrita-tattva is the subjective. Since the lotus feet of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa are the shelter of all devotees, Śrī Kṛṣṇa is called paraṁ dhāma. In Bhagavad-gītā it is stated: paraṁ brahma paraṁ dhāma pavitraṁ paramaṁ bhavān. Everything is resting under the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.14.58) it is stated:

mahat-padaṁ puṇya-yaśo-murāreḥ

Under the lotus feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the entire mahat-tattva is existing. Since everything is under Śrī Kṛṣṇa’s protection, Śrī Kṛṣṇa is called āśraya-tattva. Everything else is called āśrita-tattva. The material creation is also called āśrita-tattva. Liberation from material bondage and the attainment of the spiritual platform are also āśrita-tattva. Kṛṣṇa is the only āśraya-tattva. In the beginning of the creation there are Mahā-Viṣṇu, Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu and Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu. They are also āśraya-tattva. Kṛṣṇa is the cause of all causes (sarva-kāraṇa-kāraṇam). To understand Kṛṣṇa perfectly, one has to make an analytical study of āśraya-tattva and āśrita-tattva.

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.11). For an explanation, see also Ādi-līlā, Chapter Two, verse 11.

Those who are interested in the impersonal Brahman effulgence which is not different from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, can attain that goal by speculative knowledge. Those who are interested in practicing mystic yoga can attain the localized aspect of Paramātmā. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā, īśvaraḥ sarva-bhūtānāṁ hṛd-deśe ’rjuna tiṣṭhati: the Supreme Personality of Godhead is situated within the heart as Paramātmā. He witnesses the activities of the living entities and gives them permission to act.

TRANSLATION

” ’You should know Kṛṣṇa as the original soul of all ātmās [living entities]. For the benefit of the whole universe, He has, out of His causeless mercy, appeared as an ordinary human being. He has done this with the strength of His own internal potency.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.14.55). Parīkṣit Mahārāja asked Śukadeva Gosvāmī why Kṛṣṇa was so beloved by the residents of Vṛndāvana, who loved Him even more than their own offspring or life itself. At that time Śukadeva Gosvāmī replied that everyone’s ātmā, or soul, is very, very dear, especially to all living entities who have accepted material bodies. However, that ātmā, the spirit soul, is part and parcel of Kṛṣṇa. For this reason, Kṛṣṇa is very dear to every living entity. Everyone’s body is very dear to oneself, and one wants to protect the body by all means because within the body the soul is living. Due to the intimate relationship between the soul and the body, the body is important and dear to everyone. Similarly, the soul, being part and parcel of Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Lord, is very, very dear to all living entities. Unfortunately, the soul forgets his constitutional position and thinks he is only the body (deha-ātma-bud-dhi). Thus the soul is subjected to the rules and regulations of material nature. When a living entity, by his intelligence, reawakens his attraction for Kṛṣṇa, he can understand that he is not the body but part and parcel of Kṛṣṇa. Thus filled with knowledge, he no longer labors under attachment to the body and everything related to the body. janasya moho 'yam aham mameti. Material existence, wherein one thinks, "I am the body, and this belongs to me," is also illusory. One must redirect his attraction to Kṛṣṇa. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.7) states:

vāsudeve bhagavati bhakti-yogaḥ prayojitaḥ janayaty āśu vairāgyaṁ jñānaṁ ca yad ahaitukam

"By rendering devotional service unto the Personality of Godhead, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, one immediately acquires causeless knowledge and detachment from the world."

bhaktye-by devotional service; bhagavānera-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; anubhava-perception; pūrṇa-rūpa-perfectly; eka-i-one; vigrahe-in the transcendental form; tāṅra-His; ananta-unlimited; sva-rūpa-expansions of plenary portions.

TRANSLATION

"Only by devotional activity can one understand the transcendental form of the Lord, which is perfect in all respects. Although His form is one, He can expand His form into unlimited numbers by His supreme will.

TEXT 165

sva yaṁ-rūpa, tad-ekātma-rūpa, āveśa–nāma prathamei tina-rūpe rahena bhagavān

SYNONYMS

sva yam-rūpa-the personal form; tat-ekātma-rūpa-the same form, nondifferent from svayaṁ-rūpa; āveśa-especially empowered; nāma-named; prathamei-in the beginning; tina-rūpe-in three forms; rahena-remains; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead exists in three principal forms-svayaṁ-rūpa, tad-ekātma-rūpa, and āveśa-rūpa.

PURPORT

Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī has described svayaṁ-rūpa in his Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta, pūrva-khaṇḍa, verse 12, ananyāpekṣi yad rūpaṁ svayaṁ-rūpaḥ sa ucyate: the original form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead does not depend on other forms. The original form is called svayaṁ-rūpa, and it is described in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam: kṛṣṇas tu bhagavān svayam (1.3.28). Kṛṣṇa's original form as a cowherd boy in Vṛndāvana is called svayaṁ-rūpa. It is confirmed in the Brahma-saṁhitā (5.1):

īśvaraḥ paramaḥ kṛṣṇaḥ sac-cid-ānanda-vigrahaḥ anādir ādir govindaḥ sarva-kāraṇa-kāraṇam

There is nothing superior to Govinda. He is the ultimate source and the cause of all causes. In Bhagavad-gītā (7.7) the Lord says, mattaḥ parataraṁ nānyat: "There is no truth superior to Me.

The tad-ekātma-rūpa is also described in the Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta, Pūrva-khaṇḍa, verse 14:

yad rūpaṁ tad-abhedena svarūpeṇa virājate ākṛtyādibhir anyādṛk sa tad-ekātma-rūpakaḥ

The tad-ekātma-rūpa forms exist simultaneously with the svayaṁ-rūpa form and are nondifferent. At the same time, the bodily features and specific activities appear to be different. This tad-ekātma-rūpa is also divided into two categories-svāṁśa and vilāsa.

His āveśa form is also explained in the Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta, verse 18:

jñāna-śaktyādi-kalayā
yatrāviṣṭo janārdanaḥ
ta āveśā nigadyante
jīvā eva mahattamāḥ

A living entity who is specifically empowered by the Lord with knowledge or strength is technically called āveśa-rūpa. As stated in the Caitanya-caritāmṛta (Antya 7.11), kṛṣṇa-śakti vinā nahe tāra pravartana: unless a devotee is specifically empowered by the Lord, he cannot preach the holy name of the Lord all over the world. This is an explanation of the word āveśa-rūpa.

TEXT 166

'svayaṁ-rūpa' 's va yaṁ-prakāśa'–dui rūpe sphūrti
svayaṁ-rūpe–eka 'kṛṣṇa' vraje gopa-mūrti

SYNONYMS

sva yam-rūpa-the original form of the Lord; sva yam-prakāśa-the personal manifestation; dui rūpe-in two forms; sphūrti-exhibition; svayam-rūpe-in the original form; eka-one; kṛṣṇa-Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead; vraje-in Vṛndāvana; gopa-mūrti-the cowherd boy.

TRANSLATION

"The original form of the Lord [svayaṁ-rūpa] is exhibited in two forms-svayaṁ-rūpa and svayaṁ-prakāśa. In His original form as svayaṁ-rūpa, Kṛṣṇa is observed as a cowherd boy in Vṛndāvana.

TEXT 167

eka-vapu bahu rūpa yaiche haila rāse

SYNONYMS

prābhava-prābhava; vaibhava-vaibhava; rūpe-in forms; dvi-vidha pra-kāśe-twofold manifestations; eka-vapu-the same original form; bahu rūpa-expanded into unlimited numbers; yaiche-like; haila-it was; rāse-while dancing in the rāsa dance with the gopīs.

TRANSLATION

"In His original form, Kṛṣṇa manifests Himself in two features-prābhava and vaibhava. He expands His one original form into many, as He did during the rāsa-līlā dance.

TEXT 168

mahiṣī-vivāhe haila bahu-vidha mūrti
'prābhava prakāśa'–ei śāstra-parasiddhi

SYNONYMS

mahiṣī-vivāhe-in the matter of marrying 16,108 wives at Dvārakā; haila-there were; bahu-vidha mūrti-many forms; prābhava prakāśa-called prābhava-prakāśa; ei-this; śāstra-parasiddhi-determined by reference to the revealed scriptures.

TRANSLATION

"When the Lord married 16,108 wives at Dvārakā, He expanded Himself into many forms. These expansions and the expansions at the rāsa dance are called prābhava-prakāśa, according to the directions of revealed scriptures.

TEXT 169

saubhary-ādi-prāya sei kāya-vyūha naya kāya-vyūha haile nāradera vismaya nā haya

SYNONYMS

saubhari-ādi-beginning with the sage named Saubhari; prāya-like; sei-that; kāya-vyūha-the expansion of one's body; naya-is not; kāya-vyūha-expansions of the body; haile-if there are; nāradera-of Nārada Muni; vismaya-the astonishment; nā haya-there cannot be.

TRANSLATION

"The prābhava-prakāśa expansions of Lord Kṛṣṇa are not like the expansions of the sage Saubhari. Had they been so, Nārada would not have been astonished to see them.

TEXT 170

TRANSLATION

" 'It is astounding that Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who is one without a second, expanded Himself in sixteen thousand similar forms to marry sixteen thousand queens in their respective homes.'

PURPORT

This verse is spoken by Nārada Muni in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.69.2).

TEXT 171

bahu-mūrtyeka-mūrtikam

SYNONYMS

anye-different persons; ca-also; saṁskṛta-ātmānaḥ-persons who are purified; vidhinā-by the regulative principles; abhihitena-stated in the revealed scriptures; te-such persons; yajanti-worship; tvat-mayāḥ-being absorbed in You; tvām-You; vai-certainly; bahu-mūrti-having many forms; eka-mūrtikam-although one.

TRANSLATION

" 'In different Vedic scriptures, there are prescribed rules and regulative principles for worshiping different types of forms. When one is purified by these rules and regulations, he worships You, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Although manifest in many forms, You are one.'

PURPORT

This verse is quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.40.7). In the Vedas it is stated that the one becomes many (eko bahu syām). The Supreme Personality of Godhead expands Himself in various forms-viṣṇu-tattva, jīva-tattva and śakti-tattva.

According to the Vedic literatures, there are different regulative principles for the worship of each of these forms. If one takes advantage of the Vedic literatures and purifies himself by following the rules and regulations, ultimately he worships the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa. Kṛṣṇa says in Bhagavad-gītā (4.11): mama vartmānuvartante manuṣyāḥ pārtha sarvaśaḥ. Worship of the demigods is in a sense worship of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but such worship is said to be avidhi-pūrvakam, improper. Actually demigod worship is meant for unintelligent men. One who is intelligent considers the words of the Supreme Personality of Godhead: sarva dharmān parityajya mām ekaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja. One who worships demigods worships the Supreme Lord indirectly, but according to the revealed scriptures, there is no need to worship Him indirectly. One can worship Him directly.

vaibhava-prakāśa kṛṣṇera–śrī-balarāma varṇa-mātra-bheda, saba–kṛṣṇera samāna vaibhava-prakāśa-manifestation of the vaibhava feature; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; śrī-balarāma-Śrī Balarāma; varṇa-mātra-color only; bheda-difference; saba-everything; kṛṣṇera samāna-equal to Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"The first manifestation of the vaibhava feature of Kṛṣṇa is Śrī Balarāmajī. Śrī Balarāma and Kṛṣṇa have different bodily colors, but otherwise Śrī Balarāma is equal to Kṛṣṇa in all respects.

PURPORT

To understand the difference between svayaṁ-rūpa, tad-ekātma-rūpa, āveśa, prābhava and vaibhava, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura has given the following description. In the beginning, Kṛṣṇa has three bodily features: (1) svayaṁ-rūpa, as a cowherd boy in Vṛndāvana; (2) tad-ekātma-rūpa, which is divided into svāṁśaka and vilāsa; and (3) āveśa-rūpa. The svāṁśaka, or expansions of the personal potency, are (1) Kāraṇodakaśāyī, Garbhodakaśāyī, Kṣīrodakaśāyī and (2) incarnations such as the fish, tortoise, boar and Nṛsiṁha. The vilāsa-rūpa has a prābhava division, including Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna and Aniruddha. There is also a vaibhava division in which there are twenty-four forms, including the second Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna and Aniruddha. For each of these, there are three forms; therefore there are twelve forms altogether. These twelve forms constitute the predominant names for the twelve months of the year as well as the twelve tilaka marks on the body. Each of the four Personalities of Godhead expands into two other forms; thus there are eight forms, such as Puruṣottama, Acyuta, etc. The four forms (Vāsudeva, etc.), the twelve (Keśava, etc.), and the eight (Puruṣottama, etc.) all together constitute twenty-four forms. All the forms are differently named in accordance with the weapons They hold in Their four hands.

SYNONYMS

vaibhava-prakāśa-the feature of vaibhava-prakāśa; yaiche-just as; devakī-tanuja-the son of Devakī; dvi-bhuja-two-handed; svarūpa-form; kabhu-sometimes; kabhu-sometimes; haya-is; catuḥ-bhuja-four-handed.

TRANSLATION

"An example of vaibhava-prakāśa is the son of Devakī. He sometimes has two hands and sometimes four hands.

PURPORT

When Lord Kṛṣṇa took His birth, He appeared outside the womb as four-handed Viṣṇu. Then Devakī and Vasudeva offered their prayers to Him and asked Him to assume His two-handed form. The Lord immediately assumed His two handed form and ordered that He be transferred to Gokula on the other side of the River Yamunā.

caturbhuja haile, nāma–prābhava-prakāśa

SYNONYMS

ye-kāle dvi-bhuja-when the Lord appears as two-handed; nāma-named; vaibhava-prakāśa-vaibhava-prakāśa; catuḥ-bhuja haile-when He becomes four-handed; nāma-named; prābhava-prakāśa-prābhava-prakāśa.

TRANSLATION

"When the Lord is two-handed, He is called vaibhava-prakāśa, and when He is four-handed He is called prābhava-prakāśa.

TEXT 177

sva yaṁ-rūpera gopa-veśa, gopa-abhimāna vāsudevera kṣatriya-veśa, 'āmi–kṣatriya'-jñāna svayam-rūpera-of the original form; gopa-veśa-the dress of a cowherd boy; gopa-abhimāna-thinking Himself a cowherd boy; vāsudevera-of Vāsudeva, the son of Vasudeva and Devakī; kṣatriya-veśa-the dress is like that of a kṣatriya; āmi-I; kṣatriya-a kṣatriya; jñāna-knowledge.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"In His original form, the Lord dresses like a cowherd boy and thinks Himself one of them. When He appears as Vāsudeva, the son of Vasudeva and Devakī, His dress and consciousness are those of a kṣatriya, a warrior.

TEXT 178

saundarya, aiśvarya, mādhurya, vaidagdhya-vilāsa

SYNONYMS

udgīrṇa-overflowing; adbhuta-wonderful; mādhurī-sweetness; parimalasya-whose fragrance; ābhīra-of a cowherd boy; līlasya-who has pastimes; me-My; dvaitam-second form; hanta-alas; samīkṣayan-showing; muhuḥ-again and again; asau-that; citrīyate-is acting like a picture; cāraṇaḥ-dramatic actor; cetaḥ-heart; keli-kutūhala-by longing for pastimes; uttaralitam-greatly excited; satyam-actually; sakhe-O dear friend; māmakam-My; yasya-of whom; prekṣya-by seeing; sva-rūpatām-similarity to My form; vraja-vadhū-of the damsels of Vrajabhūmi; sārūpyam-a form like the forms; anvicchati-desires.

TRANSLATION

" 'My dear friend, this dramatic actor appears like a second form of My own self. Like a picture, He displays My pastimes as a cowherd boy overflowing with wonderfully attractive sweetness and fragrance, which are so dear to the damsels of Vraja. When I see such a display, My heart becomes greatly excited. I long for such pastimes and desire a form exactly like the damsels of Vraja.'

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Lalita-mādhava (4.19).

TRANSLATION

" 'Who manifests an abundance of sweetness greater than Mine, which has never been experienced before and which causes wonder to all? Alas, I Myself, My mind bewildered upon seeing this beauty, impetuously desire to enjoy it like Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī.'

PURPORT

This verse spoken by Vāsudeva in Dvārakā is recorded by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī in his Lalita-mādhava (8.34).

TEXT 183

sei vapu bhinnābhāse kichu bhinnākāra

SYNONYMS

sei vapu-that body; bhinna-ābhāse-manifested differently; kichu-some; bhinna-ākāra-bodily differences; bhāva-āveśa-ākṛti-forms and transcendental emotions; bhede-by different; tat-ekātma nāma-the name is tad-ekātma; tāṅra-of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"When that body is a little differently manifest and its features a little different in transcendental emotion and form, it is called tad-ekātma.

TEXT 184

tad-ekātma-rūpe 'vilāsa', 'svāṁśa'–dui bheda vilāsa, svāṁśera bhede vividha vibheda tat-ekātma-rūpe-in the form of tad-ekātma; vilāsa-pastime; svāṁśa-personal expansion; dui bheda-two divisions; vilāsa-of the pastime expansion; svāṁśera-of the personal expansion; bhede-by differences; vividha-various; vibheda-distinctions.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"In the tad-ekātma-rūpa there are pastime expansions [vilāsa] and personal expansions [svāṁśa]. Consequently there are two divisions. According to pastime and personal expansion, there are various differences.

TEXT 185

prābhava-vaibhava-bhede vilāsa–dvidhākāra vilāsera vilāsa-bheda–ananta prakāra

SYNONYMS

prābhava-vaibhava-bhede-by the differences between prābhava and vaibhava,; vilāsa-pastime expansion; dvidhā-ākāra-twofold; vilāsera-of pastime forms; vilāsa-bheda-by the different pastimes; ananta prakāra-unlimited varieties.

TRANSLATION

"Again the vilāsa forms are divided into twofold categories-prābhava and vaibhava. Again the pastimes of these forms are of unlimited variety.

PURPORT

In the Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta, Pūrva-khaṇḍa, verse 17, it is stated:

tādṛśo nyūna-śaktiṁ yo vyanakti svāṁśa īritaḥ saṅkarṣaṇādir matsyādir yathā tat-tat-svadhāmasu

When a form of Kṛṣṇa is nondifferent from the original form but is less important and exhibits less potency, it is called svāṁśa. Examples of the svāṁśa expansion can be found in the quadruple forms of the Lord residing in their respective places, beginning with Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna and Aniruddha and including the puruṣa-avatāras, līlā-avatāras, manvantara-avatāras and yuga-avatāras.

TEXT 186

prābhava-vilāsa–vāsudeva, saṅkarṣaṇa pradyumna, aniruddha,–mukhya cāri-jana prābhava-vilāsa-the prābhava-vilāsa forms; vāsudeva-Vāsudeva; saṅkarṣaṇa-Saṅkarṣaṇa; pradyumna-Pradyumna; aniruddha-Aniruddha; mukhya cāri-jana-the four chief expansions.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"The chief quadruple expansions are named Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna and Aniruddha. These are called prābhava-vilāsa.

TEXT 187

vraje gopa-bhāva rāmera, pure kṣatriya-bhāvana varṇa-veśa-bheda, tāte 'vilāsa' tāṅra nāma

SYNONYMS

vraje-in Vṛndāvana; gopa-bhāva-emotion of a cowherd boy; rāmera-of Balarāma; pure-in Dvārakā; kṣatriya-bhāvana-the emotion of a kṣatriya; varṇa-veśa-bheda-by differences of dress and color; tāte-therefore; vilāsa-pastime expansion; tāṅra nāma-His name.

TRANSLATION

”Balarāma, who has the same original form of Kṛṣṇa, is Himself a cowherd boy in Vṛndāvana, and He also considers Himself to belong to the kṣatriya race in Dvārakā. Thus His color and dress are different, and He is called a pastime form of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 188

eka-i mūrtye baladeva bhāva-bhede bhāse

SYNONYMS

vaibhava-prakāśe-in vaibhava manifestation; āra-and; prābhava-vilāse-in the prābhava pastime form; eka-i mūrtye-in one form; baladeva-Lord Baladeva; bhāva-bhede-according to different emotions; bhāse-exists.

TRANSLATION

”Śrī Balarāma is a vaibhava-prakāśa manifestation of Kṛṣṇa. He is also manifest in the original quadruple expansion of Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna and Aniruddha. These are prābhava-vilāsa expansions with different emotions.

TEXT 189

ādi-catur-vyūha–iṅhāra keha nāhi sama ananta caturvyūha-gaṇera prākaṭya-kāraṇa

SYNONYMS

ādi-catuḥ-vyūha-the original quadruple group; iṅhāra-of this; keha nāhi-no one; sama-equal; ananta-unlimited; catuḥ-vyūha-gaṇera-of the quadruple expansions; prākaṭya-of manifestation; kāraṇa-the cause.

TRANSLATION

”The first expansion of the caturvyūha, quadruple forms, is unique. There is nothing to compare with Them. These quadruple forms are the source of unlimited quadruple forms.

TEXT 190

kṛṣṇera ei cāri prābhava-vilāsa dvārakā-mathurā-pure nitya iṅhāra vāsa

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; ei-these; cāri-four; prābhava-vilāsa-prābhava pastime forms; dvārakā-mathurā-pure-in the two cities Dvārakā and Mathurā; nitya-eternal; iṅhāra-of Them; vāsa-the residential quarters.

TRANSLATION

”These four prābhava pastime forms of Lord Kṛṣṇa reside eternally in Dvārakā and Mathurā.

TEXT 191

ei cāri haite cabbiśa mūrti parakāśa astra-bhede nāma-bheda–vaibhava-vilāsa

SYNONYMS

ei cāri haite-from these four; cabbiśa-twenty-four; mūrti-forms; parakāśa-manifestation; astra-bhede-according to the different weapons; nāma-bheda-the difference of names; vaibhava-vilāsa-the vaibhava pastime expansions.

TRANSLATION

”From the original quadruple expansion, twenty-four forms are manifest. They differ according to the placement of weapons in Their four hands. They are called vaibhava-vilāsa.

TEXT 192

punaḥ kṛṣṇa catur-vyūha lañā pūrva-rūpe paravyoma-madhye vaise nārāyaṇa-rūpe

SYNONYMS

punaḥ-again; kṛṣṇa-Kṛṣṇa; catuḥ-vyūha-the quadruple expansions; lañā-taking; pūrva-rūpe-as previously; paravyoma-madhye-in the paravyoma area; vaise-resides; nārāyaṇa-rūpe-in the form of four-handed Nārāyaṇa.

TRANSLATION

”Lord Kṛṣṇa again expands, and within the paravyoma, the spiritual sky, He is situated in fullness as the four-handed Nārāyaṇa, accompanied by expansions of the original quadruple form.

PURPORT

At the top of the paravyoma, the spiritual sky, there is Goloka Vṛndāvana, which is divided into three parts. Two of the parts, called Mathurā and Dvārakā, are the residences of Kṛṣṇa in His prābhava-vilāsa forms. Balarāma, Kṛṣṇa’s vaibhava-prakāśa, is eternally situated in Gokula. From the quadruple prābhava-vilāsa, twenty-four forms of the vaibhava-vilāsa are expanded. Each has four hands holding weapons in different positions. The topmost planet in the spiritual sky is Goloka Vṛndāvana, and below that planet is the spiritual sky itself. In that spiritual sky, Kṛṣṇa Himself is four-handed and is situated as Nārāyaṇa.

TEXT 193

tāṅhā haite punaḥ catur-vyūha-parakāśa āvaraṇa-rūpe cāri-dike yāṅra vāsa

SYNONYMS

tāṅhā haite-from that original catur-vyūha; punaḥ-again; catuḥ-vyūha-parakāśa-manifestation of quadruple expansions; āvaraṇa-rūpe-in the form of a covering; cāri-dike-in four directions; yāṅra-whose; vāsa-residence.

TRANSLATION

”Thus the original quadruple forms again manifest Themselves in a second quadruple expansion. The residences of these second quadruple expansions cover the four directions.

TEXT 194

cāri-janera punaḥ pṛthak tina tina mūrti keśavādi yāhā haite vilāsera pūrti

SYNONYMS

cāri-janera-of the original of the four expansions; punaḥ-again; pṛthak-separate; tina tina-three each; mūrti-forms; keśava-ādi-beginning with Lord Keśava; yāhā haite-from which; vilāsera pūrti-the vilāsa expansions are fulfilled.

TRANSLATION

"Again these quadruple forms expand three times, beginning with Keśava. That is the fulfillment of the pastime forms.

viṣṇu-kāñcīte viṣṇu, hari rahe, māyāpure aiche āra nānā mūrti brahmāṇḍa-bhitare

SYNONYMS

viṣṇu-kāñcīte-at Viṣṇu-kāñcī; viṣṇu-Lord Viṣṇu; hari-Lord Hari; rahe-remains; māyāpure-at Māyāpur; aiche-similarly; āra-also; nānā-various; mūrti-forms; brahmāṇḍa-bhitare-throughout the universe.

TRANSLATION

”At Viṣṇu-kāñcī there is Lord Viṣṇu, at Māyāpur Lord Hari, and throughout the universe a variety of other forms.

PURPORT

All of these forms are mūrti forms, and They are worshiped in the temples. Their names are Keśava at Mathurā, Puruṣottama or Jagannātha at Nīlācala, Śrī Bindu Mādhava at Prayāga, Madhusūdana at Mandāra, and Vāsudeva, Padmanābha and Janārdana at Ānandāraṇya, which is situated in Kerala, South India. At Viṣṇu-kāñcī, which is situated in the Barada state, there is Lord Viṣṇu, and Hari is situated at Māyāpur, Lord Caitanya’s birthsite. Thus in different places throughout the universe there are various Deities in temples bestowing Their causeless mercy upon the devotees. All these Deity forms are nondifferent from the mūrtis in the spiritual world of the Vaikuṇṭhas. Although the arcā-mūrti, the worshipable Deity form of the Lord, appears to be made of material elements, it is as good as the spiritual forms found in the spiritual Vaikuṇṭhalokas. The Deity in the temple, however, is visible to the material eyes of the devotee. It is not possible for one in material conditional life to see the spiritual form of the Lord. To bestow causeless mercy upon us, the Lord appears as arcā-mūrti so that we can see Him. It is forbidden to consider the arcā-mūrti to be made of stone or wood. In the Padma Purāṇa it is said:

arcye viṣṇau śilā-dhīr guruṣu nara-matir vaiṣṇave jāti-buddhir viṣṇor vā vaiṣṇavānāṁ kali-mala-mathane pāda-tīrthe ’mbu-buddhiḥ śrī-viṣṇor nāmni mantre sakala-kaluṣa-he śabde-sāmānya-buddhir viṣṇau sarveśvareśe tad-itara-sama-dhīr yasya vā nārakī saḥ

No one should consider the Deity in the temple to be made of stone or wood, nor should one consider the spiritual master an ordinary human being. No one should consider a Vaiṣṇava to belong to a particular caste or creed, and no one should consider caraṇāmṛta or Ganges water to be like ordinary water. Nor should anyone consider the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra to be a material vibration. All these expansions of Kṛṣṇa in the material world are simply demonstrations of the Lord’s mercy and willingness to give facility to His devotees who are engaged in His devotional service within the material world.

TEXT 218

TRANSLATION

”Within the universe the Lord is situated in different spiritual manifestations. These are situated on seven islands in nine sections. Thus Their pastimes are going on.

PURPORT

The seven islands are mentioned in the Siddhānta-śiromaṇi:

bhūmer ardhaṁ kṣīra-sindhor udaka-sthaṁ jambu-dvīpaṁ prāhur ācārya-varyāḥ ardhe ’nyasmin dvīpa-ṣaṭkasya yāmye kṣāra-kṣīrādy-ambudhīnāṁ niveśaḥ

TRANSLATION

”The Lord is situated in all the universes in different forms just to please His devotees. Thus the Lord destroys irreligious principles and establishes religious principles.

PURPORT

In the material world the Lord is situated in different arcā-mūrtis (Deities) in the temples, just to decrease the material activities of the conditioned soul and increase his spiritual activities. Particularly in India there are many temples throughout the country. Devotees may take advantage of them and go see the Lord at Jagannātha Purī, Vṛndāvana, Prayāga, Mathurā, Hardwar and Viṣṇu-kāñcī. When the devotees travel to these places and see the Lord, they become very happy in devotional service.

TRANSLATION

” ’The nine personalities mentioned are Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna, Aniruddha, Nārāyaṇa, Nṛsiṁha, Hayagrīva, Varāha and Brahmā.’

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta (1.451). The Brahmā mentioned herein is not a living entity. Sometimes, when there is a scarcity of living entities to take charge of Brahmā’s post, Mahā-Viṣṇu expands Himself as Lord Brahmā. This Brahmā is not considered to be a living entity; He is an expansion of Viṣṇu.

TRANSLATION

”The first personal expansion is Saṅkarṣaṇa, and the others are incarnations like the fish incarnation. Saṅkarṣaṇa is an expansion of the Puruṣa, or Viṣṇu. The incarnations such as Matsya, the fish incarnation, appear in different yugas for specific pastimes.

PURPORT

The puruṣa-avatāras are the Lords of the universal creation. These are the Kāraṇodakaśāyī Viṣṇu, Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu and Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu. There are also līlā-avatāras, and these include (1) Catuḥsana, (2) Nārada, (3) Varāha, (4) Matsya, (5) Yajña, (6) Nara-Nārāyaṇa, (7) Kārdami Kapila, (8) Dattātreya, (9) Hayaśīrṣā, (10) Haṁsa, (11) Dhruvapriya, or Pṛśnigarbha, (12) Ṛṣabha, (13) Pṛthu, (14) Nṛsiṁha, (15) Kūrma, (16) Dhanvantari, (17) Mohinī, (18) Vāmana, (19) Bhārgava Paraśurāma, (20) Rāghavendra, (21) Vyāsa, (22) Pralambāri Balarāma, (23) Kṛṣṇa, (24) Buddha and (25) Kalki.

These twenty-five Personalities of Godhead are known as līlā-avatāras. Because they appear in each day of Brahmā, or in each kalpa (millennium), they are sometimes known as kalpa-avatāras. Of these incarnations, Haṁsa and Mohinī are not very permanent or well known, but They are listed among the prābhava-avatāras. Kapila, Dattātreya, Ṛṣabha, Dhanvantari and Vyāsa are eternally situated and very widely known. They are also counted among the prābhava incarnations. Kūrma, Matsya, Nārāyaṇa, Varāha, Hayagrīva, Pṛśnigarbha, and Baladeva, the killer of Pralambāsura, are counted among the vaibhava-avatāras.

TRANSLATION

”There are six types of incarnations [avatāras] of Kṛṣṇa. One is the incarnations of Viṣṇu [puruṣa-avatāras], and another is the incarnations meant for the performance of pastimes [līlā-avatāras].

TEXT 246

guṇāvatāra, āra manvantarāvatāra yugāvatāra, āra śaktyāveśāvatāra

SYNONYMS

guṇa-avatāra-the incarnations to control the material qualities; āra-also; manu-antara-avatāra-the incarnations of the Manus; yuga-avatāra-the incarnations according to different yugas; āra-and; śakti-āveśa-avatāra-empowered incarnations.

TRANSLATION

”There are incarnations that control the material qualities [guṇa-avatāras], incarnations of the Manus [manvantara-avatāras], incarnations in different millenniums [yuga-avatāras] and incarnations of empowered living entities [śaktyāveśa-avatāras].

PURPORT

The guṇa-avatāras are three-Lord Brahmā, Lord Śiva and Lord Viṣṇu (Bhāg. 10.88.3). The avatāras of Manu, or manvantara-avatāras, are listed as follows in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (8.1.5,13): (1) Yajña, (2) Vibhu, (3) Satyasena, (4) Hari, (5) Vaikuṇṭha, (6) Ajita, (7) Vāmana, (8) Sārvabhauma, (9) Ṛṣabha, (10) Viṣvaksena, (11) Dharmasetu, (12) Sudhāmā, (13) Yogeśvara and (14) Bṛhadbhānu. Altogether these are fourteen in number, and of these, both Yajña and Vāmana are also counted among the līlā-avatāras. All these Manu incarnations are sometimes called vaibhava-avatāras.

The four yuga-avatāras are (1) śukla (white) in the Satya-yuga (Bhāg. 11.5.21), (2) rakta (red) in the Tretā-yuga (Bhāg. 11.5.24), (3) śyāma (dark blue) in the Dvāpara-yuga (Bhāg. 11.5.27), and (4) generally kṛṣṇa (black) but in special cases pīta (yellow) as Caitanya Mahāprabhu in the Kali-yuga, (Bhāg. 11.5.32 and 10.8.13).

The śaktyāveśa-avatāra is categorized into (1) forms of divine absorption (bhagavad-āveśa) like Kapiladeva or Ṛṣabhadeva and (2) divinely empowered forms (śaktyāveśa), of whom there are seven: (1) Śeṣa Nāga in the Vaikuṇṭha world, empowered for the personal service of the Supreme Lord (sva-sevana-śakti), (2) Anantadeva, empowered to bear all the planets within the universe (bhū-dhāraṇa-śakti), (3) Lord Brahmā, empowered with the energy to create the cosmic manifestation (sṛṣṭi-śakti), (4) Catuḥsana, or the Kumāras, specifically empowered to distribute transcendental knowledge (jñāna-śakti), (5) Nārada Muni, empowered to distribute devotional service (bhakti-śakti), (6) Mahārāja Pṛthu, specifically empowered to rule and maintain the living entities (pālana-śakti) and (7) Paraśurāma, specifically empowered to cut down rogues and demons (duṣṭa-damana-śakti).

SYNONYMS

bālya-childhood; paugaṇḍa-boyhood; haya-there are; vigrahera-of the Deity; dharma-characteristics; eta-rūpe-in so many forms; līlā-pastimes; karena-executes; vrajendra-nandana-Kṛṣṇa, the son of Nanda Mahārāja.

TRANSLATION

”Childhood and boyhood are the typical ages of the Deity. Kṛṣṇa, the son of Mahārāja Nanda, performed His pastimes as a child and as a boy.

TEXT 248

ananta avatāra kṛṣṇera, nāhika gaṇana śākhā-candra-nyāya kari dig-daraśana

SYNONYMS

ananta-unlimited; avatāra-incarnations; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; nāhika gaṇana-there is no possibility of counting; śākhā-candra-nyāya-by the analogy of the moon and the branches of a tree; kari-I make; dik-daraśana-a slight indication.

TRANSLATION

"There are innumerable incarnations of Kṛṣṇa, and there is no possibility of counting them. We can simply indicate them by giving the example of the moon and the branches of a tree.

PURPORT

Although the moon appears to be located in the branches of a tree, it is actually situated very far away. Similarly, none of the avatāras, or incarnations, of Lord Kṛṣṇa are within this material world, but they are visible by the causeless mercy of the Lord. We should not consider them to belong to this material world. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā:

avajānanti māṁ mūḍhā mānuṣīṁ tanum āśritam paraṁ bhāvam ajānanto mama bhūta-maheśvaram

"Fools deride Me when I descend in the human form. They do not know My transcendental nature and My supreme dominion over all that be." (Bg. 9.11)

Avatāras descend of their own free will, and although they may act like ordinary human beings, they do not belong to this material world. Lord Kṛṣṇa and His avatāras can be understood only by the grace of the Lord.

SYNONYMS

prathamei-in the beginning; kare-does; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; puruṣa-avatāra-the incarnation of the three Viṣṇus (Mahā-Viṣṇu, Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu and Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu); seita-that; puruṣa-Viṣṇu; haya-becomes; tri-vidha pra-kāra-three different manifestations.

TRANSLATION

"In the beginning, Kṛṣṇa incarnates Himself as puruṣa-avatāras, or Viṣṇu incarnations. These are of three types.

PURPORT

Up to this verse, the many types of expansions have been described. Now the manifestations of the Lord's different potencies will be described.

TEXT 251

TRANSLATION

" 'Viṣṇu has three forms called puruṣas. The first, Mahā-Viṣṇu, is the creator of the total material energy [mahat], the second is Garbhodakaśāyī, who is situated within each universe, and the third is Kṣīrodakaśāyī, who lives in the heart of every living being. He who knows these three becomes liberated from the clutches of māyā.'

PURPORT

This verse appears in the Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta (Pūrva-khaṇḍa 33), where it has been quoted from the Sātvata-tantra.

TRANSLATION

" 'In the spiritual world, there is neither the mode of passion, the mode of ignorance nor a mixture of both, nor is there adulterated goodness, nor the influence of time or māyā itself. Only the pure devotees of the Lord, who are worshiped both by demigods and by demons, reside in the spiritual world as the Lord's associates.'

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.9.10) was spoken by Śrīla Śukadeva Gosvāmī. He was answering the questions of Parīkṣit Mahārāja, who asked how the living entity falls down into the material world. Śukadeva Gosvāmī explained the cream of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam in four verses, which had been explained to Lord Brahmā at the end of the severe austerities he performed for one thousand celestial years. At that time, Brahmā was shown the spiritual world and its transcendental nature.

TEXT 272

sei puruṣa māyā-pāne kare avadhāna prakṛti kṣobhita kari' kare vīryera ādhāna

SYNONYMS

sei puruṣa-that Supreme Personality of Godhead; māyā-pāne-toward māyā; kare avadhāna-glances; prakṛti-the material nature; kṣobhita kari'-making agitated; kare-impregnates; vīryera-of the semina; ādhāna-injection.

TRANSLATION

"When the Supreme Personality of Godhead glances over the material energy, she becomes agitated. At that time, the Lord injects the original semina of the living entities.

PURPORT

In Bhagavad-gītā (7.10), Kṛṣṇa says, bījaṁ māṁ sarva-bhūtānām: "I am the original seed of all existences." This is also confirmed in another verse in Bhagavad-gītā (14.4):

sarva-yoniṣu kaunteya mūrtayaḥ sambhavanti yāḥ tāsāṁ brahma mahad-yonir ahaṁ bīja-pradaḥ pitā

"It should be understood that all species of life, O son of Kuntī, are made possible by birth in this material nature, and that I am the seed-giving father."

For a further explanation, one may refer to Brahma-saṁhitā (Chapter Five, verses 10-13). Brahma-saṁhitā also states (5.51):

agnir mahī gaganam ambu marud diśaś ca kālas tathātma-manasīti jagat-trayāṇi yasmād bhavanti vibhavanti viśanti yaṁ ca
govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

All material elements, as well as the spiritual sparks (individual souls), are emanating from the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is also confirmed by the Vedānta-sūtra (1.1). janmādy asya yataḥ: "The Absolute Truth is He from whom everything emanates." He is the Supreme Truth: satyaṁ paraṁ dhīmahi (Bhāg. 1.1.1). The absolute ultimate truth is Kṛṣṇa. Oṁ namo bhagavate vāsudevāya janmādy asya yato 'nvayād itarataś cārtheṣv abhijñaḥ sva-rāṭ: "The Absolute Truth is a person who is directly and indirectly cognizant of the entire cosmic manifestation." (Bhāg. 1.1.1)

The Absolute Truth, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, educated Lord Brahmā from the heart (Bhāg. 1.1.1): tene brahma hṛdā ya ādi-kavaye. Therefore the Absolute Truth cannot be dull matter; the Absolute Truth must be the Supreme Person Himself. Sei puruṣa māyā-pāne kare avadhāna. Simply by His glance, material nature is impregnated with all living entities. According to their karma and fruitive activity, they emerge in different bodies. That is the explanation given by Bhagavad-gītā (2.13):

dehino 'smin yathā dehe
kaumāraṁ yauvanaṁ jarā
tathā dehāntara-prāptir
dhīras tatra na muhyati

"As the embodied soul continually passes, in this body, from boyhood to youth to old age, the soul similarly passes into another body at death. The self-realized soul is not bewildered by such a change."

TEXT 273

svāṅga-viśeṣābhāsa-rūpe prakṛti-sparśana jīva-rūpa 'bīja' tāte kailā samarpaṇa

SYNONYMS

sva-aṅga-viśeṣa-ābhāsa-rūpe-in the form of a specific shadow from His personal body; prakṛti-sparśana-the Lord glances over the material nature; jīva-rūpa-having the form of the sparklike living entities, who are parts and parcels; bīja-semina; tāte-in that material nature; kailā samarpaṇa-impregnated.

TRANSLATION

"To impregnate with the seeds of living entities, the Lord Himself does not directly touch the material energy, but by His specific functional expansion, He touches the material energy, and thus the living entities, who are His parts and parcels, are impregnated into material nature.

PURPORT

According to Bhagavad-gītā:

mamaivāṁśo jīva-loke
jīva-bhūtaḥ sanātanaḥ
manaḥ ṣaṣṭhānīndriyāṇi
prakṛti-sthāni karṣati

"The living entities in this conditioned world are My eternal, fragmental parts. Due to conditioned life, they are struggling very hard with the six senses, which include the mind." (Bg. 15.7)

The word prakṛti-sparśana is explained in Caitanya-caritamṛta in reference to the way the living entities come in contact with dull matter. The glancing is performed by Mahā-Viṣṇu: sa aikṣata lokān nu sṛjā iti (Aitareya Upaniṣad 1.1.1). In the conditional stage we impregnate according to the bodily conception-that is, by sexual intercourse-but the Supreme Lord does not need sexual intercourse to impregnate. The impregnation is performed simply by His glance. This is also explained in the Brahma-saṁhitā (5.32):

aṅgāni yasya sakalendriya-vṛttimanti paśyanti pānti kalayanti ciraṁ jaganti ānanda-cinmaya-sad-ujjvala-vigrahasya
govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

Govinda can impregnate simply by glancing. In other words, His eyes can work as His genitals. He does not need genitals to beget a child. Indeed, Kṛṣṇa can beget any one of the living entities with any part of His body.

The word svāṅga-viśeṣābhāsa-rūpe, the form by which the Lord begets living entities in the material world, is explained herein. He is Lord Śiva. In the Brahma-saṁhitā it is stated that Lord Śiva, who is another form of Mahā-Viṣṇu, is like yogurt. Yogurt is nothing but milk, yet it is not milk. Similarly, Lord Śiva is considered the father of this universe, and material nature is considered the mother. The father and mother are known as Lord Śiva and the goddess Durgā. Together, Lord Śiva's genitals and the vagina of goddess Durgā are worshiped as śiva-liṅga. This is the origin of the material creation. Thus Lord Śiva's position is between the living entity and the Supreme Lord. Lord Śiva is neither the Supreme Personality of Godhead nor the living entity. He is the form through which the Supreme Lord works to beget living entities within this material world. As yogurt is prepared when milk is mixed with a culture, the form of Lord Śiva expands when the Supreme Personality of Godhead is in touch with material nature. The impregnation of material nature by the father, Lord Śiva, is wonderful because at one time innumerable living entities are conceived. Bhāgo jīvaḥ sa vijñeyaḥ sa cānantyāya kalpate (Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad 5.9). These living entities are very, very small.

keśāgra-śata-bhāgasya śatāṁśa-sadṛśātmakaḥ jīvaḥ sūkṣma-svarūpo 'yam saṅkhyātīto hi cit-kaṇaḥ

"If we divide the tip of a hair into a hundred parts and then take one of these parts and divide it again into a hundred parts, that very fine division is the size of but one of the numberless living entities. They are all cit-kaṇa, particles of spirit, not matter."

The innumerable brahmāṇḍas, or universes, come from the pores of the Lord's body, and innumerable living entities also come from the pores of the transcendental body of the Lord. This is the process of material creation. Without the living entity, this material nature has no value. Both emanate from the pores of the transcendental body of Lord Mahā-Viṣṇu. They are different energies. That is explained in Bhagavad-gītā:

bhūmir āpo 'nalo vāyuḥ khaṁ mano buddhir eva ca ahaṅkāra itīyaṁ me bhinnā prakṛtir aṣṭadhā

"Earth, water, fire, air, ether, mind, intelligence and false ego-all together these eight comprise My separated material energies." (Bg. 7.4) The material elements also come from the body of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and they are also a different type of energy. Although the living entities also come from the Lord's body, they are categorized as a superior energy.

apareyam itas tv anyāṁ
prakṛtiṁ viddhi me parām
jīva-bhūtāṁ mahā-bāho
yayedaṁ dhāryate jagat

"Besides this inferior nature, O mighty-armed Arjuna, there is a superior energy of Mine, which consists of all living entities who are struggling with material nature and are sustaining the universe." (Bg. 7.5) The inferior energy, matter, cannot act without the superior energy. All these things are very clearly explained in the Vedas. The materialistic theory that life develops from matter is incorrect. Life and matter come from the supreme living entity; therefore, being the source of both, that supreme living entity, Kṛṣṇa, is described in Vedānta-sūtra as janmādy asya yataḥ (1.1), or the original source of everything, sarva-kāraṇa-kāraṇam. This is further explained in the following verse.

TEXT 274

daivāt kṣubhita-dharmiṇyāṁ svasyāṁ yonau paraḥ pumān ādhatta vīryaṁ sā 'sūta mahat-tattvaṁ hiraṇmayam

SYNONYMS

daivāt-from time immemorial; kṣubhita-dharmiṇyām-the material nature, which is subjected to agitation; svasyām-which belongs to the Supreme as one of His energies; yonau-in the womb from which the living entity takes his birth; paraḥ pumān-the Supreme Brahman, the Personality of Godhead; ādhatta-impregnated; vīryam-semina; sā-that material nature; asūta-produced; mahat-tattvam-the total material energy; hiraṇmayam-the original source for the emanation of varieties of material things.

TRANSLATION

" 'From time immemorial, after agitating the material nature into three qualities, the Supreme Personality of Godhead places the semina of innumerable living entities within the womb of that material nature. Thus material nature gives birth to the total material energy known as the hiraṇmaya-mahat-tattva, the original symbolic representation of the cosmic manifestation.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.26.19). Lord Kapila is explaining to His mother the relationship between the Supreme Personality of Godhead and material nature. He is informing her how the Supreme Personality of Godhead is the original cause of the living entities, who emanated from material nature. Over and above the twenty-eight elements of the material creation is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the cause of all causes. Life comes not from matter but from life itself. As explained in the Vedas: nityo nityānāṁ cetanaś cetanānām (Kaṭha Upaniṣad 2.2.13). The Supreme Lord is the original source of life.

TEXT 275

kāla-vṛttyā tu māyāyāṁ guṇamayyām adhokṣajaḥ puruṣeṇātma-bhūtena vīryam ādhatta vīryavān

SYNONYMS

kāla-vṛttyā-in due course of time, as the immediate cause of creation; tu-but; māyāyām-within the material nature; guṇa-mayyām-full of the three material modes of nature (sattva-guṇa, rajo-guṇa and tamo-guṇa); adhokṣajaḥ-the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is beyond material conceptions; puruṣeṇa-by the enjoyer of material nature; ātma-bhūtena-who is an expansion of His personal self; vīryam-semina; ādhatta-placed; vīryavān-the omnipotent.

TRANSLATION

" 'In due course of time, the Supreme Personality of Godhead [Mahā-Viṣṇu or Mahā-Vaikuṇṭhanātha], by the agency of a further expansion of His personal self, places the seed of the living entities within the womb of material nature.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.5.26). This verse tells how the living entities come in contact with material nature. Just as a woman cannot beget children without uniting with a man, material nature cannot beget living entities without being in union with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. There is a history of how the Absolute Lord becomes the father of all living entities. In every system of religion, it is accepted that God is the supreme father of all living entities. According to Christianity, the supreme father, God, provides the living entities with all of life's necessities. Therefore they pray, "Give us this day our daily bread." Any religion that does not accept the Supreme Lord as the absolute father is called kaitava-dharma, or a cheating religion. Such religious systems are rejected in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.1.2): dharmaḥ projjhita-kaitavo 'tra. Only an atheist does not accept the omnipotent supreme father. If one accepts the omnipotent supreme father, he abides by His orders and becomes a religious person.

tabe mahat-tattva haite trividha ahaṅkāra yāhā haite devatendriya-bhūtera pracāra

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; mahat-tattva haite-from the total material energy; tri-vidha-three kinds of; ahaṅkāra-egotism; yāhā haite-from which; devatā-of predominating deities; indriya-of the senses; bhūtera-and of material elements; pracāra-expansion.

TRANSLATION

"First the total material energy is manifest, and from this arise the three types of egotism, which are the original sources from which all demigods [controlling deities], senses and material elements expand.

PURPORT

The three types of egotism (ahaṅkāra) are technically known as vaikārika, taijasa and tāmasa. The mahat-tattva is situated within the heart, or citta, and the predominating Deity of the mahat-tattva is Lord Vāsudeva (Bhāg. 3.26.21). The mahat-tattva is transformed into three divisions: (1) vaikārika, egotism in goodness (sāttvika-ahaṅkāra), from which the eleventh sense organ, the mind, is manifest and whose predominating Deity is Aniruddha (Bhāg. 3.26.27-28); (2) taijasa, or egotism in passion (rājasa-ahaṅkāra), from which the senses and intelligence are manifest and whose predominating Deity is Lord Pradyumna (Bhāg. 3.26.29-31); (3) tāmasa, or egotism in ignorance, from which sound vibration (śabda-tanmātra) expands. From the sound vibration, the sky (ākāśa) is manifest and, the senses, beginning with the ear, are also manifest (Bhāg. 3.26.32). Of these three types of egotism, Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa is the predominating Deity. In the philosophical discourse known as the Sāṅkhya-kārikā, it is stated: sāttvika ekādaśakaḥ pravartate vaikṛtād ahaṅkārāt-bhūtādes tan-mātraṁ tāmasa-taijasādy-ubhayam.

SYNONYMS

gavākṣe-from a hole at the top of a wall; uḍiyā-floating; yaiche-as; reṇu-atomic particles; āse yāya-come and go; puruṣa-niśvāsa-saha-with the exhaling of Mahā-Viṣṇu; brahmāṇḍa-the universes; bāhirāya-come outside; punarapi-again; niśvāsa-saha-by His inhalation; yāya-go; abhyantara-within; ananta-unlimited; aiśvarya-opulences; tāṅra-of Him; saba-everything; māyā-pāra-beyond the material conception.

TRANSLATION

"These universes are understood to be floating in air as the Mahā-Viṣṇu exhales. They are like atomic particles that float in sunshine and pass through the holes of a screen. All these universes are thus created by the exhalation of Mahā-Viṣṇu, and when Mahā-Viṣṇu inhales, they return to His body. The unlimited opulences of Mahā-Viṣṇu are completely beyond material conception.

sei puruṣa-that Personality of Godhead, Mahā-Viṣṇu; ananta-koṭi brahmāṇḍa-millions and trillions of brahmāṇḍas, or universes; sṛjiyā-after creating; eka-eka-in each one of them; mūrtye-in a form; praveśilā-entered; bahu mūrti hañā-becoming many forms.

TRANSLATION

"After creating the total number of universes, which are unlimited, the Mahā-Viṣṇu expanded Himself into unlimited forms and entered into each of them.

TEXT 285

praveśa kariyā dekhe, saba–andhakāra rahite nāhika sthāna, karilā vicāra

SYNONYMS

praveśa kariyā-after entering; dekhe-He sees; saba-everywhere; andhakāra-complete darkness; rahite-to remain there; nāhika sthāna-there was no place; karilā vicāra-then He considered.

TRANSLATION

"When Mahā-Viṣṇu entered each of the limitless universes, He saw that there was darkness all around and that there was no place to stay. He therefore began to consider the situation.

TEXT 286

nijāṅga-sveda-jale brahmāṇḍārdha bharila sei jale śeṣa-śayyāya śayana karila

SYNONYMS

nija-aṅga-from His own personal body; sveda-jale-by emitting the water of perspiration; brahmāṇḍa-ardha-half of the universe; bharila-filled; sei jale-on that water; śeṣa-śayyāya-on the bed of Lord Śeṣa; śayana karila-lay down.

TRANSLATION

"With the perspiration produced from His own body, the Lord filled half the universe with water. He then lay down on that water on the bed of Lord Śeṣa.

TEXT 287

tāṅra nābhi-padma haite uṭhila eka padma sei padme ha-ila brahmāra janma-sadma

SYNONYMS

tāṅra nābhi-padma haite-from His lotus navel; uṭhila-grew; eka-one; padma-lotus flower; sei padme-on that lotus flower; ha-ila-there was; brahmāra-of Lord Brahmā; janma-sadma-the place of generation.

TRANSLATION

"A lotus flower then sprouted from the lotus navel of that Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu. That lotus flower became Lord Brahmā's birthplace.

TEXT 288

sei padma-nāle ha-ila caudda bhuvana teṅho 'brahmā' hañā sṛṣṭi karila sṛjana sei padma-nāle-within the stem of that lotus; ha-ila-became manifested; caudda-fourteen; bhuvana-planetary systems; teṅho-He; brahmā-Lord Brahmā; hañā-having become; sṛṣṭi-the material creation; karila sṛjana-created.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"In the stem of that lotus flower the fourteen worlds were generated. Then He became Lord Brahmā and created the entire universe.

TEXT 289

'viṣṇu'-rūpa hañā kare jagat pālane guṇātīta viṣṇu–sparśa nāhi māyā-sane

SYNONYMS

viṣṇu-rūpa-Lord Kṛṣṇa in His form as Viṣṇu; hañā-becoming; kare-does; jagat pālane-maintenance of the material world; guṇa-atīta-beyond the material qualities, transcendental; viṣṇu-Lord Viṣṇu; sparśa-touching; nāhi-there is not; māyā-sane-with māyā, the material energy.

TRANSLATION

”In this way, the Supreme Personality of Godhead in His form of Viṣṇu maintains the entire material world. Since He is always beyond the material qualities, the material nature cannot touch Him.

PURPORT

The influence of the material energy cannot touch Lord Viṣṇu as she touches Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva. Therefore it is said that Lord Viṣṇu is transcendental to the material qualities. The incarnations of the material qualities-Lord Śiva and Lord Brahmā-are under the jurisdiction of the external energy. Lord Viṣṇu, however, is different. In the mantras of the Ṛg Veda it is said: oṁ tad viṣṇoḥ paramaṁ padam (Ṛg Veda-saṁhitā 1.22.20). The words paramaṁ padam indicate that He is transcendental to the material qualities. Because Lord Viṣṇu is not within the jurisdiction of the material qualities, He is always superior to the living entities who are controlled by material energy. This is one of the differences between the Supreme Lord and the living entities. Lord Brahmā is a very powerful living entity, and Lord Śiva is even more powerful. Therefore Lord Śiva is not accepted as a living entity, but at the same time is not considered to be on the level of Lord Viṣṇu.

TEXT 290

’rudra’-rūpa dhari kare jagat saṁhāra
sṛṣṭi, sthiti, pralaya haya icchāya yāṅhāra

SYNONYMS

rudra-rūpa dhari-accepting the form of Lord Śiva; kare-performs; jagat saṁhāra-dissolution of the universal creation; sṛṣṭi-creation; sthiti-maintenance; pralaya-and dissolution; haya-take place; icchāya-by the will; yāṅhāra-of whom.

TRANSLATION

”The Supreme Lord, and His form of Rudra [Lord Śiva], brings about the dissolution of this material creation. In other words, by His will only, there is creation, maintenance and dissolution of the whole cosmic manifestation.

brahmā, viṣṇu, śiva–tāṅra guṇa-avatāra sṛṣṭi-sthiti-pralayera tinera adhikāra

SYNONYMS

brahmā-Lord Brahmā; viṣṇu-Lord Viṣṇu; śiva-Lord Śiva; tāṅra-of Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu; guṇa-avatāra-incarnations of the material qualities; sṛṣṭi-sthiti-pralayera-of the three functions, namely creation, maintenance and dissolution; tinera adhikāra-there is control by the three deities (Lord Brahmā, Lord Viṣṇu and Lord Śiva).

TRANSLATION

”Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva are His three incarnations of the material qualities. Creation, maintenance and destruction respectively are under the charge of these three personalities.

TEXT 292

hiraṇyagarbha-antaryāmī–garbhodakaśāyī
’sahasra-śīrṣādi’ kari’ vede yāṅre gāi

SYNONYMS

hiraṇyagarbha-named Hiraṇyagarbha; antaryāmī-the Supersoul; garbha-udaka-śāyī-Lord Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu; sahasra-śīrṣā-ādi kari’-by the Vedic hymns beginning with sahasra-śīrṣā (Ṛg Veda-saṁhitā 10.90); vede yāṅre ga-i-unto whom the Vedas pray.

TRANSLATION

”Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu, known within the universe as Hiraṇyagarbha and the antaryāmī, or Supersoul, is glorified in the Vedic hymns, beginning with the hymn that starts with the word sahasra-śīrṣā.

TEXT 293

māyāra ’āśraya’ haya, tabu māyā-pāra

SYNONYMS

ei ta’-in this way; dvitīya-puruṣa-the second Personality of Godhead; brahmāṇḍera īśvara-the master of the universe; māyāra-of the external, material energy; āśraya haya-becomes the shelter; tabu-still; māyā-pāra-is beyond the touch of the material energy.

TRANSLATION

”This second Personality of Godhead, known as Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu, is the master of each and every universe and the shelter of the external energy. Nonetheless, He remains beyond the touch of the external energy.

TEXT 294

tṛtīya-puruṣa viṣṇu–’guṇa-avatāra’

SYNONYMS

tṛtīya-puruṣa-the third Personality; viṣṇu-Lord Viṣṇu; guṇa-avatāra-the incarnation of the material quality of goodness; dui avatāra-bhitara-within the two incarnations; gaṇanā-tāṅhāra-He is designated.

TRANSLATION

”The third expansion of Viṣṇu is the Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu, who is the incarnation of the quality of goodness. He is to be counted within the two types of incarnations [puruṣa-avatāras and guṇa-avatāras].

TEXT 295

SYNONYMS

virāṭ-the universal form; vyaṣṭi-jīvera-of all other living entities; teṅho-He; antaryāmī-the Supersoul; kṣīra-udaka-śāyī-Lord Viṣṇu who lies down in the ocean of milk; teṅho-He; pālana-kartā-the maintainer; svāmī-the master.

TRANSLATION

”This Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu is the universal form of the Lord and is the Supersoul within every living entity. He is known as Kṣīrodakaśāyī, or the Lord who lies on the ocean of milk. He is the maintainer and master of the universe.

TEXT 296

SYNONYMS

līlā-avatāra-incarnations for pastimes; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; nā yāya gaṇana-are not countable; pradhāna kariyā-chiefly; kahi-let me describe; dik-daraśana-by a sample direction.

TRANSLATION

”No one can count the innumerable pastime incarnations of Lord Kṛṣṇa, but I shall describe the principal ones.

TEXT 298

matsya, kūrma, raghunātha, nṛsiṁha, vāmana varāhādi–lekhā yāṅra nā yāya gaṇana

SYNONYMS

matsya-the fish incarnation; kūrma-the tortoise incarnation; raghunātha-Lord Rāmacandra; nṛsiṁha-the man-lion incarnation; vāmana-the dwarf incarnation; varāha-ādi-the hog incarnation and others; lekhā-describing; yāṅra-of which incarnations; nā yāya gaṇana-cannot be counted.

TRANSLATION

”Some of the pastime incarnations are the fish incarnation, the tortoise incarnation, Lord Rāmacandra, Lord Nṛsiṁha, Lord Vāmana, and Lord Varāha. There is no end to them.

TRANSLATION

” ’O Lord of the universe, best of the Yadu dynasty, we are offering our prayers unto You mainly to diminish the heavy burden of the universe. Indeed, You diminished this burden formerly by incarnating in the form of a fish, a horse [Hayagrīva], a tortoise, a lion [Lord Nṛsiṁha], a boar [Lord Varāha] and a swan. You also incarnated as Lord Rāmacandra, Paraśurāma and Vāmana the dwarf. You have always protected us demigods and the universe in this way. Now please continue.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.40).

guṇāvatārera ebe śuna vivarana

SYNONYMS

līlā-avatārera-of the incarnations of pastimes; kailuṅ-I have done; dik-daraśana-indicating the direction only; guṇa-avatārera-of incarnations of the material qualities; ebe-now; śuna vivaraṇa-hear the description.

TRANSLATION

”I have given a few examples of pastime incarnations. Now I will describe the guṇa-avatāras, the incarnations of the material qualities. Please listen.

TEXT 301

brahmā, viṣṇu, śiva,–tina guṇa avatāra tri-guṇa aṅgīkari’ kare sṛṣṭy-ādi-vyavahāra brahmā, viṣṇu, śiva-Lord Brahmā, Lord Viṣṇu and Lord Śiva; tina-three; guṇa avatāra-the incarnations of the material qualities; tri-guṇa-the three qualities of material nature; aṅgīkari’-accepting; kare-does; sṛṣṭi-ādi-vyavahāra-transactions in reference to the creation, maintenance and dissolution.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”There are three functions within this material world. Everything here is created, everything is maintained for some time, and everything is finally dissolved. The Lord therefore incarnates Himself as the controllers of the three qualities-sattva-guṇa, rajo-guṇa and tamo-guṇa [goodness, passion and ignorance]. Thus the transactions of the material world take place.

TEXT 302

bhakti-miśra-kṛta-puṇye kona jīvottama rajo-guṇe vibhāvita kari’ tāṅra mana

SYNONYMS

bhakti-miśra-kṛta-puṇye-because of pious activities mixed with devotional service; kona-someone; jīva-uttama-the best of the living entities; rajaḥ-guṇe-by the mode of passion; vibhāvita-influenced; kari’-making; tāṅra-his; mana-mind.

TRANSLATION

”Because of his past pious activities mixed with devotional service, the first-class living entity is influenced by the mode of passion within his mind.

TEXT 303

garbhodakaśāyī-dvārā śakti sañcāri’ vyaṣṭi sṛṣṭi kare kṛṣṇa brahmā-rūpa dhari’ garbha-udaka-śāyi-dvārā-by Lord Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu; śakti sañcāri’-giving him special powers; vyaṣṭi-total; sṛṣṭi-creation; kare-does; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; brahmā-rūpa dhari’-accepting the form of Lord Brahmā.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”Such a devotee is empowered by Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu. In this way, an incarnation of Kṛṣṇa in the form of Brahmā engineers the total creation of the universe.

PURPORT

The Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu puruṣa-avatāra expansion of Lord Viṣṇu accepts the material modes-sattva-guṇa, rajo-guṇa and tamo-guṇa-and thus incarnates as Lord Viṣṇu, Brahmā and Śiva. These are incarnations of the material qualities. Among the many superior living entities qualified with pious activities and devotional service, one, called Lord Brahmā, is infused with the quality of passion by the supreme will of Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu. Thus Lord Brahmā becomes the incarnation of the creative energy of the Lord.

SYNONYMS

bhāsvān-the illuminating sun; yathā-as; aśma-sakaleṣu-in various types of precious stones; nijeṣu-his own; tejaḥ-brilliance; svīyam-his own; kiyat-to some extent; prakaṭayati-manifests; api-also; tadvat-similarly; atra-here; brahmā-Lord Brahmā; yaḥ-who is; eṣaḥ-the Lord; jagat-aṇḍa-vidhāna-kartā-becomes the chief of the universe; govindam ādi-puruṣam-Lord Govinda, the original Supreme Personality of Godhead; tam-Him; aham-I; bhajāmi-worship.

TRANSLATION

” ’The sun manifests his brilliance in a gem, although it is stone. Similarly, the original Personality of Godhead, Govinda, manifests His special power in a pious living entity. Thus the living entity becomes Brahmā and manages the affairs of the universe. Let me worship Govinda, the original Personality of Godhead.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Brahma-saṁhitā (5.49).

TEXT 305

SYNONYMS

kona kalpe-in some lifetime of Brahmā; yadi-if; yogya-suitable; jīva-living entity; nāhi-not; pāya-is available; āpane-personally; īśvara-the Supreme Lord; tabe-then; aṁśe-by His plenary expansion; brahmā haya-becomes Lord Brahmā.

TRANSLATION

”If in a kalpa a suitable living entity is not available to take charge of Brahmā’s post, the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself personally expands and becomes Lord Brahmā.

PURPORT

One day of Brahmā consists of the four yugas multiplied a thousand times-or, according to solar calculations, 4,320,000,000 years-and such also is the duration of his night. One year of Brahmā’s life consists of 360 days and nights, and Brahmā lives for one hundred such years. Such is the life of a Brahmā.

SYNONYMS

yasya-whose; aṅghri-paṅkaja-lotuslike feet; rajaḥ-the dust; akhila-loka-of the universal planetary systems; pālaiḥ-by the masters; mauli-uttamaiḥ-with valuable turbans on their heads; dhṛtam-accepted; upāsita-worshiped; tīrtha-tīrtham-the sanctifier of the holy places; brahmā-Lord Brahmā; bhavaḥ-Lord Śiva; aham api-even I; yasya-of whom; kalāḥ-portions; kalāyāḥ-of a plenary portion; śrīḥ-the goddess of fortune; ca-and; udvahema-we carry; ciram-eternally; asya-of Him; nṛpa-āsanam-the throne of a king; kva-where.

TRANSLATION

” ’What is the value of a throne to Lord Kṛṣṇa? The masters of the various planetary systems accept the dust of His lotus feet on their crowned heads. That dust makes the holy places sacred, and even Lord Brahmā, Lord Śiva, Lakṣmī and I myself, who are all portions of His plenary portion, eternally carry that dust on our heads.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.68.37). When the Kauravas flattered Baladeva so that He would become their ally and spoke ill of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Lord Baladeva was angry and spoke this verse.

TEXT 307

nijāṁśa-kalāya kṛsṇa tamo-guṇa aṅgīkari’ saṁhārārthe māyā-saṅge rudra-rūpa dhari

SYNONYMS

nija-aṁśa-of His personal plenary expansion; kalāya-by an expansion known as kalā; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; tamaḥ-guṇa-the material mode of darkness; aṅgīkari’-accepting; saṁhāra-arthe-for the purpose of dissolution; māyā-saṅge-in association with the external energy; rudra-rūpa-the form of Rudra; dhari-assumes.

TRANSLATION

”Lord Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, expands a portion of His plenary portion and, accepting the association of the material mode of ignorance, assumes the form of Rudra to dissolve the cosmic manifestation.

PURPORT

This is a description of the Rudra form, which is another expansion of Kṛṣṇa. Only viṣṇu-mūrtis are expansions of Kṛṣṇa’s personal and plenary portions. Mahā Viṣṇu, who lies on the Causal Ocean, is an expansion of Saṅkarṣaṇa. When Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu accepts the material modes of nature for the purpose of dissolving the cosmic manifestation, His form is called Rudra. As already explained, Lord Viṣṇu is the controller of māyā. How, then, can He associate with māyā? The conclusion is that the incarnation of Lord Śiva or Lord Brahmā indicates the absence of the supreme power of Viṣṇu. When the supreme power is not there, it is possible to associate with māyā, the external energy. Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva are to be considered creations of māyā.

TEXT 308

māyā-saṅga-vikārī rudra–bhinnābhinna rūpa jīva-tattva nahe, nahe kṛsṇera ’svarūpa’

SYNONYMS

māyā-saṅga-by association with māyā; vikārī-transformed; rudra-the form of Rudra; bhinna-abhinna rūpa-having different types of forms; jīva-tattva nahe-still he is not called jīva-tattva; nahe-nor; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; sva-rūpa-personal form.

TRANSLATION

”Rudra, Lord Śiva, has various forms, which are transformations brought about by association with māyā. Although Rudra is not on a level with the jīva-tattvas, he still cannot be considered a personal expansion of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Rudra is simultaneously one with and different from the viṣṇu-tattva. Due to his association with māyā, he is different from the viṣṇu-tattva, but at the same time he is an expansion of Kṛṣṇa’s personal form. This situation is called bhedābheda-tattva, or acintya-bhedābheda-tattva, simultaneously one and different.

TEXT 309

dugdha yena amla-yoge dadhi-rūpa dhare dugdhāntara vastu nahe, dugdha haite nāre

SYNONYMS

dugdha-milk; yena-as; amla:yoge-in association with a sour substance; dadhi-rūpa-the form of yogurt; dhare-takes; dugdha-antara-something other than milk; vastu-substance; nahe-is not; dugdha-milk; haite-to be; nāre-is not able.

TRANSLATION

”Milk is transformed into yogurt when it associates with a yogurt culture. Thus yogurt is nothing but milk, but still it is not milk.

PURPORT

Of the three deities supervising the creation, maintenance and dissolution of the universe, Lord Viṣṇu is never separate from the original Viṣṇu. However, Lord Śiva and Brahmā, due to their association with māyā, are different from Viṣṇu. Viṣṇu cannot be transformed into any form of material energy. Whenever there is association with māyā, the personality involved must be different from Lord Viṣṇu. Therefore Lord Śiva and Lord Brahmā are called guṇa-avatāras, for they associate with the material qualities. The conclusion is that Rudra is a transformation of Viṣṇu, but he is not exactly Lord Viṣṇu. Therefore, he does not come within the category of the viṣṇu-tattvas. Thus he is inconceivably one with Viṣṇu and different from Him. The example given in this verse is very clear. Milk is compared to Viṣṇu. As soon as milk touches a sour substance, it becomes yogurt, or Lord Śiva. Although yogurt is constitutionally milk it cannot be used in place of milk.

TRANSLATION

” ’Milk changes into yogurt when mixed with a yogurt culture, but actually it is constitutionally nothing but milk. Similarly, Govinda, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, assumes the form of Lord Śiva [Śambhu] for the special purpose of material transactions. I offer my obeisances at His lotus feet.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Brahma-saṁhitā (5.45).

TEXT 311

’śiva’–māyā-śakti-saṅgī, tamo-guṇā veśa māyātīta, guṇātīta ’viṣṇu’–parameśa śiva-Lord Śiva; māyā-śakti-saṅgī-an associate of the external energy; tamaḥ-guṇa-āveśa-absorbed by the quality of ignorance; māyā-atīta-transcendental to the external energy; guṇa-atīta-transcendental to the qualities of matter; viṣṇu-Viṣṇu; parama-īśa-the Supreme Lord.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”Lord Śiva is an associate of the external energy; therefore he is absorbed in the material quality of darkness. Lord Viṣṇu is transcendental to māyā and the qualities of māyā. Therefore He is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

PURPORT

Viṣṇu is beyond the range of the material manifestation, and He is not within the control of the material energy. He is the supreme independent Personality of Godhead. This is even admitted by Śaṅkarācārya: nārāyaṇaḥ paro ’vyaktāt (Gīta-bhāṣya). In his constitutional form, Śiva is a mahā-bhāgavata, a supreme devotee of the Lord, but because he accepts māyā’s association-especially the quality of ignorance-he is not free from māyā’s influence. Such an intimate association is completely absent in the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Viṣṇu. Lord Śiva accepts māyā, but in the presence of Lord Viṣṇu, māyā does not exist. Consequently Lord Śiva has to be considered a product of māyā. When Lord Śiva is free from māyā’s influence, he is in the position of a mahā-bhāgavata, a supreme devotee of Lord Viṣṇu. Vaiṣṇavānāṁ yathā śambhuḥ.

TEXT 312

śivaḥ śakti-yuktaḥ śaśvat triliṅgo guṇa-saṁvṛtaḥ vaikārikas taijasaś ca

SYNONYMS

śivaḥ-Lord Śiva; śakti-yuktaḥ-associated with material nature; śaśvat-eternally; tri-liṅgaḥ-in three features; guṇa-saṁvṛtaḥ-covered by the modes of nature; vaikārikaḥ-one is called vaikārika; taijasaḥ ca-another is called taijasa; tāmasaḥ ca-as well as tāmasa; iti-thus; aham-egotism; tri-dhā-three kinds.

TRANSLATION

” ’The truth about Lord Śiva is that he is always covered with three material coverings-vaikārika, taijasa and tāmasa. Because of these three modes of material nature, he always associates with the external energy and egotism itself.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.88.3).

SYNONYMS

hariḥ-the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Viṣṇu; hi-certainly; nirguṇaḥ-transcendental to all material qualities; sākṣāt-directly; puruṣaḥ-the supreme enjoyer; prakṛteḥ-material nature; paraḥ-beyond; saḥ-He; sarva-dṛk-the seer of everything; upadraṣṭā-the overseer of everything; tam-Him; bhajan-by worshiping; nirguṇaḥ-transcendental to material qualities; bhavet-one becomes.

TRANSLATION

” ’Śrī Hari, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is situated beyond the range of material nature; therefore He is the supreme transcendental person. He can see everything inside and outside; therefore He is the supreme overseer of all living entities. If someone takes shelter at His lotus feet and worships Him, he also attains a transcendental position.’

PURPORT

This is also a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.88.5).

svarūpa–aiśvarya-pūrṇa, kṛṣṇa-sama prāya kṛṣṇa aṁśī, teṅho aṁśa, vede hena gāya

SYNONYMS

sva-rūpa-personal expansion; aiśvarya-pūrṇa-full of all opulences; kṛṣṇa-sama-equal to Kṛṣṇa; prāya-almost; kṛṣṇa aṁśī-Kṛṣṇa is the Supreme Personality of Godhead; teṅho-Lord Viṣṇu; aṁśa-personal expansion; vede-the Vedas; hena-thus; gāya-sing.

TRANSLATION

"Lord Viṣṇu is in the category of svāṁśa because He has opulences almost equal to Kṛṣṇa's. Kṛṣṇa is the original person, and Lord Viṣṇu is His personal expansion. This is the verdict of all Vedic literature.

PURPORT

Although an incarnation of the material energy, Lord Brahmā is nonetheless the director of the material mode of passion. Similarly, Lord Śiva, although simultaneously one with and different from Lord Kṛṣṇa, is still the incarnation of the mode of darkness. However, Lord Viṣṇu is Kṛṣṇa's personal expansion; therefore He is the director of the mode of goodness and is always transcendentally situated beyond the jurisdiction of the modes of material nature. Lord Viṣṇu is the original personal expansion of Kṛṣṇa, and Kṛṣṇa is the original source of all incarnations. As far as power is concerned, Lord Viṣṇu is as powerful as Lord Kṛṣṇa because He possesses all the opulences.

SYNONYMS

dīpa-arciḥ-the flame of a lamp; eva-as; hi-certainly; daśā-antaram-another lamp; abhyupetya-expanding; dīpāyate-illuminates; vivṛta-hetu-with its expanded cause; samāna-dharmā-equally powerful; yaḥ-who; tādṛk-similarly; eva-certainly; hi-certainly; ca-also; viṣṇutayā-by His expansion as Lord Viṣṇu; vibhāti-illuminates; govindam-to Lord Kṛṣṇa; ādi-puruṣam-the supreme original person; tam-to Him; aham-I; bhajāmi-offer my worshipful respect.

TRANSLATION

" 'When the flame of one candle is expanded to another candle and placed in a different position, it burns separately, and its illumination is as powerful as the original candle. Similarly, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Govinda, expands Himself in different forms as Viṣṇu, who is equally luminous, powerful and opulent. Let me worship that Supreme Personality of Godhead, Govinda.'

TRANSLATION

" 'Lord Brahmā said, "I am engaged by the Supreme Personality of Godhead to create. Following His orders, Lord Śiva dissolves everything. The Supreme Personality of Godhead, in His form of Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu, maintains all the affairs of material nature. Thus the supreme controller of the three modes of material nature is Lord Viṣṇu." '

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.6.32). Lord Brahmā gave this information to Devarṣi Nārada when he was receiving instructions from Lord Brahmā to understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Paramātmā. After describing the universal form of the Lord, Lord Brahmā explained that his position and Lord Śiva's position are controlled by Lord Viṣṇu.

TRANSLATION

”As the white incarnation, the Lord taught religion and meditation. He offered benedictions to Kardama Muni, and in this way He showed His causeless mercy.

PURPORT

Kardama Muni was one of the prajāpatis. He married Devahūti, the daughter of Manu, and their son was Kapiladeva. The Supreme Lord was very pleased with Kardama Muni’s austerities, and He appeared before Kardama Muni in a whitish body. This happened in the Satya-yuga millennium, when people were accustomed to practicing meditation.

TRANSLATION

” ’In the Dvāpara-yuga the Personality of Godhead appears in a blackish hue. He is dressed in yellow, He holds His own weapons, and He is decorated with the Kaustubha jewel and marks of Śrīvatsa. That is how His symptoms are described.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.5.27). The śyāma color is not exactly blackish. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura compares it to the color of the atasī flower. It is not that Lord Kṛṣṇa Himself appears in a blackish color in all the Dvāpara-yugas. In other Dvāpara-yugas, previous to Lord Kṛṣṇa’s appearance, the Supreme Lord appeared in a greenish body by His own personal expansion. This is mentioned in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, Hari-vaṁśa and Mahābhārata.

TRANSLATION

” ’I offer my respectful obeisances unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead, expanded as Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna and Aniruddha.’

PURPORT

This is a prayer from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.5.29) spoken by Karabhājana Muni when he was questioned by Mahārāja Nimi, the King of Videha, about the incarnations in specific yugas and their method of worship. Karabhājana Muni was one of the nine Yogendras, and he met the King to inform him about future incarnations.

TEXT 339

ei mantre dvāpare kare kṛṣṇārcana
’kṛṣṇa-nāma-saṅkīrtana’–kali-yugera dharma

SYNONYMS

ei mantre-by this mantra; dvāpare-in the age of Dvāpara; kare-perform; kṛṣṇa-arcana-the worship of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kṛṣṇa-nāma-saṅkīrtana-chanting of the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kali-yugera dharma-the occupational duty in the Age of Kali.

TRANSLATION

”By this mantra, the people worship Lord Kṛṣṇa in the Dvāpara-yuga. In the Kali-yuga the occupational duty of the people is to chant congregationally the holy name of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (12.3.51):

kaler doṣa-nidhe rājann
asti hy eko mahān guṇaḥ kīrtanād eva kṛṣṇasya mukta-saṅgaḥ paraṁ vrajet

In Kali-yuga one worships Lord Kṛṣṇa by chanting Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare Hare Hare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare. To propagate this movement, Lord Kṛṣṇa personally appeared as Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. That is described in the following verse.

TRANSLATION

” ’Whatever result was obtained in Satya-yuga by meditating on Viṣṇu, in Tretā-yuga by performing sacrifices and in Dvāpara-yuga by serving the Lord’s lotus feet can also be obtained in Kali-yuga simply by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.’

PURPORT

This verse is quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (12.3.52). At the present moment in Kali-yuga there are many false meditators who concoct some imaginary form and try to meditate upon it. It has become fashionable to meditate, but people know nothing about the object of meditation. That is explained here. Yad dhyāyato viṣṇum. One has to meditate upon Lord Viṣṇu or Lord Kṛṣṇa.

Without referring to the śāstras, so-called meditators aim at impersonal objects. Lord Kṛṣṇa has condemned them in Bhagavad-gītā (12.5):

kleśo ’dhikataras teṣām avyaktāsakta-cetasām avyaktā hi gatir duḥkhaṁ dehavadbhir avāpyate

”For those whose minds are attached to the unmanifested, impersonal feature of the Supreme, advancement is very troublesome. To make progress in that discipline is always difficult for those who are embodied.”

Not knowing how to meditate, foolish people simply suffer, and there is no benefit derived from their spiritual activities. The same reference can be found in the following verse from the Viṣṇu Purāṇa (6.2.17), Padma Purāṇa (Uttara-khaṇḍa 72.25) and Bṛhannāradīya Purāṇa (38.97).

TRANSLATION

” ’Those who are advanced and highly qualified and are interested in the essence of life, know the good qualities of Kali-yuga. Such people worship the Age of Kali because in this age, simply by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahāmantra, one can advance in spiritual knowledge and attain life’s goal.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.5.36) spoken by the great sage Karabhājana Ṛṣi, one of the nine Yogendras. The sage was informing Mahārāja Nimi about the people’s duty to worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead according to different processes in different yugas.

TRANSLATION

Sanātana Gosvāmī said, "I am a very insignificant living entity. I am low and poorly behaved. How can I understand who is the incarnation for this Age of Kali?"

PURPORT

This verse is very important in reference to the incarnations of God. At present there are especially many rascals prevalent in India who proclaim themselves incarnations of God or goddesses. Thus they are fooling and bluffing foolish people. On behalf of the general populace, Sanātana Gosvāmī presented himself as a foolish, lowborn, poorly behaved person, although he was a most exalted personality. Inferior people cannot accept the real God, yet they are very eager to accept an imitation God who can simply bluff foolish people. All this is going on in this Age of Kali. To guide these foolish people, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu answers the question as follows.

TEXT 352

prabhu kahe,–"anyāvatāra śāstra-dvāre jāni kalite avatāra taiche śāstra-vākye māni

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; anya-avatāra-the incarnations in other yugas; śāstra-dvāre jāni-one has to accept by reference to the śāstras; kalite-in this Age of Kali; avatāra-incarnation; taiche-similarly; śāstra-vākye māni-one has to accept according to the description of revealed scriptures.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu replied, "As in other ages an incarnation is accepted according to the directions of the śāstras, in this Age of Kali an incarnation of God should be accepted in that way.

PURPORT

According to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, this is the way an incarnation should be accepted. Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says, sādhu-śāstra-guru-vākya, cittete kariyā aikya. One should accept a thing as genuine by studying the words of saintly people, the spiritual master and śāstra. The actual center is śāstra, the revealed scripture. If a spiritual master does not speak according to revealed scripture, he is not to be accepted. Similarly, if a saintly person does not speak according to the śāstra, he is not a saintly person. Śāstra is the center for all. Unfortunately, at the present moment, people do not refer to the śāstras; therefore they accept rascals as incarnations, and consequently they have made incarnations into a very cheap thing. Intelligent people who follow Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's instructions and the instructions of the ācārya, the bona fide spiritual master, will not accept a pretender as an incarnation of God. In Kali-yuga, the only incarnation is Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Imitation incarnations take advantage of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The Lord appeared within the past five hundred years, played as the son of a brāhmaṇa from Nadia and introduced the saṅkīrtana movement. Imitating Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and ignoring the śāstra, rascals present themselves as incarnations and introduce their rascaldom as a religious process. As we have repeatedly said, religion can be given only by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. From the discussions in Caitanya-caritāmṛta, we can understand that in different ages the Supreme Lord introduces different systems and different religious duties. In this Age of Kali, the only incarnation of Kṛṣṇa is Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and He introduced the religious duty of Kali-yuga, the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra: Hare Kṛṣṇa, Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare HareHare Rāma, Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare.

TEXT 353

sarvajña munira vākya–śāstra-'paramāṇa' āmā-sabā jīvera haya śāstra-dvārā jñāna'

SYNONYMS

sarva-jña munira vākya-the words of the omniscient muni (Vyāsadeva); śāstra-paramāṇa-evidence of revealed scriptures; āmā-sabā-all of us; jīvera-of the conditioned souls; haya-there is; śāstra-dvārā-through the medium of revealed scriptures; jñāna-knowledge.

TRANSLATION

"The Vedic literatures composed by the omniscient Mahāmuni Vyāsadeva are evidence of all spiritual existence. Only through these revealed scriptures can all conditioned souls attain knowledge.

PURPORT

Foolish people try to concoct knowledge by manufacturing something in their brains. That is not the real way of knowledge. Knowledge is śabda-pramāṇa, evidence from Vedic literature. Śrīla Vyāsadeva is called Mahāmuni. He is also known as Vedavyāsa because he has compiled so many śāstras. He has divided the Vedas into four divisions-Sāma, Ṛg, Yajur and Atharva. He has expanded the Vedas into eighteen Purāṇas and has summarized Vedic knowledge in the Vedānta-sūtra. He also compiled the Mahābhārata, which is accepted as the fifth Veda. Bhagavad-gītā is contained within the Mahābhārata. Therefore Bhagavad-gītā is also Vedic literature (smṛti). Some of the Vedic literatures are called śrutis, and some are called smṛtis. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī recommends in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.101):

śruti-smṛti-purāṇādipañcarātra-vidhiṁ vinā aikāntikī harer bhaktir utpātāyaiva kalpate

Unless one refers to śāstra (śruti, smṛti and purāṇādi), one's spiritual activity simply disturbs society. There is no king or government to check people, and therefore society has fallen into a chaotic condition as far as spiritual understanding is concerned. Taking advantage of this chaotic condition, many rascals have appeared and proclaimed themselves incarnations of God. As a result, the entire population is indulging in sinful activities such as illicit sex, intoxication, gambling and meat-eating. Out of many sinful people, many incarnations of God are emerging. This is a very regrettable situation, especially in India.

TEXT 354

SYNONYMS

avatāra-the actual incarnation of Godhead; nāhi-never; kahe-says; āmi avatāra-I am an incarnation; muni-the great sage Mahāmuni Vyāsadeva; saba jāni'-knowing all (past, present and future); kare lakṣaṇa-vicāra-describes the symptoms of the avatāras.

TRANSLATION

"An actual incarnation of God never says, 'I am God,' or 'I am an incarnation of God.' The great sage Vyāsadeva, knowing all, has already recorded the characteristics of the avatāras in the śāstras.

PURPORT

In this verse it is clearly stated that a real incarnation of God never claims to be a real incarnation. According to the symptoms described in the śāstra, one can understand who is an avatāra and who is not.

TRANSLATION

" 'The Lord does not have a material body, yet He descends among human beings in His transcendental body as an incarnation. Therefore it is very difficult for us to understand who is an incarnation. Only by His extraordinary prowess and uncommon activities, which are impossible for embodied living entities, can one partially understand the incarnation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.'

TRANSLATION

” ’I offer my obeisances unto Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, son of Vasudeva, who is the supreme all-pervading Personality of Godhead. I meditate upon Him, the transcendent reality, who is the primeval cause of all causes, from whom all manifested universes arise, in whom they dwell and by whom they are destroyed. I meditate upon that eternally effulgent Lord who is directly and indirectly conscious of all manifestations and yet is beyond them. It is He only who first imparted Vedic knowledge unto the heart of Brahmā, the first created being. Through Him this world, like a mirage, appears real even to great sages and demigods. Because of Him, the material universes, created by the three modes of nature, appear factual, although they are unreal. I meditate, therefore, upon Him, the Absolute Truth, who is eternally existent in His transcendental abode and who is forever free of illusion.’

PURPORT

This verse, quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.1.1), links Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam with the Vedānta-sūtra with the words janmādy asya yataḥ. It is stated that the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Vāsudeva, is the Absolute Truth beyond the material creation. This has been accepted by all ācāryas. Even Śaṅkarācārya, the most elevated impersonalist, says in the beginning of his commentary on Bhagavad-gītā: nārāyaṇaḥ paro ’vyaktāt. When this material creation is not yet manifested from the mahat-tattva, it is called avyakta, and when it is demonstrated from that total energy, it is called vyakta. Nārāyaṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is beyond this vyakta-avyakta, manifested and unmanifested material nature. This is the chief qualification of the Supreme Personality of Godhead when He assumes a particular incarnation. Kṛṣṇa tells Arjuna that they both took birth many, many times before. Kṛṣṇa remembers everything about His previous appearances, but Arjuna does not remember. Since Kṛṣṇa is beyond the cosmic creation, He is in the exalted position of being able to remember everything in the past. Everything within the cosmic creation has a material body, but Kṛṣṇa, being beyond the material cosmic creation, always has a spiritual body. He imparted Vedic knowledge into the heart of Brahmā. Although Brahmā is the most important and exalted personality within this universe, he could not remember what he did in his past life. Kṛṣṇa has to remind him through the heart. When Lord Brahmā was thus inspired, he was able to create the entire universe. Remembering everything about the past and inspiring Lord Brahmā to create are vivid examples of the characteristics called svarūpa-lakṣaṇa and taṭastha-lakṣaṇa.

TRANSLATION

”In that same verse it is stated that the Lord is the creator, maintainer and annihilator of the cosmic manifestation, and that He enabled Lord Brahmā to create the universe by infusing him with the knowledge of the Vedas. It is also stated that the Lord has full knowledge directly and indirectly, that He knows past, present and future and that His personal energy is separate from māyā, the illusory energy.

TRANSLATION

”The incarnation of Kṛṣṇa for this age is indicated by these symptoms. Please confirm this definitely so that all my doubts will go away.”

PURPORT

Sanātana Gosvāmī wanted to confirm the fact that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the incarnation of Kṛṣṇa for this age. According to śāstra, in Kali-yuga the Lord would assume a golden or yellow color and would distribute love of Kṛṣṇa and the saṅkīrtana movement. In accordance with śāstra and saintly persons, these characteristics were vividly displayed by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and it was therefore clear that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was an incarnation of Kṛṣṇa. He was confirmed by the śāstras, and His characteristics were accepted by saintly people. Since Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu could not escape Sanātana Gosvāmī’s argument, He remained silent on this point and thereby indirectly accepted Sanātana’s statement. By this we can clearly understand that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was the direct incarnation of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead invested the power of personal service to Lord Śeṣa, and He invested the power to rule the earth in King Pṛthu. Lord Paraśurāma received the power to kill rogues and miscreants.

PURPORT

Kṛṣṇa says in Bhagavad-gītā (Bg. 4.8): paritrāṇāya sādhūnāṁ vināśāya ca duṣkṛtām. Sometimes the Lord invests His power to rule in a king like Pṛthu and enables such a king to kill rogues and miscreants. He also invests His power in incarnations like Paraśurāma.

jñāna-śakty-ādi-kala yā
yatrāviṣṭo janārdanaḥ
ta āveśā nigadyante
jīvā eva mahattamāḥ

SYNONYMS

jñāna-śakti-ādi-kalayā-by portions of the potencies of knowledge, devotional service, creation, personal service, ruling over the material world, carrying the different planets, and killing the rogues and miscreants; yatra-wherever; āviṣṭaḥ-is entered; janārdanaḥ-the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Viṣṇu; te-they; āveśāḥ-empowered; nigadyante-are called; jīvāḥ-living entities; eva-although; mahat-tamāḥ-most exalted devotees.

TRANSLATION

" 'Whenever the Lord is present in someone by portions of His various potencies, the living entity representing the Lord is called śaktyāveśa-avatāra-that is, an incarnation invested with special power.'

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta (1.18).

TEXT 374

’vibhūti’ kahiye yaiche gītā-ekādaśe

SYNONYMS

vibhūti-specific power; kahiye-we say; yaiche-just like; gītā-of Bhagavad-gītā; ekādaśe-in the Eleventh Chapter; jagat-throughout the whole universe; vyāpila-He expanded; kṛṣṇa-śakti-ābhāsa-āveśe-by the reflection of His power.

TRANSLATION

”As explained in the Eleventh Chapter of Bhagavad-gītā, Kṛṣṇa has spread Himself all over the universe in many personalities through specific powers, known as vibhūti.

PURPORT

The expansion of specific māyā powers is explained in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.7.39).

TEXT 375

SYNONYMS

pūtanā-vadha-ādi-killing of the demons like Pūtanā; yata-all; līlā-pastimes; kṣaṇe kṣaṇe-one moment after another; saba līlā-all these pastimes; nitya-eternally; prakaṭa-manifesting; kare-does; anukrame-one after another.

TRANSLATION

"When Lord Kṛṣṇa appears, from moment to moment He exhibits His different pastimes, beginning with the killing of Pūtanā. All these pastimes are eternally being demonstrated one after another.

TEXT 382

SYNONYMS

ananta brahmāṇḍa-innumerable universes; tāra-of which; nāhika gaṇana-there is no counting; kona līlā-some pastimes; kona brahmāṇḍe-in some universe; haya-there is; prakaṭana-manifestation.

TRANSLATION

"The consecutive pastimes of Kṛṣṇa are manifest in one of the innumerable universes moment after moment. There is no possibility of counting the universes, but in any case some pastime of the Lord is being manifest at every moment in one universe or another.

TEXT 383

rāsa-ādi līlā kare, kaiśore nitya-sthiti

SYNONYMS

krame-gradually; bālya-childhood; paugaṇḍa-boyhood; kaiśoratā-youth; prāpti-development; rāsa-dancing with the gopīs; ādi-and others; līlā-pastimes; kare-performs; kaiśore-in His age of pre-youth; nitya-sthiti-eternally existing.

TRANSLATION

"Lord Kṛṣṇa exhibits His pastimes of childhood, boyhood and pre-youth. When He reaches pre-youth, He continues to exist eternally to perform His rāsa dance and other pastimes.

PURPORT

The comparison made here is very interesting. Kṛṣṇa does not grow like an ordinary human being, even though He exhibits His pastimes of childhood, boyhood and pre-youth. When He reaches the age of pre-youth, kaiśora, He does not grow any older. He simply remains in His kaiśora age. He is therefore described in the Brahma-saṁhitā (5.33) as nava-yauvana.

advaitam acyutam anādim ananta-rūpam ādyaṁ purāṇa-puruṣaṁ nava-yauvanaṁ ca vedeṣu durlabham adurlabham ātma-bhaktau
govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

This nava-yauvana, or pre-youth, is the eternal transcendental form of Kṛṣṇa. Kṛṣṇa never grows older than nava-yauvana.

TEXT 385

SYNONYMS

aiche-in the same way; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; līlā-maṇḍala-groups of different pastimes; caudda-manvantare-in the duration of fourteen Manus; brahmāṇḍa-maṇḍala-all of the universes; vyāpi'-spreading through; krame krame-gradually; phire-return.

TRANSLATION

"Just like the sun, there is an orbit to Kṛṣṇa's pastimes, which are manifest one after the other. During the lifetime of fourteen Manus, this orbit expands through all the universes, and gradually it returns. Thus Kṛṣṇa moves with His pastimes through all the universes, one after another.

TEXT 392

SYNONYMS

saoyāśata-125; vatsara-years; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; prakaṭa-prakāśa-manifestation of the appearance; tāhā-that; yaiche-like; vraja-pure-in Vṛndāvana and Dvārakā; karilā vilāsa-enjoys the pastimes.

TRANSLATION

”Kṛṣṇa remains within a universe for 125 years, and He enjoys His pastimes both in Vṛndāvana and Dvārakā.

TEXT 393

TRANSLATION

”The eternal pastimes of Kṛṣṇa are continuously taking place in the original Goloka Vṛndāvana planet. These same pastimes are gradually manifest within the material world, in each and every brahmāṇḍa.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura elucidates this complicated explanation of Kṛṣṇa’s pastimes. Kṛṣṇa’s pastimes are always present in the material world in one of the many universes. These pastimes appear in the universes one after the other, just as the sun moves across the sky and measures the time. Kṛṣṇa’s appearance may be manifest in this universe at one moment, and immediately after His birth, this pastime is manifest in the next universe. After His killing of Pūtanā is manifest in this universe, it is next manifest in another universe. Thus all the pastimes of Kṛṣṇa are eternally existing both in the original Goloka Vṛndāvana planet and in the material universes. The 125 years calculated in our solar system to be Kṛṣṇa’s lifetime equal one moment for Kṛṣṇa. One moment these pastimes are manifest in one universe, and the next moment they are manifest in the next universe. There are unlimited universes, and Kṛṣṇa’s pastimes are manifest one moment after the other in all of them. This rotation is explained through the example of the sun’s moving across the sky. Kṛṣṇa appears and disappears in innumerable universes, just as the sun appears and disappears during the day. Although the sun appears to rise and set, it is continuously shining somewhere on the earth. Although Kṛṣṇa’s pastimes seem to appear and disappear, they are continuously existing in one brahmāṇḍa (universe) or another. Thus all of Kṛṣṇa’s līlās are present simultaneously throughout the innumerable universes. By our limited senses we cannot appreciate this; therefore Kṛṣṇa’s eternal pastimes are very difficult for us to understand. One should try to understand how they are taking place by understanding the allegory of the sun. Although the Lord is appearing constantly in the material universes, His pastimes are eternally present in the original Goloka Vṛndāvana. Therefore these pastimes are called nitya-līlā (eternally present pastimes). Because we cannot see what is going on in other universes, it is a little difficult for us to understand how Kṛṣṇa is eternally manifesting His pastimes. There are fourteen Manus in one day of Brahmā, and this time calculation is also taking place in other universes. Kṛṣṇa’s pastimes are manifest before fourteen Manus expire. Although it is a little difficult to understand the eternal pastimes of Kṛṣṇa in this way, we must accept the verdict of Vedic literatures.

There are two types of devotees-the sādhaka, who is preparing for perfection, and the siddha, who is already perfect. As far as those who are already perfect are concerned, Bhagavad-gītā says, tyaktvā dehaṁ punar janma naiti mām eti so 'rjuna: "After giving up this material body, such a devotee comes to Me." After leaving the material body, the perfect devotee takes birth in the womb of a gopī on a planet where Kṛṣṇa's pastimes are going on. This may be in this universe or another universe. This statement is found in the Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi, which is commented upon by Viśvanātha Cakravartī Ṭhākura. When a devotee becomes perfect, he is transferred to the universe where Kṛṣṇa's pastimes are taking place. Kṛṣṇa's eternal associates go wherever Kṛṣṇa manifests His pastimes. As stated before, first the father and mother of Kṛṣṇa appear, then the other associates. Quitting his material body, the perfect devotee also goes to associate with Kṛṣṇa and His other associates.

vraje kṛṣṇa–sarvaiśvarya-prakāśe 'pūrṇatama' purī-dvaye, paravyome–'pūrṇatara', 'pūrṇa'

SYNONYMS

vraje-in Vṛndāvana; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; sarva-aiśvarya-prakāśe-manifestation of His full opulence; pūrṇa-tama-most complete; purī-dvaye-in Dvārakā and Mathurā; para-vyome-and in the spiritual world; pūrṇa-tara-more complete; pūrṇa-complete.

TRANSLATION

"Kṛṣṇa is complete in the spiritual sky [Vaikuṇṭha]. He is more complete in Mathurā and Dvārakā, and He is most complete in Vṛndāvana, Vraja, due to His manifesting all His opulences.

PURPORT

This is confirmed in the following three verses from the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (2.1.221-223).

TEXT 399

hariḥ pūrṇatamaḥ pūrṇa-

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Twentieth Chapter, describing how Sanātana Gosvāmī met the Lord at Vārāṇasī and received knowledge of the Absolute Truth.

18.5.21 Chapter 21

The Opulence and Sweetness of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura gives the following summary study of the Twenty-first Chapter. In this chapter Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu fully describes Kṛṣṇaloka, the spiritual sky, the Causal Ocean and the material world, which consists of innumerable universes. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then describes Lord Brahmā's interview with Kṛṣṇa at Dvārakā and the Lord's curbing the pride of Brahmā. There is also a description of one of Kṛṣṇa's pastimes with Brahmā. In this chapter the author of Caitanya-caritāmṛta has presented some nice poems about the pastimes of Kṛṣṇa and Kṛṣṇa's superexcellent beauty. Throughout the rest of the chapter, our intimate relationship (sambandha) with Kṛṣṇa is described.

SYNONYMS

sarva-all; svarūpera-of the personal forms; dhāma-abode; para-vyoma-dhāme-in the spiritual sky; pṛthak pṛthak-separate; vaikuṇṭha-Vaikuṇṭha planets; saba-all; nāhika gaṇane-there is no counting.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued,”All the transcendental forms of the Lord are situated in the spiritual sky. They preside over spiritual planets in that abode, but there is no counting those Vaikuṇṭha planets.

TEXT 4

śata, sahasra, ayuta, lakṣa, koṭī-yojana eka eka vaikuṇṭhera vistāra varṇana

SYNONYMS

śata-a hundred; sahasra-a thousand; ayuta-ten thousand; lakṣa-a hundred thousand; koṭī-ten million; yojana-a distance of eight miles; eka eka-each and every one; vaikuṇṭhera-of the spiritual planets; vistāra-the breadth; varṇana-description.

TRANSLATION

”The breadth of each Vaikuṇṭha planet is described as eight miles multiplied by one hundred, by one thousand, by ten thousand, by one hundred thousand, and by ten million. In other words, each Vaikuṇṭha planet is expanded beyond our ability to measure.

TEXT 5

saba vaikuṇṭha–vyāpaka, ānanda-cinmaya pāriṣada-ṣaḍaiśvarya-pūrṇa saba haya

SYNONYMS

saba-all; vaikuṇṭha-the spiritual planets; vyāpaka-vast; ānanda-cit-maya-made of spiritual bliss; pāriṣada-associates; ṣaṭ-aiśvarya-six kinds of opulence; pūrṇa-in full; saba-all; haya-are.

TRANSLATION

”Each Vaikuṇṭha planet is very large, and each is made of spiritual bliss. The inhabitants are all associates of the Supreme Lord, and they have full opulence like the Lord Himself. Thus they are all situated.

TEXT 6

ananta vaikuṇṭha eka eka deśe yāra sei paravyoma-dhāmera ke karu vistāra

SYNONYMS

ananta vaikuṇṭha-unlimited Vaikuṇṭha planets; eka eka-certain; deśe-in a place; yāra-of which; sei-that; para-vyoma-of the spiritual sky; dhāmera-of the abode; ke karu vistāra-who can understand the breadth.

TRANSLATION

”Since all the Vaikuṇṭha planets are located in a certain corner of the spiritual sky, who can measure the spiritual sky?

TEXT 7

ananta vaikuṇṭha-paravyoma yāra dala-śreṇī sarvopari kṛṣṇaloka ’karṇikāra’ gaṇi

SYNONYMS

ananta-unlimited; vaikuṇṭha-Vaikuṇṭha planets; para-vyoma-the spiritual sky; yāra-of which; dala-śreṇī-the bunches of outlying petals; sarva-upari-in the topmost portion of the spiritual sky; kṛṣṇa-loka-the abode of Lord Kṛṣṇa; karṇikāra gaṇi-we consider the whorl of the lotus flower.

TRANSLATION

”The shape of the spiritual sky is compared to a lotus flower. The topmost region of that flower is called the whorl, and within that whorl is Kṛṣṇa’s abode. The petals of the spiritual lotus flower consist of many Vaikuṇṭha planets.

TEXT 8

ei-mata ṣaḍ-aiśvarya, sthāna, avatāra brahmā, śiva anta nā pāya–jīva kon chāra

SYNONYMS

ei-mata-such; ṣaṭ-aiśvarya-six opulences; sthāna-abode; avatāra-incarnations; brahmā-Lord Brahmā; śiva-Lord Śiva; anta nā pāya-cannot find the limit; jīva-a living entity; kon-what of; chāra-worthless.

TRANSLATION

”Each Vaikuṇṭha planet is full of spiritual bliss, complete opulence and space, and each is inhabited by incarnations. If Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva cannot estimate the length and breadth of the spiritual sky and the Vaikuṇṭha planets, how can ordinary living entities begin to imagine them?

TEXT 9

SYNONYMS

guṇa-ātmanaḥ-the overseer of the three qualities; te-of You; api-certainly; guṇān-the qualities; vimātum-to count; hita-avatīrṇasya-who have descended for the benefit of all living entities; ke-who; īśire-were able; asya-of the universe; kālena-in due course of time; yaiḥ-by whom; vā-or; vimitāḥ-counted; su-kalpaiḥ-by great scientists; bhū-pāṁśavaḥ-the atoms of the universe; khe-in the sky; mihikāḥ-particles of snow; dyu-bhāsaḥ-the illuminating stars and planets.

TRANSLATION

” ’In time, great scientists may be able to count all the atoms of the universe, all the stars and planets in the sky, and all the particles of snow, but who among them can count the unlimited transcendental qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead? He descends on the surface of the globe for the benefit of all living entities.’

PURPORT

This verse is quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.14.7).

TEXT 12

SYNONYMS

na antam-no limit; vidāmi-know; aham-I; amī-those; munayaḥ-great saintly persons; agrajāḥ-brothers; te-of you; māyā-balasya-who has multi-energies; puruṣasya-of the Personality of Godhead; kutaḥ-how; avarāḥ-less intelligent; ye-those who; gāyan-chanting; guṇān-the qualities; daśa-śata-ānanaḥ-who has a thousand hoods; ādi-devaḥ-the Personality of Godhead; śeṣaḥ-Ananta Śeṣa; adhunā api-even until now; samavasyati-reaches; na-not; asya-of the Lord; pāram-limit.

TRANSLATION

" 'If I, Lord Brahmā, and your elder brothers, the great saints and sages, cannot understand the limits of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is full of various energies, who else can understand them? Although constantly chanting about His transcendental qualities, the thousand-hooded Lord Śeṣa has not yet reached the end of the Lord's activities.'

PURPORT

This verse, spoken to Nārada Muni, is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.7.41).

TEXT 14

SYNONYMS

dyu-patayaḥ-the predominating deities of higher planetary systems (Lord Brahmā and others); eva-also; te-Your; na-not; yayuḥ-could reach; antam-the limit of transcendental qualities; anantatayā-due to being unlimited; tvam api-You also; yat-since; antara-within You; aṇḍa-nicayāḥ-the groups of universes; nanu-O sir; sāvaraṇāḥ-having different coverings; khe-in the sky; iva-like; rajāṁsi-atoms; vānti-rotate; vayasā-the course of time; saha-with; yat-what; śrutayaḥ-great personalities who understand the Vedas; tvayi-in You; hi-certainly; phalanti-end in; atannirasanena-by refuting the inferior elements; bhavat-nidhanāḥ-whose conclusion is in You.

TRANSLATION

" 'My Lord, You are unlimited. Even the predominating deities of the higher planetary systems, including Lord Brahmā, could not find Your limitations. Nor could You Yourself ascertain the limit of Your qualities. Like atoms in the sky, there are multi-universes with seven coverings, and these are rotating in due course of time. All the experts in Vedic understanding are searching for You by eliminating the material elements. In this way, searching and searching, they come to the conclusion that everything is complete in You. Thus You are the resort of everything. This is the conclusion of all Vedic experts.'

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.87.41) is confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā:

bahūnāṁ janmanām ante jñānavān māṁ prapadyate vāsudevaḥ sarvam iti sa mahātmā sudurlabhaḥ

"After many births and deaths, he who is actually in knowledge surrenders unto Me, knowing Me to be the cause of all causes and all that is. Such a great soul is very rare." (Bg. 7.19)

After searching for the Absolute Truth throughout the universe, learned scholars and Vedic experts cannot reach the ultimate goal. In this way they come to Kṛṣṇa.

When there is a discussion about the Absolute Truth, there are always various pros and cons. The purpose of such arguments is to come to the right conclusion. Such an argument is generally known as neti neti ("not this, not that"). Until one comes to the right conclusion, the process of thinking, "This is not the Absolute Truth, that is not the Absolute Truth," will continue. When we come to the right conclusion, we accept the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, as the ultimate truth.

TEXT 16

seha rahu–vraje yabe kṛṣṇa avatāra tāṅra caritra vicārite mana nā pāya pāra

SYNONYMS

seha rahu-leave aside such negative arguments; vraje-in Vṛndāvana; yabe-when; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; avatāra-incarnation; tāṅra-His; caritra-character; vicārite-to deliberate; mana-mind; nā-not; pāya-gets; pāra-the limit.

TRANSLATION

"Apart from all argument, logic and negative or positive processes, when Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa was present as the Supreme Personality of Godhead at Vṛndāvana, one could not find a limit to His potencies by studying His characteristics and activities.

TEXT 17

SYNONYMS

prākṛta-aprākṛta-material and spiritual; sṛṣṭi-creation; kailā-did; eka-kṣaṇe-in one moment; aśeṣa-unlimited; vaikuṇṭha-Vaikuṇṭha planets; aja-aṇḍa-material planets; sva-sva-nātha-sane-with their own predominating deities.

TRANSLATION

"At Vṛndāvana, the Lord immediately created all material and spiritual planets in one moment. Indeed, all of them were created with their predominating deities.

TEXT 18

e-mata anyatra nāhi śuniye adbhuta
yāhāra śravaṇe citta haya avadhūta

SYNONYMS

e-mata-like this; anyatra-anywhere else; nāhi-not; śuniye-I hear; adbhuta-wonderful event; yāhāra-of which; śravaṇe-by hearing; citta-consciousness; haya-becomes; avadhūta-agitated and cleansed.

TRANSLATION

”We do not hear of such wonderful things anywhere. Simply by hearing of those incidents, one’s consciousness is agitated and cleansed.

PURPORT

When Lord Kṛṣṇa was present in the earthly Vṛndāvana, Lord Brahmā, taking Him to be an ordinary cowherd boy, wanted to test His potency. Therefore Lord Brahmā stole all the cows, calves and cowherd boys from Kṛṣṇa and hid them by his illusory energy. When Kṛṣṇa saw that Brahmā had stolen His cows, calves and cowherd boys, He immediately created many material and spiritual planets in Lord Brahmā’s presence. Within a moment, cows, cowherd boys, calves and unlimited Vaikuṇṭhas-all expansions of the Lord’s spiritual energy-were manifested. As stated in the Brahma-saṁhitā: ānanda-cinmaya-rasa-pratibhāvitābhiḥ. Not only did Kṛṣṇa create all the paraphernalia of His spiritual energy, but He also created unlimited material universes with unlimited Brahmās. All these pastimes, which are described in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, will cleanse one’s consciousness. In this way one can actually understand the Absolute Truth. The spiritual planets in the spiritual sky are called Vaikuṇṭhas, and each of them has a predominating Deity (Nārāyaṇa) with a specific name. Similarly, in the material sky there are innumerable universes, and each is dominated by a specific deity, a Brahmā. Kṛṣṇa simultaneously created all these Vaikuṇṭha planets and universes within a moment of Brahmā’s return.

The word avadhūta means ”rambling, agitating, moving, absorbed, defeated.” In some readings of Caitanya-caritāmṛta, it is said: yāhāra śravaṇe citta-mala haya dhūta. Instead of the word avadhūta, the words haya dhūta, meaning that the heart or consciousness is cleansed, is used. When the consciousness is cleansed, one can understand what and who Kṛṣṇa is. This is also confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā (7.28):

yeṣāṁ tv anta-gataṁ pāpaṁ janānāṁ puṇya-karmaṇām te dvandva-moha-nirmuktā bhajante māṁ dṛḍha-vratāḥ

”Persons who have acted piously in previous lives and in this life, whose sinful actions are completely eradicated and who are freed from the duality of delusion, engage themselves in My service with determination.”

Unless one is freed from the reaction of sinful activities, one cannot understand Kṛṣṇa or engage in His transcendental loving service.

TEXT 19

”kṛṣṇa-vatsair asaṅkhyātaiḥ”–śukadeva-vāṇī kṛṣṇa-saṅge kata gopa–saṅkhyā nāhi jāni

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-vatsaiḥ asaṅkhyātaiḥ-Kṛṣṇa was accompanied by an unlimited number of calves and cowherd boys; śukadeva-vāṇī-the words of Śukadeva Gosvāmī; kṛṣṇa-saṅge-with Lord Kṛṣṇa; kata gopa-how many cowherd boys; saṅkhyā-the count; nāhi jāni-we do not know.

TRANSLATION

”According to Śukadeva Gosvāmī, Kṛṣṇa had unlimited cows and cowherd boys with Him. No one could count their actual number.

TEXT 20

eka eka gopa kare ye vatsa cāraṇa koṭi, arbuda, śaṅkha, padma, tāhāra gaṇana

SYNONYMS

eka eka-one after another; gopa-cowherd boys; kare-do; ye-whatever; vatsa-calves; cāraṇa-grazing; koṭi-ten millions; arbuda-a hundred million; śaṅkha-one trillion; padma-ten trillion; tāhāra gaṇana-the enumeration of that.

TRANSLATION

”Each of the cowherd boys was tending calves to the extent of a koṭi, arbuda, śaṅkha and padma. That is the way of counting.

PURPORT

According to Vedic mathematical calculations, the following enumeration system is used: units, tens (daśa), hundreds (śata), thousands (sahasra), ten thousands (ayuta) and hundred thousands (lakṣa). Ten times lakṣa is niyuta. Ten times niyuta is koṭi. Ten times koṭi is arbuda. Ten times arbuda is vṛnda. Ten times vṛnda is kharva. Ten times kharva is nikharva. Ten times nikharva is śaṅkha. Ten times śaṅkha is padma, and ten times padma is sāgara. Ten times sāgara is antya, and ten times antya is madhya, and ten times madhya is parārdha. Each item is ten times greater than the previous one. Thus all the cowherd boys who were companions of Kṛṣṇa had many calves to take care of.

vetra, veṇu, dala, śṛṅga, vastra, alaṅkāra gopa-gaṇera yata, tāra nāhi lekhā-pāra

SYNONYMS

vetra-canes; veṇu-flutes; dala-lotus flowers; śṛṅga-horns; vastra-garments; alaṅkāra-ornaments; gopa-gaṇera yata-as many as are possessed by the cowherd boys; tāra-of them; nāhi-there is not; lekhā-pāra-limitation to writing.

TRANSLATION

"All the cowherd boys had unlimited calves. Similarly, their canes, flutes, lotus flowers, horns, garments and ornaments were all unlimited. They cannot be limited by writing about them.

TEXT 22

sabe hailā caturbhuja vaikuṇṭhera pati pṛthak pṛthak brahmāṇḍera brahmā kare stuti

SYNONYMS

sabe-all of them: hailā-became; catuḥ-bhuja-four-handed; vaikuṇṭhera pati-predominating Deities of the Vaikuṇṭha planets; pṛthak pṛthak-separately; brahmāṇḍera-of the universes; brahmā-the predominating deities known as Lord Brahmā; kare stuti-offer prayers.

TRANSLATION

"The cowherd boys then became four-handed Nārāyaṇas, predominating Deities of Vaikuṇṭha planets. All the separate Brahmās from different universes began to offer their prayers unto the Lords.

TEXT 23

eka kṛṣṇa-deha haite sabāra prakāśe kṣaṇeke sabāi sei śarīre praveśe

SYNONYMS

eka-one; kṛṣṇa-deha-transcendental body of Kṛṣṇa; haite-from; sabāra-of everyone; prakāśe-the manifestation; kṣaṇeke-in a second; sabāi-every one of Them; sei śarīre-in that body of Kṛṣṇa; praveśe-enter.

TRANSLATION

"All these transcendental bodies emanated from the body of Kṛṣṇa, and within a second They all entered again into His body.

ihā dekhi' brahmā hailā mohita, vismita

SYNONYMS

ihā dekhi'-seeing this; brahmā-Lord Brahmā; hailā-became; mohita-astonished; vismita-struck with wonder; stuti kari'-offering prayers; ei-this; pāche-at the end; karilā-made; niścita-conclusion.

TRANSLATION

"When the Lord Brahmā from this universe saw this pastime, he was astonished and struck with wonder. After offering his prayers, he gave the following conclusion.

TEXT 25

"ye kahe–'kṛṣṇera vaibhava muñi saba jānoṅ' se jānuka,–kāya-mane muñi ei mānoṅ ye kahe-if anyone says; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; vaibhava-opulences; muñi-I; saba-all; jānoṅ-know; se jānuka-let him know; kāya-mane-by my body and mind; muñi-myself; ei-this; mānoṅ-accept.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Lord Brahmā said, 'If someone says that he knows everything about Kṛṣṇa's opulence, let him think that way. However, as far as I am concerned, with my body and mind I consider it in this way.

TEXT 26

ei ye tomāra ananta vaibhavāmṛta-sindhu mora vāṅ-mano-gamya nahe eka bindu

SYNONYMS

ei ye-all this; tomāra-Your; ananta-unlimited; vaibhava-amṛta-sindhu-ocean of the nectar of Your opulence; mora-my; vāk-manaḥ-gamya-within the reach of words and mind; nahe-not; eka bindu-even a drop.

TRANSLATION

" 'My Lord, Your opulence is like an unlimited ocean of nectar, and it is verbally and mentally impossible for me to realize even a drop of that ocean.

TEXT 27

jānanta eva jānantu
kiṁ bahūktyā na me prabho manaso vapuṣo vāco vaibhavaṁ tava gocaraḥ"

SYNONYMS

jānantaḥ-persons who think they are aware of Your unlimited potency; eva-certainly; jānantu-let them think like that; kim-what is the use; bahu-uktyā-with many words; na-not; me-my; prabho-O Lord; manasaḥ-of the mind; vapuṣaḥ-of the body; vācaḥ-of the words; vaibhavam-opulences; tava-Your; gocaraḥ-within the range.

TRANSLATION

" 'There are people who say, "I know everything about Kṛṣṇa." Let them think that way. As far as I am concerned, I do not wish to speak very much about this matter. O my Lord, let me say this much. As far as Your opulences are concerned, they are all beyond the reach of my mind, body and words.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.14.38), spoken by Lord Brahmā after he had stolen Lord Kṛṣṇa's cows, calves and cowherd boys and Kṛṣṇa had exhibited His transcendental opulence by re-creating all the stolen cows, calves and cowherd boys by His viṣṇu-mūrti expansions. After he had seen this, Brahmā offered the above prayer.

TEXT 28

kṛṣṇera mahimā rahu–kebā tāra jñātā vṛndāvana-sthānera dekha āścarya vibhutā

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; mahimā-glories; rahu-let be; kebā-who; tāra-of those; jñātā-a knower; vṛndāvana-sthānera-of the abode of Kṛṣṇa, Vṛndāvana; dekha-just see; āścarya-wonderful; vibhutā-opulences.

TRANSLATION

"Let the glories of Lord Kṛṣṇa be! Who could be aware of all of them? His abode, Vṛndāvana, has many wonderful opulences. Just try to see them all.

TEXT 29

ṣola-krośa vṛndāvana,–śāstrera prakāśe tāra eka-deśe vaikuṇṭhājāṇḍa-gaṇa bhāse

SYNONYMS

ṣola-krośa-measuring sixteen krośas (thirty-two miles); vṛndāvana-Vṛndāvana-dhāma; śāstrera prakāśe-according to the revelation of revealed scripture; tāra-of Vṛndāvana; eka-deśe-in one corner; vaikuṇṭha-all the Vaikuṇṭha planets; ajāṇḍa-gaṇa-the innumerable universes; bhāse-are situated.

TRANSLATION

"According to the revelations of revealed scripture, Vṛndāvana extends only sixteen krośas [thirty-two miles]. Nonetheless, all the Vaikuṇṭha planets and innumerable universes are located in one corner of this tract.

PURPORT

In Vraja, the land is divided into various vanas, or forests. The forests total twelve, and their extension is estimated to be eighty-four krośas. Of these, the special forest known as Vṛndāvana is located from the present municipal city of Vṛndāvana to the village called Nanda-grāma. This distance is sixteen krośas (thirty-two miles).

TEXT 30

apāra aiśvarya kṛṣṇera–nāhika gaṇana śākhā-candra-nyāye kari dig-daraśana apāra-unlimited; aiśvarya-opulence; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; nāhika gaṇana-there is no estimation; śākhā-candra-nyāye-according to the logic of seeing the moon through the branches of a tree; kari-I make; dik-daraśana-an indication only.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"No one can estimate the opulence of Kṛṣṇa. That is unlimited. However, just as one sees the moon through the branches of a tree, I wish to give a little indication."

PURPORT

First a child is shown the branches of a tree, and then he is shown the moon through the branches. This is called śākhā-candra-nyāya. The idea is that first one must be given a simpler example. Then the more difficult background is explained.

TEXT 31

aiśvarya kahite sphurila aiśvarya-sāgara manendriya ḍubilā, prabhu ha-ilā phāṅpara

SYNONYMS

aiśvarya-opulence; kahite-to describe; sphurila-there manifested; aiśvarya-sāgara-an ocean of opulence; mana-indriya-the chief sense, namely the mind; ḍubilā-immersed; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ha-ilā-became; phāṅpara-perplexed.

TRANSLATION

While describing the transcendental opulences of Kṛṣṇa, the ocean of opulence manifested in the mind of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and His mind and senses were immersed in this ocean. Thus He was perplexed.

TEXT 32

svayam-personally the Supreme Personality of Godhead; tu-but; asāmya-atiśayaḥ-who has no equal nor superior; tri-adhīśaḥ-the master of three places, namely Goloka Vṛndāvana, Vaikuṇṭhaloka and the material world, or the master of Mahā-Viṣṇu, Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu and Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu, or the master of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Maheśvara, or the master of the three worlds (the higher, lower and middle planetary systems); svārājya-lakṣmī-by His personal spiritual potency; āpta-already achieved; samasta-kāmaḥ-all desirable objects; balim-a presentation or taxation; haradbhiḥ-who are offering; cira-loka-pālaiḥ-by the predominating deities of different planets; kirīṭa-koṭi-by millions of helmets; īḍita-being worshiped; pāda-pīṭhaḥ-whose lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

" 'The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, is the master of the three worlds and the three principal demigods [Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva]. No one is equal to or greater than Him. By His spiritual potency, known as svārājya-lakṣmī, all His desires are fulfilled. While offering their dues and presents in worship, the predominating deities of all the planets touch the lotus feet of the Lord with their helmets. Thus they offer prayers to the Lord.'

PURPORT

This quotation is verse 21 of the Second Chapter, Third Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

TEXT 34

SYNONYMS

īśvaraḥ-the controller; paramaḥ-supreme; kṛṣṇaḥ-Lord Kṛṣṇa; sat-eternal existence; cit-absolute knowledge; ānanda-absolute bliss; vigrahaḥ-whose form; anādiḥ-without beginning; ādiḥ-the origin; govindaḥ-Lord Govinda; sarva-kāraṇa-kāraṇam-the cause of all causes.

TRANSLATION

" 'Kṛṣṇa, known as Govinda, is the supreme controller. He has an eternal, blissful, spiritual body. He is the origin of all. He has no other origin, for He is the prime cause of all causes.'

PURPORT

This is the first verse of the Fifth Chapter of Brahma-saṁhitā.

TEXT 36

brahmā, viṣṇu, hara,–ei sṛṣṭyādi-īśvara tine ājñākārī kṛṣṇera, kṛṣṇa–adhīśvara

SYNONYMS

brahmā-Lord Brahmā; viṣṇu-Lord Viṣṇu; hara-and Lord Śiva; ei-they; sṛṣṭi-ādi-īśvara-the masters of material creation, maintenance and dissolution; tine-all three of them; ājñākārī-order carriers; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; adhīśvara-their master.

TRANSLATION

"The primary predominating deities of this material creation are Lord Brahmā, Lord Śiva and Lord Viṣṇu. Nonetheless, they simply carry out the orders of Lord Kṛṣṇa, who is master of them all.

TEXT 37

sṛjāmi tan-niyukto 'haṁ

SYNONYMS

e sāmānya-this is a general description; tri-adhīśvarera-of the master of the three worlds; śuna-please hear; artha-meaning; āra-another; jagat-kāraṇa-the cause of the material creation; tina-three; puruṣa-avatāra-puruṣa incarnations of Viṣṇu.

TRANSLATION

"This is only a general description. Please try to understand another meaning of tryadhīśa. The three puruṣa incarnations of Viṣṇu are the original cause of the material creation.

TEXT 39

mahā-viṣṇu, padmanābha, kṣīrodaka-svāmī ei tina–sthūla-sūkṣma-sarva-antaryāmī

SYNONYMS

mahā-viṣṇu-Mahā-Viṣṇu; padmanābha-Padmanābha (Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu); kṣīra-udaka-svāmī-Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu; ei tina-all these three; sthūla-sūkṣma-gross and subtle; sarva-of all; antaryāmī-the Supersoul.

TRANSLATION

"Mahā-Viṣṇu, Padmanābha and Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu are the Supersouls of all subtle and gross existences.

PURPORT

Lord Mahā-Viṣṇu is known as Kāraṇodakaśāyī Viṣṇu, the Supersoul of everything. Garbhodakaśāyī Viṣṇu, from whose lotus navel Brahmā was created, is also called Hiraṇyagarbha and is the total Supersoul and the subtle Supersoul. Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu is the universal form and the gross Supersoul.

TEXT 40

ei tina–sarvāśraya, jagat-īśvara eho saba kalā-aṁśa, kṛṣṇa–adhīśvara

SYNONYMS

ei tina-these three; sarva-āśraya-the shelter of the whole material creation; jagat-īśvara-supreme controllers of the universe; eho saba-all of Them; kalā-aṁśa-plenary portions, or portions of the plenary portions; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; adhīśvara-the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

"Although Mahā-Viṣṇu, Padmanābha and Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu are all shelters and controllers of the entire universe, They are nonetheless but plenary portions or portions of the plenary portions of Kṛṣṇa. Therefore He is the original Personality of Godhead.

SYNONYMS

ei artha-this explanation; madhyama-middle; śuna-please hear; gūḍha-confidential; artha-meaning; āra-another; tina-three; āvāsa-sthāna-residential places; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; śāstre-in the revealed scriptures; khyāti-fame; yāra-of which.

TRANSLATION

"This is the middle meaning. Now please hear the confidential meaning. Lord Kṛṣṇa has three places of residence, which are well known from revealed scriptures.

PURPORT

Kṛṣṇa has three abodes-His internal abode (Goloka Vṛndāvana), His intermediate abode (the spiritual sky), and His external abode (this material world).

TEXT 43

'antaḥpura'–goloka-śrī-vṛndāvana
yāhāṅ nitya-sthiti mātā-pitā-bandhu-gaṇa

SYNONYMS

antaḥ-pura-the internal abode; goloka-śrī-vṛndāvana-Goloka Vṛndāvana; yāhāṅ-where; nitya-sthiti-eternal residence; mātā-pitā-mother and father; bandhu-gaṇa-and friends.

TRANSLATION

"The internal abode is called Goloka Vṛndāvana. It is there that Lord Kṛṣṇa's personal friends, associates, father and mother live.

TEXT 44

madhuraiśvarya-mādhurya-kṛpādi-bhāṇḍāra yogamāyā dāsī yāhāṅ rāsādi līlā-sāra

SYNONYMS

madhura-aiśvarya-of sweetness and opulence; mādhurya-of conjugal love; kṛpā-ādi-and of mercy and so on; bhāṇḍāra-storehouse; yoga-māyā-the spiritual energy; dāsī-maidservant; yāhāṅ-where; rāsa-ādi-the rāsa dance and other pastimes; līlā-sāra-the quintessence of all pastimes.

TRANSLATION

"Vṛndāvana is the storehouse of Kṛṣṇa's mercy and the sweet opulences of conjugal love. That is where the spiritual energy, working as a maidservant, exhibits the rāsa dance, the quintessence of all pastimes.

TEXT 45

karuṇā-nikuramba-komale madhuraiśvarya-viśeṣa-śālini jayati vraja-rāja-nandane na hi cintā-kaṇikābhyudeti naḥ

SYNONYMS

karuṇā-nikuramba-komale-who is very soft because of great mercy; madhura-aiśvarya-viśeṣa-śalini-especially by the opulence of conjugal love; jayati-all glories; vraja-rāja-nandane-to the son of Mahārāja Nanda; na-not; hi-certainly; cintā-of anxiety; kaṇika-even a particle; abhyudeti-awakens; naḥ-of us.

TRANSLATION

"Vṛndāvana-dhāma is very soft due to the mercy of the Supreme Lord, and it is especially opulent due to conjugal love. The transcendental glories of the son of Mahārāja Nanda are exhibited here. Under the circumstances, not the least anxiety is awakened within us.

TEXT 46

tāra tale paravyoma–'viṣṇuloka'-nāma nārāyaṇa-ādi ananta svarūpera dhāma

SYNONYMS

tāra tale-below Vṛndāvana-dhāma; para-vyoma-the spiritual sky; viṣṇu-loka-nāma-known as Viṣṇuloka; nārāyaṇa-ādi-Nārāyaṇa and others; ananta-unlimited; sva-rūpera-of personal expansions; dhāma-the place.

TRANSLATION

"Below the Vṛndāvana planet is the spiritual sky, which is known as Viṣṇuloka. In Viṣṇuloka there are innumerable Vaikuṇṭha planets controlled by Nārāyaṇa and other innumerable expansions of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 47

'madhyama-āvāsa' kṛṣṇera–ṣaḍ-aiśvarya-bhāṇḍāra ananta svarūpe yāhāṅ karena vihāra madhyama-āvāsa-the middle residence; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; ṣaṭ-aiśvarya-bhāṇḍāra-the storehouse of six opulences; ananta sva-rūpe-in unlimited forms; yāhāṅ-where; karena vihāra-enjoys His pastimes.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"The spiritual sky, which is full in all six opulences, is the interim residence of Lord Kṛṣṇa. It is there that an unlimited number of forms of Kṛṣṇa enjoy Their pastimes.

TEXT 48

ananta vaikuṇṭha yāhāṅ bhāṇḍāra-koṭhari pāriṣada-gaṇe ṣaḍ-aiśvarye āche bhari'

SYNONYMS

ananta-unlimited; vaikuṇṭha-Vaikuṇṭha planets; yāhāṅ-where; bhāṇḍāra-koṭhari-like rooms of a treasure-house; pāriṣada-gaṇe-eternal associates; ṣaṭ-aiśvarye-with the six opulences; āche-are; bhari'-filling.

TRANSLATION

"Innumerable Vaikuṇṭha planets, which are just like different rooms of a treasure-house, are all there, filled with all opulences. Those unlimited planets house the Lord's eternal associates, who are also enriched with the six opulences."

TEXT 49

SYNONYMS

goloka-nāmni nija-dhāmni-in the planet known as Goloka Vṛndāvana, the personal abode of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; tale-in the part underneath; ca-also; tasya-of that; devī-of the goddess Durgā; maheśa-of Lord Śiva; hari-of Nārāyaṇa; dhāmasu-in the planets; teṣu teṣu-in each of them; te te-those respective; prabhāva-nicayāḥ-opulences; vihitāḥ-established; ca-also; yena-by whom; govindam-unto that Govinda; ādi-puruṣam-the original Supreme Personality of Godhead; tam-unto Him; aham-I; bhajāmi-offer my obeisances.

TRANSLATION

" 'Below the planet named Goloka Vṛndāvana are the planets known as Devī-dhāma, Maheśa-dhāma and Hari-dhāma. These are opulent in different ways. They are managed by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Govinda, the original Lord. I offer my obeisances unto Him.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Brahma-saṁhitā (5.43).

TEXT 50

pradhāna-parama-vyomnor antare virajā nadī vedāṅga-sveda-janitais toyaiḥ prasrāvitā śubhā

SYNONYMS

pradhāna-parama-vyomnoḥ antare-between the material world and spiritual world; virajā nadī-is a river known as Virajā; veda-aṅga-of the transcendental body of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; sveda-janitaiḥ-produced from the perspiration; toyaiḥ-with water; prasrāvitā-flowing; śubhā-all-auspicious.

TRANSLATION

" 'Between the spiritual and material worlds is a body of water known as the river Virajā. This water is generated from the bodily perspiration of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is known as Vedāṅga. Thus the river flows.'

PURPORT

This verse and the following verse are from the Padma Purāṇa.

TEXT 51

tasyāḥ pāre paravyoma tripād-bhūtaṁ sanātanam amṛtaṁ śāśvataṁ nityam anantaṁ paramaṁ padam

SYNONYMS

tasyāḥ pāre-on the other bank of the Virajā River; para-vyoma-the spiritual sky; tri-pād-bhūtam-existing as three fourths of the opulence of the Supreme Lord; sanātanam-eternal; amṛtam-without deterioration; śāśvatam-without being subjected to the control of time; nityam-constantly existing; anantam-unlimited; paramam-supreme; padam-abode.

TRANSLATION

" 'Beyond the river Virajā is a spiritual nature, which is indestructible, eternal, inexhaustible and unlimited. It is the supreme abode consisting of three fourths of the Lord's opulences. It is known as paravyoma, the spiritual sky.'

PURPORT

In the spiritual sky there is neither anxiety nor fear. It is eternally existing, and it consists of three fourths of the Lord's energy. The material world is an exhibition of only one fourth of the Lord's energy. Therefore it is called eka-pāda-vibhūti.

TEXT 52

tāra tale 'bāhyāvāsa' virajāra pāra ananta brahmāṇḍa yāhāṅ koṭhari apāra

SYNONYMS

tāra tale-below the spiritual world; bāhya-āvāsa-external abode; virajāra pāra-on the other side of the river Virajā; ananta brahmāṇḍa-unlimited number of universes; yāhāṅ-where; koṭhari-apartments; apāra-unlimited.

TRANSLATION

"On the other side of the river Virajā is the external abode, which is full of unlimited universes, each containing unlimited atmospheres.

TEXT 53

'devī-dhāma' nāma tāra, jīva yāra vāsī jagal-lakṣmī rākhi' rahe yāhāṅ māyā dāsī

SYNONYMS

devī-dhāma-the place of the external energy; nāma-named; tāra-its; jīva-the conditioned living entities; yāra-of which; vāsī-the inhabitants; jagat-lakṣmī-the material energy; rākhi'-keeping them; rahe-exists; yāhāṅ-wherein; māyā-the external energy; dāsī-maidservant.

TRANSLATION

"The abode of the external energy is called Devī-dhāma, and its inhabitants are conditioned souls. It is there that the material energy, Durgā, resides with many opulent maidservants.

PURPORT

Because he wants to enjoy the material energy, the conditioned soul is allowed to reside in Devī-dhāma, the external energy, where the goddess Durgā carries out the orders of the Supreme Lord as His maidservant. The material energy is called jagal-lakṣmī because she protects the bewildered conditioned souls. The goddess Durgā is therefore known as the mother, and Lord Śiva, her husband, is known as the father. Lord Śiva and goddess Durgā are therefore known as the material father and mother. Goddess Durgā is so named because this material world is like a big fort where the conditioned soul is placed under her care. For material facilities, the conditioned soul tries to please the goddess Durgā, and mother Durgā supplies all kinds of material facilities. Because of this, the conditioned souls are allured and do not wish to leave the external energy. Consequently they are continuously making plans to live here peacefully and happily. Such is the material world.

TEXT 54

ei tina dhāmera haya kṛṣṇa adhīśvara goloka-paravyoma–prakṛtira para

SYNONYMS

ei tina dhāmera-of these three dhāmas, or residential places, namely Goloka Vṛndāvana-dhāma, Vaikuṇṭha-dhāma (Hari-dhāma) and Devī-dhāma (the material world); haya-is; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; adhīśvara-the supreme master; goloka-paravyoma-the spiritual planet Goloka and the spiritual sky; prakṛtira para-beyond this material energy.

TRANSLATION

”Kṛṣṇa is the supreme proprietor of all dhāmas, including Goloka-dhāma, Vaikuṇṭha-dhāma and Devī-dhāma. The paravyoma and Goloka-dhāma are beyond Devī-dhāma, this material world.

PURPORT

When a living entity is liberated from Devī-dhāma but does not know of the opulence of Hari-dhāma, he is placed in Maheśa-dhāma, which is between the other two dhāmas. The liberated soul does not get an opportunity to serve the Supreme Personality of Godhead there; therefore although this Maheśa-dhāma is Lord Śiva's dhāma and above the Devī-dhāma, it is not the spiritual world. The spiritual world begins with Hari-dhāma, or Vaikuṇṭhaloka.

TEXT 55

cic-chakti-vibhūti-dhāma–tripād-aiśvarya-nāma māyika vibhūti–eka-pāda abhidhāna

SYNONYMS

cit-śakti-of the spiritual energy; vibhūti-dhāma-opulent abode; tri-pād-three fourths; aiśvarya-opulence; nāma-named; māyika vibhūti-material opulence; eka-pāda-one fourth; abhidhāna-known.

TRANSLATION

”The spiritual world is considered to be three fourths of the energy and opulence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, whereas this material world is only one fourth of that energy. That is our understanding.

PURPORT

Hari-dhāma (paravyoma) and Goloka Vṛndāvana are beyond the material cosmic manifestation. They are celebrated as three fourths of the Lord's energy. The material world, conducted by the Supreme Lord's external energy, is called Devī-dhāma and is a manifestation of one fourth of His energy.

TEXT 56

tripād-vibhūter dhāmatvāt tripād-bhūtaṁ hi tat padam vibhūtir māyikī sarvā
proktā pādātmikā yataḥ

SYNONYMS

tri-pād-vibhūteḥ-of the three fourths of the energy; dhāmatvāt-because of being the abode; tri-pād-bhūtam-consisting of three fourths of the energy; hi-certainly; tat padam-that abode; vibhūtiḥ-the energy or potency; māyikī-material; sarvā-all; proktā-said; pāda-ātmikā-only one fourth; yataḥ-therefore.

TRANSLATION

” 'Because it consists of three fourths of the Lord's energy, the spiritual world is called tripād-bhūta. Being a manifestation of one fourth of the Lord's energy, the material world is called eka-pāda.'

PURPORT

This verse is found in Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta (1.5.286).

TEXT 57

tripāda-vibhūti kṛṣṇera–vākya-agocara eka-pāda vibhūtira śunaha vistāra

SYNONYMS

tri-pāda-vibhūti kṛṣṇera-three fourths of the energy of Lord Kṛṣṇa; vākya-agocara-beyond words; eka-pāda vibhūtira-of one fourth of the energy; śunaha-please hear; vistāra-breadth.

TRANSLATION

”The three-fourths part of Lord Kṛṣṇa's energy is beyond our speaking power. Let us therefore hear elaborately about the remaining one fourth of His energy.

TEXT 58

ananta brahmāṇḍera yata brahmā-rudra-gaṇa cira-loka-pāla-śabde tāhāra gaṇana

SYNONYMS

ananta-unlimited; brahmāṇḍera-of the universes; yata-all; brahmā-Lord Brahmās; rudra-gaṇa-and Lord Śivas; cira-loka-pāla-permanent governors of the worlds; śabde-by the word; tāhāra-of them; gaṇana-counting.

TRANSLATION

”Actually it is very difficult to ascertain the number of universes. Every universe has its separate Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva, who are known as permanent governors. Therefore there is also no counting of them.

PURPORT

Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva are called cira-loka-pāla, permanent governors. This means that they govern the affairs of the universe from the beginning of the creation to the end. In the next creation, the same living entities may not be present, but because Brahmā and Śiva are existing from the beginning to the end, they are called cira-loka-pāla, permanent governors. Loka-pāla means ”predominating deities.” There are eight predominating deities of the prominent heavenly planets, and they are Indra, Agni, Yama, Varuṇa, Nirṛti, Vāyu, Kuvera and Śiva.

TEXT 59

eka-dina dvārakāte kṛṣṇa dekhibāre brahmā āilā,–dvāra-pāla jānāila kṛṣṇere eka-dina-one day; dvārakāte-in Dvārakā; kṛṣṇa dekhibāre-to see Kṛṣṇa; brahmā āilā-Lord Brahmā came; dvāra-pāla-the doorman; jānāila-informed; kṛṣṇere-Lord Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”Once, when Kṛṣṇa was ruling Dvārakā, Lord Brahmā came to see Him, and the doorman immediately informed Lord Kṛṣṇa of Brahmā’s arrival.

TEXT 60

kṛṣṇa kahena–’kon brahmā, ki nāma tāhāra?’
dvārī āsi’ brahmāre puche āra bāra

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa kahena-Kṛṣṇa said; kon brahmā-which Brahmā; ki nāma tāhāra-what is his name; dvārī āsi’-the doorman, coming back; brahmāre-to Lord Brahmā; puche-inquires; āra bāra-again.

TRANSLATION

”When Kṛṣṇa was so informed, He immediately asked the doorman, ’Which Brahmā? What is his name?’ The doorman therefore returned and questioned Lord Brahmā.

PURPORT

From this verse we can understand that Brahmā is the name of the post and that the person occupying the post has a particular name also. From Bhagavad-gītā: imaṁ vivasvate yogam. Vivasvān is the name of the present predominating deity of the sun. He is generally called Sūrya, the sun-god, but he also has his own particular name. The governor of the state is generally called rāja-pāla, but he also has his own individual name. Since there are hundreds and thousands of Brahmās with different names, Kṛṣṇa wanted to know which of them had come to see Him.

TEXT 61

vismita hañā brahmā dvārīke kahilā
’kaha giyā sanaka-pitā caturmukha āilā’

SYNONYMS

vismita hañā-becoming surprised; brahmā-Lord Brahmā; dvārīke-unto the doorman; kahilā-replied; kaha-inform; giyā-going; sanaka-pitā-the father of the four Kumāras; catuḥ-mukha-four-headed; āilā-has come.

TRANSLATION

”When the doorman asked, ’Which Brahmā?’ Lord Brahmā was surprised. He told the doorman, ’Please go inform Lord Kṛṣṇa that I am the four-headed Brahmā who is the father of the four Kumāras.’

TEXT 62

kṛṣṇe jānāñā dvārī brahmāre lañā gelā kṛṣṇera caraṇe brahmā daṇḍavat kailā

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇe jānāñā-informing Lord Kṛṣṇa; dvārī-the doorman; brahmāre-Lord Brahmā; lañā-taking; gelā-went; kṛṣṇera caraṇe-at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa; brahmā-Lord Brahmā; daṇḍavat kailā-offered obeisances.

TRANSLATION

”The doorman then informed Lord Kṛṣṇa of Lord Brahmā’s description, and Lord Kṛṣṇa gave him permission to enter. The doorman escorted Lord Brahmā in, and as soon as Brahmā saw Lord Kṛṣṇa, he offered obeisances at His lotus feet.

TEXT 63

kṛṣṇa mānya-pūjā kari’ tāṅre praśna kaila
’ki lāgi’ tomāra ihāṅ āgamana haila?’

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; mānya-pūjā-respect and worship; kari’-showing; tāṅre-to him; praśna kaila-put a question; ki lāgi’-for what reason; tomāra-your; ihāṅ-here; āgamana haila-there was arrival.

TRANSLATION

”After being worshiped by Lord Brahmā, Lord Kṛṣṇa also honored him with suitable words. Then Lord Kṛṣṇa asked him, ’Why have you come here?’

TEXT 64

brahmā kahe,–’tāhā pāche kariba nivedana eka saṁśaya mane haya, karaha chedana

SYNONYMS

brahmā kahe-Lord Brahmā said; tāhā-that; pāche-later; kariba nivedana-I shall submit unto You; eka-one; saṁśaya-doubt; mane-in the mind; haya-there is; karaha chedana-kindly dissipate it.

TRANSLATION

”Being questioned, Lord Brahmā immediately replied, ’I shall later tell You why I have come. First of all there is a doubt in my mind which I wish You would kindly dissipate.

TEXT 65

’kon brahmā?’ puchile tumi kon abhiprāye?
āmā ba-i jagate āra kon brahmā haye?’

SYNONYMS

kon brahmā-which Brahmā; puchile tumi-You inquired; kon abhiprāye-by what intention; āmā ba-i-except me; jagate-within this universe; āra-other; kon-which; brahmā-Lord Brahmā; haye-is there.

TRANSLATION

" 'Why did you inquire which Brahmā had come to see You? What is the purpose of such an inquiry? Is there any other Brahmā besides me within this universe?'

TEXT 66

indra-gaṇa āilā lakṣa koṭi-nayana

SYNONYMS

rudra-gaṇa-the Śivas; āilā-arrived; lakṣa koṭi-vadana-possessing a hundred thousand and ten million faces; indra-gaṇa-the Indras; āilā-arrived; lakṣa-a hundred thousand; koṭi-ten million; nayana-eyes.

TRANSLATION

"There also arrived many Lord Śivas with various heads numbering one hundred thousand and ten million. Many Indras also arrived, and they had hundreds of thousands of eyes all over their bodies.

PURPORT

It is said that Indra, the King of heaven, is very lusty. Once he tactfully had sexual intercourse with the wife of a great sage, and when the sage learned about this, he cursed the lusty Indra with a curse that put vaginas all over his body. Being very ashamed, Indra fell down at the lotus feet of the great sage and begged his pardon. Being compassionate, the sage turned the vaginas into eyes; therefore Indra possesses hundreds and thousands of eyes all over his body. Just as Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva have many faces, the King of heaven, Indra, has many eyes.

SYNONYMS

dvārakā-ādi-Dvārakā-dhāma and other abodes; vibhu-transcendental abode; tāra ei ta pramāṇa-this is the evidence of that; āmāra-i brahmāṇḍe-in my brahmāṇḍa; kṛṣṇa-Kṛṣṇa is now present; sabāra-of all of them; haila jñāna-there was this knowledge.

TRANSLATION

"This is the proof of Dvārakā's opulence: all the Brahmās thought, 'Kṛṣṇa is now staying in my jurisdiction.'

TEXT 79

kṛṣṇa-saha dvārakā-vaibhava anubhava haila ekatra milane keha kāho nā dekhila kṛṣṇa-saha-with Kṛṣṇa; dvārakā-vaibhava-the opulence of Dvārakā; anubhava haila-there was perception; ekatra milane-although they came together; keha-someone; kāho-anyone else; nā dekhila-did not see.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”Thus the opulence of Dvārakā was perceived by each and every one of them. Although they were all assembled together, no one could see anyone but himself.

PURPORT

The four-headed Brahmā perceived the opulence of Dvārakā-dhāma where Kṛṣṇa was staying, and although there were Brahmās present having ten to ten million heads, and also many Lord Śivas were also assembled, only the four-headed Brahmā of this universe could see all of them. By the inconceivable potency of Kṛṣṇa, the others could not see one another. Although all the Brahmās and Śivas were assembled together, due to Kṛṣṇa’s energy, they could not meet or talk among themselves individually.

TEXT 80

SYNONYMS

jānantaḥ-persons who think they are aware of Your unlimited potency; eva-certainly; jānantu-let them think like that; kim-what is the use; bahu-uktyā-with many words; na-not; me-my; prabho-O my Lord; manasaḥ-of the mind; vapuṣaḥ-of the body; vācaḥ-of the words; vaibhavam-opulences; tava-Your; gocaraḥ-within the range.

TRANSLATION

” ’There are people who say, ”I know everything about Kṛṣṇa.” Let them think in that way. As far as I am concerned, I do not wish to speak very much about this matter. O my Lord, let me say this much. As far as your opulences are concerned, they are all beyond the reach of my mind, body and words.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.14.38), spoken by Lord Brahmā.

TEXT 84

kṛṣṇa kahe, ”ei brahmāṇḍa pañcāśat koṭi yojana ati kṣudra, tāte tomāra cāri vadana

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa kahe-Kṛṣṇa said; ei brahmāṇḍa-this universe; pañcāśat koṭi yojana-four billion miles; ati kṣudra-very small; tāte-therefore; tomāra-your; cāri vadana-four faces.

TRANSLATION

”Kṛṣṇa said, ’Your particular universe extends four billion miles; therefore it is the smallest of all the universes. Consequently you have only four heads.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, one of the greatest astrologers of his time, gives information from Siddhānta-śiromaṇi that this universe measures 18,712,069,200,000,000 x 8 miles. This is the circumference of this universe. According to some, this is only half the circumference.

TEXT 85

kona brahmāṇḍa śata-koṭi, kona lakṣa-koṭi

SYNONYMS

tasyāḥ pāre-on the other bank of the Virajā River; para-vyoma-the spiritual sky; tri-pād-bhūtam-existing as three fourths of the opulence of the Supreme Lord; sanātanam-eternal; amṛtam-without deterioration; śāśvatam-without being subjected to the control of time; nityam-constantly existing; anantam-unlimited; paramam-supreme; padam-abode.

TRANSLATION

” ’Beyond the river Virajā is a spiritual nature, which is indestructible, eternal, inexhaustible and unlimited. It is the supreme abode consisting of three fourths of the Lord’s opulences. It is known as paravyoma, the spiritual sky.’

PURPORT

This is a verse from the Padma Purāṇa, recited here by Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 89

tabe kṛṣṇa brahmāre dilena vidāya kṛṣṇera vibhūti-svarūpa jānāna nā yāya

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; brahmāre-unto the Lord Brahmā of this universe; dilena vidāya-bade farewell; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; vibhūti-svarūpa-spiritual verification of opulence; jānāna nā yāya-is not possible to understand.

TRANSLATION

”In this way Lord Kṛṣṇa bade farewell to the four-headed Brahmā of this universe. We may thus understand that no one can calculate the extent of Kṛṣṇa’s energies.

TEXT 90

’tryadhīśvara’-śabdera artha ’gūḍha’ āra haya
’tri’-śabde kṛṣṇera tina loka kaya

SYNONYMS

tri-adhīśvara-tryadhīśvara; śabdera-of the word; artha-a meaning; gūḍha-confidential; āra-another; haya-there is; tri-śabde-by the word ”three”; kṛṣṇera-of Kṛṣṇa; tina loka kaya-the three places or properties of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”There is a very deep meaning in the word tryadhīśvara, which indicates that Kṛṣṇa possesses three different lokas, or natures.

PURPORT

The word tryadhīśvara means ”proprietor of the three worlds.” There are three worlds of which Kṛṣṇa is the supreme proprietor. This is explained in Bhagavad-gītā:

bhoktāraṁ yajña-tapasāṁ
sarva-loka-maheśvaram
suhṛdaṁ sarva-bhūtānāṁ
jñātvā māṁ śāntim ṛcchati

”The sages, knowing Me as the ultimate purpose of all sacrifices and austerities, the Supreme Lord of all planets and demigods and the benefactor and well-wisher of all living entities, attain peace from the pangs of material miseries.” (Bg. 5.29)

The word sarva-loka means ”all three worlds,” and the word maheśvara means ”the supreme proprietor.” Kṛṣṇa is the proprietor of both material and spiritual worlds. The spiritual world is divided into two portions-Goloka Vṛndāvana and the Vaikuṇṭhas. The material world is a combination of universes unlimited in number.

golokākhya gokula, mathurā, dvārāvatī ei tina loke kṛṣṇera sahaje nitya-sthiti goloka-ākhya-called Goloka; gokula-Gokula; mathurā-Mathurā; dvārāvatī-Dvārakā; ei tina loke-all three of these places; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; sahaje-naturally; nitya-sthiti-eternal residence.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”The three lokas are Gokula (Goloka), Mathurā and Dvārakā. Kṛṣṇa lives eternally in these three places.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments that in the Goloka planet there are three divisions: Gokula, Mathurā and Dvārakā. In His incarnation as Gaurasundara, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Lord conducts His pastimes in three areas: Navadvīpa, Jagannātha Purī (and South India) and Vraja-maṇḍala (the area of Vṛndāvana-dhāma).

TEXT 92

cic-chakti-sampattira ’ṣaḍ-aiśvarya’ nāma

SYNONYMS

nija-His own; cit-śakte-in spiritual potency; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; nitya-eternally; virājamāna-existing; cit-śakti-of the spiritual potency; sampattira-of the opulence; ṣaṭ-aiśvarya-the six opulences; nāma-named.

TRANSLATION

”Kṛṣṇa is thus situated eternally in His spiritual potency, and the opulence of that spiritual potency is called ṣaḍ-aiśvarya, indicating six kinds of opulence.

TEXT 97

sei svārājya-lakṣmī kare nitya pūrṇa kāma ataeva vede kahe ’svayaṁ bhagavān’

SYNONYMS

sei svārājya-lakṣmī-that personal opulence; kare-does; nitya-eternally; pūrṇa-fulfilling; kāma-all desires; ataeva-therefore; vede-in the Vedas; kahe-it is said; svayam bhagavān-Kṛṣṇa is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

"Because Be possesses the spiritual potencies which fulfill all His desires, Kṛṣṇa is accepted as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This is the Vedic version.

TEXT 98

avagāhite nāri, tāra chuilaṅ eka bindu

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇera aiśvarya-the opulence of Kṛṣṇa; apāra-unlimited; amṛtera sindhu-an ocean of nectar; avagāhite-to bathe; nāri-I am unable; tāra-of that; chuilaṅ-I touched; eka bindu-only one drop.

TRANSLATION

"The unlimited potencies of Kṛṣṇa are just like an ocean of nectar. Since one cannot bathe within that ocean, I have only touched a drop of it."

TEXT 99

aiśvarya kahite prabhura kṛṣṇa-sphūrti haila mādhurye majila mana, eka śloka paḍila

SYNONYMS

aiśvarya kahite-while describing the opulence; prabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kṛṣṇa-sphūrti-awakening of love of Kṛṣṇa; haila-there was; mādhurye-in the sweetness of conjugal love; majila mana-the mind became immersed; eka-one; śloka-verse; paḍila-recited.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu described the opulences and spiritual potencies of Kṛṣṇa in this way, there was an awakening of love of Kṛṣṇa within Him. His mind was immersed in the sweetness of conjugal love, and He quoted the following verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

TEXT 100

yan martya-līlaupayikaṁ svayoga-māyā-balaṁ darśayatā gṛhītam vismāpanaṁ svasya ca saubhagardheḥ paraṁ padaṁ bhūṣaṇa-bhūṣaṇāṅgam

SYNONYMS

yat-that which; martya-līlā-pastimes in the material world; aupayikam-just suitable for; sva-His own; yoga-māyā-of the spiritual potency; balam-the strength; darśayatā-showing; gṛhītam-accepted; vismāpanam-even producing wonder; svasya-for Himself; ca-also; saubhaga-ṛdheḥ-of abundant good fortune; param-supreme; padam-abode; bhūṣaṇa-of ornaments; bhūṣaṇa-aṅgam-the limbs of which were the ornaments.

TRANSLATION

" 'To exhibit the strength of His own spiritual potency, Lord Kṛṣṇa manifested a suitable form just for His pastimes in the material world. This form was wonderful even for Him and was the supreme abode of the wealth of good fortune. Its limbs were so beautiful that they increased the beauty of the ornaments worn on different parts of His body.'

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.2.12) is stated in a conversation between Vidura and Uddhava. Uddhava thus begins his description of the pastimes of Śrī Kṛṣṇa in His form exhibited by yogamāyā.

TEXT 101

kṛṣṇera yateka khelā, sarvottama nara-līlā, nara-vapu tāhāra svarūpa

rūpa dekhi'-by seeing the form; āpanāra-His own; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; haila-there was; camatkāra-wonder; āsvādite-to taste; mane-in the mind; uṭhe-arises; kāma-a desire; sva-saubhāgya-one's own good fortune; yāṅra-of which; nāma-the name; saundarya-ādi-guṇa-grāma-the transcendental qualities, headed by beauty; ei rūpa-this form; nitya-eternal; tāra-of them; dhāma-the abode.

TRANSLATION

"The wonder of Kṛṣṇa in His personal feature is so great that it attracts even Kṛṣṇa to taste His own association. Thus Kṛṣṇa becomes very eager to taste that wonder. Total beauty, knowledge, wealth, strength, fame and renunciation are the six opulences of Kṛṣṇa. He is eternally situated in His opulences.

PURPORT

Kṛṣṇa has many pastimes, of which His pastimes in Goloka Vṛndāvana (the gokula-līlā) are supreme. He also has pastimes in the Vaikuṇṭhas, the spiritual world, as Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna and Aniruddha. In His pastimes in the spiritual sky, He lies down in the Causal Ocean as Kāraṇārṇavaśāyī, the puruṣa-avatāra. His incarnations as a fish, tortoise and so on are called His causal incarnations. He incarnates in the modes of nature as Lord Brahmā, Lord Śiva and Lord Viṣṇu. He also incarnates as empowered living entities like Pṛthu and Vyāsa. The Supersoul is His localized incarnation, and His all-pervasive aspect is the impersonal Brahman.

When we consider impartially all the unlimited pastimes of the Lord, we find that His pastimes as a human being on this planet-wherein He sports as a cowherd boy with a flute in His hands and appears youthful and fresh like a ballet dancer-are pastimes and features that are never subjected to material laws and inebrieties. The wonderful beauty of Kṛṣṇa is presented in the supreme planet, Gokula (Goloka Vṛndāvana). Inferior to that is His representation in the spiritual sky, and inferior to that is His representation in the external energy (Devī-dhāma). A mere drop of Kṛṣṇa's sweetness can drown these three worlds-Goloka Vṛndāvana, Hari-dhāma (Vaikuṇṭhaloka), and Devī-dhāma (the material world). Everywhere, Kṛṣṇa's beauty merges everyone in the ecstasy of transcendental bliss. Actually the activities of yogamāyā are absent in the spiritual sky and the Vaikuṇṭha planets. She simply works in the supreme planet, Goloka Vṛndāvana, and she works to manifest the activities of Kṛṣṇa when He descends to the material universe to please His innumerable devotees within the material world. Thus a replica of the Goloka Vṛndāvana planet and the pastimes there are manifest on this planet on a specific tract of land-Bhauma Vṛndāvana, the Vṛndāvana-dhāma on this planet.

tāhāra upara bhrūdhanu-nartana terache netrānta bāṇa, tāra dṛḍha sandhāna, vindhe rādhā-gopī-gaṇa-mana

SYNONYMS

bhūṣaṇera-of the ornament; bhūṣaṇa-the ornament; aṅga-the limbs of the body; tāheṅ-that feature; lalita-delicate; tri-bhaṅga-bent in three places; tāhāra upara-above that; bhrū-dhanu-nartana-dancing of the eyebrows; terache-crooked; netra-anta-the end of the eye; bāṇa-arrow; tāra-of that arrow; dṛḍha-strong; sandhāna-fixing; vindhe-pierces; rādhā-of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; gopī-gaṇa-of the gopīs also; mana-the minds.

TRANSLATION

"Ornaments caress that body, but the transcendental body of Kṛṣṇa is so beautiful that it beautifies the ornaments He wears. Therefore Kṛṣṇa's body is said to be the ornament of ornaments. Despite the wonderful beauty of Kṛṣṇa, there is His three-curved style of standing, which beautifies that form. Above all these beautiful features, Kṛṣṇa's eyes dance and move obliquely, acting like arrows to pierce the minds of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and the gopīs. When the arrow succeeds in hitting its target, their minds become agitated.

SYNONYMS

brahmāṇḍa-upari-above all the universes; para-vyoma-the spiritual sky; tāhāṅ-there; ye-all those; svarūpa-gaṇa-transcendental personal expansions; tāṅ-sabāra-of all of Them; bale-by force; hare mana-it enchants the minds; pati-vratā-of those who are chaste and devoted to the husband; śiromaṇi-topmost; yāṅre-unto whom; kahe-describe; veda-vāṇī-hymns of the Vedas; ākarṣaye-it attracts; sei-those; lakṣmī-gaṇa-all the goddesses of fortune.

TRANSLATION

”The beauty of Kṛṣṇa’s body is so attractive that it attracts not only the demigods and other living entities within this material world but the personalities of the spiritual sky as well, including the Nārāyaṇas, who are expansions of Kṛṣṇa’s personality. The minds of the Nārāyaṇas are thus attracted by the beauty of Kṛṣṇa’s body. In addition, the goddesses of fortune [Lakṣmīs]-who are wives of the Nārāyaṇas and are the women described in the Vedas as most chaste-are also attracted by the wonderful beauty of Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

caḍi’-riding; gopī-manaḥ-rathe-on the chariot of the minds of the gopīs; manmathera-of Cupid; mana-the mind; mathe-churns; nāma-the name; dhare-accepts; madana-mohana-Madana-mohana, the deluder of Cupid; jini’-conquering; pañca-śara-of Cupid, the master of the five arrows of the senses; darpa-the pride; svayam-personally; nava-new; kandarpa-Cupid; rāsa-rāsa dance; kare-performs; lañā-with; gopī-gaṇa-the gopīs.

TRANSLATION

”Favoring them, Kṛṣṇa rides on the chariot of the minds of the gopīs, and just to receive loving service from them, He attracts their minds like Cupid. Therefore He is also called Madana-mohana, the attractor of Cupid. Cupid has five arrows, representing form, taste, smell, sound and touch. Kṛṣṇa is the owner of these five arrows, and with His Cupid-like beauty, He conquers the minds of the gopīs, though they are very proud of their superexcellent beauty. Becoming a new Cupid, Kṛṣṇa attracts their minds and engages in the rāsa dance.

SYNONYMS

nija-sama-equal to Himself; sakhā-saṅge-with the friends; go-gaṇa-an unlimited number of cows; cāraṇa-tending; raṅge-such pastimes; vṛndāvane-in Vṛndāvana; svacchanda-spontaneous; vihāra-blissful enjoyment; yāṅra-of whom; veṇu-dhvani śuni’-hearing the vibration of the flute; sthāvara-jaṅgama prāṇī-all living entities, moving and not moving; pulaka-jubilation; kampa-trembling; aśru-tears; vahe-flow; dhāra-streams.

TRANSLATION

”When Lord Kṛṣṇa wanders in the forest of Vṛndāvana with His friends on an equal level, there are innumerable cows grazing. This is another of the Lord’s blissful enjoyments. When He plays on His flute, all living entities-including trees, plants, animals and human beings-tremble and are saturated with jubilation. Tears flow constantly from their eyes.

SYNONYMS

muktā-hāra-a necklace of pearls; baka-pāṅti-like a row of white ducks; indra-dhanu-like a rainbow; piñcha-a peacock feather; tati-there; pīta-ambara-yellow garments; vijurī-sañcāra-like the appearance of lightning in the sky; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; nava-new; jala-dhara-cloud carrying water; jagat-the universe; śasya-like crops of grains; upara-upon; variṣaye-rains; līlā-amṛta-the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa; dhāra-like a shower.

TRANSLATION

”Kṛṣṇa wears a pearl necklace that appears like a chain of white ducks around His neck. The peacock feather in His hair appears like a rainbow, and His yellow garments appear like lightning in the sky. Kṛṣṇa appears like a newly risen cloud, and the gopīs appear like newly grown grains in the field. Constant rains of nectarean pastimes fall upon these newly grown grains, and it seems that the gopīs are receiving beams of life from Kṛṣṇa, exactly as grains receive life from the rains.

SYNONYMS

mādhurya-sweetness; bhagavattā-sāra-the quintessence of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; vraje-in Vṛndāvana; kaila-did; paracāra-propagation; tāhā-that; śuka-Śukadeva Gosvāmī; vyāsera nandana-the son of Vyāsadeva; sthāne sthāne-in different places; bhāgavate-in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; varṇiyāche-has described; jānāite-in order to explain; tāhā śuni'-hearing those statements; māte-become maddened; bhakta-gaṇa-all the devotees.

TRANSLATION

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, is full in all six opulences, including His attractive beauty, which engages Him in conjugal love with the gopīs. Such sweetness is the quintessence of His qualities. Śukadeva Gosvāmī, the son of Vyāsadeva, has described these pastimes of Kṛṣṇa throughout Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Hearing the descriptions, the devotees become mad with love of God."

SYNONYMS

kahite-to describe; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; rase-the different types of mellows; śloka-a verse; paḍe-recites; prema-āveśe-absorbed in ecstatic love; preme-in such love; sanātana-hāta dhari'-catching the hand of Sanātana Gosvāmī; gopī-bhāgya-the fortune of the gopīs; kṛṣṇa guṇa-the transcendental qualities of Kṛṣṇa; ye-which; karila varṇana-described; bhāva-āveśe-in ecstatic love; mathurā-nāgarī-the women of the city of Mathurā.

TRANSLATION

Just as the women of Mathurā ecstatically described the fortune of the gopīs of Vṛndāvana and the transcendental qualities of Kṛṣṇa, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu described the different mellows of Kṛṣṇa and became overwhelmed with ecstatic love. Grasping the hand of Sanātana Gosvāmī, He recited the following verse.

TEXT 112

gopyas tapaḥ kim acaran yad amuṣya rūpaṁ lāvaṇya-sāram asamordhvam ananya-siddham dṛgbhiḥ pibanty anusavābhinavaṁ durāpam gopyaḥ-the gopīs; tapaḥ-austerities; kim-what; acaran-performed; yat-from which; amuṣya-of such a one (Lord Kṛṣṇa); rūpam-the form; lāvaṇya-sāram-the essence of loveliness; asama-ūrdhvam-not paralleled or surpassed; ananya-siddham-not perfected by any other ornament (self-perfect); dṛgbhiḥ-by the eyes; pibanti-they drink; anusava-abhinavam-constantly new; durāpam-difficult to obtain; ekānta-dhāma-the only abode; yaśasaḥ-of fame; śriyaḥ-of beauty; aiśvarasya-of opulence.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

" 'What austerities must the gopīs have performed? With their eyes they always drink the nectar of the face of Lord Kṛṣṇa, which is the essence of loveliness and is not to be equaled or surpassed. That loveliness is the only abode of beauty, fame and opulence. It is self-perfect, ever fresh and unique.'

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.44.14) was spoken by the women of Mathurā when they saw Kṛṣṇa in the wrestling arena.

TEXT 113

SYNONYMS

tāruṇya-amṛta-eternal youth; pārāvāra-like a great ocean; taraṅga-waves; lāvaṇya-sāra-the essence of bodily beauty; tāte-in that ocean; se-that; āvarta-like a whirlpool; bhāva-udgama-awakening of different ecstatic emotions; vaṁśī-dhvani-the vibration of the flute; cakravāta-a whirlwind; nārīra-of the women; mana-the minds; tṛṇa-pāta-leaves of grass; tāhā-that; ḍubāya-plunge down; nā haya udgama-never to come up again.

TRANSLATION

"The bodily beauty of Śrī Kṛṣṇa is like a wave in the ocean of eternal youth. In that great ocean is the whirlpool of the awakening of ecstatic love. The vibration of Kṛṣṇa's flute is like a whirlwind, and the flickering minds of the gopīs are like straws and dry leaves. After they fall down in the whirlwind, they never rise again but remain eternally at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

ye mādhurīra-that sweetness; ūrdhva-higher; āna-another; nāhi-there is not; yāra samāna-equal to which; para-vyome-the spiritual sky; sva-rūpera gaṇe-among the expansions of Kṛṣṇa's personality; yeṅho-who; saba-avatāri-the source of all the incarnations; para-vyoma-adhikārī-the predominating Deity of the Vaikuṇṭha planets; e mādhurya-this ecstatic sweetness; nāhi-is not; nārāyaṇe-even in Lord Nārāyaṇa.

TRANSLATION

"The sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's beauty enjoyed by the gopīs is unparalleled. Nothing is equal to or greater than such ecstatic sweetness. Even the predominating Deities of the Vaikuṇṭha planets, the Nārāyaṇas, do not possess such sweetness. Indeed, none of the incarnations of Kṛṣṇa up to Nārāyaṇa possess such transcendental beauty.

SYNONYMS

sei ta' mādhurya-sāra-that is the quintessence of sweetness; anya-siddhi-perfection due to anything else; nāhi-there is not; tāra-of that; tiṅho-Lord Kṛṣṇa; mādhurya-ādi-guṇa-khani-the mine of transcendental mellows, headed by sweetness; āra saba-all other; prakāśe-in manifestations; tāṅra-His; datta-given; guṇa-transcendental qualities; bhāse-are exhibited; yāhaṅ-where; yata-as much as; prakāśe-in that manifestation; kārya-to be done; jāni-I understand.

TRANSLATION

"The quintessence of Kṛṣṇa's sweet bodily luster is so perfect that there is no perfection above it. He is the immutable mine of all transcendental qualities. In His other manifestations and personal expansions, there is only a partial exhibition of such qualities. We understand all His personal expansions in this way.

SYNONYMS

gopī-bhāva-darapaṇa-the gopīs' ecstasy is like a mirror; nava nava kṣaṇe kṣaṇa-newer and newer at every moment; tāra āge-in front of that; kṛṣṇera mādhurya-the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's beauty; doṅhe-both; kare-do; huḍāhuḍi-struggling together; bāḍe-increases; mukha nāhi muḍi-never turning away the faces; nava nava-newer and newer; doṅhāra-of both of them; prācurya-abundance.

TRANSLATION

"Both the gopīs and Kṛṣṇa are complete. The gopīs' ecstatic love is like a mirror that becomes newer and newer at every moment and reflects Kṛṣṇa's bodily luster and sweetness. Thus competition increases. Since neither give up, their pastimes become newer and newer, and both sides constantly increase.

SYNONYMS

karma-fruitive activities; tapa-austerities; yoga-the practice of mystic yoga; jñāna-speculative cultivation of knowledge; vidhi-bhakti-regulative principles in devotional service; japa-chanting; dhyāna-meditation; ihā haite-from these things; mādhurya-the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa; durlabha-very difficult to perceive; kevala-only; ye-one; rāga-mārge-by the path of spontaneous ecstatic love; bhaje-worships; kṛṣṇe-Lord Kṛṣṇa; anurāge-with transcendental feeling; tāre-unto him; kṛṣṇa-mādhurya-the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's; sulabha-very easily appreciated.

TRANSLATION

"The transcendental mellows generated from the dealings between the gopīs and Kṛṣṇa cannot be tasted by fruitive activity, yogic austerities, speculative knowledge, regulative devotional service, mantra-yoga or meditation. This sweetness can be tasted only through the spontaneous love of liberated persons who chant the holy names with great ecstatic love.

SYNONYMS

sei-rūpa-that supernatural beauty; vraja-āśraya-whose abode is in Vṛndāvana; aiśvarya-mādhurya-maya-full of opulence and the sweetness of love; divya-guṇa-gaṇa-of transcendental qualities; ratna-ālaya-the source of all the gems; ānera-of others; vaibhava-sattā-the presence of opulences; kṛṣṇa-datta-all bestowed by Kṛṣṇa; bhagavattā-qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; sarva-aṁśī-the original source of all of them; sarva-āśraya-the shelter of all of them.

TRANSLATION

"Such ecstatic transactions between Kṛṣṇa and the gopīs are only possible in Vṛndāvana, which is full of the opulences of transcendental love. The form of Kṛṣṇa is the original source of all transcendental qualities. It is like a mine of gems. The opulences belonging to all the personal expansions of Kṛṣṇa are to be understood to be bestowed by Kṛṣṇa; therefore Kṛṣṇa is the original source and shelter of everyone.

TRANSLATION

"Beauty, humility, mercy, merit, patience and expert intelligence are all manifest in Kṛṣṇa. But besides these, Kṛṣṇa has other qualities like good behavior, mildness and magnanimity. He also performs welfare activities for the whole world. All these qualities are not visible in expansions like Nārāyaṇa.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura mentions that the qualities of beauty, humility, mercy, merit, patience and expert intelligence are brilliant qualities, and when they are exhibited in the person of Nārāyaṇa, one should know that they are bestowed upon Nārāyaṇa by Kṛṣṇa. Good behavior, mildness and magnanimity are found only in Kṛṣṇa. Only Kṛṣṇa performs welfare activities for the whole world.

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; dekhi'-seeing; nānā jana-various persons; kaila-did; nimiṣe-due to the blinking of the eyes; nindana-blaming; vraje-in Vṛndāvana; vidhi-Lord Brahmā; ninde-blame; gopī-gaṇa-all the gopīs; sei saba-all those; śloka-verses; paḍi'-reciting; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; artha kari'-explaining the meaning; sukhe-in happiness; mādhurya-transcendental sweetness; kare-does; āsvādana-tasting.

TRANSLATION

"After seeing Kṛṣṇa, various people criticize the blinking of their eyes. In Vṛndāvana, especially, all the gopīs criticize Lord Brahmā because of this defect in the eyes." Then Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu recited some verses from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and explained them vividly, thus enjoying the taste of transcendental sweetness with great happiness.

SYNONYMS

yasya-of Kṛṣṇa; ānanam-face; makara-kuṇḍala-by earrings resembling sharks; cāru-beautified; karṇa-the ears; bhrājat-shining; kapola-cheeks; subhagam-delicate; sa-vilāsa-hāsam-smiling with an enjoying spirit; nitya-utsavam-in which there are eternal festivities of joy; na-not; tatṛpuḥ-satisfied; dṛśibhiḥ-by the eyes; pibantyaḥ-drinking; nāryaḥ-all the women; narāḥ-the men; ca-and; muditāḥ-very pleased; kupitāḥ-very angry; nimeḥ-at the creator of the blinking of the eyes; ca-also.

TRANSLATION

" 'All men and women were accustomed to enjoying the beauty of the shining face of Lord Kṛṣṇa, as well as His sharklike earrings swinging on His ears. His beautiful features, His cheeks and His playful smiles all combined to form a constant festival for the eyes, and the blinking of the eyes became obstacles that impeded one from seeing that beauty. For this reason, men and women became very angry at the creator [Lord Brahmā].'

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (9.24.65).

TEXT 124

SYNONYMS

aṭati-goes; yat-when; bhavān-Your Lordship; ahni-in the day; kānanam-to the forest; truṭiḥ-half a second; yugāyate-appears like a yuga; tvām-You; apaśyatām-of those not seeing; kuṭila-kuntalam-adorned with curled hair; śrī-mukham-beautiful face; ca-and; te-Your; jaḍaḥ-stupid; udīkṣatām-looking at; pakṣma-kṛt-the maker of eyelashes; dṛśām-of the eyes.

TRANSLATION

" 'O Kṛṣṇa, when You go to the forest during the day and we do not see Your sweet face, which is surrounded by beautiful, curling hair, half a second becomes as long as an entire age for us. And we consider the creator, who has put eyelids on the eyes we use for seeing You, to be simply a fool.'

PURPORT

This verse is spoken by the gopīs in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.31.15).

sārdha-cabbiśa akṣara tāra haya se akṣara 'candra' haya, kṛṣṇe kari' udaya, trijagat kailā kāmamaya

SYNONYMS

kāma-gāyatrī-mantra-rūpa-the hymn known as kāma-gāyatrī; haya-is; kṛṣṇera svarūpa-identical with Kṛṣṇa; sārdha-cabbiśa-twenty-four and a half; akṣara-syllables; tāra-of that; haya-are; se akṣara-these syllables; candra haya-are like the moon; kṛṣṇe-Lord Kṛṣṇa; kari' udaya-awakening; tri-jagat-the three worlds; kailā-made; kāma-maya-full of desire.

TRANSLATION

"Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is identical with the Vedic hymn known as the kāma-gāyatrī, which is composed of twenty-four and a half syllables. Those syllables are compared to moons that arise in Kṛṣṇa. Thus all three worlds are filled with desire.

sakhī he-O dear friend; kṛṣṇa-mukha-the face of Lord Kṛṣṇa; dvija-rāja-rāja-the king of moons; kṛṣṇa-vapu-of the transcendental body of Kṛṣṇa; siṁhāsane-on the throne; vasi'-sitting; rājya-śāsane-ruling of the kingdom; kare-does; saṅge-in the company of; candrera samāja-the society of moons.

TRANSLATION

"The face of Kṛṣṇa is the king of all moons, and the body of Kṛṣṇa is the throne. Thus the king governs a society of moons.

PURPORT

The entire face is called the king of moons. The mouth is another moon, the left cheek is a moon, and the right cheek is a moon. The spots of sandalwood pulp on Kṛṣṇa's face are also considered different moons, and His fingernails and toenails are also different moons. His forehead is considered a half moon, His face is considered the king of moons, and His body is considered the throne. All the other candras (moons) are considered to be subordinate moons.

TEXT 127

SYNONYMS

nāce-dance; makara-kuṇḍala-the earrings shaped like sharks; netra-the eyes; līlā-for play; kamala-like lotus flowers; vilāsī-the enjoyer; rājā-the king; satata nācāya-always causes to dance; bhrū-two eyebrows; dhanu-just like bows; netra-the eyes; bāṇa-just like arrows; dhanuḥ-guṇa-the string of the bow; dui kāṇa-the two ears; nārī-mana-the minds of the gopīs; lakṣya-the target; vindhe-pierces; tāya-there.

TRANSLATION

”Kṛṣṇa’s face is the enjoyer king. That full-moon face makes His shark-shaped earrings and lotus eyes dance. His eyebrows are like bows, and His eyes are like arrows. His ears are fixed on the string of that bow, and when His eyes spread to His ears, He pierces the hearts of the gopīs.

SYNONYMS

ei cāndera-of this moon of the face; baḍa-big; nāṭa-dancing; pasāri’-expanding; cāndera hāṭa-the marketplace of full moons; vinimūle-without a price; vilāya-distributes; nija-amṛta-its personal nectar; kāhoṅ-to some; smita-jyotsnā-amṛte-by the nectar of the sweetly smiling moonrays; kāṅhāre-to someone; adhara-amṛte-by the nectar of the lips; saba loka-all people; kare āpyāyita-pleases.

TRANSLATION

”The dancing features of His face surpass all other full moons and expand the marketplace of full moons. Although priceless, the nectar of Kṛṣṇa’s face is distributed to everyone. Some purchase the moonrays of His sweet smiles, and others purchase the nectar of His lips. Thus He pleases everyone.

SYNONYMS

vipula-āyata-broad and spread; aruṇa-reddish; madana-mada-the pride of Cupid; ghūrṇana-bewildering; mantrī-ministers; yāra-whose; e-these; dui-two; nayana-eyes; lāvaṇya-keli-of pastimes of beauty; sadana-home; jana-netra-rasa-āyana-very pleasing to the eyes of everyone; sukha-maya-full of happiness; govinda-vadana-the face of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”Kṛṣṇa has two reddish, widely spread eyes. These are ministers of the king, and they subdue the pride of Cupid, who also has beautiful eyes. That face of Govinda, which is full of happiness, is the home of the pastimes of beauty, and it is very pleasing to everyone’s eyes.

SYNONYMS

yāṅra-whose; puṇya-puñja-phale-by the result of many pious activities; se-mukha-of that face; darśana-seeing; mile-if one gets to do; dui āṅkhi-two eyes; ki-how; karibe-will do; pāne-drinking; dvi-guṇa-twice; bāḍe-increases; tṛṣṇā-lobha-greed and thirst; pite-to drink; nāre-not able; manaḥ-kṣobha-agitation of the mind; duḥkhe-in great distress; kare-does; vidhira-of the creator; nindane-criticizing.

TRANSLATION

"If by devotional service one gets the results of pious activities and sees Lord Kṛṣṇa's face, he can relish the Lord with his eyes. His greed and thirst then increase twofold by seeing the nectarean face of Kṛṣṇa. Due to one's inability to sufficiently drink that nectar, one becomes very unhappy and criticizes the creator for not having given more than two eyes.

SYNONYMS

nā dileka-did not award; lakṣa-koṭi-thousands and millions; sabe-only; dilā-gave; āṅkhi duṭi-two eyes; tāte-in them; dilā-gave; nimiṣa-ācchādana-covering of the eyelids; vidhi-creator; jaḍa-dull; tapaḥ-dhana-assets of austerities; rasa-śūnya-without juice; tāra-his; mana-mind; nāhi jāne-does not know; yogya-suitable; sṛjana-creating.

TRANSLATION

"When the onlooker of Kṛṣṇa's face becomes dissatisfied in this way, he thinks, 'Why didn't the creator give me thousands and millions of eyes? Why has he given me only two? Even these two eyes are disturbed by blinking, which keeps me from continuously seeing Kṛṣṇa's face.' Thus one accuses the creator of being dry and tasteless due to engaging in severe austerities. 'The creator is only a dry manufacturer. He does not know how to create and set things in their proper places.

SYNONYMS

ye-anyone who; dekhibe-will see; kṛṣṇa-ānana-the face of Kṛṣṇa; tāra-of him; kare-make; dvi-nayana-two eyes; vidhi-an authority in creation; hañā-being; hena-such; avicāra-lack of consideration; mora-my; yadi-if; bola-instruction; dhare-accepts; koṭi āṅkhi-millions of eyes; tāra-of him; kare-would create; tabe jāni-then I would understand; yogya-suitable; sṛṣṭi-creation; tāra-his.

TRANSLATION

" 'The creator says, "Let those who will see Kṛṣṇa's beautiful face have two eyes." Just see the lack of consideration exhibited by this person posing as a creator. If the creator took my advice, he would give millions of eyes to the person who intends to see Śrī Kṛṣṇa's face. If the creator will accept this advice, then I would say that he is competent in his work.'

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-aṅga-of the transcendental body of Kṛṣṇa; mādhurya-of sweetness; sindhu-the ocean; su-madhura-very sweet; mukha-face; indu-like the full moon; ati-madhu-extraordinarily sweet; smita-smiling; su-kiraṇe-beam of moonlight; e-tine-these three; lāgila mana-attracted the mind; lobhe-with more and more greed; kare āsvādana-relished; śloka paḍe-recites a verse; sva-hasta-cālane-moving His own hand.

TRANSLATION

"The transcendental form of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa is compared to an ocean. A particularly extraordinary vision is the moon above that ocean, and another vision is His smile, which is sweeter than sweet and is like shining beams of moonlight." While speaking of these things with Sanātana Gosvāmī, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu began to remember one thing after another. Moving His hands in ecstasy, He recited a verse.

TEXT 136

madhuraṁ madhuraṁ vadanaṁ madhuram madhu-gandhi mṛdu-smitam etad aho madhuraṁ madhuraṁ madhuraṁ madhuram madhuram-sweet; madhuram-sweet; vapuḥ-the transcendental form; asya-His; vibhoḥ-of the Lord; madhuram-sweet; madhuram-sweet; vadanam-face; madhuram-more sweet; madhu-gandhi-the fragrance of honey; mṛdu-smitam-soft smiling; etat-this; aho-O; madhuram-sweet; madhuram-sweet; madhuram-sweet; madhuram-still more sweet.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

" 'O my Lord, the transcendental body of Kṛṣṇa is very sweet, and His face is even sweeter than His body. The soft smile on His face, which is like the fragrance of honey, is sweeter still.'

PURPORT

This is a verse quoted from Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta by Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura.

TEXT 137

sanātana, kṛṣṇa-mādhurya–amṛtera sindhu mora mana–sannipāti, saba pite kare mati, durdaiva-vaidya nā deya eka bindu sanātana-O My dear Sanātana; kṛṣṇa-mādhurya-the sweetness of Lord Kṛṣṇa; amṛtera sindhu-an ocean of ambrosia; mora mana-my mind; sannipāti-a disease of convulsions; saba-all; pite-to drink; kare-does; mati-desire; durdaiva-vaidya-a physician who suppresses; nā-not; deya-gives; eka-one; bindu-drop.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”My dear Sanātana, the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa’s personality is just like an ocean of ambrosia. Although My mind is now afflicted by convulsive diseases and I wish to drink that entire ocean, the repressive physician does not allow Me to drink even one drop.

PURPORT

When there is a combination of kapha, pitta and vāyu, the three bodily elements, there occurs sannipāti, or a convulsive disease. ”This disease is caused by the personal features of Lord Kṛṣṇa. The three elements are the beauty of Kṛṣṇa’s body, the beauty of His face, and the beauty of His smile. Stricken by these three beauties, My mind goes into convulsions. It wishes to drink the ocean of Kṛṣṇa’s beauty, but because I am undergoing convulsions, My physician, who is Śrī Kṛṣṇa Himself, does not even allow Me to take a drop of water from that ocean.” Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was ecstatic in this way because He was presenting Himself in the mood of the gopīs. The gopīs wanted to drink the ocean of sweetness arising from the bodily features of Kṛṣṇa, but Kṛṣṇa did not allow them to come near. Consequently their desire to meet Kṛṣṇa increased, and being unable to drink the ambrosia of Kṛṣṇa’s bodily features, they became very unhappy.

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-aṅga-the bodily features of Kṛṣṇa; lāvaṇya-pūra-the city of attractive beauty; madhura-sweetness; haite-than; su-madhura-still more sweet; tāte-in that body; yei-that; mukha-face; sudhākara-like the moon; madhura haite su-madhura-sweeter than sweetness; tāhā ha-ite-than that; su-madhura-still more sweet; tāra-of which; yei-that; smita-smiling; jyotsnā-bhara-like the moonshine.

TRANSLATION

”Kṛṣṇa’s body is a city of attractive features, and it is sweeter than sweet. His face, which is like the moon, is sweeter still, and the gentle smile on that moonlike face is like rays of moonshine.

PURPORT

The smile on Kṛṣṇa’s face is just like the smiling of the moon, which generates greater and greater happiness for the gopīs.

SYNONYMS

madhura haite su-madhura-sweeter than sweet; tāhā haite-than that; su-madhura-still sweeter; tāhā haite-than that; ati su-madhura-still much more sweet; āpanāra-of Himself; eka kaṇe-by one particle; vyāpe-spreads; saba-all; tri-bhuvane-throughout the three worlds; daśa-dik-ten directions; vyāpe-spreads; yāra-whose; pūra-the city of Kṛṣṇa’s beauty.

TRANSLATION

”The beauty of Kṛṣṇa’s smile is the sweetest feature of all. His smile is like a full moon that spreads its rays throughout the three worlds-Goloka Vṛndāvana, the spiritual sky of the Vaikuṇṭhas, and Devī-dhāma, the material world. Thus Kṛṣṇa’s shining beauty spreads in all ten directions.

SYNONYMS

smita-kiraṇa-the shining of Kṛṣṇa’s smile; su-karpūre-compared to camphor; paiśe-enters; adhara-madhure-within the sweetness of the lips; sei madhu-that ambrosia; mātāya-maddens; tri-bhuvane-the three worlds; vaṁśī-chidra-of the holes in the flute; ākāśe-in the space; tāra guṇa-the quality of that sweetness; śabde-in sound vibration; paiśe-enters; dhvani-rūpe-the form of sound vibration; pāñā-obtaining; pariṇāme-by transformation.

TRANSLATION

”His slight smiling and fragrant illumination are compared to camphor, which enters the sweetness of the lips. That sweetness is transformed and enters into space as vibrations from the holes of His flute.

SYNONYMS

se dhvani-that vibration; cau-dike-in the four directions; dhāya-runs; aṇḍa bhedi’-piercing the coverings of the universe; vaikuṇṭhe yāya-goes to the spiritual sky; bale-by force; paiśe-enters; jagatera-of the three worlds; kāṇe-in the ears; sabā-everyone; mātoyāla kari'-making drunk; balātkāre-by force; āne-brings; dhari'-catching; viśeṣataḥ-specifically; yuvatīra gaṇe-all the young damsels of Vrajabhūmi.

TRANSLATION

"The sound of Kṛṣṇa's flute spreads in four directions. Even though Kṛṣṇa vibrates His flute within this universe, its sound pierces the universal covering and goes to the spiritual sky. Thus the vibration enters the ears of all inhabitants. It especially enters Goloka Vṛndāvana-dhāma and attracts the minds of the young damsels of Vrajabhūmi, bringing them forcibly to where Kṛṣṇa is present.

SYNONYMS

dhvani-vibration; baḍa-very much; uddhata-aggressive; pati-vratāra-of chaste wives; bhāṅge-breaks; vrata-the vow; pati-of the husband; kola-the lap; haite-from; ṭāni'-taking; āne-brings; vaikuṇṭhera-of the Vaikuṇṭha planets; lakṣmī-gaṇe-all the goddesses of fortune; yei-that which; kare ākarṣaṇe-attracts; tāra-of that; āge-in front; kebā-what to speak of; gopī-gaṇe-the gopīs of Vṛndāvana.

TRANSLATION

"The vibration of Kṛṣṇa's flute is very aggressive, and it breaks the vows of all chaste women. Indeed, its vibration takes them forcibly from the laps of their husbands. The vibration of His flute attracts even the goddesses of fortune in the Vaikuṇṭha planets, to say nothing of the poor damsels of Vṛndāvana.

SYNONYMS

nīvi-the knots of the underwear; khasāya-loosens; pati-āge-even in front of the husbands; gṛha-dharma-household duties; karāya tyāge-causes to give up; bale-by force; dhari'-catching; āne-brings; kṛṣṇa-sthāne-before Lord Kṛṣṇa; loka-dharma-social etiquette; lajjā-shame; bhaya-fear; saba-all; jñāna-such knowledge; lupta haya-becomes hidden; aiche-in that way; nācāya-causes to dance; saba-all; nārī-gaṇe-the women.

TRANSLATION

"The vibration of His flute slackens the knots of their underwear even in front of their husbands. Thus the gopīs are forced to abandon their household duties and come before Lord Kṛṣṇa. In this way all social etiquette, shame and fear are vanquished. The vibration of His flute causes all women to dance.

SYNONYMS

kāṇera-the hole of the ear; bhitara-within; vāsā kare-makes a residence; āpane-personally; tāṅhā-there; sadā-always; sphure-is prominent; anya-other; śabda-sounds; nā-not; deya-allows; praveśite-to enter; āna kathā-other talks; nā-not; śune-hears; kāṇa-the ear; āna-something else; balite-to speak; bolaya-speaks; āna-another thing; ei kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; vaṁśīra-of the flute; carite-characteristics.

TRANSLATION

"The vibration of His flute is just like a bird that creates a nest within the ears of the gopīs and always remains prominent there, not allowing any other sound to enter their ears. Indeed, the gopīs cannot hear anything else, nor are they able to concentrate on anything else, not even to give a suitable reply. Such are the effects of the vibration of Lord Kṛṣṇa's flute."

PURPORT

The vibration of Kṛṣṇa's flute is always prominent in the ears of the gopīs. Naturally they cannot hear anything else. Constant remembrance of the holy sound of Kṛṣṇa's flute keeps them enlightened and enlivened, and they do not allow any other sound to enter their ears. Since their attention is fixed on Kṛṣṇa's flute, they cannot divert their minds to any other subject. In other words, a devotee who has heard the sound of Kṛṣṇa's flute forgets to talk or hear of any other subject. This vibration of Kṛṣṇa's flute is represented by the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. A serious devotee of the Lord who chants and hears this transcendental vibration becomes so accustomed to it that he cannot divert his attention to any subject matter not related to Kṛṣṇa's blissful characteristics and paraphernalia.

SYNONYMS

punaḥ-again; kahe-He says; bāhya-jñāne-in external consciousness; āna-something else; kahite-to speak; kahiluṅ-I have spoken; āne-another thing; kṛṣṇa-kṛpā-the mercy of Lord Kṛṣṇa; tomāra-you; upare-upon; mora-My; citta-bhrama-mental concoction; kari'-making; nija-aiśvarya-His personal opulence; mādhurī-sweetness; mora mukhe-through My mouth; śunāya-causes to hear; tomāre-you.

TRANSLATION

Resuming His external consciousness, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu told Sanātana Gosvāmī, "I have not spoken of what I intended. Lord Kṛṣṇa is very merciful to you because by bewildering My mind, He has exposed His personal opulence and sweetness. He has caused you to hear all these things from Me for your understanding.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu admitted that He was speaking like a madman, which He should not have done for the understanding of those who are externally situated. Statements about Kṛṣṇa's body, His characteristics and His flute would appear like a madman's statements to a mundane person. It was actually a fact that Kṛṣṇa wanted to expose Himself to Sanātana Gosvāmī due to His specific mercy upon him. Somehow or other, Kṛṣṇa explained Himself and His flute to Sanātana Gosvāmī through the mouth of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who appeared as though mad. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu admitted that He wanted to tell Sanātana Gosvāmī something else, but somehow or other, in a transcendental ecstasy, He spoke of a different subject matter.

TEXT 146

SYNONYMS

āmi ta' bāula-I am a madman; āna kahite-to speak something; āna kahi-I speak on something else; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; mādhurya-amṛta-of the nectar of the sweetness; srote-in the waves of; yāi-I go; vahi'-being carried away.

TRANSLATION

"Since I have become a madman, I am saying one thing instead of another. This is because I am being carried away by the waves of the nectarean ocean of Lord Kṛṣṇa's transcendental sweetness."

TEXT 147

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then remained silent for a moment. Finally, adjusting things within His mind, He again spoke to Sanātana Gosvāmī.

TEXT 148

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; mādhurī-the sweetness; āra-and; mahāprabhura mukhe-in the mouth of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ihā-this statement; yei-anyone who; śune-hears; sei-that person; bhāse-floats; prema-sukhe-in the transcendental bliss of love of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

I now summarize these teachings of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. If anyone gets an opportunity to hear about the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa in this chapter of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, he will certainly be eligible to float in the transcendentally blissful ocean of love of God.

TEXT 149

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Twenty-first Chapter, describing the blissful characteristics of Kṛṣṇa.

18.5.22 Chapter 22

The Process of Devotional Service

In this Twenty-second Chapter, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu describes the process of devotional service. In the beginning He describes the truth about the living entity and the superexcellence of devotional service. He then describes the uselessness of mental speculation and mystic yoga. In all circumstances the living entity is recommended to accept the path of devotional service as personally explained by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The speculative method of the so-called jñānīs is considered a waste of time, and that is proved in this chapter. An intelligent person should abandon the processes of karma-kāṇḍa, jñāna-kāṇḍa and mystic yoga. One should give up all these useless processes and take seriously to the path of Kṛṣṇa consciousness. In this way one's life will be successful. If one takes to Kṛṣṇa consciousness fully, even though he may sometimes be agitated due to having previously practiced mental speculation and yogic mysticism, he will be saved by Lord Kṛṣṇa Himself. The fact is that devotional service is bestowed by the blessings of a pure devotee (sa mahātmā sudurlabhaḥ). A pure devotee is the supreme transcendentalist, and one has to receive his mercy for one's dormant Kṛṣṇa consciousness to be awakened. One has to associate with pure devotees. If one has firm faith in the words of a great soul, pure devotional service will awaken.

In this chapter Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has differentiated between a pure devotee and others. He also describes the characteristics of a pure devotee. A devotee's most formidable enemy is association with women in an enjoying spirit. Association with nondevotees is also condemned because it is also a formidable enemy on the path of devotional service. One has to fully surrender unto the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa and give up attraction for women and nondevotees.

The six symptoms of fully surrendered souls are also described in this chapter. Devotional service has been divided into two categories-regulative devotional service and spontaneous love. There are sixty-four items listed in regulative devotional service, and out of these sixty-four the last five are considered very important. By practicing even one of the nine processes of devotional service, one can become successful. Speculative knowledge and mystic yoga can never help one in devotional service. Pious activity, nonviolence, sense control and regulation are not separate from devotional service in its pure form. If one engages in devotional service, all good qualities follow. One does not have to cultivate them separately. Spontaneous devotional service arises when one follows a pure devotee who is awakened to spontaneous love of God. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has described the symptoms of devotees who are already situated in spontaneous love of God. He has also described the devotees who are trying to follow in the footsteps of the pure devotees advaya-jñāna-of nondual knowledge; tattva-the principle; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; svayam bhagavān-Himself the Supreme Personality of Godhead; svarūpa-personal expansions; śakti-of potencies; rūpe-in the form; tāṅra-His; haya-there is; avasthāna-existence.

TRANSLATION

”Kṛṣṇa is the nondual Absolute Truth, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Although He is one, He maintains different personal expansions and energies for His pastimes.

PURPORT

The Lord has many potencies, and He is nondifferent from all these potencies. Because the potencies and the potent cannot be separated, they are identical. Kṛṣṇa is described as the source of all potencies, and He is also identified with the external potency, the material energy. Kṛṣṇa also has internal potencies, or spiritual potencies, which are always engaged in His personal service. His internal potency is different from His external potency. Kṛṣṇa’s internal potency and Kṛṣṇa Himself, who is the potent, are always identical.

TRANSLATION

”Kṛṣṇa expands Himself in many forms. Some of them are personal expansions, and some are separate expansions. Thus He performs pastimes in both the spiritual and material worlds. The spiritual worlds are the Vaikuṇṭha planets, and the material universes are brahmāṇḍas, gigantic globes governed by Lord Brahmā.

vibhinnāṁśa jīva–tāṅra śaktite gaṇana sva-aṁśa-vistāra-the expansion of His personal forms; catuḥ-vyūha-His quadruple form; avatāra-gaṇa-the incarnations; vibhinna-aṁśa-His separated forms; jīva-the living entities; tāṅra-His; śaktite-in the category of potency; gaṇana-calculating.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”Expansions of His personal self-like the quadruple manifestations of Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna, Aniruddha and Vāsudeva-descend as incarnations from Vaikuṇṭha to this material world. The separated expansions are living entities. Although they are expansions of Kṛṣṇa, they are counted among His different potencies.

PURPORT

The personal expansions are known as viṣṇu-tattva, and the separated expansions are known as jīva-tattva. Although the jīvas (living entities) are part and parcel of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, they are still counted among His multi-potencies. This is fully described in Bhagavad-gītā:

apareyam itas tv anyāṁ
prakṛtiṁ viddhi me parām
jīva-bhūtāṁ mahā-bāho

yayedaṁ dhāryate jagat

”Besides this inferior nature, O mighty-armed Arjuna, there is a superior energy of Mine, which consists of all living entities who are struggling with material nature and are sustaining the universe.” (Bg. 7.5)

Although the living entities are Kṛṣṇa’s parts and parcels, they are prakṛti, not puruṣa. Sometimes prakṛti (a living entity) attempts to imitate the activities of the puruṣa. Due to a poor fund of knowledge, living entities conditioned in this material world claim to be God. They are thus illusioned. A living entity cannot be on the level of a viṣṇu-tattva, or the Personality of Godhead, at any stage; therefore it is ludicrous for a living entity to claim to be God. Advanced spiritualists would never accept such a thing. Such claims are made to cheat ordinary, foolish people. The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement declares war against such bogus incarnations. The bogus propaganda put out by people claiming to be God has killed God consciousness all over the world. Members of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement must be very alert to defy these rascals who are presently misleading the whole world. One such rascal, known as Pauṇḍraka, appeared before Lord Kṛṣṇa, and the Lord immediately killed him. Of course, those who are Kṛṣṇa’s servants cannot kill such imitation gods, but they should try their best to defeat them through the evidence of śāstra, authentic knowledge received through the disciplic succession.

TRANSLATION

”Due to his being opposed to Kṛṣṇa consciousness, the conditioned soul is punished by the witch of the external energy, māyā. He is thus ready to suffer the threefold miseries-miseries brought about by the body and mind, the inimical behavior of other living entities and natural disturbances caused by the demigods.

TRANSLATION

”In this way the conditioned soul becomes the servant of lusty desires, and when these are not fulfilled, he becomes a servant of anger and continues to be kicked by the external energy, māyā. Wandering and wandering throughout the universe, he may by chance get the association of a devotee physician, whose instructions and hymns make the witch of external energy flee. The conditioned soul thus gets into touch with the devotional service of Lord Kṛṣṇa, and in this way he can approach nearer and nearer to the Lord.

PURPORT

An explanation of verses 8 through 15 is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. The Lord is spread throughout the creation in His quadruple expansions and incarnations. Kṛṣṇa is fully represented with all potencies in each and every personal extension, but the living entities, although separated expansions, are also considered one of the Lord’s energies. The living entities are divided into two categories-the eternally liberated and eternally conditioned. Those who are ever-liberated never come in contact with māyā, the external energy. The ever-conditioned are always under the clutches of the external energy. This is described in Bhagavad-gītā:

daivī hy eṣā guṇa-mayī
mama māyā duratyayā

”This divine energy of Mine, consisting of the three modes of material nature, is difficult to overcome.” (Bg. 7.14)

The nitya-baddhas are always conditioned by the external energy, and the nitya-muktas never come in contact with the external energy. Sometimes an ever-liberated personal associate of the Supreme Personality of Godhead descends into this universe just as the Lord descends. Although working for the liberation of conditioned souls, the messenger of the Supreme Lord remains untouched by the material energy. Generally ever-liberated personalities live in the spiritual world as associates of Lord Kṛṣṇa, and they are known as kṛṣṇa-pāriṣada, associates of the Lord. Their only business is enjoying Lord Kṛṣṇa’s company, and even though such eternally liberated persons come within this material world to serve the Lord’s purpose, they enjoy Lord Kṛṣṇa’s company without stoppage. The ever-liberated person who works on Kṛṣṇa’s behalf enjoys Lord Kṛṣṇa’s company through his engagement. The ever-conditioned soul, provoked by lusty desires to enjoy the material world, is subjected to transmigrate from one body to another. Sometimes he is elevated to higher planetary systems, and sometimes he is degraded to hellish planets and subjected to the tribulations of the external energy.

Due to being conditioned by the external energy, the conditioned soul within this material world gets two kinds of bodies-a gross material body and a subtle body composed of mind, intelligence and ego. Due to the gross and subtle bodies, he is subjected to the threefold miseries (ādhyātmika, ādhibhautika and ādhidaivika), miseries arising from the body and mind, other living entities, and natural disturbances caused by demigods from higher planetary systems. The conditioned soul subjected to the threefold material miseries is ceaselessly kicked by māyā, and this is his disease. If by chance he meets a saintly person who works on Kṛṣṇa’s behalf to deliver conditioned souls, and if he agrees to abide by his order, he can gradually approach the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa.

kāma-ādīnām-of my masters such as lust, anger, greed, illusion and envy; kati-how many; na-not; katidhā-in how many ways; pālitāḥ-obeyed; durnideśāḥ-undesirable orders; teṣām-of them; jātā-generated; mayi-unto me; na-not; karuṇā-mercy; na-not; trapā-shame; na-not; upaśāntiḥ-desire to cease; utsṛjya-giving up; etān-all these; atha-herewith; yadu-pate-O best of the Yadu dynasty; sāmpratam-now; labdha-buddhiḥ-having awakened intelligence; tvām-You; āyātaḥ-approached; śaraṇam-who are the shelter; abhayam-fearless; mām-me; niyuṅkṣva-please engage; ātma-dāsye-in Your personal service.

TRANSLATION

” ’O my Lord, there is no limit to the unwanted orders of lusty desires. Although I have rendered them so much service, they have not shown any mercy to me. I have not been ashamed to serve them, nor have I even desired to give them up. O my Lord, O head of the Yadu dynasty, recently, however, my intelligence has been awakened, and now I am giving them up. Due to transcendental intelligence, I now refuse to obey the unwanted orders of these desires, and I now come to You to surrender myself at Your fearless lotus feet. Kindly engage me in Your personal service and save me.’

PURPORT

This verse is also quoted in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (3.2.35). When we chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra we are saying, ”Hare! O energy of the Lord! O my Lord Kṛṣṇa!” In this way we are simply addressing the Lord and His spiritual potency represented as Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa, Sītā-Rāma, or Lakṣmī-Nārāyaṇa. The devotee always prays to the Lord and His internal energy (consort) so that he may engage in Their transcendental loving service. When the conditioned soul attains his real spiritual energy and fully surrenders unto the Lord’s lotus feet, he tries to engage in the Lord’s service. This is the real constitutional position of the living entity.

TRANSLATION

”Devotional service to Kṛṣṇa is the chief function of the living entity. There are different methods for the liberation of the conditioned soul-karma, jñāna, yoga and bhakti-but all are dependent on bhakti.

TEXT 18

SYNONYMS

ei saba-all these; sādhanera-of methods of spiritual activities; ati-very; tuccha-insignificant; bala-strength; kṛṣṇa-bhakti-devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa; vinā-without; tāhā-all these; dite-to deliver; nāre-are not able; phala-the desired result.

TRANSLATION

"But for devotional service, all other methods for spiritual self-realization are weak and insignificant. Unless one comes to the devotional service of Lord Kṛṣṇa, jñāna and yoga cannot give the desired results.

PURPORT

In Vedic scriptures, stress is sometimes given to fruitive activity, speculative knowledge and the mystic yoga system. Although people are inclined to practice these processes, they cannot attain the desired results without being touched by kṛṣṇa-bhakti, devotional service. In other words, the real desired result is to invoke dormant love for Kṛṣṇa. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.6) states:

sa vai puṁsāṁ paro dharmo
yato bhaktir adhokṣaje
ahaituky apratihatā
yayātmā suprasīdati

Karma, jñāna and yoga cannot actually awaken love of Godhead. One has to take to the Lord's devotional service, and the more one is inclined to devotional service, the more he loses interest in other so-called achievements. Dhruva Mahārāja went to practice mystic yoga to see the Lord personally face to face, but when he developed an interest in devotional service, he saw that he was not being benefited by karma, jñāna and yoga.

TRANSLATION

" 'When pure knowledge is beyond all material affinity but is not dedicated to the Supreme Personality of Godhead [Kṛṣṇa], it does not appear very beautiful, although it is knowledge without a material tinge. What, then, is the use of fruitive activities-which are naturally painful from the beginning and transient by nature-if they are not utilized for the devotional service of the Lord? How can they be very attractive?'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.5.12). Even after writing many Vedic literatures, Vyāsadeva felt very morose. Therefore his spiritual master, Nāradadeva, told him that he could be happy by writing about the activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Up to that time, Śrīla Vyāsadeva had written the karma-kāṇḍa and jñāna-kāṇḍa sections of the Vedas, but he had not written about upāsanā-kāṇḍa, or bhakti. Thus his spiritual master, Nārada, chastised him and advised him to write about the activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore Vyāsadeva began writing Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

SYNONYMS

kevala-only; jñāna-speculative knowledge; mukti-liberation; dite-to deliver; nāre-is not able; bhakti vine-without devotional service; kṛṣṇa-unmukhe-if one is attached to the service of Lord Kṛṣṇa; sei mukti-that liberation; haya-appears; vinā-without; jñāne-knowledge.

TRANSLATION

”Speculative knowledge alone, without devotional service, is not able to give liberation. On the other hand, even without knowledge one can obtain liberation if one engages in the Lord’s devotional service.

PURPORT

One cannot attain liberation simply by speculative knowledge. Even though one may be able to distinguish between Brahman and matter, one’s liberation will be hampered if one is misled into thinking that the living entity is as good as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Indeed, one falls down again onto the material platform because considering oneself the Supreme Person, the Supreme Absolute Truth, is offensive. When such a person comes in contact with a pure devotee, he can actually become liberated from material bondage and engage in the Lord’s service. A prayer by Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura is relevant here:

bhaktis tvayi sthiratarā bhagavan yadi syād daivena naḥ phalati divya-kiśora-mūrtiḥ muktiḥ svayaṁ mukulitāñjali sevate ’smān dharmārtha-kāma-gatayaḥ samaya-pratīkṣāḥ

”O my Lord, if one engages in Your pure devotional service with determination, You become visible in Your original transcendental youthful form as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. As far as liberation is concerned, she stands before the devotee with folded hands waiting to render service. Religion, economic development and sense gratification are all automatically attained without separate endeavor.”

TRANSLATION

"If the conditioned soul engages in the service of the Lord and simultaneously carries out the orders of his spiritual master and serves him, he can get out of the clutches of māyā and become eligible for shelter at Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet.

PURPORT

It is a fact that every living entity is eternally a servant of Kṛṣṇa. This is forgotten due to the influence of māyā, which induces one to believe in material happiness. Being illusioned by māyā, one thinks that material happiness is the only desirable object. This material consciousness is like a chain around the neck of the conditioned soul. As long as he is bound to that conception, he cannot get out of māyā's clutches. However, if by Kṛṣṇa's mercy he gets in touch with a bona fide spiritual master, abides by his order and serves him, engaging other conditioned souls in the Lord's service, he then attains liberation and Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa's shelter.

cāri varṇāśramī yadi kṛṣṇa nāhi bhaje svakarma karite se raurave paḍi' maje

SYNONYMS

cāri varṇa-āśramī-followers of the four social and spiritual orders of life; yadi-if; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; nāhi-not; bhaje-serve; sva-karma karite-performing his duty in life; se-that person; raurave-in a hellish condition; paḍi'-falling down; maje-becomes immersed.

TRANSLATION

"The followers of the varṇāśrama institution accept the regulative principles of the four social orders [brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya and śūdra] and four spiritual orders [brahmacarya, gṛhastha, vānaprastha and sannyāsa]. However, if one carries out the regulative principles of these orders but does not render transcendental service to Kṛṣṇa, he falls into the hellish condition of material life.

PURPORT

One may be a brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya or śūdra, or one may perfectly follow the spiritual principles of brahmacarya, gṛhastha, vānaprastha and sannyāsa, but ultimately one falls down into a hellish condition unless one becomes a devotee. Without developing one's dormant Kṛṣṇa consciousness, one cannot be factually elevated. The regulative principles of varṇāśrama-dharma in themselves are insufficient for attainment of the highest perfection. That is confirmed in the following two quotations from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.5.2-3).

TEXT 27

mukha-bāhūru-pādebhyaḥ puruṣasyāśramaiḥ saha catvāro jajñire varṇā guṇair viprādayaḥ pṛthak

SYNONYMS

mukha-the mouth; bāhu-the arms; ūru-the waist; pādebhyaḥ-from the legs; puruṣasya-of the Supreme Person; āśramaiḥ-the different spiritual orders; saha-with; catvāraḥ-the four; jajñire-appeared; varṇāḥ-social orders; guṇaiḥ-with particular qualifications; vipra-ādayaḥ-brāhmaṇas and so on; pṛthak-separately.

TRANSLATION

" 'From the mouth of Brahmā, the brahminical order has come into existence. Similarly, from his arms the kṣatriyas have come, from his waist the vaiśyas have come, and from his legs the śūdras have come. These four orders and their spiritual counterparts [brahmacarya, gṛhastha, vānaprastha and sannyāsa] combine to make human society complete.

TEXT 28

ya eṣāṁ puruṣaṁ sākṣād-

SYNONYMS

ye-anyone who; eṣām-of those divisions of social and spiritual orders; puruṣam-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; sākṣāt-directly; ātma-prabhavam-the source of everyone; īśvaram-the supreme controller; na-not; bhajanti-worship; avajānanti-or who neglect; sthānāt-from their proper place; bhraṣṭāḥ-being fallen; patanti-fall; adhaḥ-downward into hellish conditions.

TRANSLATION

" 'If one simply maintains an official position in the four varṇas and āśramas but does not worship the Supreme Lord Viṣṇu, he falls down from his puffed-up position into a hellish condition.'

TEXT 29

jñānī jīvan-mukta-daśā pāinu kari, māne vastutaḥ buddhi 'śuddha' nahe kṛṣṇa-bhakti vine

SYNONYMS

jñānī-the speculative philosophers; jīvan-mukta-daśā-the stage of liberation even while in this body; pāinu-I have gotten; kari'-taking; māne-considers; vastutaḥ-factually; buddhi-intelligence; śuddha-purified; nahe-not; kṛṣṇa-bhakti vine-without devotional service to Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"There are many philosophical speculators [jñānīs] belonging to the Māyāvāda school who consider themselves liberated and call themselves Nārāyaṇa. However, their intelligence is not purified unless they engage in Kṛṣṇa's devotional service.

TEXT 30

SYNONYMS

ye-all those who; anye-others (nondevotees); aravinda-akṣa-O lotus-eyed one; vimukta-māninaḥ-who consider themselves liberated; tvayi-unto You; asta-bhāvāt-without devotion; aviśuddha-buddhayaḥ-whose intelligence is not purified; āruhya-having ascended; kṛcchreṇa-by severe austerities and penances; param padam-to the supreme position; tataḥ-from there; patanti-fall; adhaḥ-down; anādṛta-without respecting; yuṣmat-Your; aṅghrayaḥ-lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

" 'O lotus-eyed one, those who think they are liberated in this life but do not render devotional service to You must be of impure intelligence. Although they accept severe austerities and penances and rise to the spiritual position, to impersonal Brahman realization, they fall down again because they neglect to worship Your lotus feet.'

PURPORT

This verse is quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.32).

TEXT 31

kṛṣṇa–sūrya-sama; māyā haya andhakāra yāhāṅ kṛṣṇa, tāhāṅ nāhi māyāra adhikāra

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead; sūrya-sama-like the sun planet; māyā-the illusory energy; haya-is; andhakāra-darkness; yāhāṅ kṛṣṇa-wherever there is Kṛṣṇa; tāhāṅ-there; nāhi-not; māyāra-of māyā, or the darkness of illusion; adhikāra-the jurisdiction.

TRANSLATION

"Kṛṣṇa is compared to sunshine, and māyā is compared to darkness. Wherever there is sunshine, there cannot be darkness. As soon as one takes to Kṛṣṇa consciousness, the darkness of illusion (the influence of the external energy) will immediately vanish.

PURPORT

In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.9.34) it is stated:

ṛte 'rthaṁ yat pratīyeta na pratīyeta cātmani tad vidyād ātmano māyāṁ yathābhāso yathā tamaḥ

Wherever there is light, there cannot be darkness. When a living entity becomes Kṛṣṇa conscious, he is immediately relieved of all material lusty desires. Lusty desires and greed are associated with rajas and tamas, darkness and passion. When one becomes Kṛṣṇa conscious, the modes of darkness and passion immediately vanish, and the remaining mode, sattva-guṇa (goodness), remains. When one is situated in the mode of goodness, he can make spiritual advancement and understand things clearly. This position is not possible for everyone. When a person is Kṛṣṇa conscious, he continuously hears about Kṛṣṇa, thinks about Him, worships Him and serves Him as a devotee. If he remains in Kṛṣṇa consciousness in this way, the darkness of māyā certainly will not be able to touch him.

TEXT 32

vilajjamānayā yasya
sthātum īkṣā-pathe 'muyā vimohitā vikatthante mamāham iti durdhiyaḥ

SYNONYMS

vilajjamānaya-being ashamed; yasya-of whom; sthātum-to remain; īkṣā-pathe-in the line of sight; amuyā-by that (māyā); vimohitāḥ-bewildered; vikatthante-boast; mama-my; aham-I; iti-thus; durdhiyaḥ-having poor intelligence.

TRANSLATION

" 'The external illusory energy of Kṛṣṇa, known as māyā, is always ashamed to stand in front of Kṛṣṇa, just as darkness is ashamed to remain before the sunshine. However, that māyā bewilders unfortunate people who have no intelligence. Thus they simply boast that this material world is theirs and that they are its enjoyers.'

PURPORT

The entire world is bewildered because people are thinking, "This is my land," "America is mine," "India is mine." Not knowing the real value of life, people think that the material body and the land where it is produced are all in all. This is the basic principle behind nationalism, socialism and communism. Such thinking, which simply bewilders the living being, is nothing but rascalism. It is due to the darkness of māyā, but as soon as one becomes Kṛṣṇa conscious, he is immediately relieved from such misconceptions. This verse is quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.5.13). There is also another appropriate verse in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.7.47):

śaśvat praśāntam abhayaṁ pratibodha-mātraṁ śuddhaṁ samaṁ sad-asataḥ paramātma-tattvam śabdo na yatra puru-kārakavān kriyārtho māyā paraity abhimukhe ca vilajjamānā tad vai padaṁ bhagavataḥ paramasya puṁso brahmeti yad vidur ajasra-sukhaṁ viśokam

"What is realized as the Absolute Brahman is full of unlimited bliss without grief. That is certainly the ultimate phase of the supreme enjoyer, the Personality of Godhead. He is eternally void of all disturbances, fearless, completely conscious as opposed to matter, uncontaminated and without distinctions. He is the principal, primeval cause of all causes and effects, in whom there is no sacrifice for fruitive activities and in whom the illusory energy does not stand."

This verse was spoken by Lord Brahmā when he was questioned by the great sage Nārada. Nārada was surprised to see the creator of the universe meditating, for he was doubting whether there was someone greater than Lord Brahmā. While answering the great sage Nārada, Lord Brahmā described the position of māyā and the bewildered living entities. This verse was spoken in that connection.

TEXT 33

'kṛṣṇa, tomāra haṅa' yadi bale eka-bāra māyā-bandha haite kṛṣṇa tāre kare pāra

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-O my Lord Kṛṣṇa; tomāra haṅa-I am Yours; yadi-if; bale-someone says; eka-bāra-once; māyā-bandha haite-from the bondage of conditional life; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; tāre-him; kare pāra-releases.

TRANSLATION

"One is immediately freed from the clutches of māyā if he seriously and sincerely says, 'My dear Lord Kṛṣṇa, although I have forgotten You for so many long years in the material world, today I am surrendering unto You. I am Your sincere and serious servant. Please engage me in Your service.'

TEXT 34

SYNONYMS

sakṛt-once only; eva-certainly; prapannaḥ-surrendered; yaḥ-anyone who; tava-Yours; asmi-I am; iti-thus; ca-also; yācate-prays; abhayam-fearlessness; sarvadā-always; tasmai-unto him; dadāmi-I give; etat-this; vratam-vow; mama-My.

TRANSLATION

" 'It is My vow that if one only once seriously surrenders unto Me, saying, "My dear Lord, from this day I am Yours," and prays to Me for courage, I shall immediately award courage to that person, and he will always remain safe from that time on.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Rāmāyaṇa.

TEXT 35

bhukti-mukti-siddhi-kāmī 'subuddhi' yadi haya gāḍha-bhakti-yoge tabe kṛṣṇere bhajaya

SYNONYMS

bhukti-of material enjoyment; mukti-of impersonal liberation; siddhi-of achieving mystic power; kāmī-desirous; su-buddhi-actually intelligent; yadi-if; haya-he is; gāḍha-deep; bhakti-yoge-by devotional service; tabe-then; kṛṣṇere bhajaya-worships Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"Due to bad association, the living entity desires material happiness, liberation or merging into the impersonal aspect of the Lord, or he engages in mystic yoga for material power. If such a person actually becomes intelligent, he takes to Kṛṣṇa consciousness by engaging himself in intense devotional service to Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 36

akāmaḥ sarva-kāmo vā mokṣa-kāma udāra-dhīḥ tīvreṇa bhakti-yogena yajeta puruṣaṁ param

SYNONYMS

akāmaḥ-a pure devotee with no desire for material enjoyment; sarva-kāmaḥ-one who has no end to his desires for material enjoyment; vā-or; mokṣa-kāmaḥ-one who desires to merge into the existence of Brahman; udāra-dhīḥ-being very intelligent; tīvreṇa-firm; bhakti-yogena-by devotional service; yajeta-should worship; puruṣam-the person; param-supreme.

TRANSLATION

" 'Whether one desires everything or nothing, or whether he desires to merge into the existence of the Lord, he is intelligent only if he worships Lord Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, by rendering transcendental loving service.'

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.3.10).

TEXT 37

anya-kāmī yadi kare kṛṣṇera bhajana nā māgiteha kṛṣṇa tāre dena sva-caraṇa

SYNONYMS

anya-kāmī-one who desires many other things; yadi-if; kare-he performs; kṛṣṇera bhajana-devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa; nā māgiteha-although not asking; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; tāre-to him; dena-gives; sva-caraṇa-the shelter of His lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

"If those who desire material enjoyment or merging into the existence of the Absolute Truth engage in the Lord's transcendental loving service, they will immediately attain shelter at Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet, although they did not ask for it. Kṛṣṇa is therefore very merciful.

TEXT 38

kṛṣṇa kahe,–'āmā bhaje, māge viṣaya-sukha amṛta chāḍi' viṣa māge,–ei baḍa mūrkha

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa kahe-Kṛṣṇa says; āmā bhaje-he worships Me; māge-but requests; viṣaya-sukha-material happiness; amṛta chāḍi'-giving up the nectar; viṣa māge-he begs for poison; ei baḍa mūrkha-he is a great fool.

TRANSLATION

"Kṛṣṇa says, 'If one engages in My transcendental loving service but at the same time wants the opulence of material enjoyment, he is very, very foolish. Indeed, he is just like a person who gives up ambrosia to drink poison.

TEXT 39

āmi–vijña, ei mūrkhe 'viṣaya' kene diba?
sva-caraṇāmṛta diyā 'viṣaya' bhulāiba

SYNONYMS

āmi-I; vijña-all-intelligent; ei mūrkhe-unto this foolish person; viṣaya-material enjoyment; kene diba-why should I give; sva-caraṇa-amṛta-the nectar of shelter at My lotus feet; diyā-giving; viṣaya-the idea of material enjoyment; bhulāiba-I shall make him forget.

TRANSLATION

" 'Since I am very intelligent, why should I give this fool material prosperity? Instead I shall induce him to take the nectar of the shelter of My lotus feet and make him forget illusory material enjoyment.'

PURPORT

Those who are interested in material enjoyment are known as bhukti. One who is interested in merging into the effulgence of Brahman or perfecting the mystic yoga system is not a devotee at all. Devotees do not have such desires. However, if a karmī, jñānī or yogī somehow contacts a devotee and renders devotional service, Kṛṣṇa immediately awards him love of God and gives him shelter at His lotus feet, although he may have no idea how to develop love of Kṛṣṇa. If a person wants material profit from devotional service, Kṛṣṇa condemns such materialistic desires. To desire material opulence while engaging in devotional service is foolish. Although the person may be foolish, Kṛṣṇa, being all-intelligent, engages him in His devotional service in such a way that he gradually forgets material opulence. The point is that we should not try to exchange loving service for material prosperity. If we are actually surrendered to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, our only desire should be to satisfy Kṛṣṇa. That is pure Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Surrender does not mean that we demand something from the Lord but that we completely depend on His mercy.

naivārthado yat punar arthitā yataḥ svayaṁ vidhatte bhajatām anicchatām icchā-pidhānaṁ nija-pāda-pallavam

SYNONYMS

satyam-it is true; diśati-He awards; arthitam-that which is desired; arthitaḥ-being requested; nṛṇām-by human beings; na-not; eva-certainly; artha-daḥ-giving desired things; yat-which; punaḥ-again; arthitā-request; yataḥ-from which; svayam-Himself; vidhatte-He gives; bhajatām-of those engaged in devotional service; anicchatām-even though not desiring; icchā-pidhānam-covering all other desires; nija-pāda-pallavam-the shelter of His own lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

" 'Whenever Kṛṣṇa is requested to fulfill one's desire, He undoubtedly does so, but He does not award anything which, after being enjoyed, will cause someone to petition Him again and again to fulfill further desires. When one has other desires but engages in the Lord's service, Kṛṣṇa forcibly gives one shelter at His lotus feet, where one will forget all other desires.'

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (5.19.27).

TEXT 41

kāma lāgi' kṛṣṇe bhaje, pāya kṛṣṇa-rase kāma chāḍi' 'dāsa' haite haya abhilāṣe

SYNONYMS

kāma lāgi'-for fulfillment of one's material desires; kṛṣṇe bhaje-one engages in the transcendental service of Lord Kṛṣṇa; pāya-he gets; kṛṣṇa-rase-a taste of the lotus feet of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kāma chāḍi'-giving up all desires for material enjoyment; dāsa haite-to be an eternal servant of the Lord; haya-there is; abhilāṣe-aspiration.

TRANSLATION

"When someone engages in Lord Kṛṣṇa's devotional service for the satisfaction of the senses and instead acquires a taste to serve Kṛṣṇa, he gives up his material desires and willingly offers himself as an eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

sthāna-abhilāṣī-desiring a very high position in the material world; tapasi-in severe austerities and penances; sthitaḥ-situated; aham-I; tvām-You; prāptavān-have obtained; deva-muni-indra-guhyam-difficult to achieve even for great demigods, saintly persons and kings; kācam-a piece of glass; vicinvan-searching for; api-although; divya-ratnam-a transcendental gem; svāmin-O my Lord; kṛta-arthaḥ asmi-I am fully satisfied; varam-any benediction; na yāce-I do not ask.

TRANSLATION

[When he was being benedicted by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Dhruva Mahārāja said] " 'O my Lord, because I was seeking an opulent material position, I was performing severe types of penance and austerity. Now I have gotten You, who are very difficult for the great demigods, saintly persons and kings to attain. I was searching after a piece of glass, but instead I have found a most valuable jewel. Therefore I am so satisfied that I do not wish to ask any benediction from You.'

SYNONYMS

saṁsāra bhramite-wandering throughout the universe; kona bhāgye-by some good fortune; keha tare-someone crosses the ocean of nescience; nadīra pravāhe-in the flow of the river; yena-just as; kāṣṭha-wood; lāge-sticks; tīre-on the bank.

TRANSLATION

"There are unlimited conditioned souls who are bereft of Lord Kṛṣṇa's service. Not knowing how to cross the ocean of nescience, they are scattered by waves, time and tide. However, some are fortunate to contact devotees, and by this contact they are delivered from the ocean of nescience, just as a log, floating down a river, accidentally washes upon the bank.

SYNONYMS

mā-not; evam-thus; mama-of me; adhamasya-who is the most fallen; api-although; syāt-there may be; eva-certainly; acyuta-darśanam-seeing of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; hriyamāṇaḥ-being carried; kāla-nadyā-by the stream of time; kvacit-sometimes; tarati-crosses over; kaścana-someone.

TRANSLATION

"Because I am so fallen, I shall never get a chance to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead." This was my false apprehension. Rather, by chance a person as fallen as I am may get to see the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Although one is being carried away by the waves of the river of time, one may eventually reach the shore.'

SYNONYMS

kona bhāgye-by fortune; kāro-of someone; saṁsāra-conditioned life; kṣaya-unmukha-on the point of destruction; haya-is; sādhu-saṅge-by association with devotees; tabe-then; kṛṣṇe-to Lord Kṛṣṇa; rati-attraction; upa-jaya-awakens.

TRANSLATION

"By good fortune, one becomes eligible to cross the ocean of nescience, and when one's term of material existence decreases, one may get an opportunity to associate with pure devotees. By such association, one's attraction to Kṛṣṇa is awakened.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura explains this point. Is this bhāgya (fortune) the result of an accident or something else? In the scriptures, devotional service and pious activity are considered fortunate. Pious activities can be divided into three categories-pious activities that awaken one's dormant Kṛṣṇa consciousness are called bhakty-unmukhī sukṛti. Pious activities that bestow material opulence are called bhogonmukhī, and pious activities that enable the living entity to merge into the existence of the Supreme are called mokṣonmukhī. These last two awards of pious activity are not actually fortunate. Pious activities are fortunate when they help one become Kṛṣṇa conscious. The good fortune of bhakty-unmukhī is attainable only when one comes in contact with a devotee. By associating with a devotee willingly or unwillingly, one advances in devotional service, and thus one's dormant Kṛṣṇa consciousness is awakened.

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.20.8) was spoken by Kṛṣṇa at the time of His departure from this material world. It was spoken to Uddhava.

TEXT 51

mahat-kṛpā vinā kona karme ’bhakti’ naya kṛṣṇa-bhakti dūre rahu, saṁsāra nahe kṣaya

SYNONYMS

mahat-kṛpā-the mercy of great devotees; vinā-without; kona karme-by some other activity; bhakti naya-there is not devotional service; kṛṣṇa-bhakti-love of Kṛṣṇa or devotional service to Kṛṣṇa; dūre rahu-leaving aside; saṁsāra-the bondage of material existence; nahe-there is not; kṣaya-destruction.

TRANSLATION

"Unless one is favored by a pure devotee, he cannot attain the platform of devotional service. To say nothing of kṛṣṇa-bhakti, one cannot even be relieved from the bondage of material existence.

PURPORT

Pious activities bring about material opulence, but one cannot acquire devotional service by any amount of material pious activity, not by giving charity, opening big hospitals and schools or working philanthropically. Devotional service can be attained only by the mercy of a pure devotee. Without a pure devotee's mercy, one cannot even escape the bondage of material existence. The word mahat in this verse means "a pure devotee." As confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā:

mahātmānas tu māṁ pārtha
daivīṁ prakṛtim āśritāḥ
bhajanty ananya-manaso
jñātvā bhūtādim avyayam

"O son of Pṛthā, those who are not deluded, the great souls, are under the protection of the divine nature. They are fully engaged in devotional service because they know Me as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, original and inexhaustible." (Bg. 9.13)

One also has to associate with such a mahātmā who has accepted Kṛṣṇa as the supreme source of the entire creation. Without being a mahātmā, one cannot understand Kṛṣṇa's absolute position. A mahātmā is rare and transcendental, and he is a pure devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Foolish people consider Kṛṣṇa a human being, and they consider Lord Kṛṣṇa's pure devotee an ordinary human being also. Whatever one may be, one must take shelter at the lotus feet of a devotee mahātmā and treat him as the most exalted well-wisher of all human society. We should take shelter of such a mahātmā and ask for his causeless mercy. Only by his benediction can one be relieved from attachment to a materialistic way of life. When one is thus relieved, he can engage in the Lord's transcendental loving service through the mercy of the mahātmā.

rahūgaṇaitat tapasā na yāti na cejyayā nirvapaṇād gṛhād vā na cchandasā naiva jalāgni-sūryair vinā mahat-pāda-rajo-'bhiṣekam

SYNONYMS

rahūgaṇa-O King Rahūgaṇa; etat-this; tapasā-by severe austerities and penances; na yāti-one does not obtain; na-neither; ca-also; ijyayā-by gorgeous worship; nirvapaṇāt-by renounced order of life; gṛhāt-by sacrifices while living in the home; vā-or; na chandasā-nor by scholarly study of the Vedas; na-nor; eva-certainly; jala-agni-sūryaiḥ-by those who worship water, fire or scorching sunshine; vinā-without; mahat-pāda-rajaḥ-of the dust of the lotus feet of a mahātmā; abhiṣekam-the sprinkling.

TRANSLATION

" 'O King Rahūgaṇa, without taking upon one's head the dust from the lotus feet of a pure devotee [a mahājana or mahātmā], one cannot attain devotional service. Devotional service is not possible to attain simply by undergoing severe austerities and penances, by gorgeously worshiping the Deity, or by strictly following the rules and regulations of the sannyāsa or gṛhastha order, nor by studying the Vedas, submerging oneself in water, or exposing oneself to fire or scorching sunlight.'

PURPORT

This verse appears in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (5.12.12). Jaḍa Bharata herein tells King Rahūgaṇa how he attained the paramahaṁsa stage. Mahārāja Rahūgaṇa, the King of Sindhu-sauvīra, had asked Jaḍa Bharata how he had attained the paramahaṁsa stage. The King had called him to carry his palanquin, but when the King heard from paramahaṁsa Jaḍa Bharata about the supreme philosophy, he expressed surprise and asked Jaḍa Bharata how he had attained such great liberation. At that time Jaḍa Bharata informed the King how to become detached from material attraction.

SYNONYMS

na-not; eṣām-of those who are attached to household life; matiḥ-the interest; tāvat-that long; urukrama-aṅghrim-the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is credited with uncommon activities; spṛśati-touches; anartha-of unwanted things; apagamaḥ-vanquishing; yat-of which; arthaḥ-result; mahīyasām-of the great personalities, devotees; pāda-rajaḥ-of the dust of the lotus feet; abhiṣekam-sprinkling on the head; niṣkiñcanānām-who are completely detached from material possessions; na vṛṇīta-does not do; yāvat-as long as.

TRANSLATION

" 'Unless human society accepts the dust of the lotus feet of great mahātmās-devotees who have nothing to do with material possessions-mankind cannot turn its attention to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa. Those lotus feet vanquish all the unwanted miserable conditions of material life.'

PURPORT

This verse appears in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.5.32). When the great sage Nārada was giving instructions to Mahārāja Yudhiṣṭhira, he narrated the activities of Prahlāda Mahārāja. This verse was spoken by Prahlāda Mahārāja to his father, Hiraṇyakaśipu, the king of demons. Prahlāda Mahārāja informed his father of the nine basic processes of bhakti-yoga. Whoever takes to these processes is to be considered a highly learned scholar. Hiraṇyakaśipu, however, did not like his son to talk about devotional service; therefore he immediately called his teacher, Ṣaṇḍāmarka. The teacher explained that he did not teach devotional service to Prahlāda but that the boy was naturally inclined that way. At that time Hiraṇyakaśipu became very angry and asked Prahlāda why he had become a Vaiṣṇava. In answer to this question, Prahlāda Mahārāja recited this verse to the effect that one cannot become the Lord's devotee without receiving the mercy and blessings of another devotee.

SYNONYMS

tulayāma-we make equal; lavena-with one instant; api-even; na-not; svargam-heavenly planets; na-nor; apunaḥ-bhavam-merging into the existence of the Supreme; bhagavat-saṅgi-saṅgasya-of the association of devotees who are always associated with the Supreme Personality of Godhead; martyānām-of persons destined to die; kim uta-what; āśiṣaḥ-the blessings.

TRANSLATION

" 'The value of a moment's association with a devotee of the Lord cannot even be compared to the attainment of heavenly planets or liberation from matter, and what to speak of worldly benedictions in the form of material prosperity, which is for those who are meant for death.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.18.13). This verse concerns the Vedic rites and sacrifices performed by the great sages of Naimiṣāraṇya, headed by Śaunaka Ṛṣi. The sages pointed out that association with a devotee for even less than a second is beyond comparison to a thousand Vedic rituals and sacrifices, elevation to heavenly planets or merging into the existence of the Supreme.

SYNONYMS

śraddhā-śabde-by the word śraddhā; viśvāsa-faith; kahe-is said; sudṛdha-firm; niścaya-certain; kṛṣṇe-unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; bhakti-devotional service; kaile-by executing; sarva-karma-all activities; kṛta-completed; haya-are.

TRANSLATION

"By rendering transcendental loving service to Kṛṣṇa, one automatically performs all subsidiary activities. This confident, firm faith, favorable to the discharge of devotional service, is called śraddhā.

PURPORT

Firm faith and confidence are called śraddhā. When one engages in the Lord's devotional service, he is to be understood to have performed all his responsibilities in the material world. He has satisfied his forefathers, ordinary living entities, and demigods and is free from all responsibility. Such a person does not need to meet his responsibilities separately. It is automatically done. Fruitive activity (karma) is meant to satisfy the senses of the conditioned soul. However, when one awakens to Kṛṣṇa consciousness, he does not have to work separately for pious activity. The best achievement of all fruitive activity is detachment from material life, and this detachment is spontaneously enjoyed by the devotee firmly engaged in the Lord's service.

śraddhāvān jana haya bhakti-adhikārī

’uttama’, ’madhyama’, ’kaniṣṭha’–śraddhā-anusārī

SYNONYMS

śraddhāvān jana-a person with faith; haya-is; bhakti-adhikārī-eligible for discharging transcendental loving service to the Lord; uttama-first class; madhyama-intermediate; kaniṣṭha-the lowest class; śraddhā-anusārī-according to the proportion of faith.

TRANSLATION

”A faithful devotee is a truly eligible candidate for the loving service of the Lord. According to one’s faith, one is classified as a topmost devotee, an intermediate devotee or an inferior devotee.

PURPORT

The word śraddhāvān (faithful) means understanding Kṛṣṇa to be the summum bonum, the eternal truth and absolute transcendence. If one has full faith in Kṛṣṇa and confidence in Him, one becomes eligible to discharge devotional service confidentially. According to one’s faith, one is a topmost, intermediate or inferior devotee.

SYNONYMS

rati-of attachment; prema-and love; tāratamye-by comparison; bhakta-devotee; tara-tama-superior and superlative; ekādaśa skandhe-in the Eleventh Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; tāra-of him; kariyāche-has made; lakṣaṇa-symptoms.

TRANSLATION

"A devotee is considered superlative and superior according to his attachment and love. In the Eleventh Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, the following symptoms have been ascertained.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura has stated that if one has developed faith in Kṛṣṇa consciousness, he is to be considered an eligible candidate for further advancement in Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Those who have faith are divided into three categories-uttama, madhyama and kaniṣṭha (first-class, second-class and neophyte). A first-class devotee has firm conviction in the revealed scriptures and is expert in arguing according to the śāstras. He is firmly convinced of the science of Kṛṣṇa consciousness. The madhyama-adhikārī, or second-class devotee, has firm conviction in Kṛṣṇa consciousness, but he cannot support his conviction by citing śāstric references. The neophyte devotee does not yet have firm faith. In this way the devotees are typed.

The standard of devotion is also categorized in the same way. A neophyte believes that only love of Kṛṣṇa or Kṛṣṇa consciousness is very good, but he may not know the basis of pure Kṛṣṇa consciousness or how one can become a perfect devotee. Sometimes in the heart of a neophyte there is attraction for karma, jñāna or yoga. When he is free and transcendental to mixed devotional activity, he becomes a second-class devotee. When he becomes expert in logic and can refer to the śāstras, he becomes a first-class devotee. The devotees are also described as positive, comparative and superlative, in terms of their love and attachment for Kṛṣṇa.

It should be understood that a madhyama-adhikārī, a second-class devotee, is fully convinced of Kṛṣṇa consciousness but cannot support his convictions with śāstric reference. A neophyte may fall down by associating with nondevotees because he is not firmly convinced and strongly situated. The second-class devotee, even though he cannot support his position with śāstric reference, can gradually become a first-class devotee by studying the śāstras and associating with a first-class devotee. However, if the second-class devotee does not advance himself by associating with a first-class devotee, he makes no progress. There is no possibility that a first-class devotee will fall down, even though he may mix with nondevotees to preach. Conviction and faith gradually increase to make one an uttama-adhikārī, a first-class devotee.

TEXT 72

sarva-bhūteṣu yaḥ paśyed
bhagavad-bhāvam ātmanaḥ
bhūtāni bhagavaty ātmany
eṣa bhāgavatottamaḥ

SYNONYMS

sarva-bhūteṣu-in all objects (in matter, spirit, and combinations of matter and spirit); yaḥ-anyone who; paśyet-sees; bhagavat-bhāvam-the ability to be engaged in the service of the Lord; ātmanaḥ-of the supreme spirit soul or the transcendence beyond the material conception of life; bhūtāni-all beings; bhagavati-in the Supreme Personality of Godhead; ātmani-the basic principle of all existence; eṣaḥ-this; bhāgavata-uttamaḥ-a person advanced in devotional service.

TRANSLATION

" 'A person advanced in devotional service sees within everything the soul of souls, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Consequently he always sees the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as the cause of all causes and understands that all things are situated in Him.

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.45).

TEXT 73

SYNONYMS

īśvare-unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead; tat-adhīneṣu-to persons who have taken fully to Kṛṣṇa consciousness; bāliśeṣu-unto the neophytes or the ignorant; dviṣatsu-to persons envious of Kṛṣṇa and the devotees of Kṛṣṇa; prema-love; maitrī-friendship; kṛpā-mercy; upekṣā-negligence; yaḥ-anyone who; karoti-does; saḥ-he; madhyamaḥ-a second-class devotee.

TRANSLATION

" 'An intermediate, second-class devotee shows love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is friendly to all devotees and is very merciful to neophytes and ignorant people. The intermediate devotee neglects those who are envious of devotional service.

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.46). This statement was made by the great sage Nārada while he was speaking to Vasudeva about devotional service. This subject was originally discussed between Nimi, the King of Videha, and the nine Yogendras.

SYNONYMS

arcāyām-in the temple worship; eva-certainly; haraye-for the pleasure of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; pūjām-worship; yaḥ-anyone who; śraddhayā-with faith and love; īhate-executes; na-not; tat-bhakteṣu-to the devotees of the Lord; ca anyeṣu-and to others; saḥ-he; bhaktaḥ-a devotee; prākṛtaḥ-materialistic; smṛtaḥ-is considered.

TRANSLATION

" 'A prākṛta, or materialistic devotee does not purposefully study the śāstra and try to understand the actual standard of pure devotional service. Consequently he does not show proper respect to advanced devotees. He may, however, follow the regulative principles learned from his spiritual master or from his family who worships the Deity. He is to be considered on the material platform, although he is trying to advance in devotional service. Such a person is a bhakta-prāya [neophyte devotee], or bhaktābhāsa, for he is a little enlightened by Vaiṣṇava philosophy.'

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.47). Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says that one who has full love for the Supreme Personality of Godhead and who maintains a good friendship with the Lord's devotees is always callous to those who envy Kṛṣṇa and Kṛṣṇa's devotees. Such a person is to be considered an intermediate devotee. He becomes a first-class devotee when, in the course of advancing in devotional service, he feels an intimate relationship with all living entities, seeing them as part and parcel of the Supreme Person.

TRANSLATION

" 'In one who has unflinching devotional faith in Kṛṣṇa, all the good qualities of Kṛṣṇa and the demigods are consistently manifest. However, he who has no devotion to the Supreme Personality of Godhead has no good qualifications because he is engaged by mental concoction in material existence, which is the external feature of the Lord.'

PURPORT

This was spoken by Bhadraśravā and his followers, who were offering prayers to Nṛsiṁhadeva (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 5.18.12).

titikṣavaḥ-very forebearing; kāruṇikāḥ-merciful; suhṛdaḥ-who are well-wishers; sarva-dehinām-to all living entities; ajāta-śatravaḥ-without enemies; śāntāḥ-peaceful; sādhavaḥ-following the injunctions of the śāstra; sādhu-bhūṣaṇāḥ-who are decorated with good character.

TRANSLATION

" 'Devotees are always tolerant, forebearing and very merciful. They are the well-wishers of every living entity. They follow the scriptural injunctions, and because they have no enemies, they are very peaceful. These are the decorations of devotees.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.25.21). When the sages, headed by Śaunaka, inquired about Kapiladeva, the incarnation of Godhead, Suta Gosvāmī, who was the topmost devotee of the Lord, quoted talks about self-realization between Maitreya, a friend of Vyāsadeva, and Vidura. It was then that the topic of Lord Kapila came up and His discussions with His mother, wherein He stated that attachment to material things is the cause of conditional life. When a person becomes attached to transcendental things, he is on the path of liberation.

SYNONYMS

mahat-sevām-the service of the pure devotee spiritual master; dvāram-door; āhuḥ-they said; vimukteḥ-of liberation; tamaḥ-dvāram-the door to darkness; yoṣitām-of women and money; saṅgi-saṅgam-association with those who enjoy the association; mahāntaḥ-great souls; te-they; sama-cittāḥ-equally disposed to all; praśāntāḥ-very peaceful; vimanyavaḥ-without anger; suhṛdaḥ-well-wishers of everyone; sādhavaḥ-who are endowed with all good qualities, or who do not look for faults in others; ye-those who.

TRANSLATION

" 'It is the verdict of all śāstras and great personalities that by serving a pure devotee, one attains the path of liberation. However, by associating with materialistic people who are attached to material enjoyment and women, one attains the path of darkness. Those who are actually devotees are broadminded, equal to everyone and very peaceful. They never become angry, and they are friendly to all living entities.'

TRANSLATION

” ’By association with worldly people, one becomes devoid of truthfulness, cleanliness, mercy, gravity, spiritual intelligence, shyness, austerity, fame, forgiveness, control of the mind, control of the senses, fortune and all opportunities. One should not at any time associate with a coarse fool who is bereft of the knowledge of self-realization and who is no more than a toy animal in the hands of a woman. The illusion and bondage that accrue to a man from attachment to any other object are not as complete as that resulting from association with a woman or with men too attached to women.’

PURPORT

These verses, quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.31.33-35), were spoken by Kapiladeva, an incarnation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, to His mother. Herein Kapiladeva discusses pious and impious activities and the symptoms of those who are devoid of devotional service to Kṛṣṇa. Generally people do not know about the miserable conditions within the womb of a mother in any species of life. Due to bad association, one gradually falls into lower species. Association with women is greatly stressed in this regard. When one becomes attached to women or to those who are attached to women, one falls down into the lower species.

puruṣaḥ prakṛti-stho hi

”The living entity in material nature thus follows the ways of life, enjoying the three modes of nature. This is due to his association with that material nature. Thus he meets with good and evil among various species.” (Bhagavad-gītā 13.22)

According to Vedic civilization, one’s association with women should be very much restricted. In spiritual life there are four āśramas-brahmacarya, gṛhastha, vānaprastha and sannyāsa. The brahmacārī, vānaprastha and sannyāsī are completely forbidden to associate with women. Only gṛhasthas are allowed to associate with women under certain very restricted conditions-that is, one associates with women to propagate nice children. Other reasons for association are condemned.

TRANSLATION

”Lord Kṛṣṇa is very kind to His devotees. He is always very grateful and magnanimous, and He possesses all abilities. A learned man does not give up Kṛṣṇa to worship anyone else.

PURPORT

An intelligent person gives up the company of those who are attached to women and bereft of Kṛṣṇa consciousness. One should be free from all kinds of material attachment and should take full shelter under the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa. Kṛṣṇa is very kind to His devotees. He is always grateful, and He never forgets the service of a devotee. He is also completely opulent and all-powerful. Why, then, should one take shelter of a demigod and leave Lord Kṛṣṇa’s shelter? If one worships a demigod and leaves Kṛṣṇa, he must be considered the lowest fool.

SYNONYMS

ānukūlyasya-of anything that assists devotional service to the Lord; saṅkalpaḥ-acceptance; prātikūlyasya-of anything that hinders devotional service; varjanam-complete rejection; rakṣiṣyati-He will protect; iti-thus; viśvāsaḥ-strong conviction; goptṛtve-in being the guardian, like the father or husband, master or maintainer; varaṇam-acceptance; tathā-as well as; ātma-nikṣepa-full self-surrender; kārpaṇye-humility; ṣaṭ-vidhā-sixfold; śaraṇa-āgatiḥ-process of surrender.

TRANSLATION

” ’The six divisions of surrender are the acceptance of those things favorable to devotional service, the rejection of unfavorable things, the conviction that Kṛṣṇa will give protection, the acceptance of the Lord as one’s guardian or master, full self-surrender and humility.

PURPORT

One who is fully surrendered is qualified with the six following characteristics. (1) The devotee has to accept everything that is favorable for the rendering of transcendental loving service to the Lord. (2) He must reject everything unfavorable to the Lord’s service. This is also called renunciation. (3) A devotee must be firmly convinced that Kṛṣṇa will give him protection. No one else can actually give one protection, and being firmly convinced of this is called faith. This kind of faith is different from the faith of an impersonalist who wants to merge into the Brahman effulgence in order to benefit by cessation of repeated birth and death. A devotee wants to remain always in the Lord’s service. In this way, Kṛṣṇa is merciful to His devotee and gives him all protection from the dangers found on the path of devotional service. (4) The devotee should accept Kṛṣṇa as his supreme maintainer and master. He should not think that he is being protected by a demigod. He should depend only on Kṛṣṇa, considering Him the only protector. The devotee must be firmly convinced that within the three worlds he has no protector or maintainer other than Kṛṣṇa. (5) Self-surrender means remembering that one’s activities and desires are not independent. The devotee is completely dependent on Kṛṣṇa, and he acts and thinks as Kṛṣṇa desires. (6) The devotee is meek and humble. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā:

sarvasya cāhaṁ hṛdi sanniviṣṭo
mattaḥ smṛtir jñānam apohanaṁ ca
vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyo
vedānta-kṛd veda-vid eva cāham

”I am seated in everyone’s heart, and from Me come remembrance, knowledge and forgetfulness. By all the Vedas am I to be known; indeed I am the compiler of Vedānta, and I am the knower of the Vedas.” (Bg. 15.15)

Situated in everyone’s heart, Kṛṣṇa deals differently according to the living entity’s position. The living entity’s position is to be under the protection of the illusory energy or under Kṛṣṇa’s personal protection. When a living entity is fully surrendered, he is under the direct protection of Kṛṣṇa, and Kṛṣṇa gives him all intelligence by which he can advance in spiritual realization. The nondevotee, however, being under the protection of the illusory energy, increasingly forgets his relationship with Kṛṣṇa. Sometimes it is asked how Kṛṣṇa causes one to forget. Kṛṣṇa causes His devotee to forget material activities, and through the agency of māyā, Kṛṣṇa causes the nondevotee to forget his devotional service to the Lord. This is called apohana.

SYNONYMS

martyaḥ-the living entity subjected to birth and death; yadā-as soon as; tyakta-given up; samasta-all; karmā-fruitive activities; nivedita-ātmā-a fully surrendered soul; vicikīrṣitaḥ-desired to act; me-by Me; tadā-at that time; amṛtatvam-immortality; pratipadyamānaḥ-attaining; mayā-with Me; ātma-bhūyāya-for becoming of a similar nature; ca-also; kalpate-is eligible; vai-certainly.

TRANSLATION

" 'The living entity who is subjected to birth and death attains immortality when he gives up all material activities, dedicates his life to the execution of My order, and acts according to My directions. In this way he becomes fit to enjoy the spiritual bliss derived from exchanging loving mellows with Me.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.29.34). Kṛṣṇa was advising His most confidential servant, Uddhava, about sambandha, abhidheya and prayojana. These concern one's relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the activities of that relationship, as well as the perfection of life. The Lord also described the characteristics of confidential devotees.

SYNONYMS

kṛti-sādhyā-which is to be executed by the senses; bhavet-should be; sādhya-bhāvā-by which love of Godhead is acquired; sā-that; sādhana-abhidhā-called sādhana-bhakti, or devotional service in practice; nitya-siddhasya-which is eternally present; bhāvasya-of love of Godhead; prākaṭyam-the awakening; hṛdi-in the heart; sādhyatā-potentiality.

TRANSLATION

" 'When transcendental devotional service by which love for Kṛṣṇa is attained is executed by the senses, it is called sādhana-bhakti, or the regulative discharge of devotional service. Such devotion eternally exists within the heart of every living entity. The awakening of this eternal devotion is the potentiality of devotional service in practice.'

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.2). Because living entities are minute, atomic parts and parcels of the Lord, devotional service is already present within them in a dormant condition. Devotional service begins with śravaṇa kīrtana, hearing and chanting. When a man is sleeping, he can be awakened by sound vibration; therefore every conditioned soul should be given the chance to hear the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra chanted by a pure Vaiṣṇava. One who hears the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra thus vibrated is awakened to spiritual consciousness, or Kṛṣṇa consciousness. In this way one's mind gradually becomes purified, as stated by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu (ceto-darpaṇa-mārjanam). When the mind is purified, the senses are also purified. Instead of using the senses for sense gratification, the awakened devotee employs the senses in the transcendental loving service of the Lord. This is the process by which dormant love for Kṛṣṇa is awakened.

'vaidhī bhakti' bali' tāre sarva-śāstre gāya

SYNONYMS

rāga-hīna-who are without spontaneous attachment to Kṛṣṇa; jana-persons; bhaje-execute devotional service; śāstrera ājñāya-according to the principles and regulations described in the revealed scriptures; vaidhī bhakti-regulative devotional service; bali'-calling; tāre-that; sarva-śāstre-all revealed scriptures; gāya-sing.

TRANSLATION

"Those who have not attained the platform of spontaneous attachment in devotional service render devotional service under the guidance of a bona fide spiritual master according to the regulative principles mentioned in the revealed scriptures. According to the revealed scriptures, this kind of devotional service is called vaidhī bhakti.

PURPORT

In the beginning, one has to hear from a bona fide spiritual master. This is favorable for advancing in devotional service. According to this process, one hears, chants, remembers and engages in Deity worship, acting under the directions of the spiritual master. These are the essential primary activities of devotional service. Devotional service must not be executed for some material purpose. One should not even have a desire to merge into the Absolute Truth. One has to render such service out of love only. Ahaitukī, apratihatā. Devotional service must be without ulterior motives; then material conditions cannot check it. Gradually one can rise to the platform of spontaneous loving service. A child is sent to school by force to receive an education, but when he gets a little taste of education at an advanced age, he automatically participates and becomes a learned scholar. One cannot force a person to become a scholar, but sometimes force is used in the beginning. A child is forced to go to school and read and write according to the instructions of his teachers. Such is the difference between vaidhī bhakti and spontaneous bhakti. Dormant love for Kṛṣṇa exists in everyone's heart, and it simply has to be awakened by the regulative process of devotional service. One has to learn to use a typewriter by following the regulative principles of the typing book. One has to place his fingers on the keys in such a way and practice, but when one becomes adept, he can type swiftly and correctly without even looking at the keys. Similarly, one has to follow the rules and regulations of devotional service as they are set down by the spiritual master; then one can come to the point of spontaneous loving service. This love is already there within the heart of everyone (nitya-siddha kṛṣṇa-prema).

Spontaneous service is not artificial. One simply has to come to that platform by rendering devotional service according to the regulative principles. Thus one has to practice hearing and chanting and follow the other regulative principles by washing the temple, cleansing oneself, rising early in the morning, attending maṅgala-ārati and so on. If one does not come to the platform of spontaneous service in the beginning, he must adopt regulative service according to the instructions of the spiritual master. This regulative service is called vaidhī bhakti.

bhagavān harir īśvaraḥ śrotavyaḥ kīrtitavyaś ca

smartavyaś cecchatābhayam

SYNONYMS

tasmāt-therefore; bhārata-O descendant of Bharata; sarva-ātmā-the all pervasive Lord, who is situated in everyone's heart; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; hariḥ-Lord Hari, who takes away all the miserable conditions of material existence; īśvaraḥ-the supreme controller; śrotavyaḥ-to be heard about (from bona fide sources); kīrtitavyaḥ-to be glorified (as one has heard); ca-also; smartavyaḥ-to be remembered; ca-and; icchatā-by a person desiring; abhayam-freedom from the fearful condition of material existence.

TRANSLATION

" 'O descendant of Bharata! O Mahārāja Parīkṣit! The Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is situated in everyone's heart as Paramātmā, who is the supreme controller and who always removes the miseries of living entities, must always be heard about from reliable sources, and He must be glorified and remembered by one who wishes to become fearless.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.1.5). It is one's duty to understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead through the hearing process. This is called śrotavyaḥ. If one has heard properly about the Supreme Personality of Godhead, his duty is to glorify the Lord and preach His glories. This is called kīrtitavyaḥ. When one hears about the Lord and glorifies Him, it is natural to think of Him. This is called smartavyaḥ. All this must be carried out if one actually wants to be immune from fear.

SYNONYMS

smartavyaḥ-to be remembered; satatam-always; viṣṇuḥ-Lord Viṣṇu; vismartavyaḥ-to be forgotten; na-not; jātucit-at any time; sarve-all; vidhi-niṣedhāḥ-rules and prohibitions mentioned in the revealed scripture or given by the spiritual master; syuḥ-should be; etayoḥ-of these two principles (always to remember Kṛṣṇa or Viṣṇu and never to forget Him); eva-certainly; kiṅkarāḥ-the servants.

TRANSLATION

" 'Kṛṣṇa is the origin of Lord Viṣṇu. He should always be remembered and never forgotten at any time. All the rules and prohibitions mentioned in the śāstras should be the servants of these two principles.'

PURPORT

This verse is a quotation from the Padma Purāṇa. There are many regulative principles in the śāstras and directions given by the spiritual master. These regulative principles should act as servants of the basic principle-that is, one should always remember Kṛṣṇa and never forget Him. This is possible when one chants the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. Therefore one must strictly chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra twenty-four hours daily. One may have other duties to perform under the direction of the spiritual master, but he must first abide by the spiritual master's order to chant a certain number of rounds. In our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, we have recommended that the neophyte chant at least sixteen rounds. This chanting of sixteen rounds is absolutely necessary if one wants to remember Kṛṣṇa and not forget Him. Of all the regulative principles, the spiritual master's order to chant at least sixteen rounds is most essential.

One may sell books or enlist life members or render some other service, but these duties are not ordinary duties. These duties serve as an impetus for remembering Kṛṣṇa. When one goes with a saṅkīrtana party or sells books, he naturally remembers that he is going to sell Kṛṣṇa's books. In this way, he is remembering Kṛṣṇa. When one goes to enlist a life member, he talks about Kṛṣṇa and thereby remembers Him. Smartavyaḥ satataṁ viṣṇur vismartavyo na jātucit. The conclusion is that one must act in such a way that he will always remember Kṛṣṇa, and one must refrain from doing things that make him forget Kṛṣṇa. These two principles form the basic background of Kṛṣṇa consciousness.

SYNONYMS

dhātrī-a type of tree; aśvattha-the banyan trees; go-the cows; vipra-the brāhmaṇas; vaiṣṇava-the devotees of Lord Viṣṇu; pūjana-worshiping; sevā-in devotional service; nāma-in chanting of the holy name; aparādha-ādi-the offenses; dūre-far away; visarjana-giving up.

TRANSLATION

"One should worship dhātrī trees, banyan trees, cows, brāhmaṇas and devotees of Lord Viṣṇu. One should avoid offenses against devotional service and the holy name.

There are ten items in the beginning of devotional service, up to the point of worshiping the dhātrī tree, banyan tree, cow, brāhmaṇa and devotee of Lord Viṣṇu. The eleventh item is to avoid offenses when rendering devotional service and chanting the holy names.

TEXT 118

avaiṣṇava-saṅga-tyāga, bahu-śiṣya nā kariba bahu-grantha-kalābhyāsa-vyākhyāna varjiba

SYNONYMS

avaiṣṇava-of one who is not a devotee of the Lord; saṅga-the association; tyāga-giving up; bahu-śiṣya-an unlimited number of disciples; nā kariba-should not accept; bahu-grantha-of many different types of scriptures; kalā-abhyāsa-studying a portion; vyākhyāna-and explanation; varjiba-we should give up.

TRANSLATION

"The twelfth item is to give up the company of nondevotees. (13) One should not accept an unlimited number of disciples. (14) One should not partially study many scriptures just to be able to give references and expand explanations.

PURPORT

Accepting an unlimited number of devotees or disciples is very risky for one who is not a preacher. According to Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī, a preacher has to accept many disciples to expand the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. This is risky because when a spiritual master accepts a disciple, he naturally accepts the disciple's sinful activities and their reactions. Unless he is very powerful, he cannot assimilate all the sinful reactions of his disciples. Thus if he is not powerful, he has to suffer the consequences, for one is forbidden to accept many disciples.

One should not partially study a book just to pose oneself as a great scholar by being able to refer to scriptures. In our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement we have therefore limited our study of Vedic literatures to Bhagavad-gītā, Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Caitanya-caritāmṛta and Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu. These four works are sufficient for preaching purposes. They are adequate for the understanding of the philosophy and the spreading of missionary activities all over the world. If one studies a particular book, he must do so thoroughly. That is the principle. By thoroughly studying a limited number of books, one can understand the philosophy.

prāṇi-mātre manovākye udvega nā diba viṣṇu-vaiṣṇava-nindā-blaspheming of Lord Viṣṇu and His devotee; grāmya-vārtā-ordinary talks; nā śuniba-we should not hear; prāṇi-mātre-to any living entity however insignificant; manaḥ-vākye-by mind or by words; udvega-anxiety; nā diba-we should not give.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Eighteen: The devotee should not hear Lord Viṣṇu or His devotees blasphemed. (19) The devotee should avoid reading or hearing newspapers or mundane books that contain stories of love affairs between men and women or subjects palatable to the senses. (20) Neither by mind nor words should the devotee cause anxiety to any living entity, regardless how insignificant he may be.

PURPORT

The first ten items are dos and the second ten items are don'ts. Thus the first ten items give direct action, and the second ten items give indirect action.

SYNONYMS

tadīya-related to the Lord; tulasī-tulasī leaves; vaiṣṇava-devotees; mathurā-the birthplace of Kṛṣṇa; bhāgavata-Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; ei cārira-of these four; sevā-the service; haya-is; kṛṣṇera abhimata-the desire of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”Tadīya means the tulasī leaves, the devotees of Kṛṣṇa, the birthplace of Kṛṣṇa, Mathurā, and the Vedic literature Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Kṛṣṇa is very eager to see His devotee serve tulasī, Vaiṣṇavas, Mathurā and Bhāgavatam.

PURPORT

After item twenty-six (meditation), the twenty-seventh is to serve tulasī, the twenty-eighth is to serve the Vaiṣṇava, the twenty-ninth is to live in Mathurā, the birthplace of Lord Kṛṣṇa, and the thirtieth is to read Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam regularly.

SYNONYMS

sādhu-saṅga-association with devotees; nāma-kīrtana-chanting the holy name; bhāgavata-śravaṇa-hearing Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; mathurā-vāsa-living at Mathurā; śrī-mūrtira śraddhāya sevana-worshiping the Deity with faith and veneration.

TRANSLATION

”One should associate with devotees, chant the holy name of the Lord, hear Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, reside at Mathurā and worship the Deity with faith and veneration.

TEXT 129

sakala-sādhana-śreṣṭha ei pañca aṅga kṛṣṇa-prema janmāya ei pāṅcera alpa saṅga

SYNONYMS

sakala-sādhana-of all items for executing devotional service; śreṣṭha-the best; ei pañca aṅga-these five limbs; kṛṣṇa-prema-love of Kṛṣṇa; janmāya-awakens; ei-these; pāṅcera-of the five; alpa saṅga-slight association with or performance.

TRANSLATION

”These five limbs of devotional service are the best of all. Even a slight performance of these five awakens love for Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura points out that there are thirty-five items up to the point of observing special vows in the month of Kārttika. To these thirty-five items, another four are added-namely marking tilaka on different parts of the body, writing the names of the Lord all over the body, accepting the Deity’s garland and accepting caraṇāmṛta. These four items are understood to be included by Kavirāja Gosvāmī within arcana, worship of the Deity. Although these items are not mentioned here, they are to be added to the previous thirty-five items. Thus the total number becomes thirty-nine. To these thirty-nine should be added five others: association with devotees, chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, reading Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam regularly, residing in Mathurā, the birthplace of Kṛṣṇa, and worshiping the Deity with great respect and veneration. The thirty-nine items plus these five come to a total of forty-four.

If we add the previous twenty items to these forty-four, the total number becomes sixty-four. The five items mentioned above repeat previously mentioned items. In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī states:

aṅgānāṁ pañcakasyāsya pūrva-vilikhitasya ca nikhila-śraiṣṭhya-bodhāya punar apy atra śaṁsanam

”The glorification of these five items [association with devotees, chanting the holy name and so on] is to make known the complete superiority of these five practices of devotional service.

The sixty-four items of devotional service include all the activities of the body, mind and senses. Thus the sixty-four items engage one in devotional service in all respects.

SYNONYMS

śrīmad-bhāgavata-of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; arthānām-of the meanings; āsvādaḥ-enjoying the taste; rasikaiḥ saha-with the devotees; sa-jātīya-similar; āśaye-endowed with a desire; snigdhe-advanced in devotional affection; sādhau-with a devotee; saṅgaḥ-association; svataḥ-for one’s self; vare-better.

TRANSLATION

” ’One should taste the meaning of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam in the association of pure devotees, and one should associate with the devotees who are more advanced than oneself and endowed with a similar type of affection for the Lord.

PURPORT

The words sajātīyāśaye snigdhe sādhau saṅgaḥ svato vare are very important items. One should not associate with professional Bhāgavatam reciters. A professional Bhāgavatam reciter is one who is not in the disciplic succession or one who has no taste for bhakti-yoga. Simply on the strength of grammatical knowledge and word jugglery, professional reciters maintain their bodies and their desires for sense gratification by reading Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. One should also avoid those who are averse to Lord Viṣṇu and His devotees, those who are Māyāvādīs, those who offend the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, those who simply dress as Vaiṣṇavas or so-called gosvāmīs, and those who make a business by selling Vedic mantras and reciting Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam to maintain their families. One should not try to understand Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam from such materialistic people. According to the Vedic injunctions: yasya deve parā bhaktiḥ. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam can only be recited by one who has unflinching faith in the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa and His devotee, the spiritual master. One should try to understand Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam from the spiritual master. The Vedic injunction states: bhaktyā bhāgavataṁ grāhyaṁ na buddhyā na ca ṭīkayā. One has to understand Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam through the process of devotional service and by hearing the recitation of a pure devotee. These are the injunctions of Vedic literature-śruti and smṛti. Those who are not in the disciplic succession and who are not pure devotees cannot understand the real mysterious objective of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and Śrīmad Bhagavad-gītā.

mathurā-maṇḍale sthitiḥ

SYNONYMS

nāma-saṅkīrtanam-chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra; śrīman-mathurā-maṇḍale-in Mathurā, where Kṛṣṇa specifically performs His pastimes; sthitiḥ-residence.

TRANSLATION

” ’One should congregationally chant the holy name of the Lord and reside in Vṛndāvana.’

PURPORT

Navadvīpa-dhāma, Jagannātha Purī-dhāma and Vṛndāvana-dhāma are considered to be identical. If one goes to Mathurā-maṇḍala-bhūmi for sense gratification or to make a livelihood, he commits an offense and is condemned. Whoever does so must be penalized in the next life by becoming a hog or a monkey in Vṛndāvana-dhāma. After taking on such a body, the offender is liberated in the next life. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura remarks that residing in Vṛndāvana with a view to enjoy sense gratification surely leads a so-called devotee to a lower species.

TRANSLATION

" 'The power of these five principles is very wonderful and difficult to reconcile. Even without faith in them, a person who is offenseless can experience dormant love of Kṛṣṇa simply by being a little connected with them.'

TRANSLATION

" 'Mahārāja Ambarīṣa always engaged his mind at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, his words in describing the spiritual world and the Supreme Personality of Godhead, his hands in cleansing and washing the Lord's temple, his ears in hearing topics about the Supreme Lord, his eyes in seeing the Deity of Lord Kṛṣṇa in the temple, his body in touching the lotus feet of Vaiṣṇavas and embracing them, his nostrils in smelling the aroma of the tulasī leaves offered to Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet, his tongue in tasting food offered to Kṛṣṇa, his legs in going to places of pilgrimage like Vṛndāvana and Mathurā or to the Lord's temple, and his head in touching the lotus feet of the Lord and offering Him prayers. Thus Mahārāja Ambarīṣa desired only to serve the Lord faithfully. In this way he engaged his senses in the transcendental loving service of the Lord. As a result, he awakened his dormant loving propensity for the Lord's service.'

SYNONYMS

kāma-material desires; tyaji'-giving up; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; bhaje-worships; śāstra-ājñā-the direction of the revealed scripture; māni'-accepting; deva-demigods; ṛṣi-great sages; pitṛ-ādikera-of the forefathers and so on; kabhu-at any time; nahe-not; ṛṇī-a debtor.

TRANSLATION

"If a person gives up all material desires and completely engages in the transcendental loving service of Kṛṣṇa, as enjoined in revealed scriptures, he is never indebted to demigods, sages or forefathers.

PURPORT

After birth, every man is indebted in so many ways. He is indebted to the demigods for their supplying necessities like air, light and water. When one takes advantage of Vedic literatures, one becomes indebted to great sages like Vyāsadeva, Nārada, Devala and Asita. When one takes birth in a particular family, he becomes indebted to his forefathers. We are even indebted to common living entities like cows, from whom we take milk. Because we accept service from so many animals, we become indebted. However, if one is completely engaged in the Lord's devotional service, he is absolved of all debts. This is confirmed in the following verse, quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.5.41).

TEXT 141

SYNONYMS

deva-of the demigods; ṛṣi-of the sages; bhūta-of ordinary living entities; āpta-of friends and relatives; nṛṇām-of ordinary men; pitṝṇām-of the forefathers; na-not; kiṅkaraḥ-the servant; na-nor; ayam-this one; ṛṇī-debtor; ca-also; rājan-O King; sarva-ātmanā-with his whole being; yaḥ-a person who; śaraṇam-shelter; śaraṇyam-the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who affords shelter to all; gataḥ-approached; mukundam-Mukunda; parihṛtya-giving up; kartam-duties.

TRANSLATION

" 'One who has given up all material duties and taken full shelter at the lotus feet of Mukunda, who gives shelter to all, is not indebted to the demigods, great sages, ordinary living beings, relatives, friends, mankind or even one's forefathers who have passed away.'

PURPORT

It is said:

adhyāpanaṁ brahma-yajñaḥ pitṛ-yajñas tu tarpaṇam homo daivo balir bhauto nṛ-yajño 'tithi-pūjanam

"By performing oblations with ghee, the demigods are satisfied. By studying the Vedas, brahma-yajña is performed, and by this the great sages are satisfied. Offering libations of water before one's forefathers is called pitṛ-yajña. By offering tribute, bhūta-yajña is performed. By properly receiving guests, nṛ-yajña is performed." There are five yajñas and five kinds of indebtedness-indebtedness to the demigods, great sages, forefathers, living entities and common men. Therefore one has to perform five kinds of yajñas, but when one takes to saṅkīrtana-yajña (the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra) one doesn't have to perform any other yajña. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Nārada Muni made a statement about the systematic performance of bhāgavata-dharma in connection with statements previously made by the nine Yogendras before Mahārāja Nimi. The sage Karabhājana Ṛṣi explained the four incarnations of the four yugas, and at the end, in this verse (text 141), he explained the position of Kṛṣṇa's pure devotee and how he is absolved of all debts.

TEXT 142

SYNONYMS

vidhi-dharma chāḍi'-giving up all regulative principles of the varṇa and āśrama institution; bhaje-worships; kṛṣṇera caraṇa-the lotus feet of Lord Kṛṣṇa; niṣiddha-forbidden; pāpa-ācāre-in sinful activities; tāra-his; kabhu-at any time; nahe-not; mana-the mind.

TRANSLATION

"Although the pure devotee does not follow all the regulative principles of varṇāśrama, he worships the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa. Therefore he naturally has no tendency to commit sin.

PURPORT

The varṇāśrama institution is planned in such a way that one will not commit sinful activities. Material existence continues due to sinful activity. When one acts sinfully in this life, he gets a suitable body for the next life. When one again acts sinfully, he takes on another material body. In this way one is continuously under the influence of material nature.

puruṣaḥ prakṛti-stho hi bhuṅkte prakṛti-jān guṇān kāraṇaṁ guṇa-saṅgo 'sya sad-asad-yoni-janmasu

"The living entity in material nature thus follows the ways of life, enjoying the three modes of material nature. This is due to his association with that material nature. Thus he meets with good and evil among various species." (Bg. 13.22)

Due to our association with the modes of material nature, we get different types of bodies-good and bad. One cannot be liberated from the cycle of birth and death, known as transmigration of the soul, unless one is completely freed from all sinful activities. The best process, therefore, is to take to Kṛṣṇa consciousness. One cannot take to Kṛṣṇa consciousness without being freed from all sinful activities. Naturally one who is very serious about Kṛṣṇa consciousness is freed from all sinful activity. Consequently a devotee is never inclined to commit sins. If one is pressured by the law or obligations to give up sinful activity, one cannot do so. However, if one takes to Kṛṣṇa consciousness, he can very easily give up all sinful activity. This is confirmed herein.

TEXT 143

SYNONYMS

ajñāne-by ignorance; vā-or; haya-there are; yadi-if; pāpa-sinful activities; upasthita-present; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; tāṅre-him (the devotee); śuddha kare-purifies; nā karāya-does not cause; prāyaścitta-atonement.

TRANSLATION

"If, however, a devotee accidentally becomes involved in a sinful activity, Kṛṣṇa purifies him. He does not have to undergo the regulative form of atonement.

PURPORT

Kṛṣṇa purifies from within as caitya-guru, the spiritual master within the heart. This is described in the following verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.5.42).

TEXT 144

SYNONYMS

sva-pāda-mūlam-the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, the shelter of the devotees; bhajataḥ-who is engaged in worshiping; priyasya-who is very dear to Kṛṣṇa; tyakta-given up; anya-for others; bhāvasya-of one whose disposition or inclination; hariḥ-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; para-īśaḥ-the Supreme Lord; vikarma-sinful activities; yat-whatever; ca-and; utpatitam-occurred; kathañcit-somehow; dhunoti-removes; sarvam-everything; hṛdi-in the heart; sanniviṣṭaḥ-entered.

TRANSLATION

" 'One who has given up everything and taken full shelter at the lotus feet of Hari, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is very dear to Kṛṣṇa. If he is involved in some sinful activity by accident, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is seated within everyone's heart, removes his sins without difficulty.'

TEXT 145

SYNONYMS

jñāna-the path of knowledge; vairāgya-ādi-the path of renunciation and so on; bhaktira-of devotional service; kabhu-at any time; nahe-not; aṅga-a part; ahiṁsā-nonviolence; yama-controlling the senses and the mind; niyama-ādi-restrictions and so on; bule-roam; kṛṣṇa-bhakta-saṅga-in the association of a devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”The path of speculative knowledge and renunciation is not very essential for devotional service. Indeed, good qualities such as nonviolence and mind and sense control automatically accompany a devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Sometimes a neophyte devotee or ordinary person thinks highly of speculative knowledge, austerity, penances and renunciation, thinking them the only path for advancement in devotional service. Actually this is not a fact. The path of knowledge, mystic yoga and renunciation has nothing to do with the pure soul. When one is temporarily in the material world, such processes may help a little, but they are not necessary for a pure devotee of Kṛṣṇa. In the material world, such activities end in material enjoyment or merging into the effulgence of the Supreme. They have nothing to do with the eternal loving service of the Lord. If one abandons speculative knowledge and simply engages in devotional service, he has attained his perfection. The devotee has no need for speculative knowledge, pious activity or mystic yoga. All these are automatically present when one renders the Lord transcendental loving service.

SYNONYMS

tasmāt-therefore; mat-bhakti-in My devotional service; yuktasya-of one who is engaged; yoginaḥ-the first-class yogī or mystic; vai-certainly; mat-ātmanaḥ-whose mind is always engaged in Me; na-not; jñānam-speculative knowledge; na-not; ca-also; vairāgyam-dry renunciation; prāyaḥ-for the most part; śreyaḥ-beneficial; bhavet-would be; iha-in this world.

TRANSLATION

” ’For one who is fully engaged in My devotional service, whose mind is fixed on Me in bhakti-yoga, the path of speculative knowledge and dry renunciation is not very beneficial.’

PURPORT

The path of devotional service is always independent of other activity. The path of speculative knowledge or mystic yoga may be a little beneficial in the beginning, but it cannot be considered part of devotional service. This verse (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 11.20.31) was spoken by Lord Kṛṣṇa when He was speaking to Uddhava before His departure from this material world. These are important instructions given directly by Lord Kṛṣṇa. Śrī Uddhava asked the Lord about the two kinds of instructions given in the Vedas. One instruction is called pravṛtti-mārga, and the other is called nivṛtti-mārga. These are directions for enjoying the material world according to regulative principles and then giving up the material world for higher spiritual understanding. Sometimes one does not know whether to practice speculative knowledge or mystic yoga for advancement in spiritual knowledge. Kṛṣṇa explains to Uddhava that the mechanical process of speculative knowledge and yoga is not necessary for advancing in devotional service. Devotional service is completely spiritual; it has nothing to do with material things. It is awakened by hearing and chanting in the association of devotees. Because devotional service is always transcendental, it has nothing to do with material activity.

TRANSLATION

” ’O hunter, good qualities like nonviolence, which you have developed, are not very astonishing, for those who are engaged in the Lord’s devotional service are never inclined to give pain to others because of envy.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Skanda Purāṇa.

TRANSLATION

”My dear Sanātana, I have now in detail described devotional service according to the regulative principles. Now hear from Me about spontaneous devotional service and its characteristics.

TEXT 149

rāgātmikā-bhakti–’mukhyā’ vraja-vāsi-jane tāra anugata bhaktira ’rāgānugā’-nāme

SYNONYMS

rāgātmikā-bhakti-spontaneous devotional service; mukhyā-preeminent; vraja-vāsi-jane-in the inhabitants of Vraja, or Vṛndāvana; tāra-that; anugata-following; bhaktira-of devotional service; rāgānugā-nāme-named rāgānugā or following after spontaneous devotional service.

TRANSLATION

"The original inhabitants of Vṛndāvana are attached to Kṛṣṇa spontaneously in devotional service. Nothing can compare to such spontaneous devotional service, which is called rāgātmikā bhakti. When a devotee follows in the footsteps of the devotees of Vṛndāvana, his devotional service is called rāgānugā bhakti.

PURPORT

In his Bhakti-sandarbha, Jīva Gosvāmī states:

tad evaṁ tat-tad-abhimāna-lakṣaṇa-bhāva-viśeṣveṇa svābhāvika-rāgasya vaiśiṣṭye sati tat-tad-rāga-prayuktā śravaṇa-kīrtana-smaraṇa-pāda-sevana-vandanātma-nivedana-prāyā bhaktis teṣāṁ rāgātmikā bhaktir ity ucyate.... tatas tadīyaṁ rāgaṁ rucyānugacchantī sā rāgānugā.

When a pure devotee follows the footsteps of a devotee in Vṛndāvana, he develops rāgānugā bhakti.

TEXT 150

SYNONYMS

iṣṭe-unto the desired object of life; svārasikī-appropriate for one's own original aptitude of love; rāgaḥ-attachment; parama-āviṣṭatā-absorption in the service of the Lord; bhavet-is; tat-mayī-consisting of that transcendental attachment; yā-which; bhavet-is; bhaktiḥ-devotional service; sā-that; atra-here; rāgātmikā-uditā-called rāgātmikā, or spontaneous devotional service.

TRANSLATION

" 'When one becomes attached to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, his natural inclination to love is fully absorbed in thoughts of the Lord. That is called transcendental attachment, and devotional service according to that attachment is called rāgātmikā, or spontaneous devotional service.'

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.272).

TEXT 151

iṣṭe 'gāḍha-tṛṣṇā'–rāgera svarūpa-lakṣaṇa iṣṭe 'āviṣṭatā'–ei taṭastha-lakṣaṇa

SYNONYMS

iṣṭe-in the desired object, the Supreme Personality of Godhead; gāḍha-tṛṣṇā-deep attachment; rāgera-of spontaneous love; svarūpa-lakṣaṇa-the primary symptom; iṣṭe-unto the Supreme; āviṣṭatā-absorption; ei-this; taṭastha-lakṣaṇa-the marginal symptom.

TRANSLATION

"The primary characteristic of spontaneous love is deep attachment for the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Absorption in Him is a marginal characteristic.

TEXT 152

TRANSLATION

"Thus devotional service which consists of rāga [deep attachment] is called rāgātmikā, spontaneous loving service. If a devotee covets such a position, he is considered to be most fortunate.

TEXT 153

lobhe vraja-vāsīra bhāve kare anugati śāstra-yukti nāhi māne–rāgānugāra prakṛti

SYNONYMS

lobhe-in such covetousness; vraja-vāsīra bhāve-in the moods of the inhabitants of Vṛndāvana, Vraja; kare anugati-follows; śāstra-yukti-injunctions or reasonings of the śāstras; nāhi māne-does not abide by; rāgānugāra-of spontaneous love; prakṛti-the nature.

TRANSLATION

"If one follows in the footsteps of the inhabitants of Vṛndāvana out of such transcendental covetousness, he does not care for the injunctions or reasonings of śāstra. That is the way of spontaneous love.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that a devotee is attracted by the service of the inhabitants of Vṛndāvana-namely the cowherd men, Mahārāja Nanda, mother Yaśodā, Rādhārāṇī, the gopīs, and the cows and calves. An advanced devotee is attracted by the service rendered by an eternal servitor of the Lord. This attraction is called spontaneous attraction. Technically it is called svarūpa-upalabdhi. This stage is not achieved in the beginning. In the beginning one has to render service strictly according to the regulative principles set forth by the revealed scriptures and spiritual master. By continuously rendering service through the process of vaidhī bhakti, one's natural inclination is gradually awakened. That is called spontaneous attraction, or rāgānugā bhakti.

An advanced devotee situated on the platform of spontaneity is already very expert in śāstric instruction, logic and argument. When he comes to the point of eternal love for Kṛṣṇa, no one can deviate him from that position, neither by argument nor by śāstric evidence. An advanced devotee has realized his eternal relationship with the Lord, and consequently he does not accept the logic and arguments of others. Such an advanced devotee has nothing to do with the sahajiyās, who manufacture their own way and commit sins by indulging in illicit sex, intoxication and gambling, if not meat-eating. Sometimes the sahajiyās imitate advanced devotees and live in their own whimsical way, avoiding the principles set down in the revealed scriptures. Unless one follows the six Gosvāmīs-Śrī Rūpa, Sanātana, Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa, Śrī Jīva, Gopāla Bhaṭṭa and Raghunātha dāsa-one cannot be a bona fide spontaneous lover of Kṛṣṇa. In this connection, Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says: rūpa-raghunātha-pade haibe ākuti kabe hāma bujhaba se yugala pirīti. The sahajiyās' understanding of the love affairs between Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa is not bona fide because they do not follow the principles laid down by the six Gosvāmīs. Their illicit connection and their imitation of the dress of Rūpa Gosvāmī as well as their avoidance of the prescribed methods of revealed scriptures will lead them to the lowest regions of hell. These imitative sahajiyās are cheated and unfortunate. They are not equal to advanced devotees (paramahaṁsas). Debauchees and paramahaṁsas are not on the same level.

SYNONYMS

tat-tat-respective; bhāva-ādi-mādhurye-the sweetness of the loving moods (namely śānta-rasa, dāsya-rasa, sakhya-rasa, vātsalya-rasa and mādhurya-rasa) of the inhabitants of Vṛndāvana; śrute-when heard; dhīḥ-the intelligence; yat-which; apekṣate-depends on; na-not; atra-here; śāstram-revealed scriptures; na-not; yuktim-logic and argument; ca-also; tat-that; lobha-of covetousness to follow in the footsteps; utpatti-lakṣaṇam-the symptom of awakening.

TRANSLATION

" 'When an advanced realized devotee hears about the affairs of the devotees of Vṛndāvana-in the mellows of śānta, dāsya, sakhya, vātsalya and mādhurya-he becomes inclined in that way, and his intelligence becomes attracted. Indeed, he begins to covet that particular type of devotion. When such covetousness is awakened, one's intelligence no longer depends on the instruction of śāstra, revealed scripture, logic or argument.'

SYNONYMS

bāhya-externally; antara-internally; ihāra-of this spontaneous love of Godhead; dui-two; ta'-indeed; sādhana-such processes of execution; bāhye-externally; sādhaka-dehe-with the body of an advanced devotee; kare-does; śravaṇa-kīrtana-hearing and chanting; mane-the mind; nija-own; siddha-deha-eternal body or self-realized position; kariyā bhāvana-thinking of; rātri-dine-night and day; kare-executes; vraje-in Vṛndāvana; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; sevana-service.

TRANSLATION

"There are two processes by which one may execute this rāgānugā bhakti-external and internal. When self-realized, the advanced devotee externally remains like a neophyte and executes all the śāstric injunctions, especially hearing and chanting. However, within his mind, in his original purified self-realized position, he serves Kṛṣṇa in Vṛndāvana in his particular way. He serves Kṛṣṇa twenty-four hours, all day and night.

TRANSLATION

” ’My dear mother, Devahūti! O emblem of peace! My weapon, the disc of time, never vanquishes those for whom I am very dear, for whom I am the Supersoul, the son, friend, spiritual master, well-wisher, worshipable Deity and desired goal. Since the devotees are always attached to Me, they are never vanquished by the agents of time.’

PURPORT

This was spoken by Kapiladeva to His mother Devahūti and is recorded in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.25.38). Kapiladeva instructed His mother in sāṅkhya-yoga, but the importance of bhakti-yoga is mentioned here. Later sāṅhkya-yoga was imitated by atheists, whose system was founded by a different Kapiladeva, Ṛṣi Kapiladeva.

TRANSLATION

"In the seed of affection, there is attachment which goes by two names, rati and bhāva. The Supreme Personality of Godhead comes under the control of such attachment.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments on this verse. Externally a devotee performs all the items of devotional service-śravaṇa and kīrtana-in nine different ways, and within his mind he always thinks of his eternal relationship with Kṛṣṇa and follows in the footsteps of the devotees of Vṛndāvana. If one engages himself in the service of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa in this way, he can transcend the regulative principles enjoined in the śāstras and, through his spiritual master, fully engage in rendering spontaneous love to Kṛṣṇa. In this way, he attains affection at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa. Kṛṣṇa actually comes under the control of such spontaneous feelings, and ultimately one can attain association with the Lord.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Twenty-second Chapter, describing the execution of devotional service.

18.5.23 Chapter 23

Life's Ultimate Goal-Love of Godhead

The following summary study of the Twenty-third Chapter is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. In this chapter Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu describes the symptoms of emotion and love and the awakening of one's original loving relationship with the Lord, as well as the characteristics of a devotee who has actually attained that stage. He then describes the gradual increase of love of God up to the point of mahābhāva. He then describes the five divisions of attraction and how they continue. He also describes the mellow derived from conjugal love, which is the supreme emotion. Conjugal love is divided into two categories-svakīya and parakīya. Svakīya refers to loving affairs between husband and wife, and parakīya refers to loving affairs between two lovers. There are a number of descriptions in this connection. There is also a description of the sixty-four transcendental qualities of Kṛṣṇa. Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī has twenty-five transcendental qualities.

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then describes those candidates who are eligible to taste the mellows of devotional service. Their fundamental natures and their varieties are also described. The Lord also informs Sanātana Gosvāmī about all the confidential paraphernalia of devotional service. He gives a description of Goloka Vṛndāvana, where the Lord is engaged in His eternal pastimes described in the Hari-vaṁśa. There is also an opposing and favorable description of keśa-avatāra. All these instructions are mentioned herein.

In this way Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu blessed Sanātana Gosvāmī, placing His own hand on his head. Thus Sanātana received the power to describe these subjects in books like Hari-bhakti-vilāsa.

SYNONYMS

śuddha-sattva-by unadultered goodness; viśeṣa-distinguished; ātmā-whose nature; prema-of love of God; sūrya-like the sun; aṁśu-a ray; sāmya-bhāk-which is similar to; rucibhiḥ-by different tastes; citta-of the heart; masṛṇya-softness; kṛt-which causes; asau-that softness; bhāvaḥ-emotion; ucyate-is called.

TRANSLATION

" 'When devotional service is situated on the transcendental platform of pure goodness, it is like a ray of the sunlight of love for Kṛṣṇa. At such a time, devotional service causes the heart to be softened by various tastes, and it is called bhāva [emotion].'

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.3.1).

TEXT 6

e dui,–bhāvera 'svarūpa', 'taṭastha' lakṣaṇa premera lakṣaṇa ebe śuna, sanātana

SYNONYMS

ei dui-these two; bhāvera-of emotion; sva-rūpa-constitutional; taṭastha-marginal; lakṣaṇa-symptoms; premera-of love; lakṣaṇa-the symptoms; ebe-now; śuna-hear; sanātana-O Sanātana.

TRANSLATION

"Bhāva [emotion] has two different symptoms-constitutional and marginal. Now, My dear Sanātana, listen to the symptoms of love.

PURPORT

The word śuddha-sattva-viśeṣātmā means "situated on the transcendental platform of pure goodness." In this way the soul is purified of all material contamination, and this position is called svarūpa-lakṣaṇa, the constitutional symptom of bhāva, emotion. By various tastes, one's heart is softened, and there is an awakening of one's loving propensity to render spontaneous service to the Lord. This is called taṭastha-lakṣaṇa, the marginal symptom of bhāva.

TEXT 7

TRANSLATION

”After taste is awakened, a deep attachment arises, and from that attachment the seed of love for Kṛṣṇa grows in the heart.

TEXT 13

sei ’bhāva’ gāḍha haile dhare ’prema’-nāma sei premā ’prayojana’ sarvānanda-dhāma

SYNONYMS

sei bhāva-that emotional condition; gāḍha haile-when it becomes intensified; dhare-takes; prema-nāma-the name love of Godhead; sei premā-that love of Godhead; prayojana-the ultimate goal of life; sarva-ānanda-dhāma-the reservoir of all pleasure.

TRANSLATION

”When that ecstatic emotional stage intensifies, it is called love of Godhead. Such love is life’s ultimate goal and the reservoir of all pleasure.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura summarizes this growth of love of Godhead as a gradual process. A person becomes interested in devotional service by some good fortune. Eventually he becomes interested in pure devotional service without material contamination. At that point, a person wants to associate with devotees. As a result of this association, he becomes more and more interested in discharging devotional service and hearing and chanting. The more one is interested in hearing and chanting, the more he is purified of material contamination. Liberation from material contamination is called anartha-nivṛtti, indicating a diminishing of all unwanted things. This is the test of development in devotional service. If one actually develops the devotional attitude, he must be freed from the material contamination of illicit sex, intoxication, gambling and meat-eating. These are the preliminary symptoms. When one is freed from all material contamination, his firm faith awakens in devotional service. When firm faith develops, a taste arises, and by that taste, one becomes attached to devotional service. When this attachment intensifies, the seed of love of Kṛṣṇa fructifies. This position is called prīti or rati (affection) or bhāva (emotion). When rati intensifies, it is called love of Godhead. This love of Godhead is actually life’s highest perfection and the reservoir of all pleasure.

Thus devotional life is divided into two stages-sādhana-bhakti and bhāva-bhakti. Sādhana-bhakti refers to the development of devotional service through the regulative principles. The basic principle for the execution of devotional service is faith. Above that, there is association with devotees, and after that there is initiation by a bona fide spiritual master. After initiation, when one follows the regulative principles of devotional service, one becomes freed from all unwanted things. In this way one becomes firmly fixed and gradually develops a taste for devotional service. The more the taste grows, the more one desires to render service to the Lord. In this way one becomes attached to a particular mellow in the Lord’s service-śānta, dāsya, sakhya, vātsalya and madhura. As a result of such attachment, bhāva develops. Bhāva-bhakti is the platform of purified goodness. By such purified goodness, one’s heart melts in devotional service. Bhāva-bhakti is the first seed of love of Godhead. This emotional stage is there before one attains pure love. When that emotional stage intensifies, it is called prema-bhakti, or transcendental love of Godhead. This gradual process is also described in the following two verses found in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.4.15-16).

SYNONYMS

ādau-in the beginning; śraddhā-firm faith, or disinterest in material affairs and interest in spiritual advancement; tataḥ-thereafter; sādhu-saṅgaḥ-association with pure devotees; atha-then; bhajana-kriyā-performance of devotional service to Kṛṣṇa (surrendering to the spiritual master and being encouraged by the association of devotees, so that initiation takes place); tataḥ-thereafter; anartha-nivṛttiḥ-the diminishing of all unwanted habits; syāt-there should be; tataḥ-then; niṣṭhā-firm faith; ruciḥ-taste; tataḥ-thereafter; atha-then; āsaktiḥ-attachment; tataḥ-then; bhāvaḥ-emotion of affection; tataḥ-thereafter; prema-love of God; abhyudañcati-arises; sādhakānām-of the devotees practicing Kṛṣṇa consciousness; ayam-this; premṇaḥ-of love of Godhead; prādurbhāve-in the appearance; bhavet-is; kramaḥ-the chronological order.

TRANSLATION

" 'In the beginning there must be faith. Then one becomes interested in associating with pure devotees. Thereafter one is initiated by the spiritual master and executes the regulative principles under his orders. Thus one is freed from all unwanted habits and becomes firmly fixed in devotional service. Thereafter, one develops taste and attachment. This is the way of sādhana-bhakti, the execution of devotional service according to the regulative principles. Gradually emotions intensify, and finally there is an awakening of love. This is the gradual development of love of Godhead for the devotee interested in Kṛṣṇa consciousness.'

kṣāntiḥ-forgiveness; avyartha-kālatvam-being free from wasting time; viraktiḥ-detachment; māna-śūnyatā-absence of false prestige; āśā-bandhaḥ-hope; samutkaṇṭhā-eagerness; nāma-gāne-in chanting the Holy names; sadā-always; ruciḥ-taste; āsaktiḥ-attachment; tat-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; guṇa-ākhyāne-in describing the transcendental qualities; prītiḥ-affection; tat-His; vasati-sthale-in places of residence (the temple or holy places); iti-thus; ādayaḥ-and so on; anubhāvāḥ-the signs; syuḥ-are; jāta-developed; bhāva-aṅkure-whose seed of ecstatic emotion; jane-in a person.

TRANSLATION

” ’When the seed of ecstatic emotion for Kṛṣṇa fructifies, the following nine symptoms manifest in one’s behavior: forgiveness, concern that time should not be wasted, detachment, absence of false prestige, hope, eagerness, a taste for chanting the holy name of the Lord, attachment to descriptions of the transcendental qualities of the Lord, and affection for those places where the Lord resides-that is, a temple or a holy place like Vṛndāvana. These are all called anubhāva, subordinate signs of ecstatic emotion. They are visible in a person in whose heart the seed of love of God has begun to fructify.’

PURPORT

These two verses are found in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.3.25-26).

TRANSLATION

” ’O brāhmaṇas, just accept me as a completely surrendered soul, and let mother Ganges, the representative of the Lord, also accept me in that way, for I have already taken the lotus feet of the Lord into my heart. Let the snakebird-or whatever magical thing the brāhmaṇa created-bite me at once. I only desire that you all continue singing the deeds of Lord Viṣṇu.’

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.19.15) spoken by Mahārāja Parīkṣit while he was sitting on the bank of the Ganges expecting to be bitten by a snakebird summoned by the curse of a brāhmaṇa boy named Śṛṅgi, who was the son of a great sage named Śamīka. News of the curse was conveyed to the King, who prepared for his imminent death. Many great saintly persons, sages, brāhmaṇas, kings and demigods came to see him in his last days. Mahārāja Parīkṣit, however, was not at all afraid of being bitten by the snake-bird. Indeed, he requested all the great personalities assembled to continue chanting the holy name of Lord Viṣṇu.

kṛṣṇa-sambandha vinā kāla vyartha nāhi yāya

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-sambandha vinā-without a connection with Kṛṣṇa; kāla-time; vyartha-useless; nāhi yāya-does not become.

TRANSLATION

”Not a moment should be lost. Every moment should be utilized for Kṛṣṇa or connected with Him.

PUPORT

Mahārāja Parīkṣit’s expression of anxiety is explained in this verse. He says, ”Let whatever is destined to happen take place. It doesn’t matter. Just let me see that not a moment of my time is wasted without a relationship with Kṛṣṇa.” One has to tolerate all obstacles on the path of Kṛṣṇa consciousness, and one has to see that not a moment of his life is wasted outside of Kṛṣṇa’s service.

TEXT 45

adhikāri-bhede rati–pañca parakāra śānta, dāsya, sakhya, vātsalya, madhura āra

SYNONYMS

adhikāri-of possessor; bhede-according to differences; rati-attachment; pañca parakāra-five varieties; śānta-neutral; dāsya-servitude; sakhya-friendship; vātsalya-paternal love; madhura-conjugal love; āra-also.

TRANSLATION

"According to the candidate possessing these transcendental qualities [sneha, māna and so on], there are five transcendental mellows-neutrality, servitorship, friendship, parental love and conjugal love.

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, rati (attraction) is thus described:

vyaktaṁ masṛṇitevāntarlakṣyate rati-lakṣaṇam mumukṣu-prabhṛtīnaṁ ced
bhaved eṣā ratir na hi kintu bāla-camatkārakārī tac-cihna-vīkṣayā abhijñena subodho 'yaṁ raty-ābhāsaḥ prakīrtitaḥ

The real symptoms of the fructification of the seed of love (rati) are manifest because the heart is melted. When such symptoms are found among speculators and fruitive actors, they cannot be accepted as real symptoms of attachment. Foolish people without knowledge of devotional service praise such symptoms of attachment even when they are based on something other than a desire to serve Kṛṣṇa. However, one who is expert in devotional service calls such symptoms rati-ābhāsa, a mere glimpse of attachment.

TEXT 46

ei pañca sthāyī bhāva haya pañca 'rasa' ye-rase bhakta 'sukhī', kṛṣṇa haya 'vaśa'

SYNONYMS

ei pañca-these five kinds of transcendental mellow; sthāyī bhāva-permanent ecstatic moods; haya-become; pañca rasa-five kinds of transcendental mellow; ye-rase-in a particular mellow; bhakta sukhī-a devotee becomes happy; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; haya-becomes; vaśa-under the control.

TRANSLATION

"These five transcendental mellows exist permanently. The devotee may be attracted to one of these mellows, and thus he becomes happy. Kṛṣṇa also becomes inclined toward such a devotee and comes under his control.

PURPORT

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, sthāyi-bhāva, permanent ecstasy, is thus described:

aviruddhān viruddhāṁś ca bhāvān yo vaśatāṁ nayan su-rājeva virājeta sa sthāyī bhāva ucyate sthāyī bhāvo ’tra sa proktaḥ śrī-kṛṣṇa-viṣayā ratiḥ

These moods (bhāvas) bring under control the favorable ecstasies (such as laughing) and unfavorable ecstasies (such as anger). When these continue to remain as kings, they are called sthāyi-bhāva, or permanent ecstasies. Continuous ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa is called permanent ecstasy.

TEXT 47

premādika sthāyi-bhāva sāmagrī-milane kṛṣṇa-bhakti rasa-rūpe pāya pariṇāme

SYNONYMS

prema-ādika-love of Godhead, beginning with śānta, dāsya and so on; sthāyi-bhāva-the permanent ecstasies; sāmagrī-milane-by mixing with other ingredients; kṛṣṇa-bhakti-devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa; rasa-rūpe-composed of transcendental mellows; pāya-becomes; pariṇāme-by transformation.

TRANSLATION

”When the permanent ecstasies [neutrality, servitorship and so on] are mixed with other ingredients, devotional service in love of Godhead is transformed and becomes composed of transcendental mellows.

PURPORT

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, the following definition is given:

athāsyāḥ keśava-rater lakṣitāyā nigadyate sāmagrī-paripoṣena paramā rasa-rūpatā vibhāvair anubhāvaiś ca sāttvikair vyabhicāribhiḥ svādyatvaṁ hṛdi bhaktānām ānītā śravaṇādibhiḥ eṣā kṛṣṇa-ratiḥ sthāyī bhāvo bhakti-raso bhavet

Love for Kṛṣṇa, Keśava, as previously described, reaches the supreme state of being composed of mellows when its ingredients are fulfilled. By means of vibhāva, anubhāva, sāttvika and vyabhicārī, hearing and chanting are activated, and the devotee is able to taste love for Kṛṣṇa. Then attachment for Kṛṣṇa, or permanent ecstasy (sthāyi-bhāva), becomes the mellow of devotional service (bhakti-rasa).

TEXT 48

vibhāva, anubhāva, sāttvika, vyabhicārī sthāyi-bhāva ’rasa’ haya ei cāri mili’

SYNONYMS

vibhāva-special ecstasy; anubhāva-subordinate ecstasy; sāttvika-natural ecstasy; vyabhicārī-transitory ecstasy; sthāyi-bhāva-permanent ecstasy; rasa-mellow; haya-becomes; ei cāri-these four; mili’-meeting.

TRANSLATION

”The permanent ecstasy becomes a more and more tasteful transcendental mellow through the mixture of special ecstasy, subordinate ecstasy, natural ecstasy and transitory ecstasy.

TEXT 49

dadhi yena khaṇḍa-marica-karpūra-milane
’rasālākhya’ rasa haya apūrvāsvādane

SYNONYMS

dadhi-yogurt; yena-as if; khaṇḍa-sugar candy; marica-black pepper; karpūra-camphor; milane-being mixed; rasāla-ākhya-known os delicious; rasa-mellow; haya-becomes; apūrva-āsvādane-by an unprecedented taste.

TRANSLATION

”Yogurt mixed with sugar candy, black pepper and camphor is very palatable and tasty. Similarly, when permanent ecstasy mixes with other ecstatic symptoms, it becomes unprecedentedly tasty.

TEXT 50

dvividha ’vibhāva’,–ālambana, uddīpana vaṁśī-svarādi–’uddīpana’, kṛṣṇādi–’ālambana’

SYNONYMS

dvi-vidha-two kinds; vibhāva-particular ecstasy; ālambana-the support; uddīpana-awakening; vaṁśī-svara-ādi-such as the vibration of the flute; uddīpana-exciting; kṛṣṇa-ādi-Kṛṣṇa and others; ālambana-the support.

TRANSLATION

”There are two kinds of particular ecstasies [vibhāva]. One is called the support, and the other is called the awakening. The vibration of Kṛṣṇa’s flute is an example of the awakening, and Lord Kṛṣṇa Himself is an example of the support.

TEXT 51

’anubhāva’–smita, nṛtya, gītādi udbhāsvara stambhādi–’sāttvika’ anubhāvera bhitara

SYNONYMS

anubhāva-subordinate ecstasy; smita-smiling; nṛtya-dancing; gīta-ādi-songs and so on; udbhāsvara-symptoms of bodily manifestation; stambha-ādi-being stunned and others; sāttvika-natural; anubhāvera bhitara-within the category of subordinate ecstasies.

TRANSLATION

”The subordinate ecstasies are smiling, dancing and singing, as well as different manifestations in the body. The natural ecstasies, such as being stunned, are considered among the subordinate ecstasies [anubhāva].

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, vibhāva is described as follows:

tatra jñeyā vibhāvās tu raty-āsvādana-hetavaḥ te dvidhālambanā eke tathaivoddīpanāḥ pare

”The cause bringing about the tasting of love for Kṛṣṇa is called vibhāva. Vibhāva is divided into two categories-ālambana (support) and uddīpana (awakening).”

In the Agni Purāṇa it is stated:

vibhāvyate hi raty-ādir yatra yena vibhāvyate vibhāvo nāma sa dvedhā-lambanoddīpanātmakaḥ

”That which causes love for Kṛṣṇa to appear is called vibhāva. That has two divisions-ālambana [in which love appears] and uddīpana [by which love appears].”

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, the following is stated about ālambana:

kṛṣṇaś ca kṛṣṇa-bhaktāś ca budhair ālambanā matāḥ raty-āder viṣayatvena tathādhāratayāpi ca

”The object of love is Kṛṣṇa, and the container of that love is the devotee of Kṛṣṇa. Both of them are called by the learned scholars ālambana-the foundations.” Similarly, uddīpana is described:

uddīpanās tu te proktā bhāvam uddīpayanti ye

”Those things which awaken ecstatic love are called uddīpana.”

te tu śrī-kṛṣṇa-candrasya guṇāś ceṣṭāḥ prasādhanam

Mainly this awakening is made possible by the qualities and activities of Kṛṣṇa, as well as by His mode of decoration and the way His hair is arranged.

smitāṅga-saurabhe vaṁśa-śṛṅga-nūpura-kambavaḥ padāṅka-kṣetra-tulasībhakta-tad-vāsarādayaḥ

”Kṛṣṇa’s smile, the fragrance of His transcendental body, His flute, bugle, ankle bells, conchshell, the marks on His feet, His place of residence, His favorite plant [tulasī], His devotees, and the observance of fasts and vows connected to His devotion all awaken the symptoms of ecstatic love.”

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, anubhāva is described as follows:

anubhāvās tu citta-stha-bhāvānām avabodhakāḥ te bahir vikriyā prāyāḥ
proktā udbhāsvarākhyayā

The many external ecstatic symptoms or bodily transformations which indicate ecstatic emotions in the mind, and which are also called udbhāsvara, are the anubhāvas, or subordinate ecstatic expressions of love. Some of these are dancing, falling down and rolling on the ground, singing and crying very loudly, bodily contortions, loud vibrations, yawning, deep breathing, disregard for others, the frothing of saliva, mad laughter, spitting, hiccups and other similar symptoms. All these symptoms are divided into two divisions-śīta and kṣepaṇa. Singing, yawning and so on are called śīta. Dancing and bodily contortions are called kṣepaṇa.

The Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu describes udbhāsvara as follows:

udbhāsante svadhāmnīti
proktā udbhāsvarā budhaiḥ nīvyuttarīya-dhammilla-sraṁsanaṁ gātra-moṭanam jṛmbhā ghrāṇasya phullatvaṁ niśvāsādyāś ca te matāḥ

The ecstatic symptoms manifest in the external body of a person in ecstatic love are called by learned scholars udbhāsvara. Some of these are a slackening of the belt and a dropping of clothes and hair. Others are bodily contortions, yawning, a trembling of the front portion of the nostrils, heavy breathing, hiccupping and falling down and rolling on the ground. These are the external manifestations of emotional love. Stambha and other symptoms are described in Madhya-līlā (14.167).

nirveda-harṣādi–tetriśa ’vyabhicārī’ saba mili’ ’rasa’ haya camatkārakārī nirveda-harṣa-ādi-complete despondency, jubilation and so on; tetriśa-thirty-three; vyabhicārī-transitory elements; saba mili'-all meeting together; rasa-the mellows; haya-becomes; camatkārakārī-a cause of wonder.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"There are other ingredients beginning with complete despondency and jubilation. Altogether there are thirty-three varieties, and when these combine, the mellow becomes very wonderful.

Nirveda, harṣa, and other symptoms are explained in Madhya-līlā (14.167). The transitory elements (vyabhicārī) are described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu as follows:

athocyante trayas triṁśadbhāvā ye vyabhicāriṇaḥ viśeṣeṇābhimukhyena caranti sthāyinaṁ prati vāg-aṅga-sattva-sūcyā ye jñeyās te vyabhicāriṇaḥ sañcārayanti bhāvasya gatiṁ sañcāriṇo 'pi te unmajjanti nimajjanti stāyiny-amṛta-vāridhau ūrmivad vardhayanty enaṁ yānti tad-rūpatāṁ ca te

There are thirty-three transitory elements known as vyabhicārī-ecstatic emotions. They especially wander about the permanent sentiments as assistants. They are to be known by words, by different symptoms seen in the limbs and in other parts of the body, and by the peculiar conditions of the heart. Because they set in motion the progress of the permanent sentiments, they are specifically called sañcārī, or impelling principles. These impelling principles rise up and fall back in the permanent sentiments of ecstatic love like waves in an ocean of ecstasy. Consequently they are called vyabhicāri.

pañca-vidha rasa–śānta, dāsya, sakhya, vātsalya madhura-nāma śṛṅgāra-rasa–sabāte prābalya

SYNONYMS

pañca-vidha rasa-five kinds of mellows; śānta-neutrality; dāsya-servitorship; sakhya-friendship; vātsalya-paternal affection; madhura-sweet; nāma-named; śṛṅgāra-rasa-the conjugal mellow; sabāte-among all of them; prābalya-predominant.

TRANSLATION

"There are five transcendental mellows-neutrality, servitorship, friendship, paternal affection and conjugal love, which is also known as the mellow of sweetness. Conjugal love excels all others.

TEXT 54

śānta-rase śānti-rati 'prema' paryanta haya dāsya-rati 'rāga' paryanta krameta bāḍaya

SYNONYMS

śānta-rase-in the mellow of neutrality; śānti-rati-spiritual attachment in peacefulness; prema paryanta-up to love of Godhead; haya-is; dāsya-rati-attachment in servitude; rāga-spontaneous love; paryanta-up to; krameta-gradually; bāḍaya-increases.

TRANSLATION

"The position of neutrality increases up to the point where one can appreciate love of Godhead. The mellow of servitorship gradually increases to the point of spontaneous love of Godhead.

TEXT 55

sakhya-vātsalya-rati pāya 'anurāga'-sīmā subalādyera 'bhāva' paryanta premera mahimā

SYNONYMS

sakhya-in friendship; vātsalya-in paternal affection; rati-affection; pāya-obtains; anurāga-sīmā-up to the limit of subordinate spontaneous love; subala-ādyera-of friends like Subala and others; bhāva-ecstatic love; paryanta-up to; premera mahimā-the glory of the love of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

"After the mellow of servitorship, there are the mellows of friendship and paternal love, which increase to subordinate spontaneous love. The greatness of the love found in friends like Subala extends to the standard of ecstatic love of Godhead.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that the mellow of neutrality increases to simple love of Godhead. In the mellow of servitorship, love of Godhead increases beyond that to affection, counter-love (anger based on love), love and attachment. Similarly, the mellow of friendship increases to affection, counter-love, love, attachment and subattachment. It is the same with the mellow of paternal affection. The special feature of the mellow of friendship exhibited by personalities like Subala is that it increases from fraternal affection to counter-love, to spontaneous attachment, to subordinate attachment, and finally to the ecstasy where all the ecstatic symptoms continuously exist.

TEXT 56

śānta-ādi rasera 'yoga', 'viyoga'–dui bheda sakhya-vātsalye yogādira aneka vibheda

SYNONYMS

śānta-ādi rasera-of the mellows beginning from neutrality; yoga-connection; viyoga-separation; dui bheda-two divisions; sakhya-in the mellow of friendship; vātsalye-in paternal affection; yoga-ādira-of connection and separation; aneka vibheda-many varieties.

TRANSLATION

”There are two divisions of each of the five mellows-yoga [connection] and viyoga [separation]. Among the mellows of friendship and parental affection, there are many divisions of connection and separation.

PURPORT

In the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, these divisions are described:

ayoga-yogāvetasya
prabhedau kathitāv ubhau

In the mellows of bhakti-yoga, there are two stages-ayoga and yoga. Ayoga is described in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu:

saṅgābhāvo harer dhīrair ayoga iti kathyate ayoge tvan-manaskatvaṁ tad-guṇādy-anusandhayaḥ tat-prāpty-upāya-cintādyāḥ sarveṣāṁ kathitāḥ kriyāḥ

Learned scholars in the science of bhakti-yoga say that when there is an absence of association with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, separation takes place. In the stage of ayoga (separation), the mind is filled with Kṛṣṇa consciousness and is fully absorbed in thoughts of Kṛṣṇa. In that stage, the devotee searches out the transcendental qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. It is said that in that stage of separation, all the devotees in the different mellows are always active in thinking of ways to attain Kṛṣṇa’s association.

The word yoga (connection) is thus described:

kṛṣṇena saṅgamo yas tu sa yoga iti kīrtyate

”When one meets Kṛṣṇa directly, that is called yoga.”

In the transcendental mellows of neutrality and servitorship, there are similar divisions of yoga and viyoga, but they are not variegated. The divisions of yoga and viyoga are always existing in the five mellows. However, in the transcendental mellows of friendship and paternal affection, there are many varieties of yoga and viyoga. The varieties of yoga are thus described:

yogo ’pi kathitaḥ siddhis tuṣṭiḥ sthitir iti tridhā

Yoga (connection) is of three types-success, satisfaction and permanence. The divisions of ayoga (separation) are thus described:

utkaṇṭhitaṁ viyogaś cety
ayogo ’pi dvidhocyate

Thus ayoga has two divisions-longing and separation.

TEXT 57

’rūḍha’, ’adhirūḍha’ bhāva–kevala ’madhure’ mahiṣī-gaṇera ’rūḍha’, ’adhirūḍha’ gopikā-nikare

SYNONYMS

rūḍha-advanced; adhirūḍha-highly advanced; bhāva-ecstasy; kevala-only; madhure-in the transcendental mellow of conjugal love; mahiṣī-gaṇera-of the queens of Dvārakā; rūḍha-advanced; adhirūḍha-highly advanced; gopikā-nikare-among the gopīs.

TRANSLATION

”Only in the conjugal mellow are there two ecstatic symptoms called rūḍha [advanced] and adhirūḍha [highly advanced]. The advanced ecstasy is found among the queens of Dvārakā, and the highly advanced ecstasies are found among the gopīs.

PURPORT

The adhirūḍha ecstasies are explained in the Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi:

rūḍhoktebhyo ’nubhāvebhyaḥ kām apy āptā viśiṣṭatām yatrānubhāvā dṛśyante
so ’dhirūḍho nigadyate

The very sweet attraction of conjugal love increases through affection, counter-love, love, attachment, subattachment, ecstasy and highly advanced ecstasy (mahābhāva). The platform of mahābhāva includes rūḍha and adhirūḍha. These platforms are possible only in conjugal love. Advanced ecstasy is found in Dvārakā, whereas highly advanced ecstasy is found among the gopīs.

TEXT 58

adhirūḍha-mahābhāva–dui ta’ prakāra sambhoge ’mādana’, virahe ’mohana’ nāma tāra

SYNONYMS

adhirūḍha-mahābhāva-highly advanced ecstasy; dui ta’ prakāra-two varieties; sambhoge-in actually meeting; mādana-mādana; virahe-in separation; mohana-mohana; nāma-the names; tāra-of them.

TRANSLATION

”Highly advanced ecstasy is divided into two categories-mādana and mohana. Meeting together is called mādana, and separation is called mohana.

TEXT 59

’bhramara-gītā’ra daśa śloka tāhāte pramāṇa

SYNONYMS

citra-jalpera-of the mad talks; daśa-ten; aṅga-parts; prajalpa-ādi-nāma-named prajalpa and so on; bhramara-gītāra-of Rādhārāṇī’s talks with the bumblebee (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Canto Ten, Chapter Forty-seven); daśa śloka-ten verses; tāhāte-in that matter; pramāṇa-the evidence.

TRANSLATION

”Mad emotional talks include ten divisions, called prajalpa and other names. An example of this is the ten verses spoken by Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī called ’song to the bumblebee.’

PURPORT

Imaginative mad talks known as citra-jalpa can be divided into ten categories-prajalpa, parijalpa, vijalpa, ujjalpa, sañjalpa, avajalpa, abhijalpa, ājalpa, pratijalpa and sujalpa. There are no English equivalents for these different features of jalpa (imaginative talk).

TEXT 61

udghūrṇā, vivaśa-ceṣṭā–divyonmāda-nāma virahe kṛṣṇa-sphūrti, āpanāke ’kṛṣṇa’-jñāna

SYNONYMS

udghūrṇā-unsteadiness; vivaśa-ceṣṭā-boastful activities; divya-unmāda-nāma-named transcendental madness; virahe-in separation; kṛṣṇa-sphūrti-manifestation of Kṛṣṇa; āpanāke-oneself; kṛṣṇa-jñāna-thinking as Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”Udghūrṇā [unsteadiness] and vivaśa-ceṣṭā [boastful activities] are aspects of transcendental madness. In separation from Kṛṣṇa, one experiences the manifestation of Kṛṣṇa, and one thinks oneself to be Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 62

’sambhoga’-’vipralambha’-bhede dvividha śṛṅgāra sambhogera ananta aṅga, nāhi anta tāra sambhoga-of meeting (enjoyment together); vipralambha-of separation; bhede-in two divisions; dvi-vidha śṛṅgāra-two kinds of conjugal love; sambhogera-of the stage of sambhoga, or meeting; ananta aṅga-unlimited parts; nāhi-not; anta-an end; tāra-of that.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”In conjugal love [śṛṅgāra] there are two departments-meeting and separation. On the platform of meeting, there are unlimited varieties that are beyond description.

PURPORT

Vipralambha is described in the Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi:

yūnor ayuktayor bhāvo yuktayor vātha yo mithaḥ abhīṣṭāliṅganādīnām anavāptau prakṛṣyate sa vipralambho vijñeyaḥ sambhogonnatikārakaḥ na vinā vipralambhena
sambhogaḥ puṣṭim aśnute

When the lover and the beloved meet, they are called yukta (connected). Previous to their meeting, they are called ayukta (not connected). Whether connected or not connected, the ecstatic emotion arising due to not being able to embrace and kiss each other as desired is called vipralambha. This vipralambha helps nourish emotions at the time of meeting. Similarly, sambhoga is thus described:

darśanāliṅganādīnām ānukūlyān niṣevayā yūnor ullāsam ārohan bhāvaḥ sambhoga īryate

”Meeting each other and embracing each other are aimed at bringing about the happiness of both the lover and the beloved. When this stage becomes increasingly jubilant, the resultant ecstatic emotion is called sambhoga.” When awakened, sambhoga is divided into four categories:

(1) pūrva-rāga-anantara-after pūrva-rāga (attachment prior to meeting), sambhoga is called brief (saṅkṣipta);

(2) māna-anantara-after māna (anger based on love), sambhoga is called encroached (saṅkīrṇa);

(3) kiñcid-dūra-pravāsa-anantara-after being a little distance away for some time, sambhoga is called accomplished (sampanna);

(4) sudūra-pravāsa-anantara-after being far away, sambhoga is called perfection (samṛddhimān).

The meetings of the lovers that take place in dreams also have these four divisions.

TEXT 63

'vipralambha' catur-vidha–pūrva-rāga, māna pravāsākhya, āra prema-vaicittya-ākhyāna

SYNONYMS

vipralambha-separation; catuḥ-vidha-four divisions; pūrva-rāga- pūrva-rāga; māna-māna; pravāsākhya-known as pravāsa; āra-and; prema-vaicittya-prema-vaicittya; ākhyāna-calling.

TRANSLATION

"Vipralambha has four divisions-pūrva-rāga, māna, pravāsa, and prema-vaicittya.

PURPORT

Pūrva-rāga is described in Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi:

ratir yā saṅgamāt pūrvaṁ darśana-śravaṇādi-jā tayor unmīlati prājñaiḥ pūrva-rāgaḥ sa ucyate

When attachment produced in both the lover and beloved before their meeting by seeing, hearing and so on becomes very palatable by the mixture of four ingredients, such as vibhāva and anubhāva, this is called pūrva-rāga.

The word māna is also described:

dampatyor bhāva ekatra sator apy anuraktayoḥ svābhīṣṭāśleṣa-vīkṣādi-nirodhī māna ucyate

Māna is a word used to indicate the mood of the lover and the beloved experienced whether they are in one place or in different places. This mood obstructs their looking at one another and embracing one another, despite the fact that they are attached to one another.

Pravāsa is also explained as follows:

pūrva-saṅga-tayor yūnor bhaved deśāntarādibhiḥ vyavadhānaṁ tu yat prājñaiḥ sa pravāsa itīryate

Pravāsa is a word used to indicate the separation of lovers who were previously intimately associated. This separation is due to their being in different places.

Similarly, prema-vaicittya is explained:

priyasya sannikarṣe 'pi premotkarṣa-svabhāvataḥ yā viśeṣa-dhiyārtis tat prema-vaicittyam ucyate

Prema-vaicittya is a word used to indicate an abundance of love that brings about grief from fear of separation, although the lover is present.

TEXT 64

TRANSLATION

" 'My dear friend kurarī, it is now night, and Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa is sleeping. You yourself are not asleep or resting but are lamenting. Should I presume that you, like us, are affected by the smiling, liberal, playful glances of the lotus eyed Kṛṣṇa? If so, your heart is deeply pierced. Is that why you are showing these signs of sleepless lamentation?'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.90.15). Although the queens were with Kṛṣṇa, they were still thinking of losing His company.

SYNONYMS

varīyān-the best; īśvaraḥ-the supreme controller; ca-and; iti-thus; guṇāḥ-the transcendental qualities; tasya-of Him; anukīrtitāḥ-described; samudrāḥ-oceans; iva-like; pañcāśat-fifty; durvigāhāḥ-difficult to penetrate fully; hareḥ-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; amī-all these.

TRANSLATION

" 'Kṛṣṇa is the Supreme, and He is always glorified as the Supreme Lord and controller. Thus all the previously mentioned transcendental qualities are in Him. The fifty qualities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead above mentioned are as deep as an ocean. In other words, they are difficult to fully comprehend.

SYNONYMS

jīveṣu-in the living entities; ete-these; vasantaḥ-are residing; api-though; bindu-bindutayā-with a very minute quantity; kvacit-sometimes; paripūrṇatayā-with fullness; bhānti-are manifest; tatra-in Him; eva-certainly; puruṣa-uttame-in the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

" 'These qualities are sometimes very minutely exhibited in living beings, but they are fully manifest in the Supreme Personality of Godhead.'

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (2.1.30). Living entities are parts and parcels of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā:

mamaivāṁśo jīva-loke
jīva-bhūtaḥ sanātanaḥ
manaḥ ṣaṣṭhānīndriyāṇi
prakṛti-sthāni karṣati

"The living entities in this conditioned world are My eternal, fragmental parts. Due to conditioned life, they are struggling very hard with the six senses, which include the mind." (Bg. 15.7)

The qualities of Kṛṣṇa are present in the living entity in minute, atomic quantities. A small portion of gold is certainly gold, but it cannot be equal to a gold mine. Similarly, the living entities have all the characteristics of the Supreme Personality of Godhead in minute quantity, but the living entity is never equal to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. God is therefore described as the Supreme Being, and the living entity is described as a jīva. God is the Supreme Being, the chief of all living beings-eko bahūnāṁ yo vidadhāti kāmān. The Māyāvādīs maintain that everyone is God, but even if this philosophy is accepted, no one can maintain that everyone is equal to the Supreme Godhead. Only unintelligent men maintain that everyone is equal to God or that everyone is God.

TEXT 78

SYNONYMS

atha-now(over and above these); pañca-guṇāḥ-five qualities; ye-which; syuḥ-may exist; aṁśena-by part; giriśa-ādiṣu-in demigods like Lord Śiva.

TRANSLATION

" 'Apart from these fifty qualities, there are five other qualities found in the Supreme Personality of Godhead that are partially present in demigods like Śiva.

PURPORT

This verse and the following seven verses are also found in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (2.1.37-44).

TRANSLATION

” ’These qualities are (1) the Lord is always situated in His original position, (2) He is omniscient, (3) He is always fresh and youthful, (4) He is the concentrated form of eternity, knowledge and bliss, and (5) He is the possessor of all mystic perfection. There are another five qualities, which exist in the Vaikuṇṭha planets in Nārāyaṇa, the Lord of Lakṣmī. These qualities are also present in Kṛṣṇa, but they are not present in demigods like Lord Śiva or in other living entities. These are (1) inconceivable supreme power, (2) generating innumerable universes from the body, (3) being the original source of all incarnations, (4) bestowing salvation upon enemies killed, and (5) the ability to attract exalted persons who are satisfied in themselves. Although these qualities are present in Nārāyaṇa, the dominating Deity of the Vaikuṇṭha planets, they are even more wonderfully present in Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

sarva-adbhuta-camatkāra-bringing wonder to all; līlā-of pastimes; kallola-full of waves; vāridhiḥ-an ocean; atulya-madhura-prema-with incomparable conjugal love; maṇḍita-decorated; priya-maṇḍalaḥ-with a circle of favorite personalities; tri-jagat-of three worlds; mānasa-ākarṣi-attracting the minds; muralī-of the flute; kala-kūjitaḥ-the melodious vibration; asamāna-ūrdhva-unequaled and unsurpassed; rūpa-by beauty; śrī-and opulence; vismāpita-cara-acaraḥ-astonishing the moving and nonmoving living entities.

TRANSLATION

” ’Apart from these sixty transcendental qualities, Kṛṣṇa has an additional four transcendental qualities, which are not manifest even in the personality of Nārāyaṇa. These are: (1) Kṛṣṇa is like an ocean filled with waves of pastimes that evoke wonder within everyone in the three worlds. (2) In His activities of conjugal love, He is always surrounded by His dear devotees who possess unequaled love for Him. (3) He attracts the minds of all three worlds by the melodious vibration of His flute. (4) His personal beauty and opulence are beyond compare. No one is equal to Him, and no one is greater than Him. Thus the Personality of Godhead astonishes all living entities, both moving and nonmoving, within the three worlds. He is so beautiful that He is called Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Māyāvādī philosophers, who have a poor fund of knowledge, simply dismiss the subject by explaining that Kṛṣṇa means black. Not understanding the qualities of Kṛṣṇa, these atheistic rascals do not accept Him as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Although the Lord is described and accepted by great personalities, ācāryas and sages, the Māyāvādīs still do not appreciate Him. Unfortunately at the present moment human society is so degraded that people cannot even provide themselves with life’s daily necessities, yet they are captivated by Māyāvādī philosophers and are being misled. According to Bhagavad-gītā, simply by understanding Kṛṣṇa one can get free from the cycle of birth and death. Tyaktvā dehaṁ punar janma naiti mām eti so ’rjuna. Unfortunately this great science of Kṛṣṇa consciousness has been impeded by Māyāvādī philosophers who are opposed to the personality of Kṛṣṇa. Those who are preaching this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement must try to understand Kṛṣṇa from the statements given in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (The Nectar of Devotion).

TRANSLATION

”Establish devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa and Rādhārāṇī in Vṛndāvana. You should also compile bhakti scripture and preach the bhakti cult from Vṛndāvana.”

PURPORT

Sanātana Gosvāmī was enjoined (1) to broadcast the revealed scriptures on devotional service and establish the conclusions of devotional service, (2) to reestablish lost places of pilgrimage like Vṛndāvana and Rādhā-kuṇḍa, (3) to establish the Vṛndāvana method of temple worship and install Deities in temples (Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī established Madana-mohana temple, and Rūpa Gosvāmī established Govindajī temple.), and (4) to enunciate the behavior of a Vaiṣṇava (as Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī did in Hari-bhakti-vilāsa). In this way Sanātana Gosvāmī was empowered to establish the cult of Vaiṣṇavism. As stated by Śrīnivāsa Ācārya:

nānā-śāstra-vicāraṇaika-nipuṇau sad-dharma-saṁsthāpakau lokānāṁ hita-kāriṇau tribhuvane mānyau śaraṇyākarau rādhā-kṛṣṇa-padāravinda-bhajanānandena mattālikau vande rūpa-sanātanau raghu-yugau śrī-jīva-gopālakau

”I offer my respectful obeisances unto the six Gosvāmīs, namely Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī, Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī, Śrī Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī, Śrī Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, Śrī Jīva Gosvāmī and Śrī Gopāla Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī, who are very expert in scrutinizingly studying all the revealed scriptures with the aim of establishing eternal religious principles for the benefit of all human beings. Thus they are honored all over the three worlds, and they are worth taking shelter of because they are absorbed in the mood of the gopīs and are engaged in the transcendental loving service of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa.”

This Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement continues the tradition of the six Gosvāmīs, especially Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī and Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī. Serious students of this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement must understand their great responsibility to preach the cult of Vṛndāvana (devotional service to the Lord) all over the world. We now have a nice temple in Vṛndāvana, and serious students should take advantage of it. I am very hopeful that some of our students can take up this responsibility and render the best service to humanity by educating people in Kṛṣṇa consciousness.

yukta-vairāgya-sthiti saba śikhāila śuṣka-vairāgya-jñāna saba niṣedhila

SYNONYMS

yukta-vairāgya-of proper renunciation; sthiti-the situation; saba-all; śikhāila-instructed; śuṣka-vairāgya-dry renunciation; jñāna-speculative knowledge; saba-all; niṣedhila-forbade.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then told Sanātana Gosvāmī about proper renunciation according to a particular situation, and the Lord forbade dry renunciation and speculative knowledge in all respects.

PURPORT

This is the technique for understanding śuṣka-vairāgya and yukta-vairāgya. In Bhagavad-gītā (6.17) it is said:

yuktāhāra-vihārasya
yukta-ceṣṭasya karmasu yukta-svapnāvabodhaśya yogo bhavati duḥkha-hā

"He who is temperate in his habits of eating, sleeping, working and recreation can mitigate all material pains by practicing the yoga system." To broadcast the cult of Kṛṣṇa consciousness, one has to learn the possibility of renunciation in terms of country, time and candidate. A candidate for Kṛṣṇa consciousness in the Western countries should be taught about the renunciation of material existence, but one would teach candidates from a country like India in a different way. The teacher (ācārya) has to consider time, candidate and country. He must avoid the principle of niyamāgraha-that is, he should not try to perform the impossible. What is possible in one country may not be possible in another. The ācārya's duty is to accept the essence of devotional service. There may be a little change here and there as far as yukta-vairāgya (proper renunciation) is concerned. Dry renunciation is forbidden by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and we have also learned this from our spiritual master, His Divine Grace Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura Gosvāmī Mahārāja. The essence of devotional service must be taken into consideration, and not the outward paraphernalia.

Sanātana Gosvāmī wrote his Vaiṣṇava smṛti, Hari-bhakti-vilāsa, which was specifically meant for India. In those days, India was more or less following the principle of smārta-vidhi. Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī had to keep pace with this, and his Hari-bhakti-vilāsa was compiled with this in mind. According to smārta-brāhmaṇas, a person not born in a brāhmaṇa family could not be elevated to the position of a brāhmaṇa. Sanātana Gosvāmī, however, says in Hari-bhakti-vilāsa (2.12) that anyone can be elevated to the position of a brāhmaṇa by the process of initiation.

yathā kāñcanatāṁ yāti
kāṁsyaṁ rasa-vidhānataḥ
tathā dīkṣā-vidhānena
dvijatvaṁ jāyate nṛṇām

There is a difference between the smārta process and the gosvāmī process. According to the smārta process, one cannot be accepted as a brāhmaṇa unless he is born in a brāhmaṇa family. According to the gosvāmī process, the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa and the Nārada-pañcarātra, anyone can be a brāhmaṇa if he is properly initiated by a bona fide spiritual master. This is also the verdict of Śukadeva Gosvāmī in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.4.18):

kirāta-hūṇāndhra-pulinda-pulkaśā ābhīra-śumbhā yavanāḥ khasādayaḥ ye 'nye ca pāpā yad-apāśrayāśrayāḥ śudhyanti tasmai prabhaviṣṇave namaḥ

A Vaiṣṇava is immediately purified, provided he follows the rules and regulations of his bona fide spiritual master. It is not necessary that the rules and regulations followed in India be exactly the same as those in Europe, America and other Western countries. Simply imitating without effect is called niyamāgraha. Not following the regulative principles but instead living extravagantly is also called niyamāgraha. The word niyama means "regulative principles," and āgraha means "eagerness." The word agraha means "not to accept." We should not follow regulative principles without an effect, nor should we fail to accept the regulative principles. What is required is a special technique according to country, time and candidate. Without the sanction of the spiritual master, we should not try to imitate. This principle is recommended here: śuṣka-vairāgya-jñāna saba niṣedhila. This is Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's liberal demonstration of the bhakti cult. We should not introduce anything whimsically, without the sanction of the bona fide spiritual master. In this connection, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments on these points by quoting two verses by Śrī Rūpa Gosvāmī (Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu 1.2.255-256).

anāsaktasya viṣayān
yathārham upayuñjataḥ
nirbandhaḥ kṛṣṇa-sambandhe
yuktaṁ vairāgyam ucyate
prāpañcikatayā buddhyā
hari-sambandhi-vastunaḥ
mumukṣubhiḥ parityāgo
vairāgyaṁ phalgu kathyate

”When one is not attached to anything but at the same time accepts everything in relation to Kṛṣṇa, one is rightly situated above possessiveness. On the other hand, one who rejects everything without knowledge of its relationship to Kṛṣṇa is not as complete in his renunciation.” To preach the bhakti cult, one should seriously consider these verses.

SYNONYMS

adveṣṭā-not envious or jealous; sarva-bhūtānām-to all living entities in all parts of the world; maitraḥ-friendly; karuṇaḥ-compassionate; eva-certainly; ca-and; nirmamaḥ-with no sense of proprietorship; nirahaṅkāraḥ-without pride (without considering oneself a great preacher); sama-duḥkha-sukhaḥ-equal in distress and happiness (peaceful); kṣamī-tolerant to offenses created by others; santuṣṭaḥ-satisfied; satatam-continuously; yogī-engaged in bhakti-yoga; yata-ātmā-having controlled the senses and mind; dṛḍha-niścayaḥ-having firm confidence and determination; mayi-unto Me; arpita-dedicated; manaḥ-buddhiḥ-mind and intelligence; yaḥ-who; mat-bhaktaḥ-My devotee; saḥ-that person; me-My; priyaḥ-dear.

TRANSLATION

” ’One who is not envious but who is a kind friend to all living entities, who does not think himself a proprietor, who is free from false ego, equal in both happiness and distress, always satisfied, forgiving and self-controlled, who is engaged in devotional service with determination and whose mind and intelligence are dedicated to Me-he is very dear to Me.

PURPORT

One should not be jealous of members of other castes or nations. It is not that only Indians or brāhmaṇas can become Vaiṣṇavas. Anyone can become a Vaiṣṇava. Therefore one should recognize that the bhakti cult must be spread all over the world. That is real adveṣṭā. Moreover, the word maitraḥ, friendly, indicates that one who is able to preach the bhakti cult all over the world should be equally friendly to everyone. These two and the following six verses were spoken by Śrī Kṛṣṇa in Bhagavad-gītā (12.13-20).

TRANSLATION

” ’A devotee who is not dependent on others but dependent solely on Me, who is clean inwardly and outwardly, who is expert, indifferent to material things, without cares, free from all pains, and who rejects all pious and impious activities, is very dear to Me.

PURPORT

The word anapekṣaḥ means that one should not be concerned with mundane people and should not depend upon them. One should depend solely on the Supreme Personality of Godhead and be free from material desires. One should also be clean, within and without. To be outwardly clean, one should regularly bathe with soap and oil, and to be inwardly clean one should always be absorbed in thoughts of Kṛṣṇa. The words sarvārambha-parityāgī indicate that one should not be interested in the so-called smārta-vidhi of pious and impious activities.

TRANSLATION

” ’Are there no torn clothes lying on the common road? Do the trees, which exist for maintaining others, no longer give alms in charity? Do the rivers, being dried up, no longer supply water to the thirsty? Are the caves of the mountains now closed, or, above all, does the unconquerable Supreme Personality of Godhead not protect the fully surrendered souls? Why then should learned persons like devotees go to flatter those who are intoxicated by hard-earned wealth?’ ”

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.2.5). In this verse, Śukadeva Gosvāmī advises Mahārāja Parīkṣit that a devotee should be independent in all circumstances. The body can be maintained with no problem if one follows the instructions given in this verse. To maintain the body, we require shelter, food, water and clothing, and all these necessities can be obtained without approaching puffed-up rich men. One can collect old garments that have been thrown out, one can eat fruits offered by the trees, one can drink water from the rivers, and one can live within the caves of mountains. By nature’s arrangements, shelter, clothing and food are supplied to the devotee who is completely surrendered to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Such a devotee does not need a puffed-up materialistic person to maintain him. In other words, devotional service can be discharged in any condition. This is the version of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.6).

sa vai puṁsāṁ paro dharmo
yato bhaktir adhokṣaje

ahaituky apratihatā
yayātmā suprasīdati

”The supreme occupation [dharma] for all humanity is that by which men can attain to loving devotional service unto the transcendent Lord. Such devotional service must be unmotivated and uninterrupted in order to completely satisfy the self.” This verse explains that devotional service cannot be checked by any material condition.

SYNONYMS

hari-vaṁśe-the revealed scripture known as Hari-vaṁśa; kahiyāche-has told of; goloke-on the planet called Goloka; nitya-sthiti-the eternal situation; indra-King Indra of the heavenly planet; āsi’-coming; karila-offered; yabe-when; śrī-kṛṣṇere stuti-prayers to Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

In the revealed scripture Hari-vaṁśa, there is a description of Goloka Vṛndāvana, the planet where Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa eternally resides. This information was given by King Indra when he surrendered to Kṛṣṇa and offered prayers after Kṛṣṇa had raised Govardhana Hill.

PURPORT

In the Vedic scripture Hari-vaṁśa (Viṣṇu-parva, Chapter Nineteen), there is the following description of Goloka Vṛndāvana:

manuṣya-lokād ūrdhvaṁ tu khagānāṁ gatir ucyate ākāśasyopari rarir dvāraṁ svargasya bhānumān svargād ūrdhvaṁ brahma-loko tatra soma-gatiś caiva jyotiṣāṁ ca mahātmanām tasyopari gavāṁ lokaḥ sādhyās taṁ pālayanti hi sa hi sarva-gataḥ kṛṣṇaḥ mahā-kāśagato mahān uparyupari tatrāpi gatis tava tapomayī yāṁ na vidmo vayaṁ sarve pṛcchanto ’pi pitām aham gatiḥ śama-damāṭyānāṁ svargaḥ su-kṛta-karmaṇām brāhmye tapasi yuktānāṁ brahma-lokaḥ parā gatiḥ gavām eva tu goloko durārohā hi sā gatiḥ sa tu lokas tvayā kṛṣṇa sīdamānaḥ kṛtātmanā dhṛto dhṛtimatā vīra nighnatopadravān gavām

When the King of heaven, Indra, surrendered to Kṛṣṇa after Kṛṣṇa raised Govardhana Hill, Lord Indra stated that above the planetary systems wherein human beings reside is the sky, where birds fly. Above the sky is the sun and its orbit. This is the entrance to the heavenly planets. Above the heavenly planets are other planets, up to Brahmaloka, where those advancing in spiritual knowledge reside. The planets up to Brahmaloka are part of the material world (Devī-dhāma). Because the material world is under the control of Devī, Durgā, it is called Devī-dhāma. Above Devī-dhāma is a place where Lord Śiva and his wife Umā reside. Those brightened by spiritual knowledge and liberated from material contamination reside in that Śivaloka. Beyond that planetary system is the spiritual world, where there are planets called Vaikuṇṭha-lokas. Goloka Vṛndāvana is situated above all the Vaikuṇṭha-lokas. Goloka Vṛndāvana is the kingdom of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and the parents of Kṛṣṇa, Mahārāja Nanda and mother Yaśodā. In this way there are various planetary systems, and they are all creations of the Supreme Lord. As stated in the Brahma-saṁhitā:

goloka-nāmni nija-dhāmni tale ca tasya devī-maheśa-hari-dhāmasu teṣu teṣu te te prabhāva-nicayā vihitāś ca yena

govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

Thus Goloka Vṛndāvana-dhāma is situated above the Vaikuṇṭha planets. The spiritual sky containing all the Vaikuṇṭha planets is very small compared to Goloka Vṛndāvana-dhāma. The space occupied by Goloka Vṛndāvana-dhāma is called mahākāśa, or "the greatest sky of all." Lord Indra said, "We asked Lord Brahmā about Your eternal planet, but we could not understand it. Those fruitive actors who have controlled their senses and mind with pious activities can be elevated to the heavenly planets. Pure devotees who are always engaged in Lord Nārāyaṇa's service are promoted to the Vaikuṇṭhalokas. However, my Lord Kṛṣṇa, Your Goloka Vṛndāvana-dhāma is very difficult to attain. Yet both You and that supreme planetary system have descended here upon this earth. Unfortunately, I have disturbed You by my misdeeds, and that was due to my foolishness. I am therefore trying to satisfy You by my prayers."

Śrī Nīlakaṇṭha confirms the existence of Goloka Vṛndāvana-dhāma by quoting the Ṛg-saṁhitā (Ṛg Veda 1.21.154.6):

tā vāṁ vāstūnyuśmasi gamadhyai yatra gāvo bhūri-śṛṅgā ayāsaḥ atrāha tad urugāyasya kṛṣṇaḥ paramaṁ padam avabhāti bhūri

"We wish to go to Your [Rādhā's and Kṛṣṇa's] beautiful houses, about which cows with large, excellent horns are wandering. Yet distinctly shining on this earth is that supreme abode of Yours that showers joy on all, O Urugāya [Kṛṣṇa, who is much praised]."

SYNONYMS

mauṣala-līlā-the pastimes of destroying the Yadu dynasty; āra-also; kṛṣṇa-antardhāna-the disappearance of Kṛṣṇa; keśa-avatāra-the incarnation of the hairs; āra-also; yata-all; viruddha vyākhyāna-statements against the Kṛṣṇa conscious conclusions; mahiṣī-haraṇa-kidnapping of the queens; ādi-and so on; saba-all; māyā-maya-made of the external energy; vyākhyā-explanations (countering the attack of the asuras); śikhāila-instructed; yaiche-which; su-siddhānta-proper conclusions; haya-are.

TRANSLATION

Illusory stories opposed to the conclusions of Kṛṣṇa consciousness concern the destruction of the Yadu dynasty, Kṛṣṇa's disappearance, the story that Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma arise from a black hair and a white hair of Kṣīrodakaśāyī Viṣṇu, and the story about the kidnapping of the queens. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu explained to Sanātana Gosvāmī the proper conclusions of these stories.

PURPORT

Due to envy, many asuras describe Kṛṣṇa to be like a black crow or an incarnation of a hair. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu told Sanātana Gosvāmī how to counteract all these asuric explanations of Kṛṣṇa. The word kāka means crow, and keśa means hair. The asuras describe Kṛṣṇa as an incarnation of a crow, an incarnation of a śūdra (a blackish tribe) and an incarnation of a hair, not knowing that the word keśa means ka-īśa and that ka means Lord Brahmā and īśa means Lord. Thus Kṛṣṇa is the Lord of Lord Brahmā.

Some of Lord Kṛṣṇa's pastimes are mentioned in the Mahābhārata as mauṣala-līlā. These include the stories of the destruction of the Yadu dynasty, Kṛṣṇa's disappearance, His being pierced by a hunter's arrow, the story of Kṛṣṇa's being an incarnation of a piece of hair (keśa-avatāra) as well as mahiṣī-haraṇa, the kidnapping of Kṛṣṇa's queens. Actually these are not factual but are related for the bewilderment of the asuras who want to prove that Kṛṣṇa is an ordinary human being. They are false in the sense that these pastimes are not eternal, nor are they transcendental or spiritual. There are many people who are by nature averse to the supremacy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Viṣṇu. Such people are called asuras. They have mistaken ideas about Kṛṣṇa. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā, the asuras are given a chance to forget Kṛṣṇa more and more, birth after birth. Thus they make their appearance in a family of asuras and continue this process, being kept in bewilderment about Kṛṣṇa. Asuras in the dress of sannyāsīs even explain Bhagavad-gītā and Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam in different ways according to their own imaginations. Thus they continue to remain asuras birth after birth.

As far as the keśa-avatāra (incarnation of hair) is concerned, it is mentioned in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.7.26). The Viṣṇu Purāṇa also states: ujjahārātmanaḥ keśau sita-kṛṣṇau mahā-bala.

Similarly, in the Mahābhārata:

sa cāpi keśau harir uccakarta ekaṁ śuklam aparam cāpi kṛṣṇam tau cāpi keśāvāv iśatāṁ yadūnāṁ kule striyau rohiṇīṁ devakīṁ ca tayor eko balabhadro babhūva yo 'sau śvetas tasya devasya keśaḥ kṛṣṇo dvitīyaḥ keśavaḥ saṁbabhūva keśaḥ yo 'sau varṇataḥ kṛṣṇa uktaḥ

Thus in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Viṣṇu Purāṇa and Mahābhārata there are references to Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma being incarnations of a black hair and a white hair. It is stated that Lord Viṣṇu snatched two hairs-one white and one black-from His head. These two hairs entered the wombs of Rohiṇī and Devakī, members of the Yadu dynasty. Balarāma was born from Rohiṇī, and Kṛṣṇa was born of Devakī. Thus Balarāma appeared from the first hair, and Kṛṣṇa appeared from the second hair. It was also foretold that all the asuras, who are enemies of the demigods, would be cut down by Lord Viṣṇu by His white and black plenary expansions and that the Supreme Personality of Godhead would appear and perform wonderful activities. In this connection, one should see Laghu-bhāgavatāmṛta, the chapter called Kṛṣṇāmṛta, verses 156-164. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī has refuted this argument about the hair incarnation, and his refutation is supported by Śrī Baladeva Vidyābhūṣaṇa's commentaries. This matter is further discussed in the Kṛṣṇa-sandarbha (29) and in the commentary known as Sarva-saṁvādinī, by Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Twenty-third Chapter, describing love of Godhead.

18.5.24 Chapter 24

The Sixty-One Explanations of the Ātmārāma Verse

The following summary of this chapter is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. According to Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī's request, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu explained the well-known Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam verse beginning ātmārāmāś ca munayo. He explained this verse in sixty-one different ways. He analyzed all the words and described each word with its different connotations. Adding the words ca and api, He described all the different meanings of the verse. He then concluded that all classes of transcendentalists (jñānīs, karmīs, yogīs) utilize this verse according to their own interpretation, but if they gave up this process and surrendered to Kṛṣṇa, as indicated by the verse itself, they would be able to comprehend the real meaning of the verse. In this regard, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu narrated a story about how the great sage Nārada converted a hunter into a great Vaiṣṇava, and how this was appreciated by Nārada's friend Parvata Muni. Sanātana Gosvāmī then offered a prayer to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu explained the glory of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. After this, the Lord gave Sanātana Gosvāmī a synopsis of Hari-bhakti-vilāsa, which Sanātana Gosvāmī later developed into the guiding principle of all Vaiṣṇavas.

TEXT 1

TRANSLATION

”The word urukrama refers to one whose krama [step] is great. The word krama means ’throwing the foot forward,’ that is, ’step.’

TEXT 20

śakti, kampa, paripāṭī, yukti, śaktye ākramaṇa caraṇa-cālane kāṅpāila tribhuvana

SYNONYMS

śakti-power; kampa-trembling; paripāṭī-method; yukti-argument; śaktye-with great force; ākramaṇa-attacking; caraṇa-cālane-by moving the foot; kāṅpāila-caused to tremble; tri-bhuvana-the three worlds.

TRANSLATION

”Krama also means power, trembling, a systematic method, argument, and a forcible attack by stepping forward. Thus Vāmana caused the three worlds to tremble.

PURPORT

Uru means very great, and krama means step. When Lord Vāmanadeva was offered three steps of land, He expanded His three steps by covering the entire universe. In this way the three worlds trembled, and therefore Śrī Vāmanadeva, the incarnation of Lord Viṣṇu, is referred to as Urukrama.

TEXT 21

viṣṇor nu vīrya-gaṇanāṁ katamo ’rhatīha yaḥ pārthivāny api kavir vimame rajāṁsi

SYNONYMS

viṣṇoḥ-of Lord Viṣṇu; nu-certainly; vīrya-gaṇanām-a counting of the different potencies; katamaḥ-who; arhati-is able to do; iha-in this world; yaḥ-who; pārthivāni-of the element earth; api-although; kaviḥ-a learned person; vimame-has counted; rajāṁsi-the atoms; caskambha-captured; yaḥ-who; sva-His own; raṁhasā-by potency; askhalatā-without hindrances; tri-pṛṣṭham-the topmost planet (Satyaloka); yasmāt-from some cause; tri-sāmya-where there is equilibrium of the three guṇas; sadanāt-from the place (from the root of the material world); urukampayānam-trembling greatly.

TRANSLATION

” ’Even if a learned man is able to count all the minute atoms in this material world, he still cannot count the potencies of Lord Viṣṇu. In the form of the Vāmana incarnation, Lord Viṣṇu, without hindrance, captured all the planets, beginning from the root of the material world up to Satyaloka. Indeed, He caused every planetary system to tremble by the force of His steps.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.7.40). In the Ṛg Veda mantra (1.2.154.1), it is said:

oṁ viṣṇor nu vīryāṇi kaṁ prāvocaṁ yaḥ pārthivāni vimame rajāṁsi yo ’skambhayad uttaraṁ sadhasthaṁ vicakramāṇas tredhorugāyaḥ

TEXT 22

vibhu-rūpe vyāpe, śaktye dhāraṇa-poṣaṇa mādhurya-śaktye goloka, aiśvarye paravyoma

SYNONYMS

vibhu-rūpe-in His all-pervasive feature; vyāpe-expands; śaktye-by His potency; dhāraṇa-poṣaṇa-maintaining and nourishing; mādhurya-śaktye-by His potency of conjugal love; goloka-the planetary system Goloka Vṛndāvana; aiśvarye-and by opulence; para-vyoma-the spiritual world.

TRANSLATION

”Through His all-pervasive feature, the Supreme Personality of Godhead expanded the entire creation. He is holding and maintaining this creation by His extraordinary potency. By His conjugal potency, He maintains the planetary system known as Goloka Vṛndāvana. Through His six opulences, He maintains many Vaikuṇṭha planets.

PURPORT

In His gigantic form, Lord Kṛṣṇa has covered the creation. He holds all the planetary systems and maintains them by His inconceivable potencies. Similarly, He is maintaining His personal abode, Goloka Vṛndāvana, through His conjugal love, and He is maintaining the spiritual world containing the Vaikuṇṭha planets by His opulences.

TEXT 23

māyā-śaktye brahmāṇḍādi-paripāṭī-sṛjana
’urukrama’-śabdera ei artha nirūpaṇa

SYNONYMS

māyā-śaktye-by His external potency; brahmāṇḍa-ādi-of material universes and so on; paripāṭī-an orderly arrangement; sṛjana-creating; urukrama-śabdera-of the word urukrama; ei-this; artha-of the meaning; nirūpaṇa-ascertainment.

TRANSLATION

”The word urukrama indicates the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who, by His external potency, has perfectly created innumerable universes.

TEXT 24

”kramaḥ śaktau paripāṭyāṁ kramaś cālana-kampayoḥ”

SYNONYMS

kramaḥ-the word krama; śaktau-in the meaning of potency; paripāṭyām-in the meaning of systematic arrangement; kramaḥ-the word krama; cālana-in moving; kampayoḥ-or in trembling.

TRANSLATION

” ’These are the different meanings of the word krama. It is used in the sense of potency, systematic arrangement, step, moving or trembling.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Viśva-prakāśa dictionary. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is all-pervasive. Not only does He carry the three worlds by His inconceivable energy, but He maintains them also. He is also maintaining His spiritual planet, Goloka Vṛndāvana, by His conjugal love, and He is maintaining the Vaikuṇṭhalokas by His opulences. He maintains these material universes through the external energy. Material universes are perfectly situated because they are created by the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

’kurvanti’-pada ei parasmaipada haya kṛṣṇa-sukha-nimitta bhajane tātparya kahaya

SYNONYMS

kurvanti-they do (for others); pada-the word; ei-this; parasmaipada-a verb form indicating things done for others; haya-is; kṛṣṇa-sukha-nimitta-to satisfy Kṛṣṇa; bhajane-in devotional service; tātparya-the purport; kahaya-is said.

TRANSLATION

”The word kurvanti, which means ’they do something for others,’ is a form of the verb ’things done for others.’ It is used in connection with devotional service, which must be executed for the satisfaction of Kṛṣṇa. That is the purport of the word kurvanti.

PURPORT

In Sanskrit the verb ”to do” has two forms, technically called parasmaipada and ātmanepada. When things are done for one’s personal satisfaction, the form is called ātmanepada. In that case, the word ”do” in English is kurvante in Sanskrit. When things are done for others, the verb form changes to kurvanti. Thus Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu informed Sanātana Gosvāmī that in the ātmārāma verse the verb kurvanti means that things should be done only for the satisfaction of Kṛṣṇa. This is supported by the grammarian Pāṇini. The verb is formed as ātmanepada when the work is to be done for one’s own benefit, and when it is done for others, it is called parasmaipada. Thus the verb is formed according to whether something is done for one’s self-satisfaction or for another’s satisfaction.

TEXT 26

”svaritañitaḥ kartrabhiprāye kriyā-phale”

SYNONYMS

svarita-ñitaḥ-of verbs having an indicatory ñ or a svarita accent; kartṛ-abhiprāye-is meant for the agent; kriyā-phale-when the fruit of the action.

TRANSLATION

" 'The terminations of the ātmanepada are employed when the fruit of the action accrues to the agent of verbs having an indicatory ñ or a svarita accent.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Pāṇini's sūtras (1.3.72).

TEXT 27

'hetu'-śabde kahe–bhukti-ādi vāñchāntare
bhukti, siddhi, mukti–mukhya ei tina prakāre

SYNONYMS

hetu-cause; śabde-by the word; kahe-it is said; bhukti-enjoying the result by oneself; ādi-and so on; vāñchā-antare-because of a different ambition; bhukti-enjoying the result of action; siddhi-the perfection of doing something; mukti-liberation; mukhya-chief; ei-these; tina prakāre-in three ways.

TRANSLATION

"The word hetu [cause] means that a thing is done for some motive. There can be three motives. One may act to enjoy the result personally, to achieve some material perfection, or to act in such a way that one may be liberated.

TEXT 28

eka bhukti kahe, bhoga–ananta-prakāra siddhi–aṣṭādaśa, mukti–pañca-vidhākāra

SYNONYMS

eka-first; bhukti-material enjoyment by doing something; kahe-is known; bhoga-enjoyment; ananta-prakāra-unlimited varieties; siddhi-the yogic perfections; aṣṭādaśa-eighteen in number; mukti-liberation; pañca-vidhā-ākāra-five varieties.

TRANSLATION

"First we take the word bhukti [material enjoyment], which is of unlimited variety. We may also take the word siddhi [perfection], which has eighteen varieties. Similarly, the word mukti has five varieties.

TEXT 29

ei yāṅhā nāhi, tāhā bhakti–'ahaitukī' yāhā haite vaśa haya śrī-kṛṣṇa kautukī ei-these; yāṅhā-where; nāhi-not existing; tāhā-that; bhakti-the platform of devotional service; ahaitukī-unmotivated; yāhā haite-by which; vaśa haya-comes under control; śrī-kṛṣṇa-Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa; kautukī-the most funny.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Causeless devotional service is unmotivated by sense enjoyment, perfection or liberation. When one is freed from all these contaminations, he can bring Lord Kṛṣṇa, who is very funny, under control.

TEXT 30

'bhakti'-śabdera artha haya daśa-vidhākāra
eka–'sādhana', 'prema-bhakti'–nava prakāra

SYNONYMS

bhakti-bhakti; śabdera-of this word; artha-meanings; haya-are; daśa-vidhā-ākāra-ten varieties; eka-one; sādhana-the execution of regulative devotional service; prema-bhakti-ecstatic love; nava prakāra-nine kinds.

TRANSLATION

"There are ten meanings to the word bhakti, devotional service. One is execution of devotional service according to the regulative principles, and the other, called prema-bhakti [ecstatic love] has nine varieties.

PURPORT

The nine varieties are rati, prema, sneha, māna, praṇaya, rāga, anurāga, bhāva and mahābhāva-attraction, love, affection, adverse feelings, intimacy, attachment, subattachment, ecstatic love and sublime ecstatic love. For the execution of devotional service according to regulative principles, there is only one meaning.

TEXT 31

'rati'-lakṣaṇā, 'prema'-lakṣaṇā, ityādi pracāra
bhāva-rūpā, mahābhāva-lakṣaṇa-rūpā āra

SYNONYMS

rati-of attraction; lakṣaṇā-the symptoms; prema-of love; lakṣaṇā-the symptoms; iti-ādi-and so on; pracāra-are known; bhāva-rūpā-in the form of ecstatic love; mahā-bhāva-of higher ecstatic love; lakṣaṇa-rūpā-there are many symptoms; āra-other.

TRANSLATION

"Next are explained the symptoms of love of Godhead, which can be divided into nine varieties, beginning with attraction up to ecstatic love and finally up to the topmost ecstatic love [mahābhāva].

TEXT 32

śānta-bhaktera rati bāḍe 'prema'-paryanta dāsya-bhaktera rati haya 'rāga'-daśā-anta

SYNONYMS

śānta-bhaktera-of devotees on the platform of neutrality; rati-attraction; bāḍe-increases; prema-paryanta-up to love of Godhead; dāsya-bhaktera-of devotees on the platform of servitude; rati-attraction; haya-increases; rāga-daśā-anta-up to the point of spontaneous attachment.

TRANSLATION

”The attraction to Kṛṣṇa of devotees on the platform of neutrality increases up to love of Godhead [prema], and the attraction of devotees on the platform of servitorship increases to spontaneous attachment [rāga].

TEXT 33

sakhā-gaṇera rati haya ’anurāga’ paryanta

SYNONYMS

sarva-ākarṣaka-all-attractive; sarva-āhlādaka-all-pleasing; mahā-rasa-ayana-the complete abode of transcendental mellow; āpanāra bale-by His own strength; kare-causes; sarva-vismāraṇa-forgetfulness of all other bliss.

TRANSLATION

”Lord Kṛṣṇa is so exalted that He is more attractive than anything else and more pleasing than anything else. He is the most sublime abode of bliss. By His own strength, He causes one to forget all other ecstasies.

TEXT 39

bhukti-mukti-siddhi-sukha chāḍaya yāra gandhe alaukika śakti-guṇe kṛṣṇa-kṛpāya bāndhe

SYNONYMS

bhukti-material happiness; mukti-liberation from material suffering; siddhi-the perfection of mystic yoga; sukha-the happiness derived from these things; chāḍaya-one gives up; yāra-of which; gandhe-simply by the slight fragrance; alaukika-uncommon, transcendental; śakti-guṇe-by the power and quality; kṛṣṇa-kṛpāya-by the mercy of Lord Kṛṣṇa; bāndhe-one becomes bound.

TRANSLATION

"Pure devotional service is so sublime that one can very easily forget the happiness derived from material happiness, material liberation and mystic or yogic perfection. Thus the devotee is bound by Kṛṣṇa's mercy and His uncommon power and qualifications.

TEXT 40

śāstra-yukti nāhi ihāṅ siddhānta-vicāra ei svabhāva-guṇe, yāte mādhuryera sāra

SYNONYMS

śāstra-yukti-logic on the basis of revealed scripture; nāhi-there is not; ihāṅ-here; siddhānta-vicāra-consideration of logical conclusions; ei-this; svabhāva-guṇe-a natural quality; yāte-in which; mādhuryera sāra-the essence of all transcendental bliss.

TRANSLATION

"When one is attracted to Kṛṣṇa on the transcendental platform, there is no longer any logical argument on the basis of revealed scripture, nor are there considerations of such conclusions. This is His transcendental quality that is the essence of all transcendental sweetness.

TEXT 41

'guṇa' śabdera artha–kṛṣṇera guṇa ananta sac-cid-rūpa-guṇa sarva pūrṇānanda

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Kṛṣṇa's transcendental qualities such as opulence, sweetness and mercy are perfect and full. As far as Kṛṣṇa's affectionate leaning toward His devotees is concerned, He is so magnanimous that He can give Himself to His devotees.

TEXT 43

alaukika rūpa, rasa, saurabhādi guṇa kāro mana kona guṇe kare ākarṣaṇa

SYNONYMS

alaukika rūpa-uncommon beauty; rasa-mellows; saurabha-ādi guṇa-qualities like transcendental fragrance; kāro mana-the mind of a devotee; kona guṇe-by some particular quality; kare-does; ākarṣaṇa-attracting.

TRANSLATION

"Kṛṣṇa has unlimited qualities. The devotees are attracted by His uncommon beauty, mellows and fragrance. Thus they are differently situated in the different transcendental mellows. Therefore Kṛṣṇa is called all-attractive.

TEXT 44

sanakādira mana harila saurabhādi guṇe

SYNONYMS

sanaka-ādira mana-the minds of saintly sages like Sanaka and Sanātana; harila-attracted; saurabha-ādi-such as the transcendental aroma of His lotus feet; guṇe-by the quality.

TRANSLATION

"The minds of the four boy sages [Sanaka, Sanātana, Sanandana and Sanat-kumāra] were attracted to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa by the aroma of the tulasī that had been offered to the Lord.

TEXT 45

TRANSLATION

" 'I offer my respectful obeisances unto Śrīla Śukadeva Gosvāmī, the son of Vyāsadeva. He is the destroyer of all sinful reactions and is full in self-realization and bliss. Because of this, he has no other desire. Still, he was attracted by the transcendental pastimes of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and out of compassion for the people, he described the transcendental historical literature called Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. This is compared to the light of the Absolute Truth.'

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (12.12.68).

TEXT 49

TRANSLATION

" 'O most beautiful Kṛṣṇa, I have heard about Your transcendental qualities from others, and therefore all my bodily miseries are relieved. If one sees Your transcendental beauty, his eyes have attained everything profitable in life. O infallible one, I have become shameless after hearing of Your qualities, and I have become attracted to You.'

PURPORT

This verse (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 10.52.37) was written by Rukmiṇīdevī in a letter to Kṛṣṇa inviting Him to kidnap her. Śukadeva Gosvāmī described this to Mahārāja Parīkṣit when the King asked him how Rukmiṇī had been kidnapped. Rukmiṇī had heard about Kṛṣṇa's qualities from different people, and after she heard about them, she decided to accept Kṛṣṇa as her husband. Everything had been arranged for her marriage to Śiśupāla; therefore she wrote a letter to Kṛṣṇa, which she sent through a brāhmaṇa, and invited Him to kidnap her.

SYNONYMS

yaiche taiche-somehow or other; yohi kohi-anywhere and everywhere; karaye smaraṇa-remembers; cāri-vidha-the four kinds; tāpa-miserable conditions of life; tāra-of the devotee; kare saṁharaṇa-He takes away.

TRANSLATION

"When the devotee somehow or other always remembers the Supreme Personality of Godhead anywhere and everywhere, Lord Hari takes away life's four miserable conditions.

PURPORT

The four miserable conditions are due to the four kinds of sinful activities, known as (1) pātaka, (2) urupātaka, (3) mahā-pātaka and (4) atipātaka-preliminary sin, very great sin, greater sin and topmost sin. However, Kṛṣṇa assures the devotee, ahaṁ tvāṁ sarva-pāpebhyo mokṣayiṣyāmi mā śucaḥ: "I will protect you from all sinful reactions. Do not fear." The word sarva-pāpebhyaḥ indicates four kinds of sinful activity. As soon as the devotee surrenders unto Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet, he is certainly relieved from all sinful activities and their results. The four basic sinful activities are summarized as illicit sex, intoxication, gambling and meat-eating.

TEXT 61

TRANSLATION

" 'Those who discuss the activities of Lord Kṛṣṇa are on the highest platform of devotional life, and they evince the symptoms of tears in the eyes and bodily jubilation. Such persons discharge devotional service to Kṛṣṇa without practicing the rules and regulations of the mystic yoga system. They possess all spiritual qualities, and they are elevated to the Vaikuṇṭha planets, which exist above us.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.15.25). In this verse Lord Brahmā is speaking to all the demigods, who feared the two asuras in Diti's womb. Lord Brahmā described the Kumāras' visit to Vaikuṇṭha, and this was again explained by Maitreya, the friend of Vyāsadeva, when he gave instructions to Vidura.

TRANSLATION

" 'One who is actually intelligent, although he may be a devotee free from material desires, a karmī desiring all kinds of material facilities, or a jñānī desiring liberation, should seriously engage in bhakti-yoga for the satisfaction of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.3.10).

TEXT 91

SYNONYMS

ajā-gala-stana-nyāya-like the nipples on the neck of a goat; anya-other; sādhana-execution of spiritual life; ataeva-therefore; hari-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; bhaje-one worships; buddhimān jana-the intelligent person.

TRANSLATION

”With the exception of devotional service, all the methods of self-realization are like nipples on the neck of a goat. An intelligent person adopts only devotional service, giving up all other processes of self-realization.

PURPORT

Without devotional service, other methods for self-realization and spiritual life are useless. Other methods cannot produce good results at any time, and therefore they are compared to the nipples on the neck of a goat. These nipples cannot produce milk, although it may appear that they can. An unintelligent person cannot understand that only devotional service can elevate one to the transcendental position.

TEXT 94

SYNONYMS

catuḥ-vidhāḥ-four kinds; bhajante-worship; mām-Me; janāḥ-persons; sukṛtinaḥ-who have obeyed the principles of human life or the regulative principles of varṇa and āśrama; arjuna-O Arjuna; ārtaḥ-the distressed; jijñāsuḥ-the inquisitive; artha-arthī-one in need of money; jñānī-one pursuing knowledge; ca-also; bharata-ṛṣabha-O best of the Bharata dynasty.

TRANSLATION

” ’O best among the Bharatas [Arjuna], four kinds of pious men render devotional service unto Me-the distressed, the desirer of wealth, the inquisitive, and he who is searching for knowledge of the Absolute.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Bhagavad-gītā (7.16). The word sukṛtinaḥ is very important in this verse. Su means ”auspicious,” and kṛtī means ”meritorious” or ”regulated.” Unless one follows the regulative principles of religious life, human life is no different from animal life. Religious life means following the principles of varṇa and āśrama. In the Viṣṇu Purāṇa it is said:

varṇāśramācāra-vatā puruṣeṇa paraḥ pumān viṣṇur ārādhyate panthā nānyat tat-toṣa-kāraṇam

According to religious life, society is divided into four social divisions-brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya and śūdra-and four spiritual divisions-brahmacarya, gṛhastha, vānaprastha and sannyāsa. One needs to be trained to become a brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya or śūdra, just as one is trained to become an engineer, doctor or lawyer. Those who are properly trained can be considered human beings; if one is not trained socially and spiritually-that is, if one is uneducated and unregulated-his life is on the animal platform. Among animals there is no question of spiritual advancement. Spiritual life can be attained by proper training-either by following the principles of varṇa and āśrama or by being directly trained in the bhakti school by the methods of śravaṇaṁ kīrtanaṁ viṣṇoḥ smaraṇaṁ pāda-sevanamarcanaṁ vandanaṁ dāsyaṁ sakhyam ātma-nivedanam. Without being trained, one cannot be sukṛtī, auspicious. In this verse Kṛṣṇa says that people approach Him when in distress, in need of money or when actually inquisitive to understand the Supreme Being or the original source of everything. Some people approach Him in the pursuit of knowledge of the Absolute Truth, and others approach Him when they are distressed, like the devotee Gajendra. Others are inquisitive, like the great sages headed by Sanaka, and others need money, like Dhruva Mahārāja. Śukadeva Gosvāmī approached the Lord when he pursued knowledge. All these great personalities thus took to the devotional service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 95

ārta, arthārthī,–dui sakāma-bhitare gaṇi jijñāsu, jñānī,–dui mokṣa-kāma māni

SYNONYMS

ārta-distressed; artha-arthī-desirous of money; dui-two persons; sakāma-bhitare-in the division of material activities; gaṇi-we consider; jijñāsu-inquisitive; jñānī-pursuing knowledge; dui-two; mokṣa-kāma-transcendentalists pursuing spiritual knowledge for liberation; māni-I consider.

TRANSLATION

"Materialistic devotees take to devotional service and worship Kṛṣṇa when they are distressed or in need of money. Those who are actually inquisitive to understand the supreme source of everything and those who are in search of knowledge are called transcendentalists, for they desire liberation from all material contamination.

TEXT 96

ei cāri sukṛti haya mahā-bhāgyavān

SYNONYMS

ei cāri-these four persons; sukṛti-pious men; haya-are; mahā-bhāgyavān-highly fortunate; tat-tat-those respective; kāma-ādi-aspirations; chāḍi'-giving up; haya-become; śuddha-bhaktimān-pure devotees.

TRANSLATION

"Because they have a pious background, all four types of people are to be considered greatly fortunate. Such people gradually give up material desires and become pure devotees.

TEXT 97

sādhu-saṅga-kṛpā kimvā kṛṣṇera kṛpāya kāmādi 'duḥsaṅga' chāḍi' śuddha-bhakti pāya

SYNONYMS

sādhu-saṅga-kṛpā-by the mercy of association with devotees; kimvā-or; kṛṣṇera kṛpāya-by the mercy of Kṛṣṇa; kāma-ādi-material desires and so on; duḥsaṅga-unwanted association; chāḍi'-giving up; śuddha-bhakti pāya-one obtains the platform of pure devotional life.

TRANSLATION

"One is elevated to the platform of devotional life by the mercy of a Vaiṣṇava, the bona fide spiritual master, and by the special mercy of Kṛṣṇa. On that platform, one gives up all material desires and the association of unwanted people. Thus one is elevated to the platform of pure devotional service.

TEXT 98

SYNONYMS

sat-saṅgāt-by the association of pure devotees; mukta-freed; duḥsaṅgaḥ-the association of materialistic persons; hātum-to give up; na-not; utsahate-is able; budhaḥ-one who is actually learned; kīrtyamānam-being glorified; yaśaḥ-the glories; yasya-of whom (the Supreme Personality of Godhead); sakṛt-once; ākarṇya-hearing; rocanam-very pleasing.

TRANSLATION

" 'The intelligent, who have understood the Supreme Lord in the association of pure devotees and have become free from bad materialistic association, can never avoid hearing the glories of the Lord, even though they have heard them only once.'

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.10.11). All the members of the Kuru dynasty offered respects when Kṛṣṇa was leaving Hastināpura after the Battle of Kurukṣetra. Kṛṣṇa was going to His own kingdom, and all the members of the Kuru dynasty were overwhelmed by His departure. This verse was spoken in that connection by Śukadeva Gosvāmī. A pure devotee becomes attached to Kṛṣṇa by hearing the Lord's glories. The Lord's glories and the Lord Himself are identical. One has to be qualified to understand this Absolute Truth; therefore one should be given a chance to associate with a pure devotee. Our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is meant for this purpose. We want to create pure devotees so that other people will benefit by their association. In this way the number of pure devotees increases. Professional preachers cannot create pure devotees. There are many professional preachers of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam who read this work to earn their livelihood. However, they cannot convert materialistic people to devotional service. Only a pure devotee can convert others to pure devotional service. It is therefore important for all the preachers in our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement to first become pure devotees and follow the regulative principles, refraining from illicit sex, meat-eating, gambling and intoxication. They should regularly chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra on their beads, follow the devotional process, rise early in the morning, attend maṅgala-ārati and recite Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and Bhagavad-gītā regularly. In this way, one can become purified and free from all material contamination.

sarvopādhi-vinirmuktaṁ
tat-paratvena nirmalam
hṛṣīkeṇa hṛṣīkeśa-
sevanaṁ bhaktir ucyate
(Nārada-pañcarātra)

To make a show of devotional service will not help one. One must be a pure devotee following the devotional process; then one can convert others to devotional service. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu practiced devotional service and preached (āpani ācari' bhakti karila pracāra). If a preacher behaves properly in devotional service, he will be able to convert others. Otherwise, his preaching will have no effect.

TEXT 99

'duḥsaṅga' kahiye–'kaitava', 'ātma-vañcanā' kṛṣṇa, kṛṣṇa-bhakti vinu anya kāmanā

SYNONYMS

duḥsaṅga-bad, unwanted association; kahiye-I say; kaitava-cheating; ātma-vañcanā-cheating oneself; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; kṛṣṇa-bhakti-devotional service to Kṛṣṇa; vinu-without; anya-other; kāmanā-desires.

TRANSLATION

"Cheating oneself and cheating others is called kaitava. Associating with cheaters is called duḥsaṅga, bad association. Those who desire things other than Kṛṣṇa's service are also called duḥsaṅga, bad association.

SYNONYMS

dharmaḥ-religiosity; projjhita-completely rejected; kaitavaḥ-in which fruitive intention; atra-herein; paramaḥ-the highest; nirmatsarāṇām-of the fully pure in heart; satām-devotees; vedyam-to be understood; vāstavam-factual; atra-herein; vastu-substance; śiva-dam-giving well-being; tāpa-traya-of threefold miseries; unmūlanam-causing uprooting; śrīmat-beautiful; bhāgavate-in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa; mahā-muni-by the great sage (Vyāsadeva); kṛte-compiled; kim-what; vā-indeed; paraiḥ-with others; īśvaraḥ-the Supreme Lord; sadyaḥ-at once; hṛdi-within the heart; avarudhyate-becomes confined; atra-herein; kṛtibhiḥ-by pious men; śuśrūṣubhiḥ-desiring to hear; tat-kṣaṇāt-without delay.

TRANSLATION

" 'The great scripture Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, compiled by Mahāmuni Vyāsadeva from four original verses, describes the most elevated and kindhearted devotees and completely rejects the cheating ways of materially motivated religiosity. It propounds the highest principle of eternal religion, which can factually mitigate the threefold miseries of a living being and award the highest benediction of full prosperity and knowledge. Those willing to hear the message of this scripture in a submissive attitude of service can at once capture the Supreme Lord in their hearts. Therefore there is no need for any scripture other than Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.1.2). For an explanation see also Ādi-līlā (1.91).

TEXT 101

'pra'-śabde–mokṣa-vāñchā kaitava-pradhāna

SYNONYMS

pra-śabde-by the affix pra; mokṣa-vāñchā-the desire for being liberated; kaitava-pradhāna-first-class cheating; ei śloke-in this verse; śrīdhara-svāmī-the great commentator Śrīdhara Svāmī; kariyāchena-has made; vyākhyāna-explanation.

TRANSLATION

"The prefix pra in the word projjhita specifically refers to those desiring liberation or oneness with the Supreme. Such a desire should be understood to result from a cheating propensity. The great commentator Śrīdhara Svāmī has explained this verse in that way.

TEXT 102

TRANSLATION

" 'Whenever Kṛṣṇa is requested to fulfill one's desire, He undoubtedly does so, but He does not award anything which, after being enjoyed, will cause someone to petition Him again and again to fulfill further desires. When one has other desires but engages in the Lord's service, Kṛṣṇa forcibly gives one shelter at His lotus feet, where one will forget all other desires.'

sādhu-saṅga-the association of devotees; kṛṣṇa-kṛpā-the mercy of Lord Kṛṣṇa; bhaktira-of devotional service; sva-bhāva-nature; e tine-these three; saba chāḍāya-cause one to give up everything else; kare-do; kṛṣṇe-unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; bhāva-the loving affairs.

TRANSLATION

"Association with a devotee, the mercy of Kṛṣṇa, and the nature of devotional service help one to give up all undesirable association and gradually attain elevation to the platform of love of Godhead.

PURPORT

This verse refers to the association of pure devotees, the mercy of Kṛṣṇa and the rendering of devotional service. All these help one give up the association of nondevotees and the material opulence awarded by the external energy, māyā. A pure devotee is never attracted by material opulence, for he understands that wasting time to acquire material opulence is a misuse of the gift of human life. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam it is said: śrama eva hi kevalam. In the eyes of a devotee, politicians, social workers, philanthropists, philosophers and humanitarians are simply wasting their time, for human society is not freed from the cycle of birth and death by their activity and propaganda. These so-called philanthropists, politicians and philosophers have no knowledge because they do not know that there is life after death. Understanding that there is life after death is the beginning of spiritual knowledge. A person can understand himself and what he is simply by understanding the first lessons of Bhagavad-gītā.

dehino 'smin yathā dehe
kaumāraṁ yauvanaṁ jarā
tathā dehāntara-prāptir
dhīras tatra na muhyati

"As the embodied soul continuously passes, in this body, from boyhood to youth to old age, the soul similarly passes into another body at death. The self-realized soul is not bewildered by such a change." (Bg. 2.13)

Not knowing the real science of life one engages in the temporary activities of this life and thus becomes further entangled in the cycle of birth and death. Thus one always desires material opulence, which can be attained by karma, jñāna and yoga. However, when one is actually elevated to the devotional platform, he gives up all these desires. This is called anyābhilāṣitā-śūnya. Then one becomes a pure devotee.

SYNONYMS

bhakta-deha-the body of a devotee; pāile-when one gets; haya-there is; guṇera smaraṇa-remembrance of the transcendental qualities; guṇa-ākṛṣṭa hañā-being attracted by the transcendental qualities; kare-performs; nirmala bhajana-pure devotional service.

TRANSLATION

"When one gets a devotee's spiritual body, he can remember the transcendental qualities of Kṛṣṇa. Simply by being attracted to Kṛṣṇa's transcendental qualities, one becomes a pure devotee engaged in His service.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura has given the following summary of verses 107-111. Transcendentalists on the path of philosophical speculation can be divided into two categories-the pure worshiper of impersonal Brahman and he who wishes to merge into the existence of impersonal Brahman. When one is fully absorbed in the thought that one is not different from the Supreme Absolute Truth, one is said to be a worshiper of the impersonal Brahman. The impersonal worshipers of Brahman can again be divided into three categories-(1) sādhaka, those who are nearing perfect execution of the process of Brahman realization; (2) those who are fully absorbed in meditation on Brahman; and (3) those who are on the brahma-bhūta platform and have no relationship with material existence. Even though the worshiper of impersonal Brahman can be highly advanced, he cannot attain liberation without discharging devotional service. Anyone who has realized himself as spirit soul can engage in devotional service. This is the verdict of Bhagavad-gītā:

brahma-bhūtaḥ prasannātmā
na śocati na kāṅkṣati
samaḥ sarveṣu bhūteṣu
mad-bhaktiṁ labhate parām

"One who is thus transcendentally situated at once realizes the Supreme Brahman and is fully joyful. He never laments nor desires to have anything; he is equally disposed to every living entity. In that state he attains pure devotional service unto Me." (Bg. 18.54)

To attain the platform of pure devotional service, one has to become spiritually pure and attain the brahma-bhūta platform, which is beyond material anxiety and material discrimination. When one approaches pure devotional service after realizing Brahman, one becomes attracted by pure devotional service. At such a time, by rendering devotional service, one gets a spiritual body with purified senses.

sarvopādhi-vinirmuktaṁ
tatparatvena nirmalam
hṛṣīkeṇa hṛṣīkeśa-
sevanaṁ bhaktir ucyate

When one's senses are pure, one can render loving devotional service to Kṛṣṇa. A pure devotee can only remember Kṛṣṇa's transcendental qualities. Remembering them, he fully engages in the loving service of the Lord.

TEXT 112

"muktā api līlayā vigrahaṁ
kṛtvā bhagavantaṁ bhajante"

SYNONYMS

muktāḥ-liberated; api-although; līlayā-by pastimes; vigraham-the form of the Lord; kṛtvā-having installed; bhagavantam-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; bhajante-worship.

TRANSLATION

" 'Even a liberated soul merged in the impersonal Brahman effulgence is attracted to the pastimes of Kṛṣṇa. He thus installs a Deity and renders the Lord service.'

PURPORT

Highly elevated Māyāvādī sannyāsīs sometimes worship the Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa Deity and discuss the pastimes of the Lord, but their purpose is not elevation to Goloka Vṛndāvana. They want to merge into the Lord's effulgence. This statement is quoted from Śaṅkarācārya's commentary on the Upaniṣad known as Nṛsiṁha-tāpanī.

TEXT 113

SYNONYMS

janma haite-from birth; śuka-Śukadeva Gosvāmī; sanaka-ādi-the four Kumāras; brahma-maya-absorbed in the thought of impersonal Brahman; kṛṣṇa-guṇa-ākṛṣṭa-attracted by the transcendental pastimes of the Lord; hañā-becoming; kṛṣṇere bhajaya-worshiped Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"Although Śukadeva Gosvāmī and the four Kumāras were always absorbed in the thought of impersonal Brahman and were thus Brahmavādīs, they were nonetheless attracted by the transcendental pastimes and qualities of Kṛṣṇa. Therefore they later became devotees of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 114

TRANSLATION

" 'The nine Yogendras entered Lord Brahmā's association and heard from him the real meaning of the topmost Vedic literatures-the Upaniṣads. Although they were already conversant in Vedic knowledge, they became very jubilant in Kṛṣṇa consciousness just by listening to Brahmā. Thus they wanted to enter Dvārakā, the abode of Lord Kṛṣṇa. In this way they finally achieved the place known as Raṅga-kṣetra.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Mahā Upaniṣad.

SYNONYMS

mumukṣavaḥ-those who are perfectly learned, who desire the highest perfection, and who, unlike demons and nondevotees, are never envious of anyone; ghora-rūpān-demigods with fearful bodily features; hitvā-giving up; bhūta-patīn-the forefathers (prajāpatis); atha-therefore; nārāyaṇa-kalāḥ-the plenary expansions of Lord Nārāyaṇa; śāntāḥ-very peaceful; bhajanti-they worship; hi-certainly; anasūyavaḥ-nonenvious.

TRANSLATION

” ’Those who want to be relieved from the material clutches give up the worship of the various demigods, who have fearful bodily features. Such peaceful devotees, who are not envious of the demigods, worship the different forms of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Nārāyaṇa.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.26). Those who actually want the highest perfection worship Lord Viṣṇu in His different incarnations. Those who are attracted to the materialistic way of life and who are always agitated and full of anxiety worship demigods who appear fierce, demigods like goddess Kālī and Kāla-bhairava (Rudra). The devotees of Kṛṣṇa, however, do not envy the demigods or their worshipers but peacefully render devotional service to the incarnations of Nārāyaṇa instead.

TEXT 124

sei sabera sādhu-saṅge guṇa sphurāya kṛṣṇa-bhajana karāya, ’mumukṣā’ chāḍāya

SYNONYMS

sei sabera-of all those worshipers of different demigods; sādhu-saṅge-the contact of real devotees; guṇa sphurāya-awakens the appreciation of transcendental qualities; kṛṣṇa-bhajana karāya-engages in the devotional service of Lord Kṛṣṇa; mumukṣā chāḍāya-and causes to give up the desire to be liberated or merge into the impersonal feature of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

”If those who are attached to demigod worship fortunately associate with the devotees, their dormant devotional service and appreciation of the Lord’s qualities gradually awaken. In this way they also engage in Kṛṣṇa’s devotional service and give up the desire for liberation and the desire to merge into the existence of impersonal Brahman.

PURPORT

The four Kumāras (Catuḥ-sana), Śukadeva Gosvāmī and the nine Yogendras were absorbed in Brahman realization, and how they became devotees is described herein. There are three kinds of impersonalists-the mumukṣu (those desiring liberation), the jīvan-muktas (those liberated in this life) and the prāpta-svarūpas (those merged in Brahman realization). All three types of jñānīs are called mokṣākāṅkṣīs, those desiring liberation. By associating with devotees, such people give up the mumukṣu principle and render devotional service. The real cause for this change is the association of devotees. This Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is meant to attract all types of men, even those who desire things other than the Lord’s devotional service. Through the association of devotees, they gradually begin to render devotional service.

bhakti-bale-by the strength of devotional service; prāpta-svarūpa-attaining his original status; divya-deha-a transcendental body; pāya-one gets; kṛṣṇa-guṇa-ākṛṣṭa-attracted by the transcendental qualities of Kṛṣṇa; hañā-being; bhaje-takes to devotional service; kṛṣṇa-pā'ya-at Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

"One who has attained his constitutional position by the strength of devotional service attains a transcendental body even in this lifetime. Being attracted by Lord Kṛṣṇa's transcendental qualities, one fully engages in service at His lotus feet.

TEXT 135

nirodho 'syānu śayanam ātmanaḥ saha śaktibhiḥ muktir hitvānyathā-rūpaṁ svarūpeṇa vyavasthitiḥ

SYNONYMS

nirodhaḥ-winding up; asya-of this; anu-after; śayanam-lying down; ātmanaḥ-of the Supreme Lord; saha-with; śaktibhiḥ-the energies (marginal and external); muktiḥ-liberation; hitvā-giving up; anyathā-other; rūpam-form; svarūpeṇa-with one's own eternal form; vyavasthitiḥ-staying.

TRANSLATION

" 'The living entities and other potencies merge in the Mahā-Viṣṇu as the Lord lies down and winds up [destroys] the cosmic manifestation. Liberation means being situated in one's eternal original form, which he attains after giving up the changeable gross and subtle bodies.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.10.6).

TEXT 136

kṛṣṇa-bahirmukha-doṣe māyā haite bhaya kṛṣṇonmukha bhakti haite māyā-mukta haya kṛṣṇa-bahiḥ-mukha–of going against Kṛṣṇa consciousness; doṣe–by the fault; māyā haite–from the illusory energy; bhaya–fear; kṛṣṇa-unmukha–in favor of Kṛṣṇa consciousness; bhakti-devotional service; haite-from; māyā-mukta-liberated from māyā; haya-one becomes.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"By opposing Kṛṣṇa consciousness, one again becomes conditioned and fearful due to the influence of māyā. By executing devotional service faithfully, one is liberated from māyā.

TEXT 137

bhayaṁ dvitīyābhiniveśataḥ syād
īśād apetasya viparyayo 'smṛtiḥ

tan-māyayāto budha ābhajet taṁ bhaktyaikayeśaṁ guru-devatātmā

SYNONYMS

bhayam-fear; dvitīya-abhiniveśataḥ-from the misconception of being a product of material energy; syāt-arises; īśāt-from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa; apetasya-of one who has withdrawn (the conditioned soul); viparyayaḥ-reversal of position; asmṛtiḥ-no conception of his relationship with the Supreme Lord; tat-māyayā-because of the illusory energy of the Supreme Lord; ataḥ-therefore; budhaḥ-one who is wise; ābhajet-must worship; tam-Him; bhaktyā-by devotional service; ekayā-undiverted to karma and jñāna; īśam-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; guru-as the spiritual master; devatā-worshipable Lord; ātmā-Supersoul.

TRANSLATION

” ’When the living entity is attracted by the material energy that is separate from Kṛṣṇa, he is overpowered by fear. Because he is separated from the Supreme Personality of Godhead by the material energy, his conception of life is reversed. In other words, instead of being the eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa, he becomes Kṛṣṇa’s competitor. This is called viparyayaḥ asmṛtiḥ. To nullify this mistake, one who is actually learned and advanced worships the Supreme Personality of Godhead as his spiritual master, worshipful Deity and source of life. Be thus worships the Lord by the process of unalloyed devotional service.’

PURPORT

This verse is quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.37).

TEXT 138

daivī hy eṣā guṇa-mayī

daivī-belonging to the Supreme Lord; hi-certainly; eṣā-this; guṇa-mayī-made of the three modes; mama-My; māyā-external energy; duratyayā-very difficult to surpass; mām-unto Me; eva-certainly; ye-those who; prapadyante-surrender fully; māyām-the illusory energy; etām-this; taranti-cross over; te-they.

TRANSLATION

” ’This divine energy of Mine, consisting of the three modes of material nature, is difficult to overcome. But those who have surrendered unto Me can easily cross beyond it.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Bhagavad-gītā (7.14).

TEXT 139

bhakti vinu mukti nāhi, bhaktye mukti haya

SYNONYMS

bhakti-devotional service; vinu-without; mukti-liberation; nāhi-there is not; bhaktye-actually by devotional service; mukti haya-liberation is attained.

TRANSLATION

”One does not attain liberation without rendering devotional service. Liberation is only attained by devotional service.

TEXT 140

SYNONYMS

śreyaḥ-sṛtim-the auspicious path of liberation; bhaktim-devotional service; udasya-giving up; te-of You; vibho-O my Lord; kliśyanti-accept increased difficulties; ye-all those persons who; kevala-only; bodha-labdhaye-for obtaining knowledge; teṣām-for them; asau-that; kleśalaḥ-trouble; eva-only; śiṣyate-remains; na-not; anyat-anything else; yathā-as much as; sthūla-bulky; tuṣa-husks of rice; avaghātinām-of those beating.

TRANSLATION

” ’My dear Lord, devotional service unto You is the only auspicious path. If one gives it up simply for speculative knowledge or the understanding that these living beings are spirit souls and the material world is false, he undergoes a great deal of trouble. Be only gains troublesome and inauspicious activities. His actions are like beating a husk that is already devoid of rice. One’s labor becomes fruitless.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.14.4).

TEXT 141

SYNONYMS

ye-all those who; anye-others (nondevotees); aravinda-akṣa-O lotus-eyed one; vimukta-māninaḥ-who consider themselves liberated; tvayi-unto You; asta-bhāvāt-without devotion; aviśuddha-buddhayaḥ-whose intelligence is not purified; āruhya-having ascended; kṛcchreṇa-by severe austerities and penances; param padam-to the supreme position; tataḥ-from there; patanti-fall; adhaḥ-down; anādṛta-without respecting; yuṣmat-Your; aṅghrayaḥ-lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

” ’O lotus-eyed one, those who think they are liberated in this life but are without devotional service to You are of impure intelligence. Although they accept severe austerities and penances and rise to the spiritual position, to impersonal Brahman realization, they fall down again because they neglect to worship Your lotus feet.’

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.32).

TEXT 142

ya eṣāṁ puruṣaṁ sākṣād

TRANSLATION

” ’If one simply maintains an official position in the four varṇas and āśramas but does not worship the Supreme Lord Viṣṇu, he falls down from his puffed up position into a hellish condition.’

PURPORT

This is also a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.5.3).

TEXT 143

bhaktye mukti pāileha avaśya kṛṣṇere bhajaya

SYNONYMS

bhaktye-by devotional service; mukti-liberation; pāileha-if one gets; avaśya-certainly; kṛṣṇere-unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; bhajaya-renders service.

TRANSLATION

”When one is actually liberated by executing devotional service, he always engages in the transcendental loving service of the Lord.

TEXT 144

”muktā api līlayā vigrahaṁ
kṛtvā bhagavantaṁ bhajante”

SYNONYMS

muktāḥ-liberated; api-although; līlayā-by the pastimes; vigraham-the form of the Lord; kṛtvā-having installed; bhagavantam-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; bhajante-worship.

TRANSLATION

” ’Even a liberated soul merged in the impersonal Brahman effulgence is attracted to the pastimes of Kṛṣṇa. Be thus installs a Deity and renders the Lord service.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śaṅkarācārya’s commentary on the Nṛsiṁha-tāpanī Upaniṣad.

TEXT 145

ei chaya ātmārāma kṛṣṇere bhajaya pṛthak pṛthak ca-kāre ihā ’api’ra artha kaya

SYNONYMS

ei chaya-all these six; ātmārāma-transcendentalists; kṛṣṇere bhajaya-render service to Kṛṣṇa; pṛthak pṛthak-separately; ca-kāre-in the use of the word ca; ihā-here; ’api’ra-of the word api; artha-meaning; kaya-says.

TRANSLATION

”These six kinds of ātmārāmas engage in the loving service of Kṛṣṇa. The varieties of service are indicated by adding ca, and they also bear the meaning of api, ’indeed.’

PURPORT

There are six kinds of ātmārāmas: the neophyte (sādhaka) student who is absorbed in Brahman realization (brahmamaya), one who has already attained the Brahman position (prāpta-brahma-laya), one who desires to be liberated (mumukṣu), one who is liberated even in this life (jīvan-mukta), and one who is self-realized (prāpta-svarūpa).

TEXT 146

”ātmārāmāś ca api” kare kṛṣṇe ahaitukī bhakti
”munayaḥ santaḥ” iti kṛṣṇa-manane āsakti

SYNONYMS

ātmārāmāḥ ca api-self-realized persons also; kare-do; kṛṣṇe-unto Kṛṣṇa; ahaitukī bhakti-unmotivated devotional service; munayaḥ santaḥ-great saintly persons and transcendentalists; iti-thus; kṛṣṇa-manane-in meditation on Kṛṣṇa; āsakti-attraction.

TRANSLATION

”The six kinds of ātmārāmas render devotional service to Kṛṣṇa without ulterior motives. The words munayaḥ and santaḥ indicate those who are very attached to meditating upon Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 147

”nirgranthāḥ”–avidyā-hīna, keha–vidhi-hīna yāhāṅ yei yukta, sei arthera adhīna nirgranthāḥ-nirgranthāḥ; avidyā-hīna-without ignorance; keha-some of them; vidhi-hīna-without following any regulative principles; yāhāṅ-wherever; yei-which; yukta-appropriate; sei arthera adhīna-comes under that different import.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"The word nirgranthāḥ means 'without ignorance' and 'devoid of rules and regulations.' Whichever meaning fits may be applied.

TEXT 148

ca-śabde kari yadi'itaretara' artha āra eka artha kahe parama samartha

SYNONYMS

ca-śabde-by the word ca; kari-I do; yadi-if; itaretara artha-different and separate meanings; āra-another; eka-one; artha-meaning; kahe-is said; parama samartha-highly suitable.

TRANSLATION

"By using the word ca in different places, there are different meanings. Over and above them, there is another meaning that is very important.

TEXT 149

"ātmārāmāś ca ātmārāmāś ca" kari' bāra chaya
pañca ātmārāma chaya ca-kāre lupta haya

SYNONYMS

ātmārāmāḥ ca ātmārāmāḥ ca-repeating the words ātmārāmāḥ and ca; kari'-doing; bāra chaya-six times; pañca ātmārāma-five kinds of ātmārāmas; chaya-six; ca-kāre-by the word ca; lupta haya-become unpronounced.

TRANSLATION

"Although the words ātmārāmāś ca would be repeated six times, simply by adding the word ca, five ātmārāmas are deleted.

TEXT 150

eka 'ātmārāma'-śabda avaśeṣa rahe eka 'ātmārāma'-śabde chaya-jana kahe

SYNONYMS

eka-one; ātmārāma-ātmārāma; śabda-vibration; avaśeṣa rahe-remains at last; eka ātmārāma-one ātmārāma; śabde-by vibrating; chaya-jana-six persons; kahe-are indicated.

TRANSLATION

"Therefore there is no need to repeat the word ātmārāma. One is sufficient, and that one word indicates six persons.

TEXT 151

"sarūpāṇām eka-śeṣa eka-vibhaktau" uktārthānām aprayogaḥ
rāmaś ca rāmaś ca rāmaś ca rāmā itivat

SYNONYMS

sa-rūpāṇām-of words of the same form; eka-śeṣaḥ-only the last; eka-vibhaktau-in the same case; ukta-arthānām-of the previously spoken meanings; aprayogaḥ-nonapplication; rāmaḥ ca-and Rāma; rāmaḥ ca-and Rāma; rāmaḥ ca-and Rāma; rāmāḥ itivat-in this way, by one rāma, many rāmas are indicated.

TRANSLATION

" 'Of words having the same form and case termination, the last one is the only one retained. For example, the word rāmaḥ is used to stand for rāmaś ca, rāmaś ca, rāmaś ca, etc.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Pāṇini's sūtras (1.2.64).

TEXT 152

tabe ye ca-kāra, sei 'samuccaya' kaya
"ātmārāmāś ca munayaś ca" kṛṣṇere bhajaya

TRANSLATION

”The yogī who worships the Supersoul within himself is also called ātmārāma. There are two types of ātmārāma-yogīs.

TEXT 155

sagarbha, nigarbha,–ei haya dui bheda eka eka tina bhede chaya vibheda

SYNONYMS

sagarbha-sagarbha; nigarbha-nigarbha; ei-thus; haya-there are; dui-two; bheda-different varieties; eka eka-each one; tina bhede-in three varieties; chaya vibheda-therefore there are six varieties.

TRANSLATION

”The two ātmārāma-yogīs are called sagarbha and nigarbha. Each of these is divided into three; therefore there are six types of worshipers of the Supersoul.

PURPORT

The word sagarbha-yogī refers to a yogī who worships the Supersoul in the Viṣṇu form. The nigarbha-yogī worships the Supersoul without form. The sagarbha and nigarbha yogīs are further categorized: (1) sagarbha-yogārurukṣu, (2) nigarbha-yogārurukṣu, (3) sagarbha-yogārūḍha, (4) nigarbha-yogārūḍha, (5) sagarbha-prāpta-siddhi and (6) nigarbha-prāpta-siddhi.

SYNONYMS

evam-thus; harau-unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead; bhagavati-the Lord; pratilabdha-bhāvaḥ-one who has awakened a sense of ecstatic love; bhaktyā-by devotional service; dravat-melting; hṛdayaḥ-the heart; utpulakaḥ-very pleased; pramodāt-because of happiness; autkaṇṭhya-with eagerness; bāṣpa-kalayā-with tears in the eyes; muhuḥ-always; ardyamānaḥ-merged in spiritual bliss; tat ca api-that also; citta-baḍiśam-with the heart like a fishing hook; śanakaiḥ-gradually; viyuṅkte-separates.

TRANSLATION

” ’When one is in ecstatic love with the Supreme Personality of Godhead, one’s heart is melted by bhakti-yoga, and one feels transcendental bliss. There are bodily symptoms manifest, and, due to eagerness, there are tears in the eyes. Thus one is subjected to spiritual bliss. When the heart is overly afflicted, the meditative mind, like a fishing hook, is gradually separated from the object of meditation.’

PURPORT

This is also a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.28.34).

TEXT 158

’yogārurukṣu’, ’yogārūḍha’ ’prāpta-siddhi’ āra

SYNONYMS

āruruksoḥ-of a person desiring to rise to the platform of yogic perfection; muneḥ-of a saintly person; yogam-spiritual knowledge; karma-work; kāraṇam-the cause; ucyate-is said; yoga-ārūḍhasya-of one who has attained such perfect knowledge; tasya-for him; eva-certainly; śamaḥ-controlling the mind without being disturbed; kāraṇam-cause; ucyate-is said.

TRANSLATION

" 'Those who wish to rise to the platform of yogic perfection practice the yoga system and strictly follow its regulative principles. They practice the yoga postures, āsanas and breathing exercises. Those who are already elevated to this platform practice meditation and keep their minds on the Supreme Lord. They reject all material activity and keep their minds in an equipoised condition [śama].

PURPORT

Texts 159 and 160 are from Bhagavad-gītā (6.3-4).

TEXT 160

yadā hi nendriyārtheṣu

'śānta' bhakta kari' tabe kahi tāṅra nāma

SYNONYMS

ei saba-all these; śānta-neutral; yabe-when; bhaje-worship; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; śānta bhakta-devotees in the neutral stage of devotional service; kari'-describing as; tabe-that time; kahi-I speak; tāṅra-their; nāma-name.

TRANSLATION

”These thirteen types of yogīs and munis are called śānta-bhaktas, for they render transcendental loving service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead in the neutral stage.

TEXT 165

’ātmā’ śabde ’mana’ kaha–mane yei rame sādhu-saṅge seha bhaje śrī-kṛṣṇa-caraṇe

SYNONYMS

ātmā-ātmā; śabde-by the word; mana-the mind; kaha-if you say; mane-within the mind; yei rame-one who is satisfied by speculation; sādhu-saṅge-by the association of devotees; seha-he also; bhaje-takes to devotional service; śrī-kṛṣṇa-caraṇe-at the lotus feet of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”The word ātmā sometimes means ’the mind.’ In this case, the word ātmārāma means ’a person who is satisfied by mental speculation.’ When such a person associates with a pure devotee, he takes to devotional service at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 166

udaram upāsate ya ṛṣi-vartmasu kūrpa-dṛśaḥ
parisara-paddhatiṁ hṛdayam āruṇayo daharam
tata udagād ananta tava dhāma śiraḥ paramaṁ
punar iha yat sametya na patanti kṛtānta-mukhe

SYNONYMS

udaram-the abdomen*; upāsate-worship; ye-those who; ṛṣi-vartmasu-on the path marked out by the great saintly persons; kūrpa-dṛśaḥ-whose vision is grossly situated in the bodily conception of life; parisara-paddhatim-from which the system of the arteries comes; hṛdayam-the heart; āruṇayaḥ-saintly persons headed by Āruṇa Ṛṣi; daharam-the sky within the heart, the subtle conception of the Supersoul within the heart; tataḥ-from that; udagāt-went up; ananta-O unlimited one; tava-Your; dhāma-place; śiraḥ-the top of the head; paramam-supreme; punaḥ-again; iha-in this material world; yat-which; sametya-having achieved; na-not; patanti-fall down; kṛta-anta-mukhe-in the repetition of birth and death.

TRANSLATION

” ’Those who follow the path of great, saintly mystic yogīs take to the yogic gymnastic process and begin worshiping from the abdomen, where it is said that Brahman is located. Such people are called śārkarākṣa, which means that they are situated in the gross bodily conception. There are also followers of the ṛṣi known as Āruṇa. Following that path, they observe the activities of the arteries. Thus they gradually rise to the heart, where subtle Brahman, Paramātmā, is situated. They then worship Him. O unlimited Ananta! Better than these persons are the mystic yogīs who worship You from the top of their heads. Beginning with the abdomen and proceeding through the heart, they reach the top of the head and pass through the brahma-randhra, the hole at the top of the skull. Thus yogīs attain the perfectional platform and do not enter the cycle of birth and death again.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.87.18).

TEXT 167

eho kṛṣṇa-guṇākṛṣṭa mahā-muni hañā ahaitukī bhakti kare nirgrantha hañā

SYNONYMS

eho-such yogīs; kṛṣṇa guṇa-ākṛṣṭa-attracted by the transcendental qualities of Kṛṣṇa; mahā-muni hañā-becoming great saintly persons; ahaitukī bhakti kare-they perform causeless devotional service; nirgrantha hañā-becoming indifferent to the mystic yoga process.

TRANSLATION

”Being attracted by the transcendental qualities of Kṛṣṇa, yogīs become great saints. At that time, not being hampered by the yogic process, they engage in unalloyed devotional service.

TEXT 168

’ātmā’-śabde ’yatna’ kahe–yatna kariyā
”munayo ’pi” kṛṣṇa bhaje guṇākṛṣṭa hañā

SYNONYMS

ātmā-śabde-by the word ātmā; yatna-endeavor; kahe-one means; yatna kariyā-by great endeavor; munayaḥ api-even great saintly persons; kṛṣṇa bhaje-take to the devotional service of Kṛṣṇa; guṇa-ākṛṣṭa hañā-being attracted by His transcendental qualities.

TRANSLATION

”Ātmā also means ’endeavor.’ Being attracted by Kṛṣṇa’s transcendental qualities, some saints make a great endeavor to come to the point of rendering service to Him.

tasyaiva hetoḥ prayateta kovido na labhyate yad bhramatām upary adhaḥ tal labhyate duḥkhavad anyataḥ sukhaṁ kālena sarvatra gabhīra-raṁhasā

SYNONYMS

tasya eva-for that; hetoḥ-reason; prayateta-should endeavor; kovidaḥ-one who is learned and intelligent; na-not; labhyate-is achieved; yat-that which; bhramatām-of those wandering; upari adhaḥ-up and down; tat-that; labhyate-is achieved; duḥkhavat-exactly like unhappiness or distress; anyataḥ-from other reasons (one’s past actions); sukham-happiness; kālena-by time; sarvatra-everywhere; gabhīra-insurmountable; raṁhasā-having force.

TRANSLATION

” ’The transcendental position cannot be attained by wandering up and down from Brahmaloka and Satyaloka to Pātālaloka. If one is actually intelligent and learned, he should endeavor for that rare transcendental position. Whatever material happiness is available within the fourteen worlds is attained by the force of time, just as one attains distress in due course of time. Since these are not attained by spiritual consciousness, one should not try for them.’

PURPORT

This verse was spoken by Nārada Muni in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.5.18). Nārada Muni was speaking to Vyāsadeva, who was morose even after he had compiled all Vedic literatures. In this connection, Nārada Muni advised Śrīla Vyāsadeva to attain devotional service.

TEXT 170

sad-dharmasyāvabodhāya yeṣāṁ nirbandhinī matiḥ acirād eva sarvārthaḥ sidhyaty eṣām abhīpsitaḥ

SYNONYMS

sat-dharmasya-of the path of progressive devotional service; avabodhāya-for understanding; yeṣām-those whose; nirbandhinī-unflinching; matiḥ-intelligence; acirāt-very soon; eva-certainly; sarva-arthaḥ-the goal of life; sidhyati-becomes fulfilled; eṣām-of these persons; abhīpsitaḥ-desired.

TRANSLATION

” ’Those who are anxious to awaken their spiritual consciousness, who have unflinching intelligence and who are not deviated, certainly attain the desired goal of life.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Nāradīya Purāṇa.

TEXT 171

ca-śabda api-arthe, ’api’–avadhāraṇe yatnāgraha vinā bhakti nā janmāya preme

SYNONYMS

ca-śabda-the word ca; api-of the word api; arthe-in the meaning; api avadhāraṇe-this api is used in sense of emphasis; yatna-āgraha vinā-without sincere endeavor; bhakti-devotional service; nā-not; janmāya-begets; preme-love of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

”The word ca may be used in place of api, which gives emphasis to something. Thus it means that without sincere endeavor in devotional service, one cannot attain love of Godhead.

TEXT 172

sādhanaughair anāsaṅgair alabhyā sucirād api hariṇā cāśv adeyeti dvidhā sā syāt sudurlabhā

SYNONYMS

sādhana-activities of devotional service; aughaiḥ-by masses of; anāsaṅgaiḥ-without attachment; alabhyā-very difficult to achieve; su-cirāt api-even after a considerable duration of time; hariṇā-by the Supreme Lord; ca-also; āśu-very soon; adeyā-not to be delivered; iti-thus; dvidhā-two ways; sā-that; syāt-is; su-durlabhā-very difficult to obtain.

TRANSLATION

” ’Devotional perfection is very difficult to attain for two reasons. First, unless one is attached to Kṛṣṇa, he cannot attain devotional perfection even if he renders devotional service for a long time. Second, Kṛṣṇa does not easily deliver perfection in devotional service.’

PURPORT

As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (5.6.18): muktiṁ dadāti karhicit. Śrīla Śukadeva Gosvāmī told Mahārāja Parīkṣit that Kṛṣṇa readily grants liberation but does not very readily grant perfection in devotional service. This means that Kṛṣṇa wants to see that a devotee is actually sincere and serious and that he does not have ulterior motives. If this is the case, devotional service can very easily be successful; otherwise it is very difficult to obtain from the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This verse appears in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.1.35).

TEXT 173

teṣāṁ satata-yuktānāṁ

SYNONYMS

teṣām-to them; satata-yuktānām-always engaged; bhajatām-in devotional service; prīti-pūrvakam-in loving ecstasy; dadāmi-I give; buddhi-yogam-real intelligence; tam-that; yena-by which; mām-unto Me; upayānti-come; te-they.

TRANSLATION

” ’To those who are constantly devoted and worship Me with love, I give the understanding by which they can come to Me.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Bhagavad-gītā (10.10).

TEXT 174

’ātmā’-śabde ’dhṛti’ kahe,–dhairye yei rame dhairyavanta eva hañā karaya bhajane

SYNONYMS

ātmā-śabde-by the word ātmā; dhṛti-perseverance; kahe-it is said; dhairye-with perseverance; yei rame-anyone who endeavors; dhairyavanta-such persons with endurance; eva-certainly; hañā-becoming; karaya-perform; bhajane-devotional service.

TRANSLATION

"Another meaning of ātmā is dhṛti, or endurance. A person who endeavors with endurance is ātmārāma. With endurance, such a person engages in devotional service.

TEXT 175

'muni'-śabde–pakṣī, bhṛṅga; 'nirgranthe'–mūrkha-jana kṛṣṇa-kṛpāya sādhu-kṛpāya doṅhāra bhajana

SYNONYMS

muni-śabde-by the word muni; pakṣī-bird; bhṛṅga-bumblebee; nirgranthe-in the word nirgrantha; mūrkha-jana-foolish people; kṛṣṇa-kṛpāya-by the mercy of Lord Kṛṣṇa; sādhu-kṛpāya-by the mercy of a devotee; doṅhāra bhajana-engages in devotional service of both (Kṛṣṇa and his spiritual master or the sādhu).

TRANSLATION

"The word muni also means 'bird,' and 'bumblebee.' The word nirgrantha refers to foolish people. By the mercy of Kṛṣṇa, such creatures contact a sādhu [spiritual master] and thus engage in devotional service.

TEXT 176

prāyo batāmba munayo vihagā vane 'smin kṛṣṇekṣitaṁ tad-uditaṁ kala-veṇu-gītam

prāyaḥ-almost; bata-certainly; amba-O mother; munayaḥ-great sages; vihagāḥ-the birds; vane-in the forest; asmin-this; kṛṣṇa-īkṣitam-seeing the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa; tat-uditam-created by Him; kala-veṇu-gītam-sweet vibrations made by playing the flute; āruhya-rising; ye-all of them; druma-bhujān-to the branches of the trees; rucira-prabālān-having beautiful creepers and twigs; śṛṇvanti-hear; mīlita-dṛśaḥ-closing their eyes; vigata-anya-vācaḥ-stopping all other sounds.

TRANSLATION

" 'My dear mother, in this forest, all the birds, after rising on the beautiful branches of the trees, are closing their eyes and, not being attracted by any other sound, are simply listening to the vibration of Kṛṣṇa's flute. Such birds and bees must be on the same level as great saints.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.21.14). This statement was made by the gopīs, who were lamenting in separation from Kṛṣṇa and studying how the inhabitants of Vṛndāvana were enjoying life like saintly persons.

TEXT 177

SYNONYMS

ete-all these; alinaḥ-bees; tava-Your; yaśaḥ-reputation; akhila-all; loka-tīrtham-auspicious for the planets; gāyante-are singing; ādi-puruṣa-O original person; anupatham-along the path; bhajante-they are engaged in transcendental loving service; prāyaḥ-almost; amī-these; muni-gaṇāḥ-great saintly persons; bhavadīya-in relation with You; mukhyāḥ-very advanced devotees; gūḍham-unknown; vane-in the forest; api-although; na-not; jahati-give up; anagha-O personality of transcendental goodness; ātma-daivam-their worshipable Deity.

TRANSLATION

" 'O good fortune personified! O original Personality of Godhead, all these bees are chanting about Your transcendental fame, which will purify the entire universe. Indeed, they are following Your path in the forest and are worshiping You. Actually they are all saintly persons, but now they have taken the form of bees. Although You are playing like a human being, they could not forget that You are their worshipable Deity.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.15.6). Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma were just on the verge of boyhood and were entering the forest of Vṛndāvana when Kṛṣṇa began to offer prayers to please Balarāma.

TEXT 178

SYNONYMS

sarasi-in the water; sārasa-cranes; haṁsa-swans; vihaṅgāḥ-birds; cāru-gīta-by the melodious song of Kṛṣṇa's flute; hṛta-cetasaḥ-devoid of material consciousness; etya-coming near; harim-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; upāsata-worshiped; te-all of them; yata-cittāḥ-with full attention; hanta-alas; mīlita-dṛśaḥ-closing their eyes; dhṛta-maunāḥ-completely silent.

TRANSLATION

” ’All the cranes and swans in the water are being enchanted by the melodious song of Kṛṣṇa’s flute. They have approached and are worshiping the Supreme Personality of Godhead with full attention. Alas, they are closing their eyes and are becoming completely silent.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.35.11). In the day, Kṛṣṇa went to the forest of Vṛndāvana, and at that time, the gopīs, being morose due to separation from Him, were lamenting in this way.

TEXT 179

SYNONYMS

kirāta-the aborigines named Kirātas; hūna-the Hūnas; āndhra-Āndhras; pulinda-Pulindas; pulkaśāḥ-Pulkaśas; ābhīra-Ābhīras; śumbhāḥ-Śumbhas; yavanāḥ-persons who do not follow the Vedic injunctions and who eat cow’s flesh; khaśa-ādayaḥ-Khaśas and others; ye-those who; anye-similar others; ca-also; pāpāḥ-sinful persons; yat-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; upāśraya-of the devotees; āśrayāḥ-taking shelter; śudhyanti-become purified; tasmai-unto Him, Lord Viṣṇu, because of whom they become purified; prabhaviṣṇave-to Lord Viṣṇu, the most powerful; namaḥ-respectful obeisances.

TRANSLATION

” ’Kirāta, Hūna, Āndhra, Pulinda, Pulkaśa, Ābhīra, Śumbha, Yavana and the Khaśa races and even others who are addicted to sinful acts can be purified by taking shelter of the devotees of the Lord due to His being the supreme power. I beg to offer my respectful obeisances unto Him.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.4.18). This verse was spoken by Śukadeva Gosvāmī when Parīkṣit Mahārāja asked him for a description of the creation. While offering obeisances to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Śukadeva Gosvāmī described the unlimited potencies of Lord Viṣṇu, who can purify the lowborn creatures mentioned herein.

TEXT 180

TRANSLATION

” ’Dhṛti is the fullness felt by the absence of misery and brought about by receiving knowledge of the Supreme Lord and by obtaining pure love for Him. The lamentation that accrues from not obtaining a goal or by loss of something already attained does not affect this completeness.’

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (2.4.144).

TEXT 182

kṛṣṇa-bhakta–duḥkha-hīna, vāñchāntara-hīna

TRANSLATION

" 'Women, fourth-class men, uncivilized hill tribes, hunters and many others born of low families, as well as birds and beasts, can engage in the service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead-who acts very wonderfully-and follow the path of the devotees and take lessons from them. Although the ocean of nescience is vast, they can still cross over it. What, then, is the difficulty for those who are advanced in Vedic knowledge?'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.7.46). Lord Brahmā said this when speaking to his disciple Nārada about the wonderful characteristics of Lord Viṣṇu. Simply by chanting the glories of Lord Viṣṇu, one can cross the ocean of nescience, even though one may be lowborn.

TEXT 191

TRANSLATION

" 'Whether one desires everything or nothing, or whether he desires to merge into the existence of the Lord, he is intelligent only if he worships Lord Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, by rendering transcendental loving service.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.3.10).

TEXT 198

bhakti-prabhāva,–sei kāma chāḍāñā kṛṣṇa-pade bhakti karāya guṇe ākarṣiyā

TRANSLATION

" 'Whenever Kṛṣṇa is requested to fulfill one's desire, He undoubtedly does so, but He does not award anything which, after being enjoyed, will cause someone to petition Him again and again to fulfill further desires. When one has other desires but engages in the Lord's service, Kṛṣṇa forcibly gives one shelter at His lotus feet, where one will forget all other desires.'

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (5.19.27).

TEXT 200

’ātmā’-śabde ’svabhāva’ kahe, tāte yei rame ātmārāma jīva yata sthāvara-jaṅgame

SYNONYMS

ātmā-śabde-by the word ātmā; svabhāva-nature; kahe-is sometimes said; tāte-in that; yei rame-one who takes pleasure; ātmārāma-called ātmārāma; jīva-the living entities; yata-all of them; sthāvara-jaṅgame-the moving and nonmoving.

TRANSLATION

”Another meaning of the word ātmā is ’one’s characteristic nature.’ Whoever enjoys his particular type of nature is called ātmārāma. Therefore, all living entities-be they moving or nonmoving-are also called ātmārāma.

TEXT 201

jīvera svabhāva–kṛṣṇa-’dāsa’-abhimāna dehe ātma-jñāne ācchādita sei ’jñāna’

SYNONYMS

jīvera svabhāva-the original characteristic of all living entities; kṛṣṇa-dāsa-servant of Kṛṣṇa; abhimāna-the conception; dehe-in the material body; ātma-jñāne-by the conception of the self; ācchādita-covered; sei jñāna-that original consciousness.

TRANSLATION

”The original nature of every living entity is to consider himself the eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa. However, under the influence of māyā, he thinks himself to be the body, and thus his original consciousness is covered.

TEXT 202

ca-śabde ’eva’, ’api’-śabda samuccaye
’ātmārāmā eva’ hañā śrī-kṛṣṇa bhajaye

SYNONYMS

ca-śabde-by the word ca; eva-the word eva; api-śabda-the word api; samuccaye-in the sense of aggregation; ātmārāmāḥ eva-all the ātmārāmas (all kinds of living entities); hañā-being; śrī-kṛṣṇa bhajaye-become engaged in the service of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”In that case, by the word ca, the word eva is meant. The word api can be taken in the sense of aggregation. Thus the verse would read ātmārāmā eva; that is, ’even all kinds of living beings worship Kṛṣṇa.’

PURPORT

It is here mentioned that every living entity is ātmārāma. Temporarily covered by the influence of māyā, the living entity serves his senses, which are represented as kāma-krodha-lobha-moha-mada-mātsarya. In the material condition, all living entities are engaged in sense gratification, but when they associate with devotees who follow the regulative principles, they become purified and awakened to their original consciousness. They then attempt to satisfy the senses of Lord Kṛṣṇa and engage in His devotional service.

TEXT 203

ei jīva–sanakādi saba muni-jana
’nirgrantha’–mūrkha, nīca, sthāvara-paśu-gaṇa

SYNONYMS

ei jīva-these living entities; sanaka-ādi saba muni-jana-all the great personalities, such as Sanaka and Sanātana; nirgrantha-down to the illiterate; mūrkha-foolish person; nīca-lowborn; sthāvara-the trees and plants; paśu-gaṇa-the beasts and birds.

TRANSLATION

”Living entities include great personalities like the four Kumāras, low-class foolish people, trees, plants, birds and beasts.

TEXT 204

vyāsa-śuka-sanakādira prasiddha bhajana
’nirgrantha’ sthāvarādira śuna vivaraṇa

SYNONYMS

vyāsa-of Vyāsadeva; śuka-of Śukadeva Gosvāmī; sanaka-ādira-of the four Kumāras; prasiddha bhajana-the devotional service is celebrated; nirgrantha-foolish, uneducated; sthāvara-ādira-of the immovable elements; śuna vivaraṇa-hear the description.

TRANSLATION

”The devotional service of Vyāsa, Śuka and the four Kumāras has already been well celebrated. Now let Me explain how immovable living entities like trees and plants engage in the Lord’s devotional service.

TEXT 205

kṛṣṇa-kṛpādi-hetu haite sabāra udaya kṛṣṇa-guṇākṛṣṭa hañā tāṅhāre bhajaya

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-kṛpā-ādi-hetu-the reason of Kṛṣṇa’s mercy; haite-from; sabāra udaya-anyone becomes a devotee; kṛṣṇa-guṇa-ākṛṣṭa hañā-being attracted by the transcendental qualities of Kṛṣṇa; tāṅhāre-Him; bhajaya-worship.

TRANSLATION

”Everyone is eligible to receive Kṛṣṇa’s mercy-including Vyāsadeva, the four Kumāras, Śukadeva Gosvāmī, lowborn creatures, trees, plants and beasts. By Kṛṣṇa’s mercy they are elevated and engaged in His service.

PURPORT

This is also confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā wherein the Lord says:

māṁ hi pārtha vyapāśritya

ye 'pi syuḥ pāpa-yonayaḥ striyo vaiśyās tathā śūdrās
te 'pi yānti parāṁ gatim

"O son of Pṛthā, those who take shelter in Me, though they be of lower birth-women, vaiśyas [merchants], as well as śūdras [workers]-can approach the supreme destination." (9.32)

Everyone is eligible to become Kṛṣṇa's devotee. One simply has to be trained according to the approved process. It is the work of Kṛṣṇa's confidential devotees to turn everyone into a Kṛṣṇa bhakta. If the confidential devotees do not take up the task of elevating everyone to Kṛṣṇa consciousness, then who will do it? Those who claim to be devotees but do not engage in Kṛṣṇa's service to elevate all living creatures to Kṛṣṇa consciousness are to be considered kaniṣṭha-adhikārīs (people in the lowest stage of devotional service). When one rises to the second platform of devotional service, his business is to propagate Kṛṣṇa consciousness all over the world. Those who are active in the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement should not remain in the neophyte stage but should rise to the platform of preachers, the second platform of devotional service. Devotional service is so enchanting that even the first-class devotees (uttama-adhikārīs) also come down to the second platform to preach and render service to the Lord for the benefit of the whole world.

TEXT 206

dhanyeyam adya dharaṇī tṛṇa-vīrudhas tvat-pāda-spṛśo druma-latāḥ karajābhimṛṣṭāḥ nadyo 'drayaḥ khaga-mṛgāḥ sadayāvalokair gopyo 'ntareṇa bhujayor api yat-spṛhā śrīḥ

SYNONYMS

dhanyā-glorified; iyam-this; adya-today; dharaṇī-the surface of the globe; tṛṇa-vīrudhaḥ-the grass and herbs; tvat-Your; pāda-spṛśaḥ-from the touch of the lotus feet; druma-latāḥ-the creepers and trees; karaja-abhimṛṣṭāḥ-touched by Your nails; nadyaḥ-the rivers; adrayaḥ-the hills; khaga-mṛgāḥ-the birds and forest animals; sadaya-avalokaiḥ-because of Your merciful glances; gopyaḥ-the gopīs, the damsels of Vraja; antareṇa-by the region between; bhujayoḥ-Your two arms; api-also; yat-for which; spṛhā-desirous; śrīḥ-the goddess of fortune.

TRANSLATION

" 'This land Vṛndāvana [Vrajabhūmi] is glorified today. Your lotus feet have touched the earth and grass. Your fingers have touched the trees and creepers, and Your merciful eyes have glanced upon rivers, hills, birds and beasts. The gopīs have been embraced by Your arms, and even the goddess of fortune desires this. Now all of these are glorified.'

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.15.8) is spoken by Lord Kṛṣṇa to Śrī Balarāma.

TEXT 207

gā gopakair anuvanaṁ nayator udāra-veṇu-svanaiḥ kala-padais tanu-bhṛtsu sakhyaḥ aspandanaṁ gatimatāṁ pulakas tarūṇāṁ niryoga-pāśa-kṛta-lakṣaṇayor vicitram

SYNONYMS

gāḥ-the cows; gopakaiḥ-with the cowherd boys; anuvanam-to each forest; nayatoḥ-leading; udāra-very liberal; veṇu-svanaiḥ-by the vibrations of the flutes; kala-padaiḥ-having sweet tones; tanu-bhṛtsu-among the living entities; sakhyaḥ-O friends; aspandanam-the lack of movement; gatimatām-of those living entities that can move; pulakaḥ-the ecstatic jubilation; tarūṇām-of the otherwise nonmoving trees; niryoga-pāśa-the ropes for binding the rear legs of the cows; kṛta-lakṣaṇayoḥ-of those two (Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma), who are characterized by; vicitram-wonderful.

TRANSLATION

" 'My dear friend, both Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma are passing through the forest leading Their cows with Their cowherd boy friends. They both carry ropes with which, at the time of milking, They bind the rear legs of the cows. When They play on Their flutes, all moving living entities are stunned, and nonmoving living entities experience ecstatic jubilation by Their sweet music. All these things are certainly very wonderful.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.21.19). All the gopīs were very attracted to Kṛṣṇa when they saw Him wandering in the forest with Baladeva. They thus praised the Lord's activities.

TEXT 208

vana-latās tarava ātmani viṣṇuṁ vyañjayantya iva puṣpa-phalāḍhyāḥ praṇata-bhāra-viṭapā madhu-dhārāḥ prema-hṛṣṭa-tanavo vavṛṣuḥ sma

SYNONYMS

vana-latāḥ-the herbs and plants; taravaḥ-the trees; ātmani-in the Supreme Soul; viṣṇum-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; vyañjayantyaḥ-manifesting; iva-like; puṣpa-phala-āḍhyāḥ-filled with luxuriant fruits and flowers; praṇata-bhāra-bowed down because of loads; viṭapāḥ-the trees; madhu-dhārāḥ-showers; prema-hṛṣṭa-inspired by love of Godhead; tanavaḥ-whose bodies; vavṛṣuḥ-constantly rained; sma-certainly.

TRANSLATION

" 'The plants, creepers and trees were full of fruits and flowers due to ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa. Indeed, being so full, they were bowing down. They were inspired by such deep love for Kṛṣṇa that they were constantly pouring showers of honey. In this way the gopīs saw all the forest of Vṛndāvana.'

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.35.9).

TEXT 209

kirāta-hūnāndhra-pulinda-pulkaśā ābhīra-śumbhā yavanāḥ khaśādayaḥ ye 'nye ca pāpā yad-upāśrayāśrayāḥ śudhyanti tasmai prabhaviṣṇave namaḥ

SYNONYMS

kirāta-the aborigines named Kirātas; hūna-the Hūnas; āndhra-Āndhras; pulinda-Pulindas; pulkaśāḥ-Pulkaśas; ābhīra-Ābhīras; śumbhāḥ-Śumbhas; yavanāḥ-persons who do not follow the Vedic injunctions and who eat cow's flesh; khaśa-ādayaḥ-Khaśas and others; ye-those who; anye-similar others; ca-also; pāpāḥ-sinful persons; yat-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; upāśraya-of the devotees; āśrayāḥ-taking shelter; śudhyanti-become purified; tasmai-unto Him, Lord Viṣṇu, because of whom they become purified; prabhaviṣṇave-to Lord Viṣṇu, the most powerful; namaḥ-respectful obeisances.

TRANSLATION

" 'Kirāta, Hūna, Āndhra, Pulinda, Pulkaśa, Ābhīra, Śumbha, Yavana and the Khaśa races and even others who are addicted to sinful acts can be purified by taking shelter of the devotees of the Lord due to His being the supreme power. I beg to offer my respectful obeisances unto Him.'

TEXT 210

āge 'tera' artha kariluṅ, āra 'chaya' ei ūnaviṁśati artha ha-ila mili' ei dui

SYNONYMS

āge-previously; tera-thirteen; artha-meanings; kariluṅ-I have done; āra-another; chaya-six; ei-this; ūnaviṁśati-altogether nineteen; artha-meanings; ha-ila-there were; mili'-including; ei dui-these two.

TRANSLATION

"I have already spoken about the thirteen kinds of meaning. Now there are six more. Combined, these make nineteen.

PURPORT

The six different meanings are (1) mental speculators (vide verse 165), (2) those engaged in different types of endeavor (vide verse 168), (3) those who are patient and sober (vide verse 174), (4) those who are intelligent and learned scholars (vide verse 187), (5) those who are intelligent but illiterate and foolish (vide verse 187), and (6) those who are conscious of eternal servitorship to Kṛṣṇa (vide verse 201).

TEXT 211

ei ūniśa artha karilu, āge śuna āra
'ātma'-śabde 'deha' kahe,–cāri artha tāra

SYNONYMS

ei-these; ūniśa-nineteen; artha-meanings; karilu-I have done; āge-ahead; śuna-hear; āra-more; ātma-śabde-by the word ātma; deha-the body; kahe-is understood; cāri artha-four meanings; tāra-of that.

TRANSLATION

"I have already explained nineteen different meanings. Now please hear further meanings. The word ātma also refers to the body, and this can be taken in four ways.

PURPORT

The four divisions are (1) aupādika-brahma-deha, the material body considered as Brahman with designations (vide verse 212), (2) karma-niṣṭha yājñikera karma-deha, the body engaged in ritualistic ceremonies of the Vedic injunctions (vide verse 214), (3) tapo-deha, the body engaged in austerities and penances (vide verse 216), and (4) sarva-kāma-deha, the body engaged for the satisfaction of all kinds of material desires (vide verse 218).

TEXT 212

dehārāmī dehe bhaje 'dehopādhi brahma' sat-saṅge seha kare kṛṣṇera bhajana

SYNONYMS

dehārāmī-persons who have accepted this body as the self and are interested only in sense gratification; dehe-in the body; bhaje-worships; deha-upādhi brahma-Brahman having the body as a designation; sat-saṅge-in the association of devotees; seha-such a person; kare-does; kṛṣṇera bhajana-service to Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"One in the bodily conception worships his own body as Brahman, but when he comes in contact with the devotee, he gives up this mistaken idea and engages himself in the devotional service of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 213

udaram upāsate ya ṛṣi-vartmasu kūrpa-dṛśaḥ
parisara-paddhatiṁ hṛdayam āruṇayo daharam
tata udagād ananta tava dhāma śiraḥ paramaṁ
punar iha yat sametya na patanti kṛtānta-mukhe

SYNONYMS

udaram-the abdomen; upāsate-worship; ye-those who; ṛṣi-vartmasu-on the path marked out by the great saintly persons; kūrpa-dṛśaḥ-whose vision is grossly situated in the bodily conception of life; parisara-paddhatim-from which the system of the arteries comes; hṛdayam-the heart; āruṇayaḥ-saintly persons headed by Āruṇa Ṛṣi; daharam-the sky within the heart, the subtle conception of the Supersoul within the heart; tataḥ-from that; udagāt-went up; ananta-O unlimited one; tava-Your; dhāma-place; śiraḥ-the top of the head; paramam-supreme; punaḥ-again; iha-in this material world; yat-which; sametya-having achieved; na-not; patanti-fall down; kṛta-anta-mukhe-in the repetition of birth and death.

TRANSLATION

" 'Those who follow the path of great, saintly mystic yogīs take to the yogic gymnastic process and begin worshiping from the abdomen, where it is said that Brahman is located. Such people are called śārk, which means that they are situated in the gross bodily conception. There are also followers of the ṛṣi known as Āruṇa. Following that path, they observe the activities of the arteries. Thus they gradually rise to the heart, where subtle Brahman, Paramātmā, is situated. They then worship Him. O, unlimited Ananta! Better than these persons are the mystic yogīs who worship You from the top of their heads. Beginning with the abdomen and proceeding through the heart, they reach the top of the head and pass through the brahma-randra, the hole at the top of the skull. Thus yogīs attain the perfectional platform and do not enter the cycle of birth and death again.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.87.18).

dehārāmī karma-niṣṭha–yājñikādi jana sat-saṅge 'karma' tyaji' karaya bhajana

SYNONYMS

dehārāmī-those in the bodily concept of life; karma-niṣṭha-attracted to fruitive activities; yājñika-ādi jana-persons who perform ritualistic ceremonies for a better standard of life; sat-saṅge-in contact with devotees; karma tyaji'-giving up such fruitive activities; karaya bhajana-engages in the devotional service of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

"Those who are in the bodily conception mainly engage in fruitive activity. Those who perform yajñas and ritualistic ceremonies are also considered in the same category. However, when they are all in contact with the pure devotee, they give up their fruitive activity and fully engage in the service of the Lord.

TEXT 215

karmaṇy asminn anāśvāse dhūma-dhūmrātmanāṁ bhavān āpāyayati govindapāda-padmāsavaṁ madhu

SYNONYMS

karmaṇi-in fruitive activity; asmin-in this; anāśvāse-although not positive in result; dhūma-dhūmra-ātmanām-whose bodies are simply becoming blackish because of smoke; bhavān-you; āpāyayati-give a chance to drink; govinda-pāda-padma-āsavam-the nectarean beverage flowing from the lotus feet of Govinda; madhu-sweet.

TRANSLATION

" 'We have just begun performing this fruitive activity, a sacrificial fire, but due to the many imperfections in our action, we are not certain of its result. Our bodies have become black from the smoke, but we are factually pleased by the nectar of the lotus feet of the Personality of Godhead, Govinda, which you are distributing.'

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.18.12) was spoken to Sūta Gosvāmī at the meeting of great sages at Naimiṣāraṇya. The great sages were headed by Śaunaka, and Sūta Gosvāmī spoke of the glorious activities of the Supreme Personality of Godhead at that meeting. At that time, all the ṛṣis assembled there neglected to complete the ritualistic ceremonies because there was no positive assurance of the results. All the performers were coated with black ash due to the large amount of smoke coming from the fire.

TEXT 216

'tapasvī' prabhṛti yata dehārāmī haya
sādhu-saṅge tapa chāḍi' śrī-kṛṣṇa bhajaya

SYNONYMS

tapasvī-persons who undergo severe penances; prabhṛti-and so on; yata-all; dehārāmī haya-are within the category of the bodily concept of life; sādhu-saṅge-in the association of devotees; tapa chāḍi'-giving up all such processes of penance and austerity; śrī-kṛṣṇa bhajaya-engage themselves in the service of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"The tapasvīs, those who undergo severe austerities and penances to elevate themselves to the higher planetary systems, are also in the same category. When such persons come in contact with a devotee, they give up all those practices and engage in Lord Kṛṣṇa's service.

TEXT 217

yat-pāda-sevābhirucis tapasvinām aśeṣa-janmopacitaṁ malaṁ dhiyaḥ sadyaḥ kṣiṇoty anvaham edhatī satī yathā padāṅguṣṭha-viniḥsṛtā sarit

SYNONYMS

yat-pāda-sevā-abhiruciḥ-the taste for serving the lotus feet of Lord Kṛṣṇa; tapasvinām-of persons undergoing severe penances; aśeṣa-unlimited; janma-upacitam-contracted from life after life; malam-dirt; dhiyaḥ-of the intelligence; sadyaḥ-immediately; kṣiṇoti-vanquishes; anvaham-every day; edhatī-increasing; satī-being in the mode of goodness; yathā-as; pada-aṅguṣṭha-viniḥsṛtā-emanating from the toe of the Lord; sarit-the River Ganges.

TRANSLATION

” ’The taste for loving service is like the water of the River Ganges, which flows from the feet of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Every day that taste diminishes the results of sinful activities acquired over a period of many births by those who perform austerities.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (4.21.31).

TEXT 218

dehārāmī, sarva-kāma–saba ātmārāma kṛṣṇa-kṛpāya kṛṣṇa bhaje chāḍi’ saba kāma

SYNONYMS

dehārāmī-persons who are in the bodily concept of life; sarva-kāma-full of all material desires; saba-all; ātmārāma-enjoying self-satisfaction; kṛṣṇa-kṛpāya-by the mercy of Kṛṣṇa; kṛṣṇa bhaje-become engaged in the devotional service of Lord Kṛṣṇa; chāḍi’ saba kāma-giving up all sorts of material desire.

TRANSLATION

”As long as one labors under the bodily conception, he must fulfill volumes and volumes of material desires. Thus a person is called ātmārāma. When such an ātmārāma is favored by the mercy of Kṛṣṇa, he gives up his so-called self-satisfaction and engages in the transcendental loving service of the Lord.

TEXT 219

sthānābhilāṣī tapasi sthito ’haṁ tvāṁ prāptavān deva-munīndra-guhyam kācaṁ vicinvann api divya-ratnaṁ svāmin kṛtārtho ’smi varaṁ na yāce

SYNONYMS

sthāna-abhilāṣī-desiring a very high position in the material world; tapasi-in severe austerities and penances; sthitaḥ-situated; aham-I; tvām-You; prāptavān-have obtained; deva-muni-indra-guhyam-difficult to achieve even for great demigods, saintly persons and kings; kācam-a piece of glass; vicinvan-searching for; api-although; divya-ratnam-a transcendental gem; svāmin-O my Lord; kṛta-arthaḥ asmi-I am fully satisfied; varam-any benediction; na yāce-I do not ask.

TRANSLATION

[When he was being benedicted by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Dhruva Mahārāja said], ” ’O my Lord, because I was seeking an opulent material position, I was performing severe types of penance and austerity. Now I have gotten You, who are very difficult for the great demigods, saintly persons and kings to attain. I was searching after a piece of glass, but instead I have found a most valuable jewel. Therefore I am so satisfied that I do not wish to ask any benediction from You.’

PURPORT

This verse is from the Hari-bhakti-sudhodaya (7.28).

TEXT 220

ei cāri artha saha ha-ila ’teiśa’ artha āra tina artha śuna parama samartha

SYNONYMS

ei-these; cāri-four; artha-meanings; saha-with; ha-ila-there were; teiśa artha-twenty-three different varieties of imports; āra tina artha-another three imports; śuna-hear; parama samartha-very strong.

TRANSLATION

”In addition to the nineteen other meanings, this ātmārāma meaning [including those laboring under the bodily conception] makes four meanings altogether and brings the total to twenty-three meanings. Now hear of another three meanings, which are very suitable.

PURPORT

The three different meanings are (1) the word ca meaning ”in due course’ ” (2) the words ca meaning eva, and api meaning ”censure,” and (3) nirgrantha, meaning ”one who is very poor, without money.”

TEXT 221

ca-śabde ’samuccaye’, āra artha kaya
’ātmārāmāś ca munayaś ca’ kṛṣṇere bhajaya

SYNONYMS

ca-śabde-by the word ca; samuccaye-in aggregation; āra-another; artha-import; kaya-is meant; ātmārāmāḥ ca munayaḥ ca-all the ātmārāmas and munis; kṛṣṇere bhajaya-worship Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”As mentioned above, the word ca has been used to mean ’aggregate.’ According to this meaning, all the ātmārāmas and the munis engage in Kṛṣṇa’s service. Besides ’aggregate,’ there is another meaning of the word ca.

TEXT 222

’nirgranthāḥ’ hañā ihāṅ ’api’–nirdhāraṇe
’rāmaś ca kṛṣṇaś ca’ yathā viharaye vane

SYNONYMS

nirgranthāḥ hañā-being liberated saintly persons; ihāṅ-here; api-the word api; nirdhāraṇe-in the sense of certainty; rāmaḥ ca kṛṣṇaḥ ca-both Rāma and Kṛṣṇa; yathā-as; viharaye-enjoy walking; vane-in the forest.

TRANSLATION

”The word nirgranthāḥ is used as an adjective, and api is used in the sense of certainty. For instance, rāmaś ca kṛṣṇaś ca means that both Rāma and Kṛṣṇa enjoy walking in the forest.

Because it is said that both Rāma and Kṛṣṇa enjoy wandering in the forest, it is understood that both of Them are enjoying Their tour within the forest.

TEXT 223

ca-śabde 'anvācaye' artha kahe āra
'baṭo, bhikṣām aṭa, gāṁ cānaya' yaiche prakāra

SYNONYMS

ca-śabde-by the word ca; anvācaye-in presenting an action of secondary importance; artha-meaning; kahe-says; āra-another; baṭo-O brahmacārī: bhikṣām aṭa-just bring some alms; gām ca ānaya-also, at the same time, bring the cows; yaiche prakāra-in this way.

TRANSLATION

"The word ca also means anvācaye, which means to present a secondary thing to be done at the same time. This is the way of understanding the word anvācaye. An example is: 'O brahmacārī, go out to collect alms and at the same time bring in the cows.'

TEXT 224

kṛṣṇa-manane muni kṛṣṇe sarvadā bhajaya
'ātmārāmā api' bhaje,–gauṇa artha kaya

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-manane-in meditating on Kṛṣṇa; muni-saintly persons; kṛṣṇe-unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; sarvadā-always; bhajaya-perform devotional service; ātmārāmāḥ api-also those who are ātmārāmas; bhaje-engage themselves in devotional service; gauṇa artha kaya-this is also another secondary import.

TRANSLATION

"Saintly persons who are always meditating upon Kṛṣṇa are engaged in the devotional service of the Lord. The ātmārāmas are also engaged in the Lord's service. That is the indirect import.

PURPORT

The anvācaye meaning of the word ca indicates that between the two words compounded by the word ca, one is given more importance, and the other is considered subordinate. For example: "O brahmacārī, please go out and collect alms and at the same time bring in the cows." In this statement, the collection of alms is of first importance, and the second business of collecting the cows is subordinate. Similarly, one who always meditates upon Kṛṣṇa is mainly a devotee of Kṛṣṇa engaged in His devotional service. Other ātmārāmas are subordinate in devotional service.

TEXT 225

'ca' evārthe–'munayaḥ eva' kṛṣṇere bhajaya
"ātmārāmā api"–'api' 'garhā'-artha kaya

SYNONYMS

ca-the word ca; eva-arthe-in the sense of eva; munayaḥ eva-just the saintly persons; kṛṣṇere bhajaya-engage themselves in the devotional service of Lord Kṛṣṇa; ātmārāmāḥ api-also in this combination, ātmārāmā api; api-the word api; garhā-artha kaya-in the sense of censure.

TRANSLATION

"The word ca is also used to indicate the certainty that only saintly persons are engaged in rendering devotional service to Kṛṣṇa. In the combination ātmārāmā api, api is used in the sense of censure.

TEXT 226

'nirgrantha hañā'–ei duṅhāra 'viśeṣaṇa' āra artha śuna, yaiche sādhura saṅgama

SYNONYMS

nirgrantha hañā-becoming nirgrantha; ei-this; duṅhāra-of both; viśeṣaṇa-the adjective; āra artha-another import; śuna-please hear; yaiche-in which; sādhura saṅgama-there is association with devotees.

TRANSLATION

"The word nirgrantha is taken as an adjective modifying muni and ātmārāma. There is another meaning, which you may hear from Me, indicating association with a devotee. Now I shall explain how it is that through the association of devotees, even a nirgrantha can become a devotee.

TEXT 227

nirgrantha-śabde kahe tabe 'vyādha', 'nirdhana' sādhu-saṅge seha kare śrī-kṛṣṇa-bhajana

SYNONYMS

nirgrantha-śabde-by the word nirgrantha; kahe-is said; tabe-therefore; vyādha-a hunter; nirdhana-without any riches; sādhu-saṅge-by the association of a saintly person; seha-he also; kare-engages himself; śrī-kṛṣṇa-bhajana-in the devotional service of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"The word nirgrantha-when combined with api, used in the sense of certainty-indicates a person who is a hunter by profession or who is very poor. Nonetheless, when such a person associates with a great saint like Nārada, he engages in Lord Kṛṣṇa's devotional service.

TEXT 228

'kṛṣṇārāmāś ca' eva–haya kṛṣṇa-manana vyādha hañā haya pūjya bhāgavatottama

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-ārāmāḥ ca-one who takes pleasure in Kṛṣṇa; eva-certainly; haya-there is; kṛṣṇa-manana-meditation on Kṛṣṇa; vyādha hañā-being a hunter; haya-is; pūjya-worshipable; bhāgavata-uttama-the best of the devotees.

TRANSLATION

”The words kṛṣṇārāmaś ca refer to one who takes pleasure in thinking of Kṛṣṇa. Even though such a person may be a hunter, he is still worshipable and is the best of devotees.

TEXT 229

SYNONYMS

eka bhakta-vyādhera-one devotee who was a hunter; kathā-narration; śuna-please hear; sāvadhāne-with attention; yāhā haite-from which; haya-there is; sat-saṅga-mahimāra jñāne-knowledge of the greatness of association with a great devotee.

TRANSLATION

”I shall now narrate the story of how the hunter became a great devotee by the association of such an exalted personality as Nārada Muni. From this story, one can understand the greatness of association with pure devotees.

TEXT 230

eka dina śrī-nārada dekhi’ nārāyaṇa triveṇī-snāne prayāga karilā gamana eka dina-one day; śrī-nārada-the great saintly person Nārada; dekhi’ nārāyaṇa-after visiting Lord Nārāyaṇa; tri-veṇī-snāne-to bathe at the confluence of the Ganges, Yamunā and Sarasvatī rivers; prayāga-to Prayāga; karilā gamana-went.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”Once upon a time the great saint Nārada, after visiting Lord Nārāyaṇa in the Vaikuṇṭhas, went to Prayāga to bathe at the confluence of three rivers-the Ganges, Yamunā and Sarasvatī.

PURPORT

The great saint Nārada is so liberated that he can go to the Vaikuṇṭha planets to see Nārāyaṇa and then immediately come to this planet in the material world and go to Prayāga to bathe in the confluence of three rivers. The word tri-veṇī refers to a confluence of three rivers. This confluence is still visited by many hundreds of thousands of people who go there to bathe, especially during the month of January (Māgha-melā). A liberated person who has no material body can go anywhere and everywhere; therefore a living entity is called sarva-ga, which indicates that he can go anywhere and everywhere. Presently scientists are trying to go to other planets, but due to their material bodies, they are not free to move at will. However, when one is situated in his original spiritual body, he can move anywhere and everywhere without difficulty. Within this material world there is a planet called Siddhaloka, whose inhabitants can go from one planet to another without the aid of a machine or space rocket. In the material world every planet has a specific advantage (vibhūti-bhinna). In the spiritual world, however, all the planets and their inhabitants are composed of spiritual energy. Because there are no material impediments, it is said that everything in the spiritual world is one.

SYNONYMS

vyādha kahe-the hunter replied; kibā dāna-what kind of charity; māgilā āmāre-have you begged from me; ardha mārile-in half-killing; kibā-what; haya-there is; tāhā-that; kaha more-kindly explain to me.

TRANSLATION

"The hunter replied, 'My dear sir, what are you asking of me? What is wrong with the animals' lying there half-killed? Will you please explain this to me?'

TEXT 249

nārada kahe,–"ardha mārile jīva pāya vyathā jīve duḥkha ditecha, tomāra ha-ibe aiche avasthā

SYNONYMS

nārada kahe-Nārada Muni replied; ardha mārile-by half-killing the animals; jīva pāya vyathā-the living beings suffer too much pain; jīve duḥkha ditecha-you are giving troubles to the living beings; tomāra-your; ha-ibe-there will be; aiche avasthā-the same suffering in retaliation.

TRANSLATION

"Nārada Muni replied, 'If you leave the animals half-dead, you are purposefully giving them pain. Therefore you will have to suffer in retaliation.'

PURPORT

This is an authoritative statement given by the greatest authority, Nārada Muni. If one gives another living entity unnecessary pain, one will certainly be punished by the laws of nature by a similar pain. Although the hunter Mṛgāri was uncivilized, he still had to suffer the results of his sinful activities. However, if a civilized man kills animals regularly in a slaughterhouse to maintain his so-called civilization, using scientific methods and machines to kill animals, one cannot even estimate the suffering awaiting him. So-called civilized people consider themselves very advanced in education, but they do not know about the stringent laws of nature. According to nature's law, it is a life for a life. We can hardly imagine the sufferings of one who maintains a slaughterhouse. He endures suffering not only in this life, but in his next life also. It is said that a hunter, murderer or killer is advised not to live and not to die. If he lives, he accumulates even more sins, which bring about more suffering in a future life. He is advised not to die because his dying means that he immediately begins to endure more suffering. Therefore he is advised not to live and not to die.

As followers of the Vedic principles, we accept the statements of Nārada Muni in this regard. It is our duty to see that no one suffers due to sinful activities. Foolish rascals are described in Bhagavad-gītā as māyayāpahṛta-jñānāḥ, which indicates that although they are superficially educated, māyā has taken their real knowledge away. Such people are presently leading human society. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam they are also described as andhā yathāndhair upanīyamānāḥ. These rascals are themselves blind, and yet they are leading others who are blind. When people follow such leaders, they suffer unlimited pains in the future. Despite so-called advancement, all this is happening. Who is safe? Who is happy? Who is without anxiety?

vyādha tumi, jīva māra–'alpa' aparādha tomāra kadarthanā diyā māra'–e pāpa 'apāra'

SYNONYMS

vyādha tumi-you are a hunter; jīva māra-your occupation is to kill animals; alpa-slight; aparādha-offense; tomāra-your; kadarthanā diyā-unnecessarily giving them pain; māra'-when you kill; e pāpa apāra-this sinful activity is unlimited.

TRANSLATION

"Nārada Muni continued, 'My dear hunter, your business is killing animals. That is a slight offense on your part, but when you consciously give them unnecessary pain by leaving them half-dead, you incur very great sins.'

PURPORT

This is another good instruction to animal killers. There are always animal killers and animal eaters in human society because less civilized people are accustomed to eating meat. In Vedic civilization, meat-eaters are advised to kill an animal for the goddess Kālī or a similar demigod. This is in order not to give the animal unnecessary pain, as slaughterhouses do. In the balidāna sacrifice to a demigod, it is recommended to cut the throat of an animal with one slice. This should be done on a dark-moon night, and the painful noises expressed by the animal at the time of being slaughtered are not to be heard by anyone. There are also many other restrictions. Slaughter is only allowed once a month, and the killer of the animal has to suffer similar pains in his next life. At the present moment, so-called civilized men do not sacrifice animals to a deity in a religious or ritualistic way. They openly kill animals daily by the thousands for no purpose other than the satisfaction of the tongue. Because of this the entire world is suffering in so many ways. Politicians are unnecessarily declaring war, and, according to the stringent laws of material nature, massacres are taking place between nations.

prakṛteḥ kriyamāṇāni guṇaiḥ karmāṇi sarvaśaḥ ahaṅkāra-vimūḍhātmā kartāham iti manyate

"The bewildered spirit soul, under the influence of the three modes of material nature, thinks himself to be the doer of activities, which are in actuality carried out by nature." (Bg. 3.27) The laws of prakṛti (nature) are very stringent. No one should think that he has the freedom to kill animals and not suffer the consequences. One cannot be safe by doing this. Nārada Muni herein says that animal killing is offensive, especially when animals are given unnecessary pain. Meat-eaters and animal killers are advised not to purchase meat from the slaughterhouse. They can worship Kālī once a month, kill some unimportant animal and eat it. Even by following this method, one is still an offender.

TEXT 251

kadarthiyā tumi yata mārilā jīvere tārā taiche tomā māribe janma-janmāntare"

SYNONYMS

kadarthiyā-giving unnecessary pangs; tumi-you; yata-all; mārilā-killed; jīvere-the living entities; tārā-all of them; taiche-similarly; tomā-you; māribe-will kill; janma-janma-antare-life after life.

TRANSLATION

"Nārada Muni continued, 'All the animals that you have killed and given unnecessary pain will kill you one after the other in your next life and in life after life.'

PURPORT

This is another authoritative statement made by the great sage Nārada. Those who kill animals and give them unnecessary pain-as people do in slaughterhouses-will be killed in a similar way in the next life and in many lives to come. One can never be excused from such an offense. If one kills many thousands of animals in a professional way so that other people can purchase the meat to eat, one must be ready to be killed in a similar way in his next life and in life after life. There are many rascals who violate their own religious principles. According to Judeo-Christian scriptures, it is clearly said, ”Thou shalt not kill.” Nonetheless, giving all kinds of excuses, even the heads of religions indulge in killing animals while trying to pass as saintly persons. This mockery and hypocrisy in human society bring about unlimited calamities; therefore occasionally there are great wars. Masses of such people go out onto battlefields and kill themselves. Presently they have discovered the atomic bomb, which is simply awaiting wholesale destruction. If people want to be saved from the killing business life after life, they must take to Kṛṣṇa consciousness and cease sinful activity. The International Society for Krishna Consciousness recommends that everyone abandon meat-eating, illicit sex, intoxication and gambling. When one gives up these sinful activities, he can understand Kṛṣṇa and take to this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. We therefore request everyone to abandon sinful activity and chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. In this way people can save themselves from repeated birth and death.

TEXT 252

nārada-saṅge vyādhera mana parasanna ha-ila tāṅra vākya śuni’ mane bhaya upajila nārada-saṅge-in the association of the great sage Nārada Muni; vyādhera-of the hunter; mana-the mind; parasanna ha-ila-became cleansed and satisfied; tāṅra-his; vākya-words; śuni’-hearing; mane-in the mind; bhaya upajila-some fear arose.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”In this way, through the association of the great sage Nārada Muni, the hunter was a little convinced of his sinful activity. He therefore became somewhat afraid due to his offenses.

PURPORT

This is the effect of associating with a pure devotee. Our preachers who are preaching Kṛṣṇa consciousness all over the world should follow in the footsteps of Nārada Muni and become purified by following the four principles and chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. This will make them fit to become Vaiṣṇavas. Then, when they speak to sinful people about the teachings of this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, people will be affected and take the instructions. We receive instructions in devotional service through the disciplic succession. Nārada Muni is our original guru because he is the spiritual master of Vyāsadeva. Vyāsadeva is the spiritual master of our disciplic succession; therefore we should follow in the footsteps of Nārada Muni and become pure Vaiṣṇavas. A pure Vaiṣṇava is one who has no ulterior motive. He has totally dedicated himself to the service of the Lord. He does not have material desires, and he is not interested in so-called learning and philanthropic work. The so-called learned scholars and philanthropists are actually karmīs and jñānīs, and some are actually misers engaged in sinful activity. All are condemned because they are not devotees of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

This is a chance to become purified by associating with this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement and strictly following the rules and regulations. By chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, one can become free from all contamination, especially contamination brought about by the killing of animals. Lord Kṛṣṇa Himself requested:

sarva-dharmān parityajya
mām ekaṁ śaraṇaṁ vraja
ahaṁ tvāṁ sarva-pāpebhyo
mokṣayiṣyāmi mā śucaḥ

”Abandon all varieties of religion and just surrender unto Me. I shall deliver you from all sinful reaction. Do not fear.” (Bg. 18.66)

We should take this instruction from Kṛṣṇa and follow in the footsteps of Nārada Muni in the disciplic succession. If we simply surrender unto Kṛṣṇa’s lotus feet and take this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement seriously, we can be freed from the karma incurred by sin. If we are intelligent enough, we shall engage in the loving service of the Lord. Then our lives will be successful, and we shall not have to suffer like the hunter life after life. By killing animals, not only will we be bereft of the human form but we will have to take an animal form and somehow or other be killed by the same type of animal we have killed. This is the law of nature. The Sanskrit word māṁsa means ”meat.” It is said: māṁ saḥ khadati iti māṁsaḥ. That is, ”I am now eating the flesh of an animal who will some day in the future be eating my flesh.”

TEXT 253

vyādha kahe,–”bālya haite ei āmāra karma kemane tarimu muñi pāmara adhama?

SYNONYMS

vyādha kahe-the hunter said; bālya haite-from the very beginning of my childhood; ei āmāra karma-I have been taught this business (half-killing animals); kemane-how; tarimu-shall become free from these sinful activities; muñi-I; pāmara adhama-sinful and misled.

TRANSLATION

”The hunter then admitted that he was convinced of his sinful activity, and he said, ’I have been taught this business from my very childhood. Now I am wondering how I can become freed from these unlimited volumes of sinful activity.’

This kind of admission is very beneficial as long as one does not again commit sin. Cheating and hypocrisy are not tolerated by higher authorities. If one understands what sin is, he should give it up with sincerity and regret and surrender unto the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead through His agent, the pure devotee. In this way, one can be freed from the reactions of sin and make progress in devotional service. However, if one continues committing sins after making some atonement, he will not be saved. In the śāstras, such atonement is compared to an elephant’s bathing. An elephant takes a very good bath and cleanses its body very nicely, but as soon as it comes out of the water, it picks up some dust on the shore and throws it all over its body. Atonement may be carried out very nicely, but it will not help a person if he continues committing sins. Therefore the hunter first admitted his sinful activity before the saintly person Nārada and then asked how he could be saved.

TEXT 254

ei pāpa yāya mora, kemana upāye?
nistāra karaha more, paḍoṅ tomāra pāye"

SYNONYMS

ei-this; pāpa yāya mora-sinful reaction of my life can be washed off; kemana upāye-by what means; nistāra karaha more-kindly deliver me; paḍoṅ-I fall down; tomāra pāye-at your lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

"The hunter continued, 'My dear sir, please tell me how I can be relieved from the reactions of my sinful life. Now I fully surrender unto you and fall down at your lotus feet. Please deliver me from sinful reactions.'

PURPORT

By the grace of Nārada Muni, the hunter came to his good senses and immediately surrendered unto the saint's lotus feet. This is the process. By associating with a saintly person, one is able to understand the reactions of his sinful life. When one voluntarily surrenders to a saintly person who is a representative of Kṛṣṇa and follows his instructions, one can become freed from sinful reaction. Kṛṣṇa demands the surrender of a sinful man, and Kṛṣṇa's representative gives the same instructions. The representative of Kṛṣṇa never tells his disciple, "Surrender unto me." Rather he says, "Surrender unto Kṛṣṇa." If the disciple accepts this principle and surrenders himself through the representative of Kṛṣṇa, his life is saved.

TEXT 255

nārada kahe,–'yadi dhara āmāra vacana tabe se karite pāri tomāra mocana'

SYNONYMS

nārada kahe-Nārada Muni replied; yadi dhara-if you accept; āmāra vacana-my instruction; tabe-then; se-this; karite pāri-I can do; tomāra-your; mocana-liberation.

TRANSLATION

"Nārada Muni assured the hunter, 'If you listen to my instructions, I shall find the way you can be liberated.'

PURPORT

Gaurāṅgera bhakta-gaṇe jane jane śakti dhare. The purport of this song is that the devotees of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are very powerful, and each and every one of them can deliver the whole world. What, then, to speak of Nārada Muni? If one follows the instructions of Nārada Muni, one can be delivered from any amount of sinful reactions. This is the process. One must follow the instructions of a spiritual master; then one will certainly be delivered from all sinful reaction. This is the secret of success. Yasya deve parā bhaktir yathā deve tathā gurau. If one has unflinching faith in Kṛṣṇa and the spiritual master, the result is tasyaite kathitā hy arthāḥ prakāśante mahātmanaḥ: all the conclusions of revealed scriptures will be open to such a person. A pure devotee of Kṛṣṇa can make the same demands that Nārada Muni is making. He says, "If you follow my instructions, I shall take responsibility for your liberation." A pure devotee like Nārada can give assurance to any sinful man because by the grace of the Lord such a devotee is empowered to deliver any sinful person if that person follows the principles set forth.

TEXT 256

vyādha kahe,–'yei kaha, sei ta' kariba' nārada kahe,–'dhanuka bhāṅga, tabe se kahiba' vyādha kahe-the hunter replied; yei kaha-whatever you say; sei ta' kariba-that I shall do; nārada kahe-Nārada Muni replied; dhanuka bhāṅga-break your bow; tabe-then; se kahiba-I shall speak to you.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"The hunter then said, 'My dear sir, whatever you say I shall do.' Nārada immediately ordered him, 'First of all, break your bow. Then I shall tell you what is to be done.'

PURPORT

This is the process of initiation. The disciple must admit that he will no longer commit sinful activity-namely illicit sex, meat-eating, gambling and intoxication. He promises to execute the order of the spiritual master. Then the spiritual master takes care of him and elevates him to spiritual emancipation.

TEXT 257

vyādha kahe,–'dhanuka bhāṅgile vartiba kemane?'
nārada kahe,–'āmi anna diba prati-dine'

SYNONYMS

vyādha kahe-the hunter replied; dhanuka bhāṅgile-if I break my bow; vartiba kemane-what will be the source of my maintenance; nārada kahe-Nārada Muni replied; āmi-I; anna-food; diba-shall supply; prati-dine-every day.

TRANSLATION

"The hunter replied, 'If I break my bow, how shall I maintain myself?' Nārada Muni replied, 'Do not worry. I shall supply all your food every day.'

PURPORT

The source of our income is not actually the source of our maintenance. Every living being-from the great Brahmā down to an insignificant ant-is being maintained by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Eko bahūnāṁ yo vidadhāti kāmān. The one Supreme Being, Kṛṣṇa, maintains everyone. Our so-called source of income is our own choice only. If I wish to be a hunter, it will appear that hunting is the source of my income. If I become a brāhmaṇa and completely depend on Kṛṣṇa, I do not conduct a business, but nonetheless my maintenance is supplied by Kṛṣṇa. The hunter was disturbed about breaking his bow because he was worried about his income. Nārada Muni assured the hunter because he knew that the hunter was not being maintained by the bow but by Kṛṣṇa. Being the agent of Kṛṣṇa, Nārada Muni knew very well that the hunter would not suffer by breaking the bow. There was no doubt that Kṛṣṇa would supply him food.

TEXT 258

dhanuka bhāṅgi' vyādha tāṅra caraṇe paḍila tāre uṭhāñā nārada upadeśa kaila

SYNONYMS

dhanuka bhāṅgi'-breaking the bow; vyādha-the hunter; tāṅra-his (Nārada Muni's); caraṇe-at the lotus feet; paḍila-surrendered; tāre-him; uṭhāñā-raising; nārada-the great saint Nārada Muni; upadeśa kaila-gave instruction.

TRANSLATION

"Being thus assured by the great sage Nārada Muni, the hunter broke his bow, immediately fell down at the saint's lotus feet and fully surrendered. After this, Nārada Muni raised him with his hand and gave him instructions for spiritual advancement.

PURPORT

This is the process of initiation. The disciple must surrender to the spiritual master, the representative of Kṛṣṇa. The spiritual master, being in the disciplic succession stemming from Nārada Muni, is in the same category with Nārada Muni. A person can be relieved from his sinful activity if he surrenders to the lotus feet of a person who actually represents Nārada Muni. Nārada Muni gave instructions to the hunter after the hunter surrendered.

TEXT 259

"ghare giyā brāhmaṇe deha' yata āche dhana eka eka vastra pari' bāhira hao dui-jana ghare giyā-returning home; brāhmaṇe-to the brāhmaṇas, the most intelligent men in spiritual understanding; deha'-give; yata-whatever; āche-you have; dhana-riches; eka eka-each of you; vastra pari'-just one cloth; bāhira hao-leave home; dui-jana-both of you.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Nārada Muni then advised the hunter, 'Return home and distribute whatever riches you have to the pure brāhmaṇas who know the Absolute Truth. After distributing all your riches to the brāhmaṇas, both you and your wife should leave home, taking only one cloth to wear.'

PURPORT

This is the process of renunciation at the stage of vānaprastha. After enjoying householder life for some time, the husband and wife must leave home and distribute their riches to brāhmaṇas and Vaiṣṇavas. One can keep his wife as an assistant in the vānaprastha stage. The idea is that the wife will assist the husband in spiritual advancement. Therefore Nārada Muni advised the hunter to adopt the vānaprastha stage and leave home. It is not that a gṛhastha should live at home until he dies. Vānaprastha is preliminary to sannyāsa. In the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement there are many young couples engaged in the Lord's service. Eventually they are supposed to take vānaprastha, and after the vānaprastha stage the husband may take sannyāsa in order to preach. The wife may then remain alone and serve the Deity or engage in other activities within the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement.

TEXT 260

nadī-tīre eka-khāni kuṭīra kariyā tāra āge eka-piṇḍi tulasī ropiyā

SYNONYMS

nadī-tīre-on the bank of the river; eka-khāni-just one; kuṭīra-a cottage; kariyā-constructing; tāra āge-just in front of the cottage; eka-piṇḍi-one raised platform; tulasī-a tulasī plant; ropiyā-growing.

TRANSLATION

"Nārada Muni continued, 'Leave your home and go to the river. There you should construct a small cottage, and in front of the cottage you should grow a tulasī plant on a raised platform.

TEXT 261

tulasī-parikramā kara, tulasī-sevana nirantara kṛṣṇa-nāma kariha kīrtana

SYNONYMS

tulasī-parikramā kara-circumambulate the tulasī plant; tulasī-sevana-just supply water to the root of tulasī-devī; nirantara-continuously; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; kariha-just perform; kīrtana-chanting.

TRANSLATION

" 'After planting the tulasī tree before your house, you should daily circumambulate that tulasī plant, serve her by giving her water and other things, and continuously chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.'

PURPORT

This is the beginning of spiritual life. After leaving householder life, one may go to a holy place, such as the bank of the Ganges or Yamunā, and erect a small cottage. A small cottage can be constructed without any expenditure. Four logs serving as pillars can be secured by any man from the forest. The roof can be covered with leaves, and one can cleanse the inside. Thus one can live very peacefully. In any condition, any man can live in a small cottage, plant a tulasī tree, water it in the morning, offer it prayers, and continuously chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Thus one can make vigorous spiritual advancement. This is not at all difficult. One simply has to follow the instructions of the spiritual master strictly. Then everything will be successful in due course of time. As far as eating is concerned, there is no problem. If Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, supplies everyone with eatables, why should He not supply His devotee? Sometimes a devotee will not even bother to construct a cottage. He will simply go to live in a mountain cave. One may live in a cave, in a cottage beside a river, in a palace or in a big city like New York or London.

In any case, a devotee can follow the instructions of his spiritual master and engage in devotional service by watering the tulasī plant and chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. Taking the advice of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and our spiritual master, Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Gosvāmī Mahārāja, one can go to any part of the world and instruct people to become devotees of the Lord by following the regulative principles, worshiping the tulasī plant and continuously chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra.

āmi tomāya bahu anna pāṭhāimu dine sei anna labe, yata khāo dui-jane"

SYNONYMS

āmi-I; tomāya-for you; bahu-much; anna-food; pāṭhāimu-shall send; dine-every day; sei-that; anna-food; labe-you shall take; yata-whatever; khāo-you can eat; dui-jane-both of you.

TRANSLATION

"Nārada Muni continued, 'I shall send sufficient food to you both every day. You can take as much food as you want.'

PURPORT

When a person takes to Kṛṣṇa consciousness, there is no need to care for material necessities. Kṛṣṇa says that He personally carries all the necessities to His devotees.

ananyāś cintayanto māṁ ye janāḥ paryupāsate teṣāṁ nityābhiyuktānāṁ yoga-kṣemaṁ vahāmy aham

"Those who worship Me with love and devotion, meditating on My transcendental form-to them I carry what they lack and preserve what they have." (Bg. 9.22) Why should one be anxious about the necessities of life? The principle should be that one should not want more than what is absolutely necessary. Nārada Muni advises the hunter to accept only what is absolutely necessary for him and his wife. The devotee should always be alert to consume only those things that he absolutely requires and not create unnecessary needs.

TEXT 263

sustha hañā mṛgādi tine dhāñā palāila

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; sei-those; mṛga-ādi-animals, beginning with the deer; tine-three; nārada-the sage Nārada; sustha kaila-brought to their senses; sustha hañā-coming to consciousness; mṛga-ādi-the pierced animals; tine-three; dhāñā palāila-very swiftly fled away from that place.

TRANSLATION

"The three animals that were half-killed were then brought to their consciousness by the sage Nārada. Indeed, the animals got up and swiftly fled.

TEXT 264

ghare gela vyādha, guruke kari' namaskāra

SYNONYMS

dekhiyā-seeing; vyādhera-of the hunter; mane-in the mind; haila-there was; camatkāra-wonder; ghare-home; gela-went; vyādha-the hunter; guruke-to the spiritual master; kari' namaskāra-offering obeisances.

TRANSLATION

"When the hunter saw the half-killed animals flee, he was certainly struck with wonder. He then offered his respectful obeisances to the sage Nārada and returned home.

nāradera upadeśe sakala karila

SYNONYMS

yathā-sthāne-to the proper destination; nārada-sage Nārada; gelā-went; vyādha-the hunter; ghare āila-came back to his house; nāradera upadeśe-under the instruction of the sage Nārada; sakala karila-he executed everything.

TRANSLATION

"After all this, Nārada Muni went to his destination. After the hunter returned home, he exactly followed the instructions of his spiritual master, Nārada.

PURPORT

For spiritual advancement one must have a bona fide spiritual master and follow his instructions in order to be assured of advancement.

TEXT 266

grāme dhvani haila,–vyādha 'vaiṣṇava' ha-ila grāmera loka saba anna ānite lāgila

SYNONYMS

grāme-in the village; dhvani haila-there was news; vyādha-the hunter; vaiṣṇava ha-ila-has become a Vaiṣṇava, a lover and servitor of Lord Viṣṇu; grāmera loka-the villagers; saba-all kinds of; anna-food; ānite lāgila-began to bring.

TRANSLATION

"The news that the hunter had become a Vaiṣṇava spread all over the village. Indeed, all the villagers brought alms and presented them to the Vaiṣṇava who was formerly a hunter.

PURPORT

It is the duty of the public to present a gift to a saintly person, Vaiṣṇava or brāhmaṇa when going to see him. Every Vaiṣṇava is dependent on Kṛṣṇa, and Kṛṣṇa is ready to supply all of life's necessities, provided a Vaiṣṇava follows the principles set forth by the spiritual master. There are certainly many householders in our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. They join the movement and live in the society's centers, but if they take advantage of this opportunity and do not work but live at the expense of the movement, eating prasāda and simply sleeping, they place themselves in a very dangerous position. It is therefore advised that gṛhasthas should not live in the temple. They must live outside the temple and maintain themselves. Of course, if the gṛhasthas are fully engaged in the Lord's service according to the directions of the authorities, there is no harm in their living in a temple. In any case, a temple should not be a place to eat and sleep. A temple manager should be very careful about these things.

TEXT 267

SYNONYMS

eka-dina-in one day; anna-food; āne-brought; daśa-biśa jane-enough for ten to twenty men; dine-in a day; tata laya-would accept only as much; yata-as; khāya dui jane-the two of them required to eat.

TRANSLATION

"In one day enough food was brought for ten or twenty people, but the hunter and his wife would accept only as much as they could eat.

TEXT 268

SYNONYMS

eka-dina-one day; nārada kahe-Nārada Muni said; śunaha-please hear; parvate-my dear Parvata; āmāra-my; eka-one; śiṣya-disciple; āche-there is; calaha dekhite-let us go see.

TRANSLATION

"One day, while speaking to his friend Parvata Muni, Nārada Muni requested him to go with him to see his disciple the hunter.

TEXT 269

dūra haite vyādha pāila gurura daraśane

SYNONYMS

tabe-thereafter; dui ṛṣi-two saintly persons; āilā-came; sei vyādha-sthāne-to the place of that hunter; dūra haite-from a distant place; vyādha-the hunter; pāila-got; gurura daraśane-vision of his spiritual master.

TRANSLATION

"When the saintly sages came to the hunter's place, the hunter could see them coming from a distance.

TEXT 270

pathera pipīlikā iti-uti dhare pāya

SYNONYMS

āste-vyaste-with great alacrity; dhāñā-running; āse-came; patha nāhi pāya-does not get the path; pathera-on the path; pipīlikā-ants; iti-uti-here and there; dhare pāya-touch the foot.

TRANSLATION

"With great alacrity the hunter began to run toward his spiritual master, but he could not fall down and offer obeisances because ants were running hither and thither around his feet.

TEXT 271

daṇḍavat-sthāne pipīlikāre dekhiyā vastre sthāna jhāḍi' paḍe daṇḍavat hañā

SYNONYMS

daṇḍavat-sthāne-in the place where he wanted to offer his obeisances; pipīlikāre dekhiyā-seeing the ants; vastre-by the cloth; sthāna jhāḍi'-cleansing the place; paḍe daṇḍa-vat hañā-falls down flat like a rod.

TRANSLATION

"Seeing the ants, the hunter whisked them away with a piece of cloth. After thus clearing the ants from the ground, he fell down flat to offer his obeisances.

PURPORT

The word daṇḍa means "rod," and vat means "like." To offer obeisances to the spiritual master, one must fall flat exactly as a rod falls on the ground. This is the meaning of the word daṇḍavat.

TEXT 272

nārada kahe,–"vyādha, ei nā haya āścarya hari-bhaktye hiṁsā-śūnya haya sādhu-varya

SYNONYMS

nārada kahe-Nārada Muni said; vyādha-my dear hunter; ei nā āścarya-this is not wonderful for you; hari-bhaktye-by advancement in devotional service; hiṁsā-śūnya haya-one becomes nonviolent and nonenvious; sādhu-varya-thus one becomes the best of honest gentlemen.

TRANSLATION

”Nārada Muni said, ’My dear hunter, such behavior is not at all astonishing. A man in devotional service is automatically nonviolent. He is the best of gentlemen.

PURPORT

In this verse the word sādhu-varya means ”the best of gentlemen.” At the present moment there are many so-called gentlemen who are expert in killing animals and birds. Nonetheless, these so-called gentlemen profess a type of religion that strictly prohibits killing. According to Nārada Muni and Vedic culture, animal killers are not even gentlemen, to say nothing of being religious men. A religious person, a devotee of the Lord, must be nonviolent. Such is the nature of a religious person. It is contradictory to be violent and at the same time call oneself a religious person. Such hypocrisy is not approved by Nārada Muni and the disciplic succession.

TEXT 273

SYNONYMS

ete-all these; na-not; hi-certainly; adbhutāḥ-wonderful; vyādha-O hunter; tava-your; ahiṁsā-ādayaḥ-nonviolence and others; guṇāḥ-qualities; hari-bhaktau-in devotional service; pravṛttāḥ-engaged; ye-those who; na-not; te-they; syuḥ-are; paratāpinaḥ-envious of other living entities.

TRANSLATION

” ’O hunter, good qualities like nonviolence, which you have developed, are not very astonishing, for those engaged in the Lord’s devotional service are never inclined to give pain to others because of envy.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Skanda Purāṇa.

TEXT 274

tabe sei vyādha doṅhāre aṅgane ānila kuśāsana āni’ doṅhāre bhaktye vasāila tabe-thereafter; sei-that; vyādha-hunter; doṅhāre-both Nārada Muni and Parvata; aṅgane ānila-brought in the courtyard of his house; kuśa-āsana āni’-bringing straw mats for sitting; doṅhāre-both of them; bhaktye-with great devotion; vasāila-made to sit down.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”The hunter then received both the great sages in the courtyard of his house. He spread out a straw mat for them to sit upon, and with great devotion he begged them to sit down.

TEXT 275

jala āni’ bhaktye doṅhāra pāda prakṣālila sei jala strī-puruṣe piyā śire la-ila

SYNONYMS

jala āni’-bringing water; bhaktye-with great devotion; doṅhāra-of both of them; pāda prakṣālila-washed the feet; sei jala-that water; strī-puruṣe-husband and wife; piyā-drinking; śire la-ila-put on their heads.

TRANSLATION

”He then fetched water and washed the sages’ feet with great devotion. Then both husband and wife drank that water and sprinkled it on their heads.

PURPORT

This is the process one should follow when receiving the spiritual master or someone on the level of the spiritual master. When the spiritual master comes to the residence of his disciples, the disciples should follow in the footsteps of the former hunter. It doesn’t matter what one was before initiation. After initiation, one must learn the etiquette mentioned herein.

TEXT 276

SYNONYMS

kampa-trembling; pulaka-aśru-tears and jubilation; haila-there were; kṛṣṇa-nāma gāñā-chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra; ūrdhva bāhu-raising the arms; nṛtya kare-began to dance; vastra uḍāñā-waving his garments up and down.

TRANSLATION

”When the hunter chanted the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra before his spiritual master, his body trembled, and tears welled in his eyes. Filled with ecstatic love, he raised his hands and began to dance, waving his garments up and down.

TEXT 277

dekhiyā vyādhera prema parvata-mahāmuni nāradere kahe,–tumi hao sparśa-maṇi

SYNONYMS

dekhiyā-seeing; vyādhera-of the hunter; prema-the ecstatic love; parvata-mahā-muni-the great sage Parvata Muni; nāradere kahe-spoke to Nārada Muni; tumi hao sparśa-maṇi-you are certainly a touchstone.

TRANSLATION

”When Parvata Muni saw the ecstatic loving symptoms of the hunter, he told Nārada, ’Certainly you are a touchstone.’

PURPORT

When a touchstone touches iron, it turns the iron to gold. Parvata Muni called Nārada Muni a touchstone because by his touch the hunter, who was lowest among men, became an elevated and perfect Vaiṣṇava. Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura said that the position of a Vaiṣṇava can be tested by seeing how good a touchstone he is-that is, by seeing how many Vaiṣṇavas he has made during his life. A Vaiṣṇava should be a touchstone so that he can convert others to Vaiṣṇavism by his preaching, even though people may be fallen like the hunter. There are many so-called advanced devotees who sit in a secluded place for their personal benefit. They do not go out to preach and convert others into Vaiṣṇavas, and therefore they certainly cannot be called sparśa-maṇi, advanced devotees. Kaniṣṭha-adhikārī devotees cannot turn others into Vaiṣṇavas, but a madhyama-adhikārī Vaiṣṇava can do so by preaching. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu advised His followers to increase the numbers of Vaiṣṇavas.

yāre dekha, tāre kaha 'kṛṣṇa'-upadeśa āmāra ājñāya guru hañā tāra' ei deśa
(Cc. Madhya 7.128)

It is Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's wish that everyone should become a Vaiṣṇava and guru. Following the instructions of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His disciplic succession, one can become a spiritual master, for the process is very easy. One can go everywhere and anywhere to preach the instructions of Kṛṣṇa. Bhagavad-gītā is Kṛṣṇa's instructions; therefore the duty of every Vaiṣṇava is to travel and preach Bhagavad-gītā, either in his country or a foreign country. This is the test of sparśa-maṇi, following in the footsteps of Nārada Muni.

TEXT 278

"aho dhanyo 'si devarṣe kṛpayā yasya tat-kṣaṇāt nīco 'py utpulako lebhe lubdhako ratim acyute"

SYNONYMS

aho-oh; dhanyaḥ-glorified; asi-you are; deva-ṛṣe-O sage among the demigods; kṛpayā-by the mercy; yasya-of whom; tat-kṣaṇāt-immediately; nīcaḥ api-even though one is the lowest of men; utpulakaḥ-becoming agitated in ecstatic love; lebhe-gets; lubdhakaḥ-a hunter; ratim-attraction; acyute-unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

"Parvata Muni continued, 'My dear friend Nārada Muni, you are glorified as the sage among the demigods. By your mercy, even a lowborn person like this hunter can immediately become attached to Lord Kṛṣṇa.'

PURPORT

A pure Vaiṣṇava believes in the statements of the śāstras. This verse is quoted from Vedic literature, the Skanda Purāṇa.

TEXT 279

nārada kahe,–'vaiṣṇava, tomāra anna kichu āya?'
vyādha kahe, "yāre pāṭhāo, sei diyā yāya nārada kahe-Nārada Muni said; vaiṣṇava-O Vaiṣṇava; tomāra-your; anna-food; kichu āya-does any come; vyādha kahe-the hunter replied; yāre pāṭhāo-whoever you send; sei-that person; diyā-giving something; yāya-goes.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Nārada Muni then asked the hunter, 'My dear Vaiṣṇava, do you have some income for your maintenance?' The hunter replied, 'My dear spiritual master, whoever you send gives me something when he comes to see me.'

PURPORT

This confirms the statement in Bhagavad-gītā (9.22) to the effect that the Lord carries all necessities to His Vaiṣṇava devotee. Nārada Muni asked the former hunter how he was being maintained, and he replied that everyone who came to see him brought him something for his maintenance. Kṛṣṇa, who is situated in everyone's heart, says, "I personally carry all necessities to a Vaiṣṇava." He can order anyone to execute this. Everyone is ready to give something to a Vaiṣṇava, and if a Vaiṣṇava is completely engaged in devotional service, he need not be anxious for his maintenance.

TEXT 280

eta anna nā pāṭhāo, kichu kārya nāi sabe dui-janāra yogya bhakṣya-mātra cāi"

SYNONYMS

eta anna-so much food; nā pāṭhāo-you do not need to send; kichu kārya nāi-there is no such need; sabe-only; dui-janāra-for two persons; yogya-requisite; bhakṣya-mātra-eatables; cāi-we want.

TRANSLATION

"The former hunter said, 'Please do not send so may grains. Only send what is sufficient for two people, no more.'

PURPORT

The former hunter only wanted enough for two people to eat, no more. It is not necessary for a Vaiṣṇava to keep a stock of food for the next day. He should receive only sufficient grains to last one day. The next day, he must again depend on the Lord's mercy. This is the instruction of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. When His personal servant Govinda sometimes kept a stock of harītakī (myrobalan), Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu chastised him, saying, "Why did you keep a stock for the next day?" Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and others were begging daily from door to door for their sustenance, and they never attempted to stock their āśrama with food for the next day. We should not materially calculate, thinking, "It is better to stock food for a week. Why give the Lord trouble by having Him bring food daily?" One should be convinced that the Lord will provide daily. There is no need to stock food for the next day.

TEXT 281

nārada kahe,–'aiche raha, tumi bhāgyavān' eta bali' dui-jana ha-ilā antardhāna nārada kahe-Nārada Muni said; aiche raha-live like that; tumi bhāgyavān-certainly you are very fortunate; eta bali'-saying this; dui-jana-both Nārada Muni and Parvata Muni; ha-ilā antardhāna-disappeared.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Nārada Muni approved his not wanting more than a daily supply of food, and he blessed him, saying, 'You are fortunate.' Nārada Muni and Parvata Muni then disappeared from that place.

TEXT 282

ei ta' kahiluṅ tomāya vyādhera ākhyāna yā śunile haya sādhu-saṅga-prabhāva-jñāna ei ta' kahiluṅ-thus I have narrated; tomāya-unto you; vyādhera ākhyāna-the story of the hunter; yā śunile-hearing which; haya-there is; sādhu-saṅga-of the association of devotees; prabhāva-of the influence; jñāna-knowledge.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"So far I have narrated the incident of the hunter. By hearing this narration, one can understand the influence derived by associating with devotees.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted to stress that even a hunter, the lowest of men, could become a topmost Vaiṣṇava simply by associating with Nārada Muni or a devotee in his bona fide disciplic succession.

TEXT 283

ei āra tina artha gaṇanāte pāila ei dui artha mili' 'chābbiśa' artha haila ei-this example; āra-another; tina artha-three imports; gaṇanāte-in calculating; pāila-we have obtained; ei dui artha mili'-by adding these two imports; chābbiśa-twenty-six; artha-imports; haila-there have been.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"In this way we have found three more meanings. Combine these with the other meanings, and the total number of meanings add up to twenty-six in all.

TEXT 284

āra artha śuna, yāhā–arthera bhāṇḍāra sthūle 'dui' artha, sūkṣme 'batriśa' prakāra

SYNONYMS

āra-another; artha-import; śuna-hear; yāhā-which; arthera bhāṇḍāra-storehouse of knowledge; sthūle-grossly; dui artha-two meanings; sūkṣme-by a subtle import; batriśa-thirty-two; prakāra-varieties.

TRANSLATION

"There is yet another meaning, which is full of a variety of imports. Actually there are two gross meanings and thirty-two subtle meanings.

PURPORT

The two gross meanings refer to regulative devotional service and spontaneous devotional service. There are also thirty-two subtle meanings. Under the heading of regulative devotional service, there are sixteen meanings: (1) a servant of the Lord as His personal associate, (2) a personal friend, (3) personal parents or similar superiors, (4) a personal beloved, (5) a servant elevated by spiritual cultivation, (6) a friend by spiritual cultivation, (7) parents and superior devotees by cultivation of devotional service, (8) a beloved wife or female friend by cultivation of devotional service, (9) a mature devotee as a servant, (10) a mature devotee as a friend, (11) a mature devotee as a parent and superior, (12) a mature devotee as wife and beloved, (13) an immature devotee as servant, (14) an immature devotee as a friend, (15) an immature devotee as father and superior, and (16) an immature devotee as a beloved. Similarly, under the heading of spontaneous devotion there are also sixteen various associates. Therefore the total number of devotees under the headings of regular devotees and spontaneous devotees is thirty-two.

TEXT 285

'ātmā'-śabde kahe–sarva-vidha bhagavān
eka 'svayaṁ bhagavān', āra 'bhagavān'-ākhyāna

SYNONYMS

ātmā-śabde-by the word ātmā; kahe-it is said; sarva-vidha bhagavān-all types of Personalities of Godhead; eka-one; svayam bhagavān-the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa; āra-another; bhagavān-ākhyāna-the Personality of Godhead by an expansive designation.

TRANSLATION

"The word ātmā refers to all the different expansions of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. One of them is the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself, Kṛṣṇa, and the others are different incarnations or expansions of Kṛṣṇa.

The word ātmā also includes all kinds of Bhagavān, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This means that Kṛṣṇa has unlimited expansions. This is described in Brahma-saṁhitā (5.46):

dīpārcir eva hi daśāntaram abhyupetya dīpāyate vivṛta-hetu-samāna-dharmā yas tādṛg eva hi ca viṣṇutayā vibhāti
govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

These expansions are thus compared to candles that have been lit from an original candle. All the secondary candles are equally powerful, but the original candle is that from which all the others have been lit. Kṛṣṇa is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead, and He is expanded as Balarāma, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Aniruddha, Pradyumna and Vāsudeva. In this way there are innumerable incarnations and expansions who are also called Bhagavān, the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TEXT 286

SYNONYMS

tāṅte-in all those Supreme Personalities of Godhead; rame-takes pleasure in devotional service; yei-those persons who; sei saba-all of them; ātmārāma-are also known as ātmārāma; vidhi-bhakta-devotees following the regulative principles; rāga-bhakta-devotees following spontaneous love; dui-vidha nāma-two different varieties.

TRANSLATION

”One who always engages in the service of the Supreme Personality of Godhead is called ātmārāma. There are two types of ātmārāma. One is an ātmārāma engaged in regulative devotional service, and the other is an ātmārāma engaged in spontaneous devotional service.

TEXT 287

dui-vidha bhakta haya cāri cāri prakāra pāriṣada, sādhana-siddha, sādhaka-gaṇa āra

SYNONYMS

dui-vidha bhakta-these two varieties of ātmārāma devotees; haya-are; cāri cāri prakāra-each of four different categories; pāriṣada-personal associate; sādhana-siddha-liberated to the position of associates by perfection in devotional service; sādhaka-gaṇa āra-and devotees already engaged in the devotional service of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

”The ātmārāmas engaged in regulative and spontaneous devotional service are further categorized into four groups. There are the eternal associates, the associates who have become perfect by devotional service, and those who are engaged in devotional service and are called sādhaka.

TEXT 288

jāta-ajāta-rati-bhede sādhaka dui bheda vidhi-rāga-mārge cāri cāri–aṣṭa bheda

SYNONYMS

jāta-ajāta-rati-bhede-by distinction of mature love and immature love; sādhaka dui bheda-those practicing are of two varieties; vidhi-regulative devotion; rāga-spontaneous devotion; mārge-on both the paths; cāri cāri-there are four different varieties; aṣṭa bheda-a total of eight kinds.

TRANSLATION

”Those who are practicing devotional service are either mature or immature. Therefore the sādhakas are of two types. Since the devotees execute either regulative devotional service or spontaneous devotional service and there are four groups within these two divisions, altogether there are eight varieties.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that the original Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and His expansions are also called the Personality of Godhead. However, Kṛṣṇa is the original Supreme Personality of Godhead. Speculative philosophers and mystic yogīs also meditate upon the form of Kṛṣṇa, but this form is not the form of the original Supreme Personality of Godhead. Such a Bhagavān is but a partial representation of the Lord’s full potency. Nonetheless, He has to be understood to be the Supreme Personality of Godhead. To clarify this matter, one should simply understand that Kṛṣṇa, the son of Nanda Mahārāja in Vṛndāvana, the friend of the cowherd boys and lover of the gopīs, is actually the original Supreme Personality of Godhead. He is attained by spontaneous love. Although His expansions are also called the Supreme Personality of Godhead, They are attained only by the execution of regulative devotional service.

TEXT 289

vidhi-bhaktye nitya-siddha pāriṣada–’dāsa’
’sakhā’ ’guru’ ’kāntā-gaṇa’,–cāri-vidha prakāśa

SYNONYMS

vidhi-bhaktye-by regulative devotional service; nitya-siddha pāriṣada-eternally perfect associate; dāsa-the servant; sakhā guru kāntā-gaṇa-friends, superiors and beloved damsels; cāri-vidha prakāśa-they are manifested in four varieties.

TRANSLATION

”By executing regulative devotional service, one is elevated to the platform of an eternally perfect associate-such as a servant, friend, superior or beloved woman. These are of four varieties.

TEXT 290

sādhana-siddha–dāsa, sakhā, guru, kānta-gaṇa jāta-rati sādhaka-bhakta–cāri-vidha jana sādhana-siddha-those who have perfected themselves by devotional service; dāsa-servants; sakhā-friends; guru-superiors; kāntā-gaṇa-beloved damsels; jāta-rati sādhaka-bhakta-devotees who have become mature by devotional service; cāri-vidha jana-they are also of four varieties.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

”Among those who have perfected themselves by devotional service, there are servants, friends, superiors and beloved damsels. Similarly, there are four types of mature devotees.

TEXT 291

ajāta-rati sādhaka-bhakta,–e cāri prakāra vidhi-mārge bhakte ṣoḍaśa bheda pracāra

SYNONYMS

ajāta-rati sādhaka-bhakta-immature devotees engaged in devotional service; e cāri prakāra-there are also the same four varieties; vidhi-mārge-on the path of regulative devotional service; bhakte-devotees; ṣoḍaśa bheda pracāra-there are sixteen varieties.

TRANSLATION

"Within the category of regulative devotional service, there are also immature devotees. These are also of four varieties. Thus in regulative devotional service there are altogether sixteen varieties.

TEXT 292

rāga-mārge aiche bhakte ṣoḍaśa vibheda dui mārge ātmārāmera batriśa vibheda

SYNONYMS

rāga-mārge-on the path of spontaneous loving service; aiche-in the same way; bhakte-all the devotees; ṣoḍaśa vibheda-divided into sixteen varieties; dui mārge-on the two paths, namely regulative devotional service and spontaneous devotional service; ātmārāmera-of persons enjoying with the Supreme Self; batriśa vibheda-there are thirty-two varieties of devotees.

TRANSLATION

"On the path of spontaneous devotional service, there are also sixteen categories of devotees. Thus there are thirty-two types of ātmārāmas enjoying the Supreme Lord on these two paths.

TEXT 293

'muni', 'nirgrantha', 'ca' 'api',–cāri śabdera artha yāhāṅ yei lāge, tāhā kariye samartha

SYNONYMS

muni-the sage; nirgrantha-either learned or foolish; ca-also; api-in spite of; cāri śabdera artha-the meanings of these four words; yāhāṅ-wherever; yei lāge-they apply; tāhā kariye samartha-make them sound.

TRANSLATION

"When these thirty-two types of devotees are qualified with the words muni nirgrantha ca api, they can be increased in different ways and very soundly elaborated upon.

TEXT 294

batriśe chābbiśe mili, aṣṭa-pañcāśa āra eka bheda śuna arthera prakāśa

SYNONYMS

batriśe-these thirty-two varieties; chābbiśe-the formerly described twenty-six varieties; mili'-added together; aṣṭa-pañcāśa-they become fifty-eight; āra-another; eka-one; bheda-different; śuna-please hear; arthera prakāśa-manifestation of import.

TRANSLATION

"When we add the twenty-six types of devotees to these thirty-two, they altogether number fifty-eight. You may now hear from Me of manifestations with different meanings.

TEXT 295

itaretara 'ca' diyā samāsa kariye
'āṭānna' bāra ātmārāma nāma la-iye

SYNONYMS

itaretara-in different varieties; ca-the word ca; diyā-adding; samāsa kariye-make a compound word; āṭānna bāra-fifty-eight times; ātmārāma-the ātmārāma devotees; nāma la-iye-I take their different names.

TRANSLATION

"In this way, as I add the word ca to one word after another, I make a compound. Thus the different names of ātmārāmas can be taken fifty-eight times.

TEXT 296

'ātmārāmāś ca ātmārāmāś ca' āṭānna-bāra
śeṣe saba lopa kari' rākhi eka-bāra

SYNONYMS

ātmārāmāḥ ca ātmārāmāḥ ca-repeating ātmārāmāḥ; āṭānna-bāra-fifty-eight times; śeṣe-at the end; saba lopa kari'-rejecting all; rākhi-we keep; eka-bāra-only one.

TRANSLATION

"In this way, one can repeat the word ātmārāmāḥ with ca for each of the fifty-eight meanings. By following the rule previously stated and rejecting all but the last, we retain that which represents all the meanings.

TEXT 297

sarūpāṇām eka-śeṣa eka-vibhaktau, uktārthānām aprayoga iti

SYNONYMS

sa-rūpāṇām-of words of the same form; eka-śeṣaḥ-only the last; eka-vibhaktau-in the same case; ukta-arthānām-of the previously spoken meanings; aprayogaḥ-nonapplication; iti-thus.

TRANSLATION

" 'Of words having the same form and case termination, the last one is the only one retained.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Pāṇini's sūtras (1.2.64).

TEXT 298

āṭānna ca-kārera saba lopa haya eka ātmārāma-śabde āṭānna artha kaya

SYNONYMS

āṭānna-fifty-eight; ca-kārera-of the additions of the word ca; saba lopa haya-all of them are rejected; eka-one; ātmārāma-ātmārāma; śabde-by the word; āṭānna artha kaya-fifty-eight imports are automatically derived.

TRANSLATION

”When all the ca-kāra, or additions to the word ca, are taken away, fifty-eight different meanings can still be understood by the one word ātmārāma.

TEXT 299

aśvattha-vṛkṣāś ca baṭa-vṛkṣāś ca kapittha-vṛkṣāś ca āmra-vṛkṣāś ca vṛkṣāḥ

SYNONYMS

aśvattha-vṛkṣāḥ-banyan trees; ca-and; baṭa-vṛkṣāḥ-fig trees; ca-and; kapittha-vṛkṣāḥ-a type of tree named kapittha; ca-and; āmra-vṛkṣāḥ-mango trees; ca-and; vṛkṣāḥ-all indicated by the word ”trees.”

TRANSLATION

” ’By the plural word vṛkṣāḥ [trees], all trees, such as banyan trees, fig trees, kapittha trees and mango trees, are indicated.’

TEXT 300

”asmin vane vṛkṣāḥ phalanti” yaiche haya
taiche saba ātmārāma kṛṣṇe bhakti karaya

SYNONYMS

asmin vane-in this forest; vṛkṣāḥ phalanti-different varieties of trees bear fruit; yaiche haya-just as in this sentence; taiche-similarly; saba-all; ātmārāma-self-realized souls; kṛṣṇe bhakti karaya-engage themselves in loving devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”This ātmārāma verse is like the sentence, ’In this forest many different trees bear fruit.’ All ātmārāmas render devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 301

’ātmārāmāś ca’ samuccaye kahiye ca-kāra
’munayaś ca’ bhakti kare,–ei artha tāra

SYNONYMS

ātmārāmāḥ ca-similarly the word ātmārāmāḥ with the word ca added; samuccaye-in aggregation; kahiye-means; ca-kāra-the word ca; munayaḥ ca-the word munayaḥ with the word ca added; bhakti kare-all of them engage in devotional service; ei artha tāra-this is the perfect meaning of the verse.

TRANSLATION

”After fifty-eight times uttering the word ātmārāmāḥ and taking ca in a sense of aggregation, one may add the word munayaḥ. That will mean that they also render devotional service to Lord Kṛṣṇa. In this way there are fifty-nine meanings.

TEXT 302

’nirgranthā eva’ hañā, ’api’–nirdhāraṇe ei ’ūnaṣaṣṭi’ prakāra artha kariluṅ vyākhyāne

SYNONYMS

nirgranthā-the word nirgranthā; eva-also the word eva; hañā-becoming; api-the word api; nirdhāraṇe-in fixation; ei ūnaṣaṣṭi prakāra artha-in this way fifty-nine imports; kariluṅ vyākhyāne-I have described.

TRANSLATION

”Then taking the word nirgranthā and considering api in the sense of sustenance, I have tried to explain fifty-nine meanings of the word.

TEXT 303

sarva-samuccaye āra eka artha haya
’ātmārāmāś ca munayaś ca nirgranthāś ca’ bhajaya

SYNONYMS

sarva-samuccaye-taking all of them together; āra-another; eka-one; artha-import; haya-there is; ātmārāmāḥ ca munayaḥ ca nirgranthāḥ ca bhajaya-the ātmārāmas, great sages and nirgranthas (the learned and the fools) are all eligible to engage in the transcendental loving service of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

”Taking all the words together, there is another meaning. Whether one is an ātmārāma, a great sage, or nirgrantha, everyone must engage in the service of the Lord.

PURPORT

The word sarva-samuccaye is significant here. It includes all classes of men-ātmārāma, muni and nirgrantha. Everyone engages in the service of the Lord. Taking the word api in the sense of ascertainment, there are, all together, sixty different meanings.

TEXT 304

’api’-śabda–avadhāraṇe, seha cāri bāra
cāri-śabda-saṅge evera karibe uccāra

SYNONYMS

api-śabda-the word api; avadhāraṇe-in the matter of ascertaining; seha cāri bāra-those four times; cāri-śabda-four words; saṅge-with; evera-of the word eva; karibe-one can do; uccāra-pronouncing.

TRANSLATION

”The word api is then used in the sense of ascertainment, and then four times with four words the word eva can be uttered.

TEXT 305

”urukrame eva bhaktim eva ahaitukīm eva kurvanty eva”

SYNONYMS

urukrame-unto the most powerful; eva-only; bhaktim-devotional service; eva-only; ahaitukīm-without motives; eva-only; kurvanti-they perform; eva-only.

TRANSLATION

”The words urukrama, bhakti, ahaitukī and kurvanti are added to the word eva again and again. Thus another meaning is explained.

TEXT 306

ei ta’ kahiluṅ ślokera ’ṣaṣṭi’ saṅkhyaka artha āra eka artha śuna pramāṇe samartha

SYNONYMS

ei ta’-thus; kahiluṅ-I have explained; ślokera-of the verse; ṣaṣṭi-sixty; saṅkhyaka-numbering; artha-imports; āra-another; eka-one; artha-import; śuna-please hear; pramāṇe samartha-quite fit for giving evidence.

TRANSLATION

”Now I have given sixty different meanings to the verse, and yet there is another meaning which is also very strongly evident.

TEXT 307

’ātmā’-śabde kahe ’kṣetrajña jīva’-lakṣaṇa
brahmādi kīṭa-paryanta–tāṅra śaktite gaṇana

SYNONYMS

ātmā-śabde-by the word ātmā; kahe-it is said; kṣetra-jña jīva-the living entity who knows about his body; lakṣaṇa-symptom; brahmā-ādi-beginning from Lord Brahmā; kīṭa-paryanta-down to the insignificant ant; tāṅra-His; śaktite-as the marginal potency; gaṇana-counting.

TRANSLATION

”The word ātmā also refers to the living entity who knows about his body. That is another symptom. From Lord Brahmā down to the insignificant ant, everyone is counted as the marginal potency of the Lord.

TEXT 308

viṣṇu-śaktiḥ parā proktā
kṣetrajñākhyā tathā parā avidyā-karma-saṁjñānyā tṛtīyā śaktir iṣyate

SYNONYMS

viṣṇu-śaktiḥ-the potency of Lord Viṣṇu; parā-spiritual; proktā-it is said; kṣetra-jña-ākhyā-the potency known as kṣetrajña; tathā-as well as; parā-spiritual; avidyā-ignorance; karma-fruitive activities; saṁjñā-known as; anyā-other; tṛtīyā-third; śaktiḥ-potency; iṣyate-known thus.

TRANSLATION

” ’The potency of Lord Viṣṇu is summarized in three categories-namely the spiritual potency, the living entities and ignorance. The spiritual potency is full of knowledge; the living entities, although belonging to the spiritual potency, are subject to bewilderment; and the third energy, which is full of ignorance, is always visible in fruitive activities.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Viṣṇu Purāṇa. For an explanation, see Ādi-līlā (7.119).

TEXT 309

”kṣetrajña ātmā puruṣaḥ pradhānaṁ prakṛtiḥ striyām”

SYNONYMS

kṣetra-jñaḥ-the word kṣetrajña; ātmā-the living entity; puruṣaḥ-the enjoyer; pradhānam-the chief; prakṛtiḥ-the material nature; striyām-in the feminine gender.

TRANSLATION

” ’The word kṣetrajña refers to the living entity, the enjoyer, the chief and material nature.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Svarga-varga (7) of the Amara-kośa dictionary.

TEXT 310

bhramite bhramite yadi sādhu-saṅga pāya saba tyaji’ tabe tiṅho kṛṣṇere bhajaya

SYNONYMS

bhramite bhramite-wandering in different forms in different manners; yadi-if; sādhu-saṅga pāya-one obtains the association of devotees; saba tyaji’-giving up everything; tabe-then; tiṅho-he; kṛṣṇere bhajaya-engages himself in the service of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”The living entities are wandering in different species of life on different planets, but if by chance they get the association of a pure devotee [sādhu] they give up all other engagements and engage in the service of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 311

ṣāṭi artha kahiluṅ, saba–kṛṣṇera bhajane sei artha haya ei saba udāharaṇe

SYNONYMS

ṣāṭi-sixty; artha-imports; kahiluṅ-I explained; saba-all; kṛṣṇera bhajane-aiming at rendering transcendental loving service to Kṛṣṇa; sei artha haya-that is the only meaning; ei saba-all these; udāharaṇe-examples.

TRANSLATION

"I have thus explained sixty different meanings, and all of them aim at the service of Lord Kṛṣṇa. After giving so many examples, that is the only meaning.

TEXT 312

'eka-ṣaṣṭi' artha ebe sphurila tomā-saṅge tomāra bhakti-vaśe uṭhe arthera taraṅge

SYNONYMS

eka-ṣaṣṭi-sixty-one; artha-imports; ebe-now; sphurila-has awakened; tomā-saṅge-because of your association; tomāra-your; bhakti-vaśe-by dint of devotional service; uṭhe-there arises; arthera-of imports; taraṅge-waves.

TRANSLATION

"Now, due to your association, another meaning has awakened. It is due to your devotional service that these waves of meaning are arising.

PURPORT

The word ātmā refers to the living entity. From Lord Brahmā down to an insignificant ant, everyone is considered a living entity. Living entities are considered part of the Lord's marginal potency. All of them are kṣetrajña, knowers of the body. When they become nirgrantha, or free, saintly persons, they engage in Lord Kṛṣṇa's service. That is the sixty-first meaning of the verse.

TEXT 313

ahaṁ vedmi śuko vetti vyāso vetti na vetti vā bhaktyā bhāgavataṁ grāhyaṁ na buddhyā na ca ṭīkayā

SYNONYMS

aham-I (Lord Śiva); vedmi-know; śukaḥ-Śukadeva Gosvāmī; vetti-knows; vyāsaḥ-Vyāsadeva; vetti-knows; na vetti vā-or may not know; bhaktyā-by devotional service (executed in nine different processes); bhāgavatam-the Bhāgavata Purāṇa (called Paramahaṁsa-saṁhitā, the text or treatise readable by the topmost transcendentalists); grāhyam-to be accepted; na-not; buddhyā-by so-called intelligence or experimental knowledge; na-nor; ca-also; ṭīkayā-by imaginary commentary.

TRANSLATION

"[Lord Śiva said,] 'I may know; Śukadeva Gosvāmī, the son of Vyāsadeva, may know; and Vyāsadeva may know or may not know the Śrīmad Bhāgavatam. On the whole, Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, the spotless Purāṇa, can be learned only through devotional service, not by material intelligence, speculative methods or imaginary commentaries.' "

PURPORT

Devotional service includes nine processes, beginning with hearing, chanting and remembering the activities of Lord Viṣṇu. Only one who has taken to devotional service can understand Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, which is the spotless Purāṇa for a transcendentalist (paramahaṁsa). So-called commentaries are useless for this purpose. According to the Vedic injunction: yasya deve parā bhaktir yathā deve tathā gurau. All Vedic literatures maintain that Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam has to be learned from the person bhāgavata, and to understand it one has to engage in pure devotional service. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam cannot be understood by so-called erudite scholars or grammarians. One who has developed pure Kṛṣṇa consciousness and has served the pure devotee, the spiritual master, can understand Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Others cannot.

artha śuni' sanātana vismita hañā stuti kare mahāprabhura caraṇe dhariyā

SYNONYMS

artha śuni'-by hearing the meaning (of the ātmārāma verse); sanātana-Sanātana Gosvāmī; vismita hañā-becoming struck with wonder; stuti kare-offers prayers; mahāprabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; caraṇe dhariyā-touching the lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

After hearing all the explanations of all the different meanings of the ātmārāma verse, Sanātana Gosvāmī was struck with wonder. He fell down at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and began to offer prayers.

TEXT 315

"sākṣāt īśvara tumi vrajendra-nandana tomāra niśvāse sarva-veda-pravartana

SYNONYMS

sākṣāt īśvara tumi-You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead; vrajendra-nandana-the son of Mahārāja Nanda; tomāra niśvāse-by Your breathing; sarva-veda-all Vedic literatures; pravartana-are vibrated.

TRANSLATION

Sanātana Gosvāmī said, "My dear Lord, You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, the son of Mahārāja Nanda. All the Vedic literatures are vibrated through Your breathing.

TEXT 316

tumi–vaktā bhāgavatera, tumi jāna artha tomā vinā anya jānite nāhika samartha"

SYNONYMS

tumi-Your Lordship; vaktā-the speaker; bhāgavatera-of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; tumi-You; jāna-know; artha-the import; tomā vinā-except for You; anya-anyone else; jānite-to know; nāhika-is not; samartha-able.

TRANSLATION

”My dear Lord, You are the original speaker of the Bhāgavatam. You therefore know its real import. But for You, no one can understand the confidential meaning of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.”

PURPORT

Following this statement by Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī, we have written our introduction to Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (First Canto, Part One, pages 7-41).

TEXT 317

prabhu kahe,–”kene kara āmāra stavana bhāgavatera svarūpa kene nā kara vicāraṇa?

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; kene kara-why do you do; āmāra stavana-My personal glorification; bhāgavatera sva-rūpa-the real form of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; kene-why; nā kara-you do not do; vicāraṇa-consideration.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu replied, ”Why are you glorifying Me personally? You should understand the transcendental position of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Why don't you consider this important point?

TEXT 318

kṛṣṇa-tulya bhāgavata–vibhu, sarvāśraya prati-śloke prati-akṣare nānā artha kaya

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-tulya bhāgavata-Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is identical with Kṛṣṇa; vibhu-the supreme; sarva-āśraya-the origin of everything, or that which controls everything; prati-śloke-in every verse; prati-akṣare-in every syllable; nānā artha kaya-there are varieties of imports.

TRANSLATION

”Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is as great as Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Lord and shelter of everything. In each and every verse of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and in each and every syllable, there are various meanings.

TEXT 319

praśnottare bhāgavate kariyāche nirdhāra yāṅhāra śravaṇe loke lāge camatkāra

SYNONYMS

praśna-uttare-in the form of questions and answers; bhāgavate-in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; kariyāche-has made; nirdhāra-conclusion; yāṅhāra śravaṇe-hearing which; loke-in all people; lāge-there is; camatkāra-wonderful astonishment.

TRANSLATION

”The form of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is given in questions and answers. Thus the conclusion is established. By hearing these questions and answers, one is highly astonished.

TEXT 320

brūhi yogeśvare kṛṣṇe brahmaṇye dharma-varmaṇi svāṁ kāṣṭhām adhunopete dharmaḥ kaṁ śaraṇaṁ gataḥ

SYNONYMS

brūhi-kindly explain; yoga-īśvare-the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the master of all mystic power; kṛṣṇe-Lord Kṛṣṇa; brahmaṇye-the protector of brahminical culture; dharma-varmaṇi-the strong arms of religious principles; svām-His own; kāṣṭhām-to the personal abode; adhunā-at present; upete-having returned; dharmaḥ-the religious principles; kam-unto what; śaraṇam-shelter; gataḥ-have gone.

TRANSLATION

” 'Now that Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Absolute Truth, the master of all mystic powers, has departed for His own abode, please tell us by whom religious principles are presently protected.'

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.1.23) was a question raised by all the sages, who were headed by Śaunaka. This question put before the great devotee Sūta Gosvāmī is the foremost of the six questions raised. The answer to this important question is given in the next verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.3.43).

TEXT 321

kṛṣṇe svadhāmopagate dharma-jñānādibhiḥ saha kalau naṣṭa-dṛśām eṣa purāṇārko 'dhunoditaḥ

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇe-Lord Kṛṣṇa; sva-dhāma-to His personal abode; upagate-having returned; dharma-jñāna-ādibhiḥ saha-along with religious principles, transcendental knowledge, and so on; kalau-in this Age of Kali; naṣṭa-dṛśām-of persons who have lost their spiritual vision; eṣaḥ-this; purāṇa-arkaḥ-Purāṇa or Vedic literature that shines like the sun; adhunā-at the present moment; uditaḥ-has arisen.

TRANSLATION

" 'After Lord Kṛṣṇa departed for His abode along with religious principles and transcendental knowledge, this Purāṇa, Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, has arisen like the sun in this Age of Kali to enlighten those who have no spiritual vision.'

TEXT 322

ei mata kahiluṅ eka ślokera vyākhyāna vātulera pralāpa kari' ke kare pramāṇa?

SYNONYMS

ei mata-in this way; kahiluṅ-I have spoken; eka-one; ślokera-of a verse; vyākhyāna-the explanation; vātulera pralāpa-the talking of a madman; kari'-doing; ke kare pramāṇa-who will accept this as evidential proof.

TRANSLATION

"In this way, like a madman, I have explained the meaning of just one verse. I do not know who will take this as evidence.

TEXT 323

āmā-hena yebā keha 'vātula' haya ei-dṛṣṭe bhāgavatera artha jānaya"

SYNONYMS

āmā-hena-exactly like Me; yebā-anyone who; keha-a person; vātula haya-becomes a madman; ei-dṛṣṭe-according to this process; bhāgavatera-of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; artha-import; jānaya-he can understand.

TRANSLATION

"If one becomes a madman like Me, he may also understand the meaning of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam by this process."

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu plainly explains that Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam cannot be understood by those who are materially situated. In other words, one has to become a madman like Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Apart from being the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is an ācārya who exhibited love of God like a madman. According to His own written verse: yugāyitaṁ nimeṣeṇa. He says that for Him, "a moment seems to last twelve years." Cakṣuṣā prāvṛṣāyitam: "My tears are flowing like torrents of rain." Śūnyāyitaṁ jagat sarvam: "I feel as if the entire universe were vacant." Why? Govinda-viraheṇa me: "Due to My being separated from Govinda, Kṛṣṇa."

One can understand Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam only by following in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who was mad for Kṛṣṇa. We cannot, of course, imitate Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. It is not possible. However, unless one is very serious about understanding Kṛṣṇa, he cannot understand Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam gives the full narration of Kṛṣṇa's transcendental activities. The first nine cantos explain who Kṛṣṇa is, and the Lord's birth and activities are narrated in the Tenth Canto. In Bhagavad-gītā it is stated: janma karma ca me divyam. Kṛṣṇa's appearance and disappearance are transcendental, not mundane. A person is eligible to return home, back to Godhead, if he perfectly understands Kṛṣṇa and His appearance and disappearance. This is verified by Bhagavad-gītā: tyaktvā dehaṁ punar janma naiti mām eti so 'rjuna.

It is therefore concluded that one has to learn about Kṛṣṇa from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and Bhagavad-gītā, and one has to follow in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Those who do not follow Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu cannot understand Bhagavad-gītā and Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

TRANSLATION

"I am a most lowborn person. I have no knowledge of good behavior. How is it possible for me to write authorized directions about Vaiṣṇava activities?"

PURPORT

Actually Sanātana Gosvāmī belonged to a very respectable brāhmaṇa family. Nonetheless, he submitted himself as a fallen, lowborn person because he had served in the Mohammedan government. A brāhmaṇa is never supposed to be engaged for anyone's service. Accepting service for a livelihood (paricaryātmakaṁ karma) is the business of śūdras. The brāhmaṇa is always independent and busy studying śāstra and preaching śāstra to subordinate social members such as kṣatriyas and vaiśyas. Sanātana Gosvāmī felt unfit to write Vaiṣṇava smṛti about the behavior of Vaiṣṇavas because he had fallen from the brahminical position. Thus Sanātana Gosvāmī clearly admits that the brahminical culture should be standardized. Presently in India, so-called brāhmaṇas are almost all engaged in some mundane service, and they do not understand the import of the Vedic śāstras. Nonetheless, they are passing themselves off as brāhmaṇas on the basis of birth. In this connection, Sanātana Gosvāmī declares that a brāhmaṇa cannot be engaged in anyone's service if he wants to take a leading part in society. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam Nārada Muni states that even if a brāhmaṇa is in a difficult position, he should not accept the occupation of a śūdra. This means that he should not be engaged in service for another, for this is the business of dogs. Under the circumstances, Sanātana Gosvāmī felt very low because he had accepted the service of the Muslim government. The conclusion is that no one should claim to be a brāhmaṇa simply by birthright while engaging in someone else's service.

Sanātana Gosvāmī then requested the Lord, "Please personally tell me how I can write this difficult book about Vaiṣṇava behavior. Please manifest Yourself in my heart.

PURPORT

The writing of Vaiṣṇava literatures is not a function for ordinary men. Vaiṣṇava literatures are not mental concoctions. They are all authorized literature meant to guide those who are going to be Vaiṣṇavas. Under these circumstances, an ordinary man cannot give his own opinion. His opinion must always correspond with the conclusion of the Vedas. Unless one is fully qualified in Vaiṣṇava behavior and authorized by superior authority (the Supreme Personality of Godhead), one cannot write Vaiṣṇava literatures or purports and commentaries on Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and Bhagavad-gītā.

TRANSLATION

"In your book there should be the characteristics of the bona fide guru and the bona fide disciple. Then, before accepting a spiritual master, one can be assured of the spiritual master's position. Similarly, the spiritual master can also be assured of the disciple's position. The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, should be described as the worshipable object, and you should consider the bīja-mantra for the worship of Kṛṣṇa, Rāma or any other expansion of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

PURPORT

In the Padma Purāṇa, the characteristics of the guru, the bona fide spiritual master, have been described:

mahā-bhāgavata-śreṣṭho brāhmaṇo vai gurur nṛṇām sarveṣām eva lokānām asau pūjyo yathā hariḥ mahā-kula-prasūto 'pi sarva-yajñeṣu dīkṣitaḥ sahasra-śākhādhyāyī ca na guruḥ syād avaiṣṇavaḥ

The guru must be situated on the topmost platform of devotional service. There are three classes of devotees, and the guru must be accepted from the topmost class. The first-class devotee is the spiritual master for all kinds of people. It is said: gurur nṛṇām. The word nṛṇām means "of all human beings." The guru is not limited to a particular group. It is stated in the Upadeśāmṛta of Rūpa Gosvāmī that a guru is a gosvāmī, a controller of the senses and the mind. Such a guru can accept disciples from all over the world. Pṛthivīṁ sa śiṣyāt. This is the test of the guru.

In India there are many so-called gurus, and they are limited to a certain district or a province. They do not even travel about India, yet they declare themselves to be jagad-guru, gurus of the whole world. Such cheating gurus should not be accepted. Anyone can see how the bona fide spiritual master accepts disciples from all over the world. The guru is a qualified brāhmaṇa; therefore he knows Brahman and Parabrahman. He thus devotes his life for the service of Parabrahman. The bona fide spiritual master who accepts disciples from all over the world is also worshiped all over the world because of his qualities. Lokānām asau pūjyo yathā hariḥ: the people of the world worship him just as they worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead. All these honors are offered to him because he strictly follows the brahminical principles and teaches these principles to his disciples. Such a person is called an ācārya because he knows the principles of devotional service, he behaves in that way himself, and he teaches his disciples to follow in his footsteps. Thus he is an ācārya or jagad-guru. Even though a person is born in a brahminical family and is very expert in performing sacrifices, he cannot be accepted as a guru if he is not a strict Vaiṣṇava. A guru is a brāhmaṇa by qualification, and he can turn others into brāhmaṇas according to the śāstric principles and brahminical qualifications. Brahmanism is not a question of heredity. In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.32.11) Śrī Nārada Muni tells Mahārāja Yudhiṣṭhira what a brāhmaṇa is. He states that if brahminical qualifications are observed in kṣatriyas, vaiśyas or even śūdras, one should accept them as brāhmaṇas. In this regard, Śrīla Śrīdhara Svāmī has commented: śamādibhir eva brāhmaṇādi-vyavahāro mukhyaḥ, na jāti-mātrādīty āha-yasyeti. yad yadi anyatra varṇāntare 'pi dṛśyeta, tad-varṇāntaraṁ tenaiva lakṣaṇa-nimittenaiva varṇena vinirdiśet, na tu jāti-nimittenety arthaḥ.

There is a similar statement made by Nīlakaṇṭha, the commentator on Mahābhārata:

śūdro 'pi śamādy-upeto brāhmaṇa eva brāhmaṇo 'pi kāmādy-upetaḥ śūdra eva

"Although one may be born in a śūdra family, if he is endowed with the brahminical qualities beginning with śama [control of the mind], he is to be accepted as a brāhmaṇa. Although one may be born in a brāhmaṇa family, if he is endowed with the qualities beginning with kāma [lust], he is to be considered a śūdra." No one should present himself as a brāhmaṇa simply on the basis of being born in a brahminical family. One must be qualified by the brahminical qualities mentioned in the śāstras, particularly Bhagavad-gītā:

śamo damas tapaḥ śaucaṁ
kṣāntir ārjavam eva ca
jñānaṁ vijñānam āstikyaṁ
brahma-karma svabhāva-jam

"Peacefulness, self-control, austerity, purity, tolerance, honesty, wisdom, knowledge and religiousness-these are the qualities by which the brāhmaṇas work." (Bg. 18.42)

Unless one is qualified with all these attributes, he cannot be accepted as a brāhmaṇa. It is not a question of simply taking birth in a brāhmaṇa family. In this regard, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura remarks that Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura and Śyāmānanda Gosvāmī, although not born in brāhmaṇa families, are accepted as bona fide spiritual masters because they were brāhmaṇas by qualification. Personalities like Śrī Gaṅgā-nārāyaṇa, Rāmakṛṣṇa and many others, who were actually born in brāhmaṇa families, accepted Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura and Śyāmānanda Gosvāmī as their spiritual masters.

The mahā-bhāgavata is one who decorates his body with tilaka and whose name indicates him to be a servant of Kṛṣṇa by the word dāsa. He is also initiated by a bona fide spiritual master and is expert in worshiping the Deity, chanting mantras correctly, performing sacrifices, offering prayers to the Lord, and performing saṅkīrtana. He knows how to serve the Supreme Personality of Godhead and how to respect a Vaiṣṇava. When one has attained the topmost position of mahā-bhāgavata, he is to be accepted as a guru and worshiped exactly like Hari, the Personality of Godhead. Only such a person is eligible to occupy the post of a guru. However, if one is highly qualified but is not a Vaiṣṇava, he cannot be accepted as a guru. One cannot be a brāhmaṇa unless one is a Vaiṣṇava. If one is a Vaiṣṇava, he is already a brāhmaṇa. If a guru is completely qualified as a Vaiṣṇava, he must be accepted as a brāhmaṇa even if he is not born in a brāhmaṇa family. The caste system method of distinguishing a brāhmaṇa by birth is not acceptable when applied to a bona fide spiritual master. A spiritual master is a qualified brāhmaṇa and ācārya. If one is not a qualified brāhmaṇa, he is not expert in studying Vedic literatures. Nānā-śāstra-vicāraṇaika-nipuṇau. Every Vaiṣṇava is a spiritual master, and a spiritual master is automatically expert in brahminical behavior. He also understands the Vedic śāstras.

Similarly, a disciple's qualifications must be observed by the spiritual master before he is accepted as a disciple. In our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, the requirement is that one must be prepared to give up the four pillars of sinful life-illicit sex, meat-eating, intoxication and gambling. In Western countries especially, we first observe whether a potential disciple is prepared to follow the regulative principles. Then he is given the name of a Vaiṣṇava servant and initiated to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, at least sixteen rounds daily. In this way the disciple renders devotional service under the guidance of the spiritual master or his representative for at least six months to a year. He is then recommended for a second initiation, during which a sacred thread is offered and the disciple is accepted as a bona fide brāhmaṇa. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura introduced the system of giving the sacred thread to a bona fide Vaiṣṇava, and we are also following in his footsteps. The qualifications of a bona fide disciple are described in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.10.6) as follows:

amānya-matsaro dakṣo nirmamo dṛḍha-sauhṛdaḥ asatvaro 'rtha-jijñāsur anasūyur amogha-vāk

The disciple must have the following qualifications. He must give up interest in the material bodily conception. He must give up material lust, anger, greed, illusion, madness and envy. He should be interested only in understanding the science of God, and he should be ready to consider all points in this matter. He should no longer think, "I am this body," or, "This thing belongs to me." One must love the spiritual master with unflinching faith, and one must be very steady and fixed. The bona fide disciple should be inquisitive to understand transcendental subject matter. He must not search out faults among good qualities, and he should no longer be interested in material topics. His only interest should be Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

As far as the mutual testing of the spiritual master and disciple is concerned, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura explains that a bona fide disciple must be very inquisitive to understand the transcendental subject matter. As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.3.21):

tasmād guruṁ prapadyeta jijñāsuḥ śreya uttamam

"One who is inquisitive to understand the highest goal and benefit of life must approach a bona fide spiritual master and surrender unto him." A serious disciple must be alert when selecting a bona fide spiritual master. He must be sure that the spiritual master can deliver all the transcendental necessities. The spiritual master must observe how inquisitive the disciple is and how eager he is to understand the transcendental subject matter. The spiritual master should study the disciple's inquisitiveness for no less than six months or a year. A spiritual master should not be very anxious to accept a disciple because of his material opulences. Sometimes a big businessman or landlord may approach a spiritual master for initiation. Those who are materially interested are called viṣayīs (karmīs), which indicates that they are very fond of sense gratification. Such viṣayīs sometimes approach a famous guru and ask to become a disciple just as a matter of fashion. Sometimes viṣayīs pose as disciples of a reputed spiritual master just to cover their activities and advertise themselves as advanced in spiritual knowledge. In other words, they want to attain material success. A spiritual master must be very careful in this regard. Such business is going on all over the world. The spiritual master does not accept a materially opulent disciple just to advertise the fact that he has such a big disciple. He knows that by associating with such viṣayī disciples, he may fall down. One who accepts a viṣayī disciple is not a bona fide spiritual master. Even if he is, his position may be damaged due to association with an unscrupulous viṣayī. If a so-called spiritual master accepts a disciple for his personal benefit or for material gain, the relationship between the spiritual master and the disciple turns into a material affair, and the spiritual master becomes like a smārta-guru. There are many caste gosvāmīs who professionally create some disciples who do not care for them or their instructions. Such spiritual masters are satisfied simply to get some material benefits from their disciples. Such a relationship is condemned by Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, who calls such spiritual masters and disciples a society of cheaters and cheated. They are also called bāulas or prākṛta-sahajiyās. Their aim is to make the connection between the spiritual master and the disciple into a very cheap thing. They are not serious in wanting to understand spiritual life.

The words sevya bhagavān in this verse are important. Bhagavān indicates the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Viṣṇu. Lord Viṣṇu alone is worshipable. There is no need to worship demigods. This is confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā:

kāmais tais tair hṛta-jñānāḥ prapadyante 'nya-devatāḥ taṁ taṁ niyamam āsthāya prakṛtyā niyatāḥ svayā

"Those whose minds are distorted by material desires surrender unto demigods and follow the particular rules and regulations of worship according to their own natures." (Bg. 7.20)

It is also stated in the Skanda Purāṇa:

vāsudevaṁ parityajya yo 'anya-devam upāsate svamātaraṁ parityajya
śva-pacīṁ vandate hi saḥ

"A person who worships the demigods and gives up Lord Vāsudeva is like a man who gives up the protection of his mother for the shelter of a witch."

It is also stated in Bhagavad-gītā (9.23):

ye 'py anya-devatā-bhaktā yajante śraddhayānvitāḥ te 'pi mām eva kaunteya yajanty avidhi-pūrvakam

"Whatever a man may sacrifice to other gods, O son of Kuntī, is really meant for Me alone, but it is offered without true understanding."

Demigods are also living entities and parts and parcels of Kṛṣṇa. Therefore in one sense one worships Kṛṣṇa when one worships the demigods, but not in the proper way. There is a proper method to water a tree. One should water the roots, but if one waters the leaves and branches instead, he is simply wasting his time. If one worships the demigods to the exclusion of Lord Viṣṇu, his rewards will only be material. As confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā:

antavat tu phalaṁ teṣāṁ tad bhavaty alpa-medhasām devān deva-yajo yānti mad-bhaktā yānti mām api

”Men of small intelligence worship the demigods, and their fruits are limited and temporary. Those who worship the demigods go to the planets of the demigods, but My devotees ultimately reach My supreme planet.” (Bg. 7.23)

Demigod worship is meant for unintelligent men because the benefits derived from demigod worship are all material, temporary and retractable. It is also stated in the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa:

yas tu nārāyaṇaṁ devaṁ
brahma-rudrādi-devataiḥ samatvenaiva vīkṣeta
sa pāṣaṇḍī bhaved dhruvam

”Whoever thinks Lord Viṣṇu and the demigods are on the same level is to be immediately considered a rogue as far as spiritual understanding is concerned.”

There are three modes of nature in the material world, but when one is situated spiritually, he is above the material modes, even though he lives in this material world. Lord Kṛṣṇa states in Bhagavad-gītā (14.26):

māṁ ca yo ’vyabhicāreṇa
bhakti-yogena sevate
sa guṇān samatītyaitān
brahma bhūyāya kalpate

”One who engages in full devotional service, who does not fall down in any circumstances at once transcends the modes of material nature and thus comes to the level of Brahman.” When one engages in the Supreme Lord’s devotional service, he is in a transcendental position. Even though one may be situated in the mode of goodness in the material world, he is susceptible to pollution by the modes of passion and ignorance. When the mode of goodness is mixed with the mode of passion, one worships the sun-god, Vivasvān. When the mode of goodness is mixed with the mode of ignorance, he worships Gaṇapati, or Gaṇeśa. When the mode of passion is mixed with the mode of ignorance, one worships Durgā, or Kālī, the external potency. When one is simply in the mode of ignorance, he becomes a devotee of Lord Śiva because Lord Śiva is the predominating deity of the mode of ignorance within this material world. However, when one is completely free from the influence of all the modes of material nature, he becomes a pure Vaiṣṇava on the devotional platform. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī states in the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu:

anyābhilāṣitā-śūnyaṁ
jñāna-karmādy-anāvṛtam
ānukūlyena kṛṣṇānu-
śīlanaṁ bhaktir uttamā

The position of viśuddha-sattva is the position of uncontaminated goodness. On that platform, one can then understand, ārādhyo bhagavān vrajeśa-tanayas tad-dhāma vṛndāvanam: ”The Supreme Personality of Godhead, the son of Nanda Mahārāja, is to be worshiped along with His transcendental abode, Vṛndāvana.”

The word sarva-mantra-vicāraṇa means ”considering all different types of mantras.” There are different kinds of mantras for different kinds of devotees. There are the mantras known as the dvādaśākṣara, and these are composed of twelve syllables. Similarly, there are mantras composed of eighteen syllables-the Nārasiṁha mantra, the Rāma mantra, Gopāla mantra and so on. Each and every mantra has its own spiritual significance. The spiritual master has to select a mantra for his disciple according to the disciple’s ability to chant different mantras.

TEXT 331

mantra-adhikārī, mantra-siddhy-ādi-śodhana dīkṣā, prātaḥ-smṛti-kṛtya, śauca, ācamana

SYNONYMS

mantra-adhikārī-qualification for receiving mantra initiation; mantra-siddhi-ādi-the perfection of the mantra and so on; śodhana-purification; dīkṣā-initiation; prātaḥ-smṛti-kṛtya-morning duties and remembrance of the Supreme Lord; śauca-cleanliness; ācamana-washing the mouth and other parts of the body.

TRANSLATION

”You should discuss the qualifications necessary for receiving a mantra, the perfection of the mantra, the purification of the mantra, initiation, morning duties, remembrance of the Supreme Lord, cleanliness, and washing the mouth and other parts of the body.

PURPORT

The following injunction is given in the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa (1.194):

tāntrikeṣu ca mantreṣu dīkṣāyāṁ yoṣitām api sādhvīnām adhikāro ’sti śūdrādīnāṁ ca sad-dhiyām

”Śūdras and women who are chaste and sincerely interested in understanding the Absolute Truth are qualified to be initiated with the pāñcarātrika-mantras.” This is also confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā (9.32):

māṁ hi pārtha vyapāśritya
ye ’pi syuḥ pāpa-yonayaḥ
striyo vaiśyās tathā śūdrās
te ’pi yānti parāṁ gatim

”O son of Pṛthā, those who take shelter in Me, though they be of lower birth-women, vaiśyas [merchants], as well as śūdras [workers]-can approach the supreme destination.”

If one actually wants to serve Kṛṣṇa, it doesn't matter whether one is a śūdra, vaiśya, or even a woman. If one is sincerely eager to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra or dīkṣā-mantra, he is qualified to be initiated according to the pāñcarātrika process. According to Vedic principles, only a brāhmaṇa who is fully engaged in his occupational duties can be initiated. Śūdras and women are not admitted to a vaidika initiation. Unless one is fit according to the estimation of the spiritual master, one cannot accept a mantra from the pāñcarātrika-vidhi or the vaidika-vidhi. When one is fit to accept the mantra, he is initiated by the pāñcarātrika-vidhi or the vaidika-vidhi. In any case, the result is the same.

Regarding mantra-siddhi-ādi-śodhana, the efficiency of the mantra, Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura gives sixteen divisions, which are confirmed in the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa (beginning with 1.204):

siddha-sādhya-susiddhāri-kramāj jñeyo vicakṣaṇaiḥ

These are (1) siddha, (2) sādhya, (3) susiddha and (4) ari. These four principles can be divided further: (1) siddha-siddha, (2) siddha-sādhya, (3) siddha-susiddha, (4) siddha-ari, (5) sādhya-siddha, (6) sādhya-sādhya, (7) sādhya-susiddha, (8) sādhya-ari, (9) susiddha-siddha, (10) susiddha-sādhya, (11) susiddha-susiddha, (12) susiddha-ari, (13) ari-siddha, (14) ari-sādhya, (15) ari-susiddha, and (16) ari-ari.

Those who are initiated with the eighteen-alphabet mantra do not need to consider the above-mentioned sixteen divisions. As enjoined in the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa (1.215, 219, 220):

na cātra śātravā doṣā narṇasvādi-vicāraṇā ṛkṣarāśi-vicāro vā na kartavyo manau priye nātra cintyo ’ri-śuddhyādir nāri-mitrādi-lakṣaṇam
siddha-sādhya-susiddhārirūpā nātra vicāraṇā

There is śodhana, or purification of the mantra, but there is no such consideration for the Kṛṣṇa mantra. Balitvāt kṛṣṇa-mantrāṇāṁ saṁskārāpekṣaṇaṁ na hi. ”The Kṛṣṇa mantra is so strong that there is no question of śodhana. (1.235)

As far as dīkṣā is concerned, one should consult Madhya-līlā, Chapter Fifteen (108). On the whole, when a person is initiated according to the pāñcarātrika-vidhi, he has already attained the position of a brāhmaṇa. This is enjoined in the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa (2.12):

yathā kāñcanatāṁ yāti
kāṁsyaṁ rasa-vidhānataḥ
tathā dīkṣā-vidhānena
dvijatvaṁ jāyate nṛṇām

”As bell metal can be turned into gold when treated with mercury, a disciple initiated by a bona fide guru immediately attains the position of a brāhmaṇa.”

As far as the time of dīkṣā (initiation) is concerned, everything depends on the position of the guru. As soon as a bona fide guru is received by chance or by a program, one should immediately take the opportunity to receive initiation. In the book called Tattva-sāgara, it is stated:

durlabhe sad-gurūṇāṁ ca sakṛt-saṅga upasthite tad-anujñā yadā labdhā sa dīkṣāvasaro mahān grāme vā yadi vāraṇye kṣetre vā divase niśi āgacchati gurur daivād yathā dīkṣā tad-ājñayā yadaivecchā tadā dīkṣā guror ājñānurūpataḥ na tīrthaṁ na vrataṁ hemo na snānaṁ na japa-kriyā dīkṣāyāḥ karaṇaṁ kintu svecchā-prāpte tu sad-gurau

”If, by chance, one gets a sad-guru, it doesn't matter whether one is in the temple or the forest. If the sad-guru, the bona fide spiritual master, agrees, one can be initiated immediately, without waiting for a suitable time or place.”

In the early morning hours (known as brāhma-muhūrta) one should get up and immediately chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, or, at least, ”Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa.” In this way, one should remember Kṛṣṇa. Some ślokas or prayers should also be chanted. By chanting, one immediately becomes auspicious and transcendental to the infection of material qualities. Actually one has to chant and remember Lord Kṛṣṇa twenty-four hours daily, or as much as possible.

smartavyaḥ satataṁ viṣṇur vismartavyo na jātucit sarve vidhi-niṣedhāḥ syur etayor eva kiṅkarāḥ

”Kṛṣṇa is the origin of Lord Viṣṇu. He should always be remembered and never forgotten at any time. All the rules and prohibitions mentioned in the śāstras should be the servants of these two principles.” This is a quotation from padma Purāṇa in the portion called Bṛhat-sahasra-nāma-stotra. prātaḥ-kṛtya means that one should evacuate regularly and then cleanse himself by taking a bath. One has to gargle (ācamana) and brush his teeth (danta-dhāvana). He should do this either with twigs or a toothbrush-whatever is available. This will purify the mouth. Then one should take his bath. Actually householders and vānaprasthas should bathe two times a day (prātar-madhyāhnayoḥ snānaṁ vānaprastha-gṛhasthayoḥ). A sannyāsī should bathe three times daily, and a brahmacārī may take only one bath a day. Whenever one is not able to bathe in water, he can bathe by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. One also has to perform his sandhyādi-vandana-that is, one has to chant his Gāyatrī mantra three times daily-morning, noon and evening.

TEXT 332

danta-dhāvana, snāna, sandhyādi vandana guru-sevā, ūrdhva-puṇḍra-cakrādi-dhāraṇa

SYNONYMS

danta-dhāvana-washing the teeth; snāna-bath; sandhyā-ādi vandana-regular chanting of the mantras; guru-sevā-serving the spiritual master; ūrdhva-puṇḍra-wearing perpendicularly straight tilaka; cakra-ādi-dhāraṇa-stamping the body with different names and symbols of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

”In the morning, one should regularly brush his teeth, take his bath, offer prayers to the Lord and offer obeisances to the spiritual master. One should render service to the spiritual master and paint one’s body in twelve places with ūrdhva-puṇḍra [tilaka]. One should stamp the holy names of the Lord on his body, or one should stamp the symbols of the Lord, such as the disc and club.

TEXT 333

vastra-pīṭha-gṛha-saṁskāra, kṛṣṇa-prabodhana

SYNONYMS

gopī-candana-gopī-candana (available in Vṛndāvana and Dvārakā); mālya-beads on the neck; dhṛti-wearing regularly; tulasī-āharaṇa-collecting tulasī leaves; vastra-cloth; pīṭha-temple; gṛha-the house; saṁskāra-cleansing; kṛṣṇa-prabodhana-awakening the Deity of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

”After this, you should describe how one should decorate his body with gopīcandana, wear neck beads, collect tulasī leaves from the tulasī tree, cleanse his cloth and the altar, cleanse one’s own house or apartment and go to the temple and ring the bell just to draw the attention of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 334

pañca, ṣoḍaśa, pañcāśat upacāre arcana pañca-kāla pūjā ārati, kṛṣṇera bhojana-śayana

SYNONYMS

pañca-five; ṣoḍaśa-sixteen; pañcāśat-fifty; upacāre-with ingredients; arcana-offering worship; pañca-kāla-five times; pūjā-worshiping; ārati-offering ārati; kṛṣṇera bhojana-śayana-in this way offering eatables to Kṛṣṇa and laying Him down to rest.

TRANSLATION

”Also describe Deity worship, wherein one should offer food to Kṛṣṇa at least five times daily. One should in due time place Kṛṣṇa on a bed. You should also describe the process for offering ārati and the worship of the Lord according to the list of five, sixteen or fifty ingredients.

PURPORT

The five ingredients are (1) very good scents, (2) very good flowers, (3) incense, (4) a lamp and (5) something edible. As for ṣoḍaśopacāra, the sixteen ingredients, one should (1) provide a sitting place (āsana), (2) ask Kṛṣṇa to sit down, (3) offer arghya, (4) offer water to wash the legs, (5) wash the mouth, (6) offer madhu-parka, (7) offer water for washing the mouth, (8) bathe, (9) offer garments, (10) decorate the Lord’s body with ornaments, (11) offer sweet scents, (12) offer flowers with good fragrance, like the rose or campaka, (13) offer incense, (14) offer a lamp, (15) give good food, and (16) offer prayers.

In the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa (Eleventh Vilāsa, verses 127-140) there is a vivid description of what is required in Deity worship. There are sixty-four items mentioned. In the temple, worship should be so gorgeous that all sixty-four items should be available for the satisfaction of the Personality of Godhead. Sometimes it is impossible to get all sixty-four items; therefore we recommend that at least on the first day of installation all sixty-four items should be available. When the Lord is established, worship with all sixty-four items should continue as far as possible. The sixty-four items are as follows: (1) There must be a big bell hanging in front of the temple room so that whoever comes in the room can ring the bell. This item is called prabodhana, or offering oneself submissively to the Lord. This is the first item. (2) The visitor must chant jaya Śrī Rādhā-Govinda, or jaya Śrī Rādhā-Mādhava when he rings the bell. In either case, the word jaya must be uttered. (3) One should immediately offer obeisances to the Lord, falling down like a stick. (4) There must be regular maṅgala-ārati in the temple during the early morning, an hour and a half before the sun rises. (5) There must be an āsana, a sitting place before the altar. This āsana is for the spiritual master. The disciple brings everything before the spiritual master, and the spiritual master offers everything to the Supreme Personality of Godhead. (6) After maṅgala-ārati, the Deity is supposed to wash His teeth by using a twig; therefore a twig must be offered. (7) Water must be offered for washing the Deity’s feet. (8) Arghya should be offered. (9) Water for ācamana should be offered. (10) Madhu-parka, a small bowl containing madhu (honey, a little ghee, a little water, a little sugar, yogurt and milk) should be offered. This is called madhu-parka-ācamana. (11) One should place wooden slippers before the Lord. (12) One should massage the body of the Lord. (13) One should massage the body of the Lord with oil. (14) With a soft, wet sponge one should remove all the oil smeared over the Lord’s body. (15) One should bathe the Lord with water in which nicely scented flowers have been soaking for some time. (16) After bathing the body of the Lord with water, one should bathe Him with milk. (17) Then with yogurt. (18) Then with ghee. (19) Then with honey. (20) Then with sugar. (21) Then one should wash the Deity with water and chant this mantra:

cintāmaṇi-prakara-sadmasu kalpa-vṛkṣalakṣāvṛteṣu surabhīr abhipālayantam lakṣmī-sahasra-śata-sambhrama-sevyamānaṁ
govindam ādi-puruṣaṁ tam ahaṁ bhajāmi

(22) One should dry the entire body with a towel. (23) A new dress should be put on the body. (24) A sacred thread should be given to the body. (25) Water should be offered for cleansing the mouth (ācamana). (26) Nicely scented oils like liquid sandalwood pulp should be smeared over the body. (27) All kinds of ornaments and crowns should be placed on the body. (28) Then one should offer flower garlands and decorative flowers. (29) One should burn incense. (30) Lamps should be offered. (31) Precautions should always be taken so that demons and atheists cannot harm the body of the Lord. (32) Food offerings should be placed before the Lord. (33) Spices for chewing should be offered. (34) Betel nuts should be offered. (35) At the proper time, there should be arrangements so that the Lord may take rest in bed. (36) The Lord's hair should be combed and decorated. (37) First-class garments should be offered. (38) A first-class helmet should be offered. (39) The garments should be scented. (40) There should be Kaustubha jewels and other ornaments offered. (41) A variety of flowers should be offered. (42) Another maṅgala-ārati should be offered. (43) A mirror should be offered. (44) The Lord should be carried on a nice palanquin to the altar. (45) The Lord should be seated on the throne. (46) Again water should be given for the washing of His feet. (47) Something again should be offered for eating. (48) Evening ārati. (49) The Lord should be fanned with a cāmara fan, and an umbrella should be placed over His head. (50) The Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra and approved songs should be sung. (51) Musical instruments should be played. (52) One should dance before the Deity. (53) One should circumambulate the Deity. (54) One should again offer obeisances. (55) One should offer different types of prayers and hymns at the Lord's lotus feet. (56) One should touch the lotus feet of the Lord with one's head. This may not be possible for everyone, but at least the pūjārī should do this. (57) The flowers offered on the previous day should touch one's head. (58) One should take the remnants of the Lord's food. (59) One should sit before the Lord and think that he is massaging the Lord's legs. (60) One should decorate the Lord's bed with flowers before the Lord takes His rest. (61) One should offer one's hand to the Lord. (62) One should take the Deity to His bed. (63) One should wash the feet of the Lord and then sit Him on the bed. (64) One should place the Lord on the bed and then massage His feet.

Ārati should be offered to the Deities five times daily-early in the morning before sunrise, later in the morning, at noon, in the evening and at night. This means that there should be worship and a change of dress and flowers. As far as the eatables are concerned, all items should be first-class preparations. There should be first-class rice, dhal, fruit, sweet rice, vegetables and a variety of foods to be sucked, drunk and chewed. All the eatables offered to the Deities should be extraordinarily excellent. In Europe and America there is presently no monetary scarcity. People are not poor, and if they follow these principles of Deity worship, they will advance in spiritual life. As far as placing the Deity in the bed is concerned, if the Deity is large and heavy, it is not possible to move Him daily. It is better that a small Deity, which is also worshiped, be taken to the bed. This mantra should be chanted: āgaccha śayana-sthānaṁ priyābhiḥ saha keśava. "O Keśava, kindly come to Your bed along with Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī." (Hari-bhakti-vilāsa 11.40)

The Deity should be placed in bed with Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, and this should be indicated by bringing the wooden slippers from the altar to the bedside. When the Deity is laid down, His legs should be massaged. Before laying the Deity down, a pot of milk and sugar should be offered to Him. After taking this thick milk, the Deity should lie down and should be offered betel nuts and spices to chew.

SYNONYMS

śrī-mūrti-lakṣaṇa-characteristics of the Deity; āra-and; śālagrāma-lakṣaṇa-characteristics of the śālagrāma-śilā; kṛṣṇa-kṣetra-yātrā-visiting places like Vṛndāvana, Dvārakā and Mathurā; kṛṣṇa-mūrti-daraśana-visiting the Deity in the temple.

TRANSLATION

"The characteristics of the Deities should be discussed as well as the characteristics of the śālagrāma-śilā. One should also discuss visiting the Deities in the temple and touring holy places like Vṛndāvana, Mathurā and Dvārakā.

TEXT 336

nāma-mahimā, nāmāparādha dūre varjana vaiṣṇava-lakṣaṇa, sevāparādha-khaṇḍana

SYNONYMS

nāma-mahimā-the glories of the holy name; nāma-aparādha-offenses in chanting the holy name; dūre varjana-giving up very carefully; vaiṣṇava-lakṣaṇa-the symptoms of a Vaiṣṇava; sevā-aparādha-khaṇḍana-rejecting offenses in worshiping the Deity.

TRANSLATION

"You should glorify the holy name and carefully give up offenses when chanting the holy name. One should know the symptoms of a Vaiṣṇava. One must give up or nullify all kinds of sevā-aparādha, offenses in Deity worship.

PURPORT

The devotee should always be very careful not to commit the ten offenses when chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. If a devotee very strictly follows the methods of Deity worship, he will naturally and quickly become a pure Vaiṣṇava. A pure Vaiṣṇava has unflinching faith in the Lord, and he does not deviate at all. He is always engaged in perfect Deity worship.

One should also notice the specific offenses against Deity worship. These are mentioned in the Skanda Purāṇa (Avantī-khaṇḍa), spoken by Vyāsadeva himself. One should liquidate all kinds of offenses.

The śālagrāma-śilā should be worshiped with tulasī where a sufficient quantity of tulasī leaves are available. Worship of śālagrāma-śilā should be introduced in all ISKCON temples. Śālagrāma-śilā is the form of the Lord's mercy. To worship the Deity with the sixty-four items mentioned may be a difficult job, but the Lord has become so small that anyone in any temple can carefully handle Deity worship simply by performing the same activities with śālagrāma-śilā.

There are thirty-two offenses that should be avoided. (1) One should not enter the temple in a vehicle. Shoes and slippers should be removed before entering the temple. (2) One should offer obeisances as soon as he sees the Deity. (3) One should enter the temple after taking a bath. In other words, one should be very clean. (4) One should not offer obeisances to the Lord with one hand. (5) One should not circumambulate demigods before the Deities. (6) One should not spread out his legs before the Deity. (7) One should not sit down before the Deity with his legs crossed, nor should one touch his legs with his hands. (8) One should not lie down before the Deity. (9) One should not eat before the Deity. (10) One should not speak lies before the Deity. (11) One should not speak very loudly before the Deity. (12) One should not talk nonsense before the Deity. (13) One should not cry before the Deity. (14) One should not deal with others before the Deity. (15) One should not utter harsh words before the Deity. (16) One should not cover himself with a blanket. (17) One should not talk enviously of others before the Deity. (18) One should not praise others before the Deity. (19) One should not use slang before the Deity. (20) One should not pass air before the Deity. (21) One should not neglect the sixty-four items of Deity worship. (22) One should not eat anything not offered to the Deity. (23) One should not neglect offering seasonal fruits as soon as they are available. (24) One should always offer fresh, untouched fruit to the Deity. (25) One should not sit with his back toward the Deity. (26) One should not offer obeisances to others before the Deity. (27) One should not sit near the Deity without taking the spiritual master's permission. (28) One should not be proud to hear himself praised before the Deity. (29) One should not blaspheme the demigods. (30) One should not be unkind to others before the Deities. (31) One should observe all festivals in the temple. (32) One should not fight or quarrel before the Deity.

SYNONYMS

śaṅkha-of a conchshell; jala-of water; gandha-of incense or scents; puṣpa-of flowers; dhūpa-ādi-of incense, and so on; lakṣaṇa-the characteristics; japa-murmuring; stuti-offering prayers; parikramā-circumambulation; daṇḍavat-offering obeisances; vandana-offering prayers.

TRANSLATION

"The items of worship, such as water, conchshell, flowers, incense and lamp, should be described. You should also mention chanting softly, offering prayers, circumambulating, and offering obeisances. All these should be carefully studied.

PURPORT

All these are mentioned in the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa. The Aṣṭama Vilāsa of that book should be consulted as far as possible.

TEXT 338

SYNONYMS

ei-thus; saṅkṣepe-in brief; sūtra-codes; kahiluṅ-I have described; dik-daraśana-just a little direction; yabe-whenever; tumi-you; likhibā-will attempt to write; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; karābe-will do; sphuraṇa-manifesting.

TRANSLATION

"I have thus given a synopsis of the Vaiṣṇava regulative principles. I have given this in brief just to give you a little direction. When you write on this subject, Kṛṣṇa will help you by spiritually awakening you."

PURPORT

One cannot write on spiritual matters without being blessed by Kṛṣṇa and the disciplic succession of gurus. The blessings of the authorities are one's power of attorney. One should not try to write anything about Vaiṣṇava behavior and activities without being authorized by superior authorities. This is confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā: evaṁ paramparā-prāptam imaṁ rājarṣayo viduḥ.

TRANSLATION

"Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī, the elder brother of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, was a most important minister in the government of Hussain Shah, the ruler of Bengal, and he was considered a most brilliant gem in that assembly. He possessed all the opulences of a royal position, but he gave up everything just to accept the youthful goddess of renunciation. Although he externally appeared to be a mendicant who had renounced everything, he was filled with the pleasure of devotional service within his heart. Thus he can be compared to a deep lake covered with moss. He was the object of pleasure for all the devotees who knew the science of devotional service.

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Twenty-fourth Chapter, describing the ātmārāma verse and the Lord's mercy upon Sanātana Gosvāmī.

18.5.25 Chapter 25

How All the Residents of Vārāṇasī Became Vaiṣṇavas

The following is a summary of Chapter Twenty-five. A Mahārāṣṭrian brāhmaṇa who was living in Benares was a great devotee of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He was always very happy to hear of the glories of the Lord, and it was by his arrangement that all the sannyāsīs of Vārāṇasī became devotees of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He invited all the sannyāsīs to his house to meet Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and this incident has been described in the Seventh Chapter of Ādi-līlā. From that day, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu became famous in the city of Vārāṇasī, and many important men in that city became His followers. By and by, one of the disciples of the great sannyāsī Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī became devoted to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and this devotee explained Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī and supported His views with various arguments.

One day Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to take a bath at Pañca-nada, and afterwards all His devotees began chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra in front of the temple of Bindu Mādhava. At this time Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī and all his devotees approached the Lord. Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī immediately fell down at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and very much regretted his past behavior toward the Lord. He asked Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu about devotional service in terms of the Vedānta-sūtra, and the Lord told him about devotional service that is approved by great personalities who know the Vedānta-sūtra. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then pointed out that Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is the proper commentary on the Vedānta-sūtra. He then explained the catuḥ-ślokī (four ślokas) of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, the essence of that great scripture.

From that day on, all the sannyāsīs of Vārāṇasī became devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Before returning to His headquarters at Jagannātha Purī, the Lord advised Sanātana Gosvāmī to go to Vṛndāvana. The Lord then departed for Jagannātha Purī. Kavirāja Gosvāmī then describes something about Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, Sanātana Gosvāmī and Subuddhi Rāya. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu returned to Jagannātha Purī through the great forest of Jhārikhaṇḍa in central India. At the end of this chapter, Kavirāja Gosvāmī sums up the incidents of Madhya-līlā and instructs every living being to read this sublime book of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes.

SYNONYMS

kona prakāre-by some means; pāroṅ-I am able; yadi-if; ekatra karite-to assemble; ihā dekhi'-by seeing this (Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's personal characteristics); sannyāsi-gaṇa-the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs of Vārāṇasī; habe-will become; iṅhāra bhakte-His devotees.

TRANSLATION

"If by some means I can assemble all the sannyāsīs together, they will certainly become His devotees after seeing His personal characteristics.

PURPORT

If one saw the personal characteristics and activities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, one would certainly be convinced that He was the Supreme Personality of Godhead. One can ascertain this by following in the footsteps of the śāstric injunctions. This sincere study and appreciation of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is also applicable to His authorized devotees, and it is clearly stated in the Caitanya-caritāmṛta (Antya 7.11):

kali-kālera dharma–kṛṣṇa-nāma-saṅkīrtana kṛṣṇa-śakti vinā nāhe tāra pravartana

In this Age of Kali, real religious propaganda should induce people to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. This is possible for someone who is especially empowered by Kṛṣṇa. No one can do this without being especially favored by Kṛṣṇa. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments in this regard in his Anubhāṣya, wherein he quotes a verse from Nārāyaṇa-saṁhitā:

dvāparīyair janair viṣṇuḥ pañcarātrais tu kevalaiḥ kalau tu nāma-mātreṇa pūjyate bhagavān hariḥ

"In Dvāpara-yuga, devotees of Lord Viṣṇu and Kṛṣṇa rendered devotional service according to the principles of pāñcarātrika. In this Age of Kali, the Supreme Personality of Godhead is worshiped simply by the chanting of His holy names." Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura then comments: "Without being empowered by the direct potency of Lord Kṛṣṇa to fulfill His desire and without being specifically favored by the Lord, no human being can become the spiritual master of the whole world. He certainly cannot succeed by mental concoction, which is not meant for devotees or religious people. Only an empowered personality can distribute the holy name of the Lord and enjoin all fallen souls to worship Kṛṣṇa. By distributing the holy name of the Lord, he cleanses the hearts of the most fallen people; therefore he extinguishes the blazing fire of the material world. Not only that, he broadcasts the shining brightness of Kṛṣṇa's effulgence throughout the world. Such an ācārya, or spiritual master, should be considered nondifferent from Kṛṣṇa-that is, he should be considered the incarnation of Lord Kṛṣṇa's potency. Such a personality is kṛṣṇāliṅgita-vigraha-that is, he is always embraced by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa. Such a person is above the considerations of the varṇāśrama institution. He is the guru or spiritual master for the entire world, a devotee on the topmost platform, the mahā-bhāgavata stage, and a paramahaṁsa-ṭhākura, a spiritual form only fit to be addressed as paramahaṁsa or ṭhākura."

Nonetheless, there are many people who are just like owls but never open their eyes to see the sunshine. These owlish personalities are inferior to the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs who cannot see the brilliance of Kṛṣṇa's favor. They are prepared to criticize the person engaged in distributing the holy name all over the world and following in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who wanted Kṛṣṇa consciousness preached in every town and city.

TEXT 10

TRANSLATION

They submitted their request, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, seeing His devotees' unhappiness, decided to turn the minds of the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs.

TEXT 14

hena-kāle vipra āsi' karila nimantraṇa aneka dainyādi kari' dharila caraṇa

SYNONYMS

hena-kāle-at this time; vipra-the Mahārāṣṭrian brāhmaṇa; āsi'-coming; karila nimantraṇa-invited Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; aneka-various; dainya-ādi-submissions; kari'-doing; dharila caraṇa-touched His lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

While Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was seriously considering meeting with the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, the Mahārāṣṭrian brāhmaṇa approached Him and extended an invitation. The brāhmaṇa submitted his invitation with great humility, and he touched the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 15

tabe mahāprabhu tāṅra nimantraṇa mānilā āra dina madhyāhna kari' tāṅra ghare gelā

SYNONYMS

tabe-after this; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāṅra-his; nimantraṇa-invitation; mānilā-accepted; āra dina-the next day; madhyāhna kari'-after finishing His madhyāhna activities (taking bath and murmuring mantras); tāṅra ghare gelā-He went to the house of the Mahārāṣṭrian brāhmaṇa.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted his invitation, and the next day, after finishing His noontime activities, He went to the brāhmaṇa's house.

TEXT 16

sarva-śāstra khaṇḍi'-defeating all the false conclusions of different scriptures; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bhakti kare sāra-established the predominance of devotional service; sa-yuktika vākye-by talks full of pleasing logic and arguments; mana phirāya-turns the minds; sabāra-of everyone.

TRANSLATION

When people came to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to discuss the principles of various scriptures, the Lord defeated their false conclusions and established the predominance of devotional service to the Lord. With logic and argument He very politely changed their minds.

PURPORT

We have been spreading this saṅkīrtana movement in the Western countries, and in our recent tour of European cities like Rome, Geneva, Paris and Frankfurt, many learned Christian scholars, priests, philosophers and yogīs came to see us, and by the grace of Kṛṣṇa they agreed that this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, the bhakti cult, offers the topmost conclusion. Following in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, we are trying to convince everyone that the devotional service of the Lord is enjoined in every scripture. If a person is religious, he must accept the supreme authority of the Lord, become His devotee and try to love Him. This is the real principle of religion. It does not matter whether one is Christian, Mohammedan or whatever. He simply must accept the sublime position of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and render service unto Him. It is not a question of being Christian, Mohammedan or Hindu. One should be purely religious and freed from all these material designations. In this way one can learn the art of devotional service. This argument appeals to all intelligent men, and consequently this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is gaining ground throughout the world. Due to our solid logic and scientific presentation, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's prediction that Kṛṣṇa consciousness will spread in every town and village throughout the world is gradually being realized.

TEXT 21

SYNONYMS

harer nāma-ślokera-of the verse beginning harer nāma harer nāma; yei-whatever; karilā-made; vyākhyāna-the explanation; sei-that; satya-true; sukha-da-artha-a meaning that is pleasing to accept; parama pramāṇa-the supreme evidence.

TRANSLATION

"Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's explanation of the verse beginning 'harer nāma harer nāma' is not only pleasing to the ear but is strong, factual evidence.

TEXT 30

bhakti vinā mukti nahe, bhāgavate kaya kali-kāle nāmābhāse sukhe mukti haya

SYNONYMS

bhakti vinā-without devotional service; mukti nahe-there is no question of liberation; bhāgavate kaya-it is said in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; kali-kāle-in this Age of Kali; nāma-ābhāse-even by a slight appreciation of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra; sukhe-without difficulty; mukti haya-one can get liberation.

TRANSLATION

”In this Age of Kali, one cannot attain liberation without taking to the devotional service of the Lord. In this age, even if one does not chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa perfectly, he still attains liberation very easily.

TEXT 31

śreyaḥ-sṛtiṁ bhaktim udasya te vibho kliśyanti ye kevala-bodha-labdhaye teṣām asau kleśala eva śiṣyate nānyad yathā sthūla-tuṣāvaghātinām

SYNONYMS

śreyaḥ-sṛtim-the auspicious path of liberation; bhaktim-devotional service; udasya-giving up; te-of You; vibho-O my Lord; kliśyanti-accept increased difficulties; ye-all those persons who; kevala-only; bodha-labdhaye-for obtaining knowledge; teṣām-for them; asau-that; kleśalaḥ-trouble; eva-only; śiṣyate-remains; na-not; anyat-anything else; yathā-as much as; sthūla-bulky; tuṣa-husks of rice; avaghātinām-of those beating.

TRANSLATION

” ’My dear Lord, devotional service unto You is the only auspicious path. If one gives it up simply for speculative knowledge or the understanding that these living beings are spirit soul and the material world is false, he undergoes a great deal of trouble. He only gains troublesome and inauspicious activities. His actions are like beating a husk that is already devoid of rice. One’s labor becomes fruitless.’

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.14.4).

TEXT 32

ye ’nye ’ravindākṣa vimukta-māninas
tvayy asta-bhāvād aviśuddha-buddhayaḥ
āruhya kṛcchreṇa paraṁ padaṁ tataḥ
patanty adho ’nādṛta-yuṣmad-aṅghrayaḥ

SYNONYMS

ye-all those who; anye-others (nondevotees); aravinda-akṣa-O lotus-eyed one; vimukta-māninaḥ-who consider themselves liberated; tvayi-unto You; asta-bhāvāt-without devotion; aviśuddha-buddhayaḥ-whose intelligence is not purified; āruhya-having ascended; kṛcchreṇa-by severe austerities and penances; param padam-to the supreme position; tataḥ-from there; patanti-fall; adhaḥ-down; anādṛta-without respecting; yuṣmat-Your; aṅghrayaḥ-lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

” ’O lotus-eyed one, those who think they are liberated in this life but who are devoid of devotional service to You are of impure intelligence. Although they accept severe austerities and penances and rise to the spiritual position, to impersonal Brahman realization, they fall down again because they neglect to worship Your lotus feet.’

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.32).

TEXT 33

’brahma’-śabde kahe ’ṣaḍ-aiśvarya-pūrṇa bhagavān’ tāṅre ’nirviśeṣa’ sthāpi, ’pūrṇatā’ haya hāna

SYNONYMS

brahma-śabde-by the word brahma; kahe-is meant; ṣaṭ-aiśvarya-pūrṇa bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead, full in all six opulences; tāṅre-Him; nirviśeṣa sthāpi-if we make impersonal; pūrṇatā haya hāna-His completeness becomes damaged.

TRANSLATION

”The word Brahman means ’the greatest.’ This means that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is full in all six opulences. However, if we take the one-sided impersonalist view, His fullness is diminished.

PURPORT

The Supreme Personality of Godhead is originally the Supreme Person. The Lord says in Bhagavad-gītā (9.4):

mayā tatam idaṁ sarvaṁ jagad avyakta-mūrtinā mat-sthāni sarva-bhūtāni na cāhaṁ teṣv avasthitaḥ

”By Me, in My unmanifested form, this entire universe is pervaded. All beings are in Me, but I am not in them.”

The potency of Kṛṣṇa that is spread everywhere is impersonal. The sunlight is the impersonal expansion of the sun globe and the sun-god. If we simply take one side of the Supreme Personality of Godhead-His impersonal effulgence-that one side does not fully explain the Absolute Truth. Impersonal appreciation of the Absolute Truth is one-sided and incomplete. One should also accept the other side, the personal side-Bhagavān. Brahmeti paramātmeti bhagavān iti śabdyate. One should not be satisfied simply by understanding the Brahman feature of the Personality of Godhead. One must also know the Lord’s personal feature. That is complete understanding of the Absolute Truth.

TEXT 34

śruti-purāṇa kahe-kṛṣṇera cic-chakti-vilāsa tāhā nāhi māni, paṇḍita kare upahāsa

SYNONYMS

śruti-purāṇa kahe-the Vedic literatures and the Purāṇas confirm; kṛṣṇera-of Lord Kṛṣṇa; cit-śakti-vilāsa-activities of spiritual potencies; tāhā nāhi māni-not accepting that; paṇḍita kare upahāsa-so-called scholars play jokes without perfect understanding.

TRANSLATION

”Vedic literatures, the Upaniṣads, the Brahma-sūtra and the Purāṇas all describe the activities of the spiritual potency of the Lord. If one cannot accept the personal activities of the Lord, he jokes foolishly and gives an impersonal description.

PURPORT

In the Vedic literatures, including the Purāṇas, there are full descriptions of the spiritual potency of Kṛṣṇa. All the pastimes of the Lord are eternal, blissful and full of knowledge, just as the form of Kṛṣṇa Himself is eternal, blissful and full of knowledge (sac-cid-ānanda-vigraha). Unintelligent people with a poor fund of knowledge compare their temporary bodies to the spiritual body of Kṛṣṇa, and by such foolishness they try to understand Kṛṣṇa as one of them. Avajānanti māṁ mūḍhā mānuṣīṁ tanum āśritam. Bhagavad-gītā (9.11) points out that foolish people think of Kṛṣṇa as one of them. Not understanding His spiritual potency, they simply decry the personal form of the Absolute Truth, foolishly thinking of themselves as jñānīs cognizant of the complete truth. They cannot understand that just as the material energy of the Lord has a variety of activities, the spiritual energy has variety also. They consider activities in devotional service the same as activities in material consciousness. Under such a wrong impression, they sometimes dare joke about the spiritual activities of the Lord and His devotional service.

TEXT 35

cid-ānanda kṛṣṇa-vigraha ’māyika’ kari’ māni ei baḍa ’pāpa’,-satya caitanyera vāṇī

SYNONYMS

cit-ānanda kṛṣṇa-vigraha-the transcendental form of Kṛṣṇa, which is completely spiritual; māyika kari’ māni-accept as made of the external energy, māyā; ei baḍa pāpa-this is a great act of sin; satya-true; caitanyera vāṇī-the words of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

”The Māyāvādīs do not recognize the personal form of the Lord as spiritual and full of bliss. This is a great sin. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s statements are actually factual.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s movement especially aims at defeating the Māyāvāda conclusion about the Absolute Truth. Since the members of the Māyāvāda school cannot understand the spiritual form of the Lord, they incorrectly think the Lord’s form is also made of material energy. They think that He is covered by a material body just like other living beings. Due to this offensive understanding, they cannot recognize that Śrī Kṛṣṇa’s personal form is transcendental, not material. Their conclusion is a great offense at the lotus feet of the Lord. As explained by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Śrī Kṛṣṇa has His eternal, blissful form that is full of knowledge, and all Vaiṣṇava ācāryas accept this. That is the proper understanding of the Absolute Truth.

ānanda-mātram avikalpam aviddha-varcaḥ paśyāmi viśva-sṛjam ekam aviśvam ātman bhūtendriyātmakam adas ta upāśrito ’smi

SYNONYMS

na-not; ataḥ-than this; param-more supreme; parama-O supreme one; yat-which; bhavataḥ-of Your Lordship; sva-rūpam-the personal form; ānanda-of transcendental bliss; mātram-only; avikalpam-where there is no creation; aviddha-without contamination; varcaḥ-having an effulgence; paśyāmi-I see; viśva-sṛjam ekam-who alone has created this universe; aviśvam-not belonging to the destructible material world; ātman-O Supreme Soul; bhūta-indriya-ātmakam-the original cause of the senses and the living beings; adaḥ-transcendental; te-unto You; upāśritaḥ asmi-I take full shelter.

TRANSLATION

” ’O supreme one, the transcendental form I am now seeing is full of transcendental bliss. It is not contaminated by the external energy. It is full of effulgence. My Lord, there is no better understanding of You than this. You are the Supreme Soul and the creator of this material world, but You are not connected with this material world. You are completely different from created form and variety. I sincerely take shelter of that form of Yours which I am now seeing. This form is the original source of all living beings and their senses.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.9.3). This verse was spoken by Lord Brahmā, who perfectly realized the Supreme Personality of Godhead after meditating upon the Lord within the water of the Garbhodhaka Ocean. Brahmā realized that the form of the Lord is completely spiritual. This is certainly a better understanding of the Absolute Truth than impersonal understanding.

SYNONYMS

dṛṣṭam-experienced by direct perception; śrutam-experienced by hearing; bhūta-past; bhavat-present; bhaviṣyat-which will be in the future; sthāsnuḥ-immovable; cariṣṇuḥ-movable; mahat-the greatest; alpakam-the smallest; vā-or; vinā-except; acyutāt-the infallible Personality of Godhead; vastu-tarām-anything else; na vācyam-not to be spoken; saḥ-that Supreme Personality of Godhead; eva-certainly; sarvam-everything; paramātma-bhūtaḥ-the origin of all causes.

TRANSLATION

” ’Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is the cause of all causes. He is past, present and future, and He is the movable and immovable. He is the greatest and the smallest, and He is visible and directly experienced. He is celebrated in Vedic literature. Everything is Kṛṣṇa, and without Him there is no existence. He is the root of all understanding, and He is that which is understood by all words.’

SYNONYMS

tat-that; vā-or; idam-this; bhuvana-maṅgala-O most auspicious of the entire world; maṅgalāya-for the benefit; dhyāne-in meditation; sma-certainly; naḥ-of us; daraśitam-manifested; te-by You; upāsakānām-of devotees engaged in devotional service; tasmai-unto Him; namaḥ-all obeisances; bhagavate-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; anuvidhema-we offer obeisances, following in the footsteps of the ācāryas; tubhyam-unto You; yaḥ-who is; anādṛtaḥ-not much appreciated; naraka-bhāgbhiḥ-by persons who are destined to go to a hellish condition of life; asat-prasaṅgaiḥ-who discuss the Supreme Personality of Godhead illogically.

TRANSLATION

" 'O most auspicious one! For our benefit You are worshiped by us. You manifest Your transcendental form, which You show to us in our meditation. We offer our respectful obeisances unto You, the Supreme Person, and we worship You whom impersonalists do not accept due to their poor fund of knowledge. Thus they are liable to descend into a hellish condition.'

SYNONYMS

sūtrera-of the codes of the Vedānta-sūtra; pariṇāma-vāda-the transformation of energy; tāhā nā māniyā-not accepting this fact; vivarta-vāda-the theory of illusion; sthāpe-establishes; vyāsa bhrānta baliyā-accusing Vyāsadeva to be mistaken.

TRANSLATION

"Not accepting the transformation of energy, Śrīpād Śaṅkarācārya has tried to establish the theory of illusion under the plea that Vyāsadeva has made a mistake.

PURPORT

For a further explanation of this verse, one may refer to Chapter Seven (verses 121-126).

TEXT 42

SYNONYMS

ei ta'-this; kalpita-imaginary; artha-meaning; mane-to the mind; nāhi-does not; bhāya-appeal; śāstra-the authoritative scriptures; chāḍi'-giving up; ku-kalpanā-mischievous imagination; pāṣaṇḍe-to the atheistic class of men; bujhāya-teaches.

TRANSLATION

"Śrīpād Śaṅkarācārya has given his interpretation and imaginary meaning. It does not actually appeal to the mind of any sane man. He has done this to convince the atheists and bring them under his control.

PURPORT

Śrīpād Śaṅkarācārya's propaganda opposed the atheistic philosophy of Buddha. Lord Buddha's intention was to stop atheists from committing the sin of killing animals. Atheists cannot understand God; therefore Lord Buddha appeared and spread the philosophy of nonviolence to keep the atheists from killing animals. Unless one is free from the sin of animal killing, he cannot understand religion or God. Although Lord Buddha was an incarnation of Kṛṣṇa, he did not speak about God, for the people were unable to understand. He simply wanted to stop animal killing. Śrīpād Śaṅkarācārya wanted to establish the predominance of one's spiritual identity; therefore he wanted to convert the atheists through an imaginary interpretation of Vedic literatures. These are the secrets of the ācāryas. Sometimes they conceal the real purpose of the Vedas and explain the Vedas in a different way. Sometimes they enunciate a different theory just to bring the atheists under their control. Thus it is said that Śaṅkara's philosophy is for pāṣaṇḍas, atheists.

TEXT 43

SYNONYMS

parama-artha-vicāra-discussion on spiritual matters; gela-has gone; kari-we do; mātra vāda-only argument and word jugglery; kāhāṅ-where; mukti-liberation; pāba-we shall get; kāhāṅ-where; kṛṣṇera prasāda-the mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"The atheists, headed by the Māyāvādī philosophers, do not care for liberation or Kṛṣṇa's mercy. They simply continue to put forward false arguments and counter-theories to atheistic philosophy, not considering or engaging in spiritual matters.

SYNONYMS

eta kahi'-speaking so much; sei-the disciple of Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī; kare-performed; kṛṣṇa-saṅkīrtana-the chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; śuni'-hearing; prakāśānanda-the guru, Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī; kichu-something; kahena-says; vacana-words.

TRANSLATION

After saying this, the disciple of Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī began to chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa. Hearing this, Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī made the following statement.

TEXT 47

ācāryera āgraha-'advaita-vāda' sthāpite tāte sūtrārtha vyākhyā kare anya rīte

SYNONYMS

ācāryera-of Śaṅkarācārya; āgraha-the eagerness; advaita-vāda-monism; sthāpite-to establish; tāte-for that reason; sūtra-artha-the meaning of the Brahma-sūtra, or Vedānta philosophy; vyākhyā-explanation; kare-does; anya rīte-in a different way.

TRANSLATION

Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī said, "Śaṅkarācārya was very eager to establish the philosophy of monism. Therefore he explained Vedānta-sūtra, or Vedānta philosophy, in a different way to support monistic philosophy.

TEXT 48

'bhagavattā' mānile 'advaita' nā yāya sthāpana ataeva saba śāstra karaye khaṇḍana

SYNONYMS

bhagavattā-the Personality of Godhead; mānile-if one accepts; advaita-monism or nondualism; nā-not; yāya-is possible; sthāpana-establishing; ataeva-therefore; saba-all; śāstra-revealed scriptures; karaye-does; khaṇḍana-refutation.

TRANSLATION

"If one accepts the Personality of Godhead, the philosophy that maintains that God and the living entity are one cannot be established. Therefore Śaṅkarācārya argued against and refuted all kinds of revealed scriptures.

TEXT 49

SYNONYMS

yei-anyone who; grantha-kartā-author; cāhe-wants; sva-mata sthāpite-to establish his own opinion; śāstrera-of the revealed scriptures; sahaja-the direct; artha-meaning; nahe-is not; tāṅhā haite-from such an author.

TRANSLATION

"Anyone who wants to establish his own opinion or philosophy certainly cannot explain any scripture according to the principle of direct interpretation.

TEXT 50

'mīmāṁsaka' kahe,-'īśvara haya karmera aṅga'
'sāṅkhya' kahe,-jagatera prakṛti kāraṇa-prasaṅga'

SYNONYMS

mīmāṁsaka-the Mīmāṁsaka philosophers; kahe-say; īśvara-the Supreme Lord; haya-is; karmera aṅga-subject to fruitive activities; sāṅkhya kahe-the atheistic Sāṅkhya philosophers say; jagatera-of the cosmic manifestation; prakṛti-nature; kāraṇa-the cause; prasaṅga-thesis.

TRANSLATION

"The Mīmāṁsaka philosophers conclude that if there is a God, He is subjected to our fruitive activities. Similarly, the Sāṅkhya philosophers who analyze the cosmic manifestation say that the cause of the cosmos is material nature.

TEXT 51

'nyāya' kahe,-'paramāṇu haite viśva haya'
'māyāvādī' nirviśeṣa-brahme 'hetu' kaya

SYNONYMS

nyāya kahe-the philosophers following logic say; paramāṇu-the atom; haite-from; viśva haya-the cosmic manifestation has come; māyāvādī-the Māyāvādī philosophers, impersonalists; nirviśeṣa-brahme-in the impersonal Brahman effulgence; hetu-the cause; kaya-say.

TRANSLATION

"The followers of nyāya, the philosophy of logic, maintain that the atom is the cause of the cosmic manifestation, and the Māyāvādī philosophers maintain that the impersonal Brahman effulgence is the cause of the cosmic manifestation.

TEXT 52

'pātañjala' kahe,-'īśvara haya svarūpa-jñāna'

SYNONYMS

pātañjala kahe-the Pātañjala philosophers say; īśvara haya-the Supreme Lord is; svarūpa-jñāna-self-realization; veda-mate-in the Vedic version; kahe-they say; tāṅre-to Him; svayam-bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

"The Pātañjala philosophers say that when one is self-realized, he understands the Lord. Similarly, according to the Vedas and Vedic principles, the original cause is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TEXT 53

SYNONYMS

chayera-of the six philosophers; chaya mata-six different theses; vyāsa-Vyāsadeva; kailā āvartana-analyzed fully; sei-that; saba-all; sūtra-the codes; lañā-taking; vedānta-varṇana-explaining the Vedānta philosophy.

TRANSLATION

"After studying the six philosophical theses, Vyāsadeva completely summarized them all in the codes of Vedānta philosophy.

TEXT 54

'vedānta'-mate,-brahma 'sākāra' nirūpaṇa
'nirguṇa' vyatireke tiṅho haya ta' 'saguṇa'

SYNONYMS

vedānta-mate-according to Vedānta philosophy; brahma-the Absolute Truth; sa-ākāra nirūpaṇa-established as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, a person; nirguṇa-without material qualifications; vyatireke-by indirect explanations; tiṅho-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; haya-is; ta'-indeed; sa-guṇa-fully qualified with spiritual attributes.

TRANSLATION

"According to Vedānta philosophy, the Absolute Truth is a person. When the word nirguṇa [without qualities] is used, it is to be understood that the Lord has attributes that are totally spiritual.

TEXT 55

parama kāraṇa īśvara keha nāhi māne
sva-sva-mata sthāpe para-matera khaṇḍane

SYNONYMS

parama kāraṇa-the supreme cause, the cause of all causes; īśvara-the Supreme Lord; keha nāhi māne-none of the above-mentioned philosophers accept; sva-sva-mata-their own personal opinions; sthāpe-they establish; para-matera khaṇḍane-busy in refuting the opinions of others.

TRANSLATION

"Of the philosophers mentioned, none really cares for the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the cause of all causes. They are always busy refuting the philosophical theories of others and establishing their own.

TEXT 56

tāte chaya darśana haite 'tattva' nāhi jāni
'mahājana' yei kahe, sei 'satya' māni

SYNONYMS

tāte-therefore; chaya darśana haite-from the six philosophical principles; tat-tva nāhi jāni-we cannot understand the actual truth; mahājana-the great authorities; yei kahe-whatever they say; sei-that; satya māni-we can accept as truth.

TRANSLATION

"By studying the six philosophical theories, one cannot reach the Absolute Truth. It is therefore our duty to follow the path of the mahājanas, the authorities. Whatever they say should be accepted as the supreme truth.

PURPORT

In his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura gives the following summary of the six philosophical processes. Prakāśānanda admitted that Śrīpād Śaṅkarācārya, being very eager to establish his philosophy of monism, took shelter of the Vedānta philosophy and tried to explain it in his own way. The fact is, however, that if one accepts the existence of God, he certainly cannot establish the theory of monism. For this reason Śaṅkarācārya refuted all kinds of Vedic literature that establishes the supremacy of the Personality of Godhead. In various ways, Śaṅkarācārya has tried to refute Vedic literature. Throughout the world, ninety-nine percent of the philosophers following in the footsteps of Śaṅkarācārya refuse to accept the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Instead they try to establish their own opinions. It is typical of mundane philosophers to want to establish their own opinions and refute those of others. Therefore: (1) The Mīmāṁsaka philosophers, following the principles of Jaimini, stress fruitive activity and say that if there is a God, He must be under the laws of fruitive activity. In other words, if one performs his duties very nicely in the material world, God is obliged to give one the desired result. According to these philosophers, there is no need to become a devotee of God. If one strictly follows moral principles, one will be recognized by the Lord, who will give the desired reward. Such philosophers do not accept the Vedic principle of bhakti-yoga. Instead, they give stress to following one's prescribed duty. (2) Atheistic Sāṅkhya philosophers like Kapila analyze the material elements very scrutinizingly and thereby come to the conclusion that material nature is the cause of everything. They do not accept the Supreme Personality of Godhead as the cause of all causes. (3) Nyāya philosophers like Gautama and Kaṇāda have accepted a combination of atoms as the original cause of the creation. (4) Māyāvādī philosophers say that everything is an illusion. Headed by philosophers like Aṣṭāvakra, they stress the impersonal Brahman effulgence as the cause of everything. (5) Philosophers following the precepts of Patañjali practice rāja-yoga. They imagine a form of the Absolute Truth within many forms. That is their process of self-realization.

All five of these philosophies completely reject the predominance of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and strive to establish their own philosophical theories. However, Śrīla Vyāsadeva wrote the Vedānta-sūtra and, taking the essence of all Vedic literature, established the supremacy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. All five of the philosophers mentioned above understand that impersonal Brahman is without material qualities, and they believe that when the Personality of Godhead appears, He is contaminated and covered by the material qualities. The technical term used is saguṇa. They say, "saguṇa Brahman" and "nirguṇa Brahman." Nirguṇa Brahman means impersonal, and saguṇa Brahman means "accepting material contamination." More or less, this kind of philosophical speculation is called Māyāvāda philosophy. The fact is, however, that the Absolute Truth has nothing to do with material qualities because He is transcendental. He is always complete with full spiritual qualities. The five philosophers mentioned above do not accept Lord Viṣṇu as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but they are very busy refuting the philosophy of other schools. There are six kinds of philosophical processes in India. Because Vyāsadeva is the Vedic authority, he is known as Vedavyāsa. His philosophical explanation of the Vedānta-sūtra is accepted by the devotees. As Kṛṣṇa confirms in Bhagavad-gītā (15.15):

sarvasya cāhaṁ hṛdi sanniviṣṭo
mattaḥ smṛtir jñānam apohanaṁ ca
vedaiś ca sarvair aham eva vedyo
vedānta-kṛd veda-vid eva cāham

"I am seated in everyone's heart, and from Me come remembrance, knowledge and forgetfulness. By all the Vedas, I am to be known; indeed, I am the compiler of Vedānta, and I am the knower of the Vedas."

The ultimate goal of studying all Vedic literature is the acceptance of Kṛṣṇa as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. This Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is propagating the philosophical conclusion of Śrīla Vyāsadeva and following other great ācāryas like Rāmānujācārya, Madhvācārya, Viṣṇusvāmī, Nimbārka and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself.

tarko 'pratiṣṭhaḥ śrutayo vibhinnā nāsāv ṛṣir yasya mataṁ na bhinnam dharmasya tattvaṁ nihitaṁ guhāyāṁ mahājano yena gataḥ sa panthāḥ

SYNONYMS

tarkaḥ-dry argument; apratiṣṭhaḥ-not fixed; śrutayaḥ-Vedas; vibhinnāḥ-possessing different departments; na-not; asau-that; ṛṣiḥ-great sage; yasya-whose; matam-opinion; na-not; bhinnam-separate; dharmasya-of religious principles; tattvam-truth; nihitam-placed; guhāyām-in the heart of a realized person; mahā-janaḥ-self-realized predecessors; yena-by which way; gataḥ-acted; saḥ-that; panthāḥ-the pure, unadulterated path.

TRANSLATION

" 'Dry arguments are inconclusive. A great personality whose opinion does not differ from others is not considered a great sage. Simply by studying the Vedas, which are variegated, one cannot come to the right path by which religious principles are understood. The solid truth of religious principles is hidden in the heart of an unadulterated self-realized person. Consequently, as the śāstras confirm, one should accept whatever progressive path the mahājanas advocate.'

PURPORT

This is a verse spoken by Yudhiṣṭhira Mahārāja in the Mahābhārata, Vana-parva (313.117).

TEXT 58

śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya-vāṇī-amṛtera dhāra
tiṅho ye kahaye vastu, sei 'tattva'-sāra"

SYNONYMS

śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya-vāṇī-the message of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; amṛtera dhāra-a continuous shower of nectar; tiṅho-the Lord; ye kahaye vastu-whatever He says to be the ultimate truth, the summum bonum; sei tattva sāra-that is the essence of all spiritual knowledge.

TRANSLATION

"The words of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are a shower of nectar. Whatever He concludes to be the ultimate truth is indeed the summum bonum of all spiritual knowledge."

TEXT 59

e saba vṛttānta śuni' mahārāṣṭrīya brāhmaṇa

SYNONYMS

e saba vṛttānta-all these descriptions; śuni'-hearing; mahārāṣṭrīya brāhmaṇa-the Mahārāṣṭrian brāhmaṇa; prabhure-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kahite-to inform; sukhe-very happily; karilā gamana-went.

TRANSLATION

After hearing all these statements, the Mahārāṣṭrian brāhmaṇa very jubilantly went to inform Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 60

hena-kāle mahāprabhu pañca-nade snāna kari' dekhite caliyāchena 'bindu-mādhava hari'

SYNONYMS

hena-kāle-at this time; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; pañca-nade snāna kari'-taking His bath in the Ganges, called the Pañca-nada; dekhite caliyāchena-was going to see; bindu-mādhava hari-the Deity known as Lord Bindu Mādhava.

TRANSLATION

When the Mahārāṣṭrian brāhmaṇa went to see Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Lord was going to the temple of Bindu Mādhava after bathing in the waters of Pañca-nada.

TEXT 61

SYNONYMS

pathe-on the way; sei vipra-that brāhmaṇa; saba vṛttānta kahila-explained the whole incident; śuni'-hearing; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sukhe-in happiness; īṣat-mildly; hāsila-smiled.

TRANSLATION

While the Lord was on His way, the Mahārāṣṭrian brāhmaṇa informed Him about the incident that took place in the camp of Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī. Hearing this, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu smiled happily.

TEXT 62

mādhava-saundarya dekhi' āviṣṭa ha-ilā aṅganete āsi' preme nācite lāgilā

SYNONYMS

mādhava-saundarya dekhi'-after seeing the beauty of Lord Bindu Mādhava; āviṣṭa ha-ilā-became ecstatic in love; aṅganete āsi'-coming to the courtyard; preme-in great love; nācite lāgilā-began to dance.

TRANSLATION

Upon reaching the temple of Bindu Mādhava, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, seeing the beauty of Lord Bindu Mādhava, became overwhelmed in ecstatic love. He then began to dance in the courtyard of the temple.

TEXT 63

SYNONYMS

haraye-unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead; namaḥ-obeisances; kṛṣṇa-Lord Kṛṣṇa; yādavāya-to the descendant of the Yadu family; namaḥ-obeisances; gopāla-Gopāla; govinda-Govinda; rāma-Rāma; śrī-madhusūdana-Śrī Madhusūdana.

TRANSLATION

They chanted, "Haraye namaḥ kṛṣṇa yādavāya namaḥ gopāla govinda rāma śrī-madhusūdana."

PURPORT

This is another way of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. The meaning is: "I offer my respectful obeisances unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa. He is the descendant of the Yadu family. Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto Gopāla, Govinda, Rāma and Śrī Madhusūdana."

caudikete lakṣa loka bale 'hari' 'hari' uṭhila maṅgala-dhvani svarga-martya bhari'

SYNONYMS

cau-dikete-all around; lakṣa-hundreds of thousands; loka-people; bale-chant; hari hari-O Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari; uṭhila-there arose; maṅgala-dhvani-an auspicious sound; svarga-martya bhari'-overwhelming all the universe.

TRANSLATION

In all directions, hundreds and thousands of people began to chant "Hari! Hari!" Thus there arose a tumultuous and auspicious sound filling the entire universe.

TEXT 66

nikaṭe hari-dhvani śuni' parakāśānanda dekhite kautuke āilā lañā śiṣya-vṛnda

SYNONYMS

nikaṭe-nearby; hari-dhvani śuni'-after hearing the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra; parakāśānanda-Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī; dekhite-to see; kautuke-in great eagerness; āilā-came; lañā-taking; śiṣya-vṛnda-all the disciples.

TRANSLATION

When Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī, who was staying nearby, heard this tumultuous chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, he and his disciples immediately came to see the Lord.

TEXT 67

dekhiyā prabhura nṛtya, prema, dehera mādhurī śisya-gaṇa-saṅge sei bale 'hari' 'hari'

SYNONYMS

dekhiyā-seeing; prabhura nṛtya-the dancing of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; prema-ecstatic love; dehera mādhurī-the transcendental beauty of His body; śiṣya-gaṇa-saṅge-with his disciples; sei-Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī; bale-chants; hari hari-Lord Hari's name.

TRANSLATION

When Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī saw the Lord, he and his disciples also joined the chanting with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī was charmed by the Lord's dancing and ecstatic love and by the transcendental beauty of His body.

TEXT 68

kampa, svara-bhaṅga, sveda, vaivarṇya, stambha aśru-dhārāya bhije loka, pulaka-kadamba

SYNONYMS

kampa-trembling; svara-bhaṅga-faltering voice; sveda-perspiration; vaivarṇya-fading of bodily color; stambha-becoming stunned; aśru-dhārāya-with showers of tears from the eyes; bhije-wet; loka-all the people; pulaka-kadamba-eruptions on the body like kadamba flowers.

TRANSLATION

Ecstatic spiritual transformations began to take place in the Lord's body. His body trembled, and His voice faltered. He perspired, turned pale and wept a constant flow of tears, which wet all the people standing there. The eruptions on the Lord's body appeared like kadamba flowers.

TEXT 69

SYNONYMS

harṣa-jubilation; dainya-humility; cāpalya-ādi-talking in ecstasy and so on; sañcārī vikāra-the transient transformations; dekhi'-seeing; kāśī-vāsī-the inhabitants of Benares; lokera-of all the people; haila camatkāra-there was astonishment.

TRANSLATION

All the people were astonished to see the Lord's jubilation and humility and to hear Him talk in ecstasy. Indeed, all the residents of Benares [Kāśī] saw the bodily transformations and were astonished.

TEXT 70

loka-saṅghaṭṭa dekhi' prabhura 'bāhya' yabe haila sannyāsīra gaṇa dekhi' nṛtya saṁvarila

SYNONYMS

loka-saṅghaṭṭa dekhi'-by seeing the great crowd of people; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya; bāhya-external consciousness; yabe haila-when there was; sannyāsīra gaṇa-the groups of Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, headed by Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī; dekhi'-seeing; nṛtya saṁvarila-suspended His dancing.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu regained His external consciousness, He saw that many Māyāvādī sannyāsīs and other people were gathered there. He therefore suspended His dancing for the time being.

TEXT 71

prakāśānandera prabhu vandilā caraṇa prakāśānanda āsi' tāṅra dharila caraṇa prakāśānandera-of Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; vandilā-prayed; caraṇa-at the feet; prakāśānanda-Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī; āsi'-coming; tāṅra-His; dharila caraṇa-immediately caught the lotus feet.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After stopping the kīrtana, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who is a great example of humility, offered prayers unto the feet of Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī. At this, Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī immediately came forward and clasped the Lord's lotus feet.

TEXT 72

prabhu kahe,-'tumi jagad-guru pūjyatama āmi tomāra nā ha-i 'śiṣyera śiṣya' sama prabhu kahe-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued to speak; tumi-you; jagat-guru-the spiritual master of the whole world; pūjyatama-the most worshipable; āmi-I; tomāra-your; nā ha-i-am not; śiṣyera śiṣya sama-equal to the disciple of the disciple.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

When Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī caught hold of the Lord's lotus feet, the Lord said, "My dear sir, you are the spiritual master of the whole world; therefore you are most worshipable. As far as I am concerned, I am not even on the level of the disciple of your disciple."

PURPORT

Māyāvādī sannyāsīs generally call themselves jagad-guru, the spiritual master of the whole world. Many consider themselves worshipable by everyone, although they do not even go outside India or their own district. Out of His great magnanimity and humility, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu presented Himself as a subordinate disciple of Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī.

TEXT 73

śreṣṭha hañā kene kara hīnera vandana āmāra sarva-nāśa haya, tumi brahma-sama

SYNONYMS

śreṣṭha hañā-being a more honorable person; kene-why; kara-you do; hīnera-of an inferior person; vandana-worship; āmāra sarva-nāśa haya-I become minimized in My strength; tumi brahma-sama-you are equal with the impersonal Brahman.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued, "You are a great, spiritually advanced personality, and therefore you cannot worship a person like Me. I am far inferior. If you do so, My spiritual power will be diminished, for you are as good as the impersonal Brahman.

TEXT 74

yadyapi tomāre saba brahma-sama bhāse loka-śikṣā lāgi' aiche karite nā āise'

SYNONYMS

yadyapi-although; tomāre-for you; saba-everyone; brahma-sama-equal to the impersonal Brahman; bhāse-appears; loka-śikṣā lāgi'-for the enlightenment of people in general; aiche-in such a way; karite nā āise-you should not present yourself.

TRANSLATION

"My dear sir, for you everyone is on the level of impersonal Brahman, but for the enlightenment of people in general you should not behave in that way."

TEXT 75

teṅho kahe, 'tomāra pūrve nindā-aparādha ye karila tomāra caraṇa-sparśe, saba kṣaya gela

SYNONYMS

teṅho kahe-he replied; tomāra-of You; pūrve-formerly; nindā-aparādha-offenses and blasphemy; ye karila-whatever I have done; tomāra caraṇa-sparśe-by touching Your lotus feet; saba kṣaya gela-the effects of all those offenses have been destroyed.

TRANSLATION

Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī replied, "Formerly I have committed many offenses against You by blaspheming You, but now the effects of my offenses are counteracted by my touching Your lotus feet.

TEXT 76

jīvan-muktā api punar yānti saṁsāra-vāsanām yady acintya-mahā-śaktau

SYNONYMS

jīvat-muktāḥ-persons liberated during this life; api-also; punaḥ-again; yānti-go; saṁsāra-vāsanām-to desire material enjoyment; yadi-if; acintya-mahā-śaktau-to the possessor of inconceivable spiritual potency; bhagavati-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; aparādhinaḥ-offenders.

TRANSLATION

" 'If a person considered liberated in this life commits offenses against the reservoir of inconceivable potencies, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he will again fall down and desire the material atmosphere for material enjoyment.'

TEXT 77

sa vai bhagavataḥ śrīmatpāda-sparśa-hatāśubhaḥ bheje sarpa-vapur hitvā
rūpaṁ vidyādharārcitam

SYNONYMS

saḥ-he (the serpent); vai-indeed; bhagavataḥ-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa; śrīmat-pāda-sparśa-by the touch of the lotus feet; hata-aśubhaḥ-relieved from all reactions of sinful life; bheje-achieved; sarpa-vapuḥ-the body of a snake; hitvā-giving up; rūpam-beauty; vidyādhara-arcitam-suitable for a person of Vidyādhara-loka.

TRANSLATION

" 'Being touched by the lotus feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, that serpent was immediately freed from the reactions of his sinful life. Thus the serpent gave up his body and assumed the body of a beautiful Vidyādhara demigod.' "

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.34.9). The inhabitants of Vṛndāvana, under the leadership of Nanda Mahārāja, once wanted to go to the bank of the Sarasvatī on a pilgrimage. Nanda Mahārāja was fasting, and he lay down near the forest. At that time a serpent, who was formerly cursed by Āṅgirasa Ṛṣi, appeared. This serpent had formerly been named Sudarśana, and he had belonged to the Gandharvaloka planet. However, because he joked with the ṛṣi, he was condemned to take on the body of a big snake. When this serpent attacked Nanda Mahārāja, Nanda Mahārāja began to call, "Kṛṣṇa! Help!" Kṛṣṇa immediately appeared and began to kick the serpent with His lotus feet. Due to being touched by the Lord's lotus feet, the serpent was immediately freed from the reactions of his sinful life. Being freed, he again assumed his original form of Sudarśana, the Gandharva.

TEXT 78

prabhu kahe,-'viṣṇu' 'viṣṇu', āmi kṣudra jīva hīna jīve 'viṣṇu' māni-ei aparādha-cihna

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; viṣṇu viṣṇu-the holy name of Viṣṇu; āmi-I; kṣudra-infinitesimal; jīva-a living entity; hīna-bereft of all good qualities; jīve-such a low-grade living entity; viṣṇu māni-accepting as Lord Viṣṇu or the Personality of Godhead; ei aparādha-cihna-this is a great offense.

TRANSLATION

When Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī supported himself by quoting the verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu immediately protested by uttering the holy name of Lord Viṣṇu. The Lord then presented Himself as a most fallen living entity, and He said, "If someone accepts a fallen conditioned soul as Viṣṇu, Bhagavān, or an incarnation, he commits a great offense."

PURPORT

Although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was Viṣṇu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, He nonetheless, to teach us a lesson, denied belonging to the Viṣṇu category. Unfortunately, there are many so-called Viṣṇu incarnations in this Age of Kali. People do not know that posing oneself as an incarnation is most offensive. People should not accept an ordinary man as an incarnation of God, for this also is a very great offense.

TEXT 79

jīve 'viṣṇu' buddhi dūre-yei brahma-rudra-sama nārāyaṇe māne tāre 'pāṣaṇḍīte' gaṇana

SYNONYMS

jīve-an ordinary living being; viṣṇu-as Lord Viṣṇu; buddhi-acceptance; dūre-let alone; yei-anyone who; brahma-rudra-sama-equal to personalities like Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva; nārāyaṇe-Lord Nārāyaṇa, Viṣṇu; māne-accepts; tāre-such a person; pāṣaṇḍīte gaṇana-is grouped among the pāṣaṇḍīs, atheistic offenders.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued, "To say nothing of ordinary living entities, even Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva cannot be considered on the level of Viṣṇu or Nārāyaṇa. If one considers them as such, he is immediately considered an offender and atheist.

TEXT 80

yas tu nārāyaṇaṁ devaṁ brahma-rudrādi-daivataiḥ samatvenaiva vīkṣeta

SYNONYMS

yaḥ-any person who; tu-however; nārāyaṇam-the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the master of such demigods as Brahmā and Śiva; devam-the Lord; brahma-Lord Brahmā; rudra-Lord Śiva; ādi-and others; daivataiḥ-with such demigods; samatvena-on an equal level; eva-certainly; vīkṣeta-observes; saḥ-such a person; pāṣaṇḍī-pāṣaṇḍī; bhavet-must be; dhruvam-certainly.

TRANSLATION

" 'A person who considers demigods like Brahmā and Śiva to be on an equal level with Nārāyaṇa is to be considered an offender, a pāṣaṇḍī.' "

TEXT 81

prakāśānanda kahe,-"tumi sākṣāt bhagavān

SYNONYMS

prakāśānanda kahe-Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī replied; tumi-You; sākṣāt-directly; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa; tabu-yet; yadi-if; kara-You pose; tāṅra dāsa-abhimāna-considering Yourself His servant.

TRANSLATION

Prakāśānanda replied, "You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa Himself. Nonetheless, You are considering Yourself His eternal servant.

TEXT 82

tabu pūjya hao, tumi baḍa āmā haite sarva-nāśa haya mora tomāra nindāte

SYNONYMS

tabu-still; pūjya hao-You are worshipable; tumi baḍa-You are much greater; āmā haite-than me; sarva-nāśa haya-everything becomes lost; mora-my; tomāra nindāte-by blaspheming You.

TRANSLATION

"My dear Lord, You are the Supreme Lord, and although You consider Yourself the Lord's servant, You are nonetheless worshipable. You are much greater than I am; therefore all my spiritual achievements have been lost because I have blasphemed You.

TEXT 83

muktānām api siddhānāṁ

SYNONYMS

muktānām-of persons liberated or freed from the bondage of ignorance; api-even; siddhānām-of persons who have achieved perfection; nārāyaṇa-of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; parāyaṇaḥ-the devotee; su-durlabhaḥ-very rare; praśānta-ātmā-completely satisfied, desireless; koṭiṣu-among many millions; api-certainly; mahā-mune-O great sage.

TRANSLATION

" 'O great sage, out of many millions of materially liberated people who are free from ignorance, and out of many millions of siddhas who have nearly attained perfection, there is hardly one pure devotee of Nārāyaṇa. Only such a devotee is actually completely satisfied and peaceful.'

PURPORT

This verse is quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (6.14.5).

TEXT 84

āyuḥ śriyaṁ yaśo dharmaṁ

SYNONYMS

āyuḥ-duration of life; śriyam-opulence; yaśaḥ-reputation; dharmam-religion; lokān-possessions; āśiṣaḥ-benedictions; eva-certainly; ca-and; hanti-destroys; śreyāṁsi-good fortune; sarvāṇi-all; puṁsaḥ-of a person; mahat-of great souls; atikramaḥ-violation.

TRANSLATION

" 'When a person mistreats great souls, his life span, opulence, reputation, religion, possessions and good fortune are all destroyed.'

PURPORT

This is a statement made by Śukadeva Gosvāmī, who was relating Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.4.46) to Mahārāja Parīkṣit.

TEXT 85

SYNONYMS

na-not; eṣām-of those who are attached to household life; matiḥ-the interest; tāvat-that long; urukrama-aṅghrim-the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who is credited with uncommon activities; spṛśati-touches; anartha-of unwanted things; apagamaḥ-vanquishing; yat-of which; arthaḥ-results; mahīyasām-of the great personalities, devotees; pāda-rajaḥ-of the dust of the lotus feet; abhiṣekam-sprinkling on the head; niṣkiñcanānām-who are completely detached from material possessions; na vṛṇīta-does not do; yāvat-as long as.

TRANSLATION

" 'Unless human society accepts the dust of the lotus feet of great mahātmās-devotees who have nothing to do with material possessions-mankind cannot turn its attention to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa. Those lotus feet vanquish all the unwanted miserable conditions of material life.'

PURPORT

This verse appears in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.5.32).

TEXT 86

ebe tomāra pādābje upajibe bhakti

SYNONYMS

ebe-now; tomāra-Your; pāda-abje-to the lotus feet; upajibe-will grow; bhakti-devotional service; tathi lāgi'-for that reason; kari-I do; tomāra caraṇe praṇati-humble obeisances at Your lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

"Henceforward I shall certainly develop devotional service unto Your lotus feet. For this reason I have come to You and have fallen down at Your lotus feet."

TEXT 87

eta bali' prabhure lañā tathāya vasila prabhure prakāśānanda puchite lāgila eta bali'-saying this; prabhure-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; lañā-taking; tathāya vasila-sat down there; prabhure-unto Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; prakāśānanda-Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī; puchite lāgila-began to inquire.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After saying this, Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī sat down with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and began to question the Lord as follows.

TEXT 88

māyāvāde karilā yata doṣera ākhyāna sabe ei jāni' ācāryera kalpita vyākhyāna

SYNONYMS

māyāvāde-in the philosophy of Māyāvāda, impersonalism; karilā-You have done; yata-all; doṣera ākhyāna-description of the faults; sabe-all; ei-these; jāni'-knowing; ācāryera-of Śaṅkarācārya; kalpita vyākhyāna-imaginary explanations.

TRANSLATION

Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī said, "We can understand the faults You have pointed out in the Māyāvāda philosophy. All the explanations given by Śaṅkarācārya are imaginary.

TEXT 89

sūtrera karilā tumi mukhyārtha-vivaraṇa tāhā śuni' sabāra haila camatkāra mana sūtrera-of the Brahma-sūtra; karilā-have done; tumi-You; mukhya-artha-vivaraṇa-description of the direct meaning; tāhā śuni'-hearing that; sabāra-of everyone; haila-became; camatkāra-astonished; mana-the mind.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"My dear Lord, whatever direct meaning You have given when explaining the Brahma-sūtra is certainly very wonderful to all of us.

TEXT 90

tumi ta' īśvara, tomāra āche sarva-śakti saṅkṣepa-rūpe kaha tumi śunite haya mati

SYNONYMS

tumi ta'-indeed You are; īśvara-the Supreme Lord; tomāra-of You; āche-there are; sarva-śakti-all potencies; saṅkṣepa-rūpe-briefly; kaha-please explain; tumi-You; śunite haya mati-I wish to hear.

TRANSLATION

"You are the Supreme Personality of Godhead, and therefore You have inconceivable energies. I wish to hear from You briefly about the Brahma-sūtra."

PURPORT

Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī said that he had already understood Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's explanation of the direct import of Brahma-sūtra. Nonetheless, he was requesting the Lord to briefly give the purpose and purport of the Brahma-sūtra, the Vedānta-sūtra.

TEXT 91

prabhu kahe,-"āmi jīva', ati tuccha-jñāna!
vyāsa-sūtrera gambhīra artha, vyāsa-bhagavān

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu replied; āmi jīva-I am an insignificant living being; ati tuccha-jñāna-My knowledge is very meager; vyāsa-sūtrera-of the Vedānta-sūtra, written by Vyāsadeva; gambhīra artha-very grave meaning; vyāsa-Vyāsadeva; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu replied, "I am an ordinary living being, and therefore my knowledge is very insignificant. However, the meaning of the Brahma-sūtra is very grave because its author, Vyāsadeva, is the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself.

PURPORT

An ordinary living being cannot actually understand the purpose of the Vedānta-sūtra. One can understand the purpose if he hears it from the authority, Vyāsadeva himself. For this reason, Vyāsadeva gave a commentary on the Brahma-sūtra in the form of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. He had been instructed to do this by his spiritual master, Nārada. Of course, Śaṅkarācārya distorted the purpose of the Brahma-sūtra because he had a motive to serve. He wanted to establish Vedic knowledge in place of the atheistic knowledge spread by Lord Buddha. All these necessities are there according to time and circumstances. Neither Lord Buddha nor Śaṅkarācārya is to be blamed. The time required such an explanation for the understanding of various types of atheists. The conclusion is that one cannot understand the purpose of the Vedānta-sūtra without going through Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and rendering devotional service. Caitanya Mahāprabhu therefore further explains the matter in the following verses.

tāṅra sūtrera artha kona jīva nāhi jāne

SYNONYMS

ei artha-this explanation; āmāra-my; sūtrera-of Brahma-sūtra; vyākhyā-anurūpa-a suitable explanation; bhāgavata-Śrīmad-Bhāgavata Purāṇa; kariba-I shall make; sūtrera-of the Brahma-sūtra; bhāṣya-svarūpa-as the original commentary.

TRANSLATION

"Śrīla Vyāsadeva considered that whatever he had received from Nārada Muni as an explanation of oṁkāra he would elaborately explain in his book Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam as a commentary on Brahma-sūtra.

PURPORT

The sound vibration oṁkāra is the root of Vedic knowledge. This oṁkāra is known as mahā-vākya, or the supreme sound. Whatever meaning is in the supreme sound oṁkāra is further understood in the Gāyatrī mantra. Again, this same meaning is explained in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam in the four ślokas known as catuḥ-ślokī, which begin with the words ahaṁ evāsam evāgre. The Lord says, "Only I existed before the creation." From this verse, four ślokas have been composed, and these are known as the catuḥ-ślokī. In this way the Supreme Personality of Godhead informed Lord Brahmā about the purpose of the catuḥ-ślokī. Again, Lord Brahmā explained this to Nārada Muni, and Nārada Muni explained it to Śrīla Vyāsadeva. This is the paramparā system, the disciplic succession. The import of Vedic knowledge, the original word praṇava, has been explained in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. The conclusion is that the Brahma-sūtra is explained in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

TEXT 98

SYNONYMS

ātma-āvāsyam-the expansion of the energy of the Supreme Soul, the Personality of Godhead; idam-this; viśvam-universe; yat-whatever; kiñcit-something; jagatyām-within the universe; jagat-all that is animate or inanimate; tena-by Him; tyaktena-by things allotted to every person; bhuñjīthā-you should accept for your maintenance; mā-never; gṛdhaḥ-encroach; kasyasvit-someone else's; dhanam-property.

TRANSLATION

" 'Everything animate or inanimate that is within the universe is controlled and owned by the Lord. One should therefore accept only those things for himself that are set aside as his quota, and one should not accept other things, knowing well to whom they belong.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (8.1.10). Communists and socialists are trying to propagate the philosophy that everything belongs to the mass of people or to the state. Such an idea is not perfect. When this idea is expanded, we can see that everything belongs to God. That will be the perfection of the communistic idea. The purpose of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is here very nicely explained. Every one of us must be satisfied with those things the Supreme Personality of Godhead has allotted us. We should not encroach upon the possessions of others. This simple idea can be expanded in our daily lives. Everyone should have a piece of land given by the government, and everyone should possess a few cows. Both of these should be utilized for one's daily bread. Above that, if something is manufactured in a factory, it should be considered the property of the Supreme Personality of Godhead because the ingredients belong to the Supreme Lord. Actually, there is no need to manufacture such things artificially, but if it is done, one should consider that the goods produced belong to the Supreme Lord. Spiritual communism recognizes the supreme proprietorship of the Supreme Lord. As explained in Bhagavad-gītā (5.29):

bhoktāraṁ yajña-tapasāṁ
sarva-loka-maheśvaram
suhṛdaṁ sarva-bhūtānāṁ
jñātvā māṁ śāntim ṛcchati

"The sages, knowing Me as the ultimate purpose of all sacrifices and austerities, the Supreme Lord of all planets and demigods and the benefactor and well-wisher of all living entities, attain peace from the pangs of material miseries."

It is further explained in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam that no one should claim anything as his property. Whatever property one claims to be his actually belongs to Kṛṣṇa.

One should be satisfied with whatever has been allotted by the Supreme Lord and should not encroach upon the property of others. This will lead to peace in the whole world.

TEXT 102

bhāgavatera sambandha, abhidheya, prayojana catuḥ-ślokīte prakaṭa tāra kariyāche lakṣaṇa

SYNONYMS

bhāgavatera-of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; sambandha-a personal relationship with God; abhidheya-activities in that relationship; prayojana-the ultimate goal of life; catuḥ-ślokīte-in the four famous verses of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; prakaṭa-manifesting; tāra-of them; kariyāche-has done; lakṣaṇa-the symptoms.

TRANSLATION

"The essence of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam-our relationship with the Supreme Lord, our activities in that connection and the goal of life-is manifest in the four verses of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam known as the catuḥ-ślokī. Everything is explained in those verses.

TEXT 103

"āmi-'sambandha'-tattva, āmāra jñāna-vijñāna āmā pāite sādhana-bhakti 'abhidheya'-nāma

SYNONYMS

āmi-I; sambandha-tattva-the center of all relationships; āmāra-of Me; jñāna-knowledge; vijñāna-practical application of that knowledge; āmā pāite-to obtain Me; sādhana-bhakti-the practice of devotional service; abhidheya-nāma-is called activities in that relationship.

TRANSLATION

"Lord Kṛṣṇa says, 'I am the center of all relationships. Knowledge of Me and the practical application of that knowledge is actual knowledge. Approaching Me for devotional service is called abhidheya.

PURPORT

Spiritual knowledge means fully understanding the Absolute Truth in three features-impersonal Brahman, localized Paramātmā and the all-powerful Supreme Personality of Godhead. Ultimately when one takes shelter at the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and engages in the Lord's service, the resultant knowledge is called vijñāna, special knowledge, or the practical application of spiritual knowledge. One should be engaged in the Lord's devotional service to achieve the aim of life, called prayojana. The practice of devotional service to attain that goal of life is called abhidheya.

TEXT 104

sādhanera phala-'prema' mūla-prayojana sei preme pāya jīva āmāra 'sevana'

SYNONYMS

sādhanera phala-the result of devotional service; prema-love of Godhead; mūla-prayojana-the chief goal; sei preme-by that love of Godhead; pāya-gets; jīva-the living entity; āmāra-My; sevana-service.

TRANSLATION

" 'By rendering devotional service, one gradually rises to the platform of love of Godhead. That is the chief goal of life. On the platform of love of Godhead, one is eternally engaged in the service of the Lord.

"aham eva"-śloke 'aham'-tina-bāra pūrṇaiśvarya śrī-vigraha-sthitira nirdhāra

SYNONYMS

aham eva-I only; śloke-in this verse; aham-the word aham; tina-bāra-three times; pūrṇa-aiśvarya-full of all opulences; śrī-vigraha-of the transcendental form of the Lord; sthitira-of the existence; nirdhāra-confirmation.

TRANSLATION

" 'In the verse beginning "aham eva," the word "aham" is expressed three times. In the beginning there are the words "aham eva." In the second line there are the words "paścād aham." At the end are the words "so' smy aham." This "aham" indicates the Supreme Person. By the repetition of "aham," the transcendental personality who is complete with six opulences is confirmed.

TEXT 115

ei 'sambandha'-tattva kahiluṅ, śuna āra saba

SYNONYMS

māyā-atīta haile-when one becomes transcendentally situated above this external energy; haya-there is; āmāra anubhava-perception of Me; ei sambandha-tattva kahiluṅ-this has been explained as the principle of a relationship with Me; śuna-please hear; āra saba-all the rest.

TRANSLATION

" 'When one is transcendentally situated, he can perceive Me. This perception is the basis of one's relationship with the Supreme Lord. Now let Me further explain this subject matter.

PURPORT

Real spiritual knowledge has to be received from revealed scriptures. After this knowledge is attained, one can begin to perceive his actual spiritual life. Any knowledge achieved by speculation is imperfect. One must receive knowledge from the paramparā system and from the guru, otherwise one will be bewildered, and will ultimately become an impersonalist. When one very scrutinizingly deliberates, he can realize the personal feature of the Absolute Truth. The Supreme Personality of Godhead is always transcendental to this material creation. Nārāyaṇaḥ paro 'vyaktāt: Nārāyaṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is always transcendental. He is not a creation of this material world. Without realizing spiritual knowledge, one cannot understand that the transcendental form of the Lord is always beyond the creative energy. The example of the sun and sunshine is given. The sunshine is not the sun, but still the sunshine is not separate from the sun. The philosophy of acintya-bhedābheda-tattva (simultaneously one and different) cannot be understood by one who is fully under the influence of the external energy. Consequently a person under the influence of the material energy cannot understand the nature and form of the Personality of the Absolute Truth.

'abhidheya' sādhana-bhaktira śunaha vicāra sarva-jana-deśa-kāla-daśāte vyāpti yāra

SYNONYMS

abhidheya-the means to obtain an end; sādhana-bhaktira-of the process of executing devotional service; śunaha vicāra-please hear the procedure; sarva-all; jana-people; deśa-countries; kāla-times; daśāte-and in circumstances; vyāpti yāra-which is all-pervasive.

TRANSLATION

" 'Now please hear from Me about the process of devotional service, which is applicable in any country, for any person, at all times and in all circumstances.

PURPORT

The cult of bhāgavata-dharma can be spread in all circumstances, among all people and in all countries. Many envious people accuse this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement of spoiling the rigidity of so-called Hinduism. That is not actually the fact. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu confirms that devotional service to the Lord-the cult of bhāgavata-dharma, which is now being spread as the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement-can be spread in every country, for every person, in any condition of life, and in all circumstances. Bhāgavata-dharma does not restrict pure devotees to the Hindu community. A pure devotee is above a brāhmaṇa; therefore it is not incompatible to offer the sacred thread to devotees in Europe, America, Australia, Japan, Canada, and so on. Sometimes these pure devotees, who have been accepted by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, are not allowed to enter certain temples in India. Some high-caste brāhmaṇas and gosvāmīs refuse to take prasāda in the temples of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness. Actually this is against the instruction of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Devotees can come from any country, and they can belong to any creed or race. On the strength of this verse, those who are actually devotees and followers of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu must accept devotees from all parts of the world as pure Vaiṣṇavas. They should be accepted not artificially but factually. One should see how they are advanced in Kṛṣṇa consciousness and how they are conducting Deity worship, saṅkīrtana and Ratha-yātrā. Considering all these points, an envious person should refrain from malicious atrocities.

TEXT 121

'dharmādi' viṣaye yaiche e 'cāri, vicāra sādhana-bhakti-ei cāri vicārera pāra

SYNONYMS

dharma-ādi-of religious activities and so on; viṣaye-in the subject matter; yaiche-just as; e cāri vicāra-there is a consideration of four principles, namely the person, country, time and atmosphere; sādhana-bhakti-of devotional service; ei-these; cāri-four; vicārera-to the considerations; pāra-transcendental.

TRANSLATION

" 'As far as religious principles are concerned, there is a consideration of the person, the country, the time and the circumstance. In devotional service, however, there are no such considerations. Devotional service is transcendental to all considerations.

PURPORT

When we are on the material platform, there are different types of religions-Hinduism, Christianity, Mohammedanism, Buddhism, and so on. These are instituted for a particular time, a particular country or a particular person. Consequently there are differences. Christian principles are different from Hindu principles, and Hindu principles are different from Mohammedan and Buddhist principles. These may be considered on the material platform, but when we come to the platform of transcendental devotional service, there are no such considerations. The transcendental service of the Lord (sādhana-bhakti) is above these principles. The world is anxious for religious unity, and that common platform can be achieved in transcendental devotional service. This is the verdict of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. When one becomes a Vaiṣṇava, he becomes transcendental to all these limited considerations. This is also confirmed in Bhagavad-gītā (14.26):

māṁ ca yo 'vyabhicāreṇa
bhakti-yogena sevate
sa guṇān samatītyaitān
brahma-bhūyāya kalpate

"One who engages in full devotional service, who does not fall down in any circumstance, at once transcends the modes of material nature and thus comes to the level of Brahman."

The devotional activities of the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement are completely transcendental to material considerations. As far as different faiths are concerned, religions may be of different types, but on the spiritual platform, everyone has an equal right to execute devotional service. That is the platform of oneness and the basis for a classless society. In his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura confirms that one has to learn from a bona fide spiritual master about religious principles, economic development, sense gratification and ultimately liberation. These are the four divisions of regulated life, but they are subjected to the material platform. On the spiritual platform, the four principles are jñāna, vijñāna, tad-aṅga and tad-rahasya. Rules, regulations and restrictions are on the material platform, but on the spiritual platform one has to be equipped with transcendental knowledge, which is above the principles of religious rituals. Mundane religious activity is known as smārta-viddhi, but transcendental devotional service is called Gosvāmī-viddhi. Unfortunately many so-called gosvāmīs are on the platform of smārta-viddhi, yet they try to pass as Gosvāmī-viddhi, and thus the people are cheated. Gosvāmī-viddhi is strictly explained in Sanātana Gosvāmī's Hari-bhakti-vilāsa, wherein it is stated:

yathā kāñcanatāṁ yāti
kāṁsyaṁ rasa-vidhānataḥ
tathā dīṣkā-vidhānena
dvijatvaṁ jāyate nṛṇām

The conclusion is that devotional service is open for everyone, regardless of caste, creed, time and country. This Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is functioning according to this principle.

SYNONYMS

āmāte-unto Me; ye-whatever; prīti-affection; sei-that; prema-love of Godhead; prayojana-the ultimate goal of life; kārya-dvāre-by practical example; kahi-let Me inform; tāra-its; svarūpa-lakṣaṇa-natural characteristics.

TRANSLATION

" 'Supreme affection for Me is called love of Godhead, and that is the ultimate goal of life. Let Me explain by practical example the natural characteristics of such love.

TEXT 125

pañca-bhūta yaiche bhūtera bhitare-bāhire bhakta-gaṇe sphuri āmi bāhire-antare

SYNONYMS

pañca-bhūta-the five material elements; yaiche-just as; bhūtera-of the living entities; bhitare-inside; bāhire-and outside; bhakta-gaṇe-unto the devotees; sphuri-becoming manifest; āmi-I; bāhire-antare-externally and internally.

TRANSLATION

" 'The five material elements are existing inside and outside of every living entity. Similarly, I, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, am manifest within the heart of the devotee as well as outside his body.

PURPORT

The pure devotee knows that he is a servant of Kṛṣṇa eternally. He knows that everything can be used in the service of the Lord.

TEXT 126

yathā mahānti bhūtāni bhūteṣūccāvaceṣv anu praviṣṭāny apraviṣṭāni
tathā teṣu na teṣv aham

SYNONYMS

yathā-as; mahānti-the universal; bhūtāni-elements; bhūteṣu-in the living entities; ucca-avaceṣu-both gigantic and minute; anu-after; praviṣṭāni-situated internally; apraviṣṭāni-situated externally; tathā-so; teṣu-in them; na-not; teṣu-in them; aham-I.

TRANSLATION

" 'As the material elements enter the bodies of all living beings and yet remain outside them all, I exist within all material creations and yet am not within them.

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (2.9.35). It is also the third verse of the catuḥ-ślokī. For an explanation see Ādi-līlā, Chapter One, text 55.

TEXT 127

bhakta āmā preme bāndhiyāche hṛdaya-bhitare

SYNONYMS

bhakta-a devotee; āmā-Me; preme-by love; bāndhiyāche-has bound; hṛdaya-bhitare-within his heart; yāhāṅ-wherever; netra-the eyes; paḍe-fall; tāhāṅ-there; dekhaye-he sees; āmāre-Me.

TRANSLATION

" 'A highly elevated devotee can bind Me, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, in his heart by love. Wherever he looks, he sees Me and nothing else.

TEXT 128

visṛjati hṛdayaṁ na yasya sākṣād dharir avaśābhihito 'py aghaugha-nāśaḥ praṇaya-rasanayā dhṛtāṅghri-padmaḥ sa bhavati bhāgavata-pradhāna uktaḥ

SYNONYMS

visṛjati-gives up; hṛdayam-the heart; na-not; yasya-whose; sākṣāt-directly; hariḥ-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; avaśa-abhihitaḥ-who is automatically glorified; api-although; aghaugha-nāśaḥ-who annihilates all kinds of inauspicious offenses for a devotee; praṇaya-rasanayā-with the rope of love; dhṛta-aṅghri-padmaḥ-whose lotus feet are bound; saḥ-such a devotee; bhavati-is; bhāgavata-pradhānaḥ-the most elevated devotee; uktaḥ-is said.

TRANSLATION

" 'Hari, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who destroys everything inauspicious for His devotees, does not leave the hearts of His devotees even if they remember Him and chant about Him inattentively. This is because the rope of love always binds the Lord within the devotees' hearts. Such devotees should be accepted as most elevated.

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.55).

TEXT 129

sarva-bhūteṣu yaḥ paśyed
bhagavad-bhāvam ātmanaḥ
bhūtāni bhagavaty ātmany
eṣa bhāgavatottamaḥ

SYNONYMS

sarva-bhūteṣu-in all objects (in matter, spirit, or combinations of matter and spirit); yaḥ-anyone who; paśyet-sees; bhagavat-bhāvam-the capacity to be engaged in the service of the Lord; ātmanaḥ-of the Supreme Spirit Soul, or the transcendence beyond the material conception of life; bhūtāni-all beings; bhagavati-in the Supreme Personality of Godhead; ātmani-the basic principle of all existence; eṣaḥ-this; bhāgavata-uttamaḥ-a person advanced in devotional service.

TRANSLATION

" 'A person advanced in devotional service sees within everything the soul of souls, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Consequently he always sees the form of the Supreme Personality of Godhead as the cause of all causes and understands that all things are situated in Him.

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.45).

TEXT 130

gāyanta uccair amum eva saṁhatāḥ vicikyur unmattakavad vanād vanam papracchur ākāśavad antaraṁ bahir bhūteṣu santaṁ puruṣaṁ vanaspatīn

SYNONYMS

gāyantaḥ-continuously singing; uccaiḥ-very loudly; amum-that one (Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa); eva-certainly; saṁhatāḥ-being assembled together; vicikyuḥ-searched; unmattaka-vat-like those who have become mad; vanāt-from one forest; vanam-to another forest; papracchuḥ-asked about; ākāśa-vat-like the sky; antaram-within; bahiḥ-outside; bhūteṣu-in all living entities; santam-existing; puruṣam-the Supreme Person; vanaspatīn-all the trees and plants.

TRANSLATION

" 'All the gopīs assembled to chant the transcendental qualities of Kṛṣṇa very loudly, and they began to wander from one forest to another like madwomen. They began to inquire about the Lord, who is situated in all living entities internally and externally. Indeed, they even asked all the plants and vegetables about Him, the Supreme Person.' "

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.30.4). The gopīs almost went mad due to Kṛṣṇa's suddenly leaving the rāsa dance. Because the gopīs were fully absorbed in thoughts of Kṛṣṇa, they were imitating His different postures and pastimes. They became very saddened because of His absence, and this incident is explained by Śukadeva Gosvāmī to Mahārāja Parīkṣit.

TEXT 131

ataeva bhāgavate ei 'tina' kaya sambandha-abhidheya-prayojana-maya ataeva-therefore; bhāgavate-in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; ei tina-these three principles; kaya-are explained; sambandha-abhidheya-prayojana-maya-first one's relationship, then activities in devotional service, and then achieving the highest goal of life, love of Godhead.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued, "One's relationship with the Lord, activities and devotional service, and the attainment of the highest goal of life, love of Godhead, are the subject matters of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

TEXT 132

vadanti tat tattva-vidas tattvaṁ yaj jñānam advayam brahmeti paramātmeti bhagavān iti śabdyate

SYNONYMS

vadanti-they say; tat-that; tattva-vidaḥ-those who know the Absolute Truth; tattvam-the ultimate goal; yat-which; jñānam advayam-identical knowledge; brahma iti-as the impersonal Brahman; paramātmā iti-as the Supersoul; bhagavān iti-as the Supreme Personality of Godhead; śabdyate-it is described.

TRANSLATION

" 'The Absolute Truth is known by the self-realized souls as a unified identity known by different names-impersonal Brahman, localized Paramātmā, and Bhagavān, the Supreme Personality of Godhead.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.11).

TEXT 133

bhagavān eka āsedam
agra ātmātmanāṁ vibhuḥ ātmecchānugatāv ātmā anānāmaty-upalakṣaṇaḥ

SYNONYMS

bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; ekaḥ-only; āsa-was; idam-this universe; agre-before (before the creation of this cosmic manifestation); ātmā-the living force; ātmanām-of all the living entities; vibhuḥ-the Supreme Lord; ātma-of the Supreme; icchā-the will; anugatau-according to; ātmā-the Supersoul; anānāmati-upalakṣaṇaḥ-who is not realized by persons having many angles of vision.

TRANSLATION

" 'Before the cosmic manifestation was created, the creative propensity was merged in His person. At that time all potencies and manifestations were preserved in the personality of the Supreme Lord. The Lord is the cause of all causes, and He is the all-pervading, self-sufficient person. Before the creation, He existed with His spiritual potency in the spiritual world, wherein various Vaikuṇṭha planets are manifest.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (3.5.23).

TEXT 134

ete cāṁśa-kalāḥ puṁsaḥ kṛṣṇas tu bhagavān svayam indrāri-vyākulaṁ lokaṁ mṛḍayanti yuge yuge

SYNONYMS

ete-these; ca-and; aṁśa-plenary portions; kalāḥ-parts of plenary portions; puṁsaḥ-of the puruṣa-avatāras; kṛṣṇaḥ-Lord Kṛṣṇa; tu-but; bhagavān-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; svayam-Himself; indra-ari-the enemies of Lord Indra; vyākulam-full of; lokam-the world; mṛḍayanti-make happy; yuge yuge-at the right time in each age.

TRANSLATION

" 'All these incarnations of Godhead are either plenary portions or parts of the plenary portions of the puruṣa-avatāras. But Kṛṣṇa is the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. In every age He protects the world through His different features when the world is disturbed by the enemies of Indra.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.3.28). For an explanation, see Ādi-līlā, Chapter Two, text 67.

TEXT 135

SYNONYMS

eita'-this; sambandha-relationship; śuna-please hear; abhidheya-the function; bhakti-known as devotional service; bhāgavate-in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; prati-śloke-in each and every verse; vyāpe-pervades; yāra-of which; sthiti-the situation.

TRANSLATION

"This is one's eternal relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Now please hear about the execution of devotional service. This principle pervades practically all the verses of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

TEXT 136

bhaktyāham ekayā grāhyaḥ śraddhayātmā priyaḥ satām bhaktiḥ punāti man-niṣṭhā
śva-pākān api sambhavāt

SYNONYMS

bhaktyā-by devotional service; aham-I, the Supreme Personality of Godhead; ekayā-unflinching; grāhyaḥ-obtainable; śraddhayā-by faith; ātmā-the most dear; priyaḥ-to be served; satām-by the devotees; bhaktiḥ-the devotional service; punāti-purifies; mat-niṣṭhā-fixed only on Me; śva-pākān-the lowest grade of human beings, who are accustomed to eating dogs; api-certainly; sambhavāt-from all faults due to birth and so on.

TRANSLATION

" 'Being very dear to the devotees and sādhus, I am attained through unflinching faith and devotional service. This bhakti-yoga system, which gradually increases attachment for Me, purifies even a human being born among dog-eaters. That is to say, everyone can be elevated to the spiritual platform by the process of bhakti-yoga.'

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.14.21).

TEXT 137

na sādhayati māṁ yogo na sāṅkhyaṁ dharma uddhava na svādhyāyas tapas tyāgo yathā bhaktir mamorjitā

SYNONYMS

na-never; sādhayati-causes to remain satisfied; mām-Me; yogaḥ-the process of control; na-nor; sāṅkhyam-the process of gaining philosophical knowledge about the Absolute Truth; dharmaḥ-such an occupation; uddhava-My dear Uddhava; na-nor; svādhyāyaḥ-study of the Vedas; tapaḥ-austerities; tyāgaḥ-renunciation, acceptance of sannyāsa, or charity; yathā-as much as; bhaktiḥ-devotional service; mama-unto Me; ūrjitā-developed.

TRANSLATION

" 'The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, said: "My dear Uddhava, neither through aṣṭāṅga-yoga [the mystic yoga system to control the senses], nor through impersonalism or an analytical study of the Absolute Truth, nor through study of the Vedas, nor through practice of austerities, nor through charity, nor through acceptance of sannyāsa, can one satisfy Me as much as one can by developing unalloyed devotional service unto Me.' "

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.14.20). For an explanation see Ādi-līlā, Chapter Seventeen, text 76.

TEXT 138

bhayaṁ dvitīyābhiniveśataḥ syād
īśād apetasya viparyayo 'smṛtiḥ
tan-māyayāto budha ābhajet taṁ
bhaktyaikayeśaṁ guru-devatātmā

SYNONYMS

bhayam-fear; dvitīya-abhiniveśataḥ-from the misconception of being a product of material energy; syāt-arises; īśāt-from the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa; apetasya-of one who has withdrawn (the conditioned soul); viparyayaḥ-reversal of position; asmṛtiḥ-no conception of his relationship with the Supreme Lord; tat-māyayā-because of the illusory energy of the Supreme Lord; ataḥ-therefore; budhaḥ-one who is wise; ābhajet-must worship; tam-Him; bhaktyā-by devotional service; ekayā-undiverted to karma and jñāna; īśam-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; guru-as the spiritual master; devatā-worshipable Lord; ātmā-Supersoul.

TRANSLATION

" 'When the living entity is attracted by the material energy, which is separate from Kṛṣṇa, he is overpowered by fear. Because he is separated from the Supreme Personality of Godhead by the material energy, his conception of life is reversed. In other words, instead of being the eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa, he becomes Kṛṣṇa's competitor. This is called viparyayo 'smṛtiḥ. To nullify this mistake, one who is actually learned and advanced worships the Supreme Personality of Godhead as his spiritual master, worshipful Deity and source of life. He thus worships the Lord by the process of unalloyed devotional service.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.37).

TEXT 139

ebe śuna, prema, yei-mūla 'prayojana' pulakāśru-nṛtya-gīta-yāhāra lakṣaṇa

SYNONYMS

ebe śuna-now hear; prema-love of Godhead; yei-which; mūla prayojana-the chief objective; pulaka-aśru-nṛtya-gīta-trembling of the body, tears in the eyes, dancing and chanting; yāhāra lakṣaṇa-the symptoms of which.

TRANSLATION

"Now hear from Me what actual love of Godhead is. It is the prime object of life and is symptomized by bodily trembling, tears in the eyes, chanting and dancing.

TEXT 140

smarantaḥ smārayaś ca mitho 'ghaugha-haraṁ harim bhaktyā sañjātayā bhaktyā bibhraty utpulakāṁ tanum

SYNONYMS

smarantaḥ-remembering; smārayaḥ ca-and reminding; mithaḥ-one another; aghaugha-haram-who takes away everything inauspicious from the devotee; harim-the Supreme Personality of Godhead; bhaktyā-by devotion; sañjātayā-awakened; bhaktyā-by devotion; bibhrati-possess; utpulakām-agitated by ecstasy; tanum-body.

TRANSLATION

" 'Pure devotees develop a spiritual body and symptoms of ecstatic love simply by remembering and reminding others of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Hari, who takes away everything inauspicious from the devotee. This position is attained by rendering devotional service according to the regulative principles and then rising to the platform of spontaneous love.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.3.31).

TEXT 141

unmādavan nṛtyati loka-bāhyaḥ

SYNONYMS

evam-vrataḥ-when one thus engages in a vow to chant and dance; sva-own; priya-very dear; nāma-holy name; kīrtyā-by chanting; jāta-in this way develops; anurāgaḥ-attachment; druta-cittaḥ-very eagerly; uccaiḥ-loudly; hasati-laughs; atho-also; roditi-cries; rauti-becomes agitated; gāyati-chants; unmāda-vat-like a madman; nṛtyati-dances; loka-bāhyaḥ-without caring for outsiders.

TRANSLATION

" 'When a person is actually advanced and takes pleasure in chanting the holy name of the Lord, who is very dear to him, he is agitated and loudly chants the holy name. He also laughs, cries, becomes agitated and chants like a madman, not caring for outsiders.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.2.40).

TEXT 142

TRANSLATION

" 'The meaning of the Vedānta-sūtra is present in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. The full purport of the Mahābhārata is also there. The commentary of the Brahma-gāyatrī is also there and fully expanded with all Vedic knowledge. Śrīmad Bhāgavatam is the supreme Purāṇa, and it was compiled by the Supreme Personality of Godhead in His incarnation as Vyāsadeva. There are twelve cantos, 335 chapters and eighteen thousand verses.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Garuda Purāṇa.

TEXT 145

SYNONYMS

sarva-veda-of all Vedic literature; itihāsānām-of historical literature; sāram sāram-the essence of the essence; samuddhṛtam-is collected (in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam).

TRANSLATION

" 'The essence of all Vedic literature and all histories has been collected in this Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.'

PURPORT

Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam was collected by the incarnation of God, Vyāsadeva, and it was later taught to his son, Śukadeva Gosvāmī. This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.3.42).

TEXT 146

SYNONYMS

sarva-vedānta-sāram-the best part of all the Vedānta; hi-certainly; śrīmad-bhāgavatam-the great literature about Bhagavān; iṣyate-is accepted; tat-rasa-amṛta-by the transcendental mellow derived from that great literature; tṛp-tasya-of one who is satisfied; na-never; anyatra-anywhere else; syāt-is; ratiḥ-attraction; kvacit-at any time.

TRANSLATION

" 'Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is accepted as the essence of all Vedic literature and Vedānta philosophy. Whoever tastes the transcendental mellow of Śrīmad Bhāgavatam is never attracted to any other literature.'

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (12.13.15).

TEXT 147

gāyatrīra arthe ei grantha-ārambhana
"satyaṁ paraṁ"-sambandha, "dhīmahi"-sādhana-prayojana

SYNONYMS

gāyatrīra arthe-with the meaning of Brahma-gāyatrī; ei-this; grantha-of the great literature; ārambhana-the beginning; satyam param-the supreme Absolute Truth; sambandha-shows a relationship; dhīmahi-we meditate (the end of the Gāyatrī mantra); sādhana-prayojana-the execution of service and the achievement of the ultimate goal.

TRANSLATION

"In the beginning of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam there is an explanation of the Brahma-gāyatrī mantra. 'The Absolute Truth [satyaṁ param]' indicates the relationship, and 'we meditate [dhīmahi] on Him' indicates the execution of devotional service and the ultimate goal of life.

SYNONYMS

janma-ādi-creation, maintenance and dissolution; asya-of this (the universe); yataḥ-from whom; anvayāt-directly from the spiritual connection; itarataḥ-indirectly from the lack of material contact; ca-also; artheṣu-in all affairs; abhijñaḥ-perfectly cognizant; sva-rāṭ-independent; tene-imparted; brahma-the Absolute Truth; hṛdā-through the heart; yaḥ-who; ādi-kavaye-unto Lord Brahmā; muhyanti-are bewildered; yat-in whom; sūrayaḥ-great personalities like Lord Brahmā and other demigods or great brāhmaṇas; tejaḥ-vāri-mṛdām-of fire, water and earth; yathā-as; vinimayaḥ-the exchange; yatra-in whom; tri-sargaḥ-the material creation of three modes; amṛṣā-factual; dhāmnā-with the abode; svena-His own personal; sadā-always; nirasta-kuhakam-devoid of all illusion; satyam-the truth; param-absolute; dhīmahi-let us meditate upon.

TRANSLATION

" 'I offer my obeisances unto Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, son of Vasudeva, who is the supreme all-pervading Personality of Godhead. I meditate upon Him, the transcendent reality, who is the primeval cause of all causes, from whom all manifested universes arise, in whom they dwell and by whom they are destroyed. I meditate upon that eternally effulgent Lord who is directly and indirectly conscious of all manifestations and yet is beyond them. It is He only who first imparted Vedic knowledge unto the heart of Brahmā, the first created being. Through Him this world, like a mirage, appears real even to great sages and demigods. Because of Him, the material universes, created by the three modes of nature, appear to be factual, although they are unreal. I meditate therefore upon Him, the Absolute Truth, who is eternally existent in His transcendental abode, and who is forever free of illusion.

PURPORT

This is the opening invocation of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.1.1).

SYNONYMS

dharmaḥ-religiosity; projjhita-completely rejected; kaitavaḥ-in which there is fruitive intention; atra-herein; paramaḥ-the highest; nirmatsarāṇām-of the one hundred percent pure in heart; satām-devotees; vedyam-to be understood; vāstavam-factual; atra-herein; vastu-substance; śiva-dam-giving well-being; tāpa-traya-of the threefold miseries; unmūlanam-causing uprooting; śrīmat-beautiful; bhāgavate-in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa; mahā-muni-by the great sage (Vyāsadeva); kṛte-compiled; kim-what; vā-indeed; paraiḥ-with others; īśvaraḥ-the Supreme Lord; sadyaḥ-at once; hṛdi-within the heart; avarudhyate-becomes confined; atra-herein; kṛtibhiḥ-by pious men; śuśrūṣubhiḥ-desiring to hear; tat-kṣaṇāt-without delay.

TRANSLATION

” ’Completely rejecting all religious activities which are materially motivated, this Bhāgavata Purāṇa propounds the highest truth, which is understandable by those devotees who are pure in heart. The highest truth is reality distinguished from illusion for the welfare of all. Such truth uproots the threefold miseries. This beautiful Bhāgavatam, compiled by the great sage Śrī Vyāsadeva, is sufficient in itself for God realization. As soon as one attentively and submissively hears the message of Bhāgavatam, he becomes attached to the Supreme Lord.’

TRANSLATION

” ’Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is the essence of all Vedic literatures, and it is considered the ripened fruit of the wish-fulfilling tree of Vedic knowledge. It has been sweetened by emanating from the mouth of Śukadeva Gosvāmī. You who are thoughtful and who relish mellows should always try to taste this ripened fruit. O thoughtful devotees, as long as you are not absorbed in transcendental bliss, you should continue tasting this Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, and when you are fully absorbed in bliss, you should go on tasting its mellows forever.’

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.1.3).

TEXT 152

SYNONYMS

nirantara kara-constantly perform; kṛṣṇa-nāma-saṅkīrtana-the chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; helāya-very easily; mukti pābe-you will get liberation; pābe prema-dhana-you will achieve the highest goal, ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued, "Always discuss Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and constantly chant the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa. In this way you will be able to attain liberation very easily, and you will be elevated to the enjoyment of love of Godhead.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura states that without studying Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, one cannot understand the purport of Brahma-sūtra (Vedānta-sūtra) or the Upaniṣads. If one tries to understand Vedānta philosophy and the Upaniṣads without studying Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, he will be bewildered and, construing a different meaning will gradually become an atheist or an impersonalist.

TEXT 155

TRANSLATION

After this, all the Māyāvādī sannyāsīs and learned scholars at Vārāṇasī began discussing Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. In this way Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu delivered them.

TEXT 167

nija-loka lañā prabhu āilā vāsāghara vārāṇasī haila dvitīya nadīyā-nagara

SYNONYMS

nija-loka lañā-with His personal associates; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; āilā vāsa-aghara-came to His residential place; vārāṇasī-the city of Vārāṇasī; haila-became; dvitīya-second; nadīyā-nagara-Navadvīpa (Nadia).

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu then returned to His residence with His personal associates. Thus He turned the whole city of Vārāṇasī into another Navadvīpa [Nadīyā-nagara].

PURPORT

Both Navadvīpa and Vārāṇasī were celebrated for their highly educational activities. At the present time these cities are still inhabited by great, learned scholars, but Vārāṇasī is especially a center for Māyāvādī sannyāsīs who are learned scholars. However, unlike Navadvīpa, there are hardly any devotees in Vārāṇasī. Consequently a discussion of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam was very rare in Vārāṇasī. In Navadvīpa, such a discussion was quite ordinary. After Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu visited Vārāṇasī and turned Prakāśānanda Sarasvatī and his disciples into Vaiṣṇavas, Vārāṇasī became like Navadvīpa because so many devotees began discussing Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Even at the present moment one can hear many discussions on Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam taking place on the banks of the Ganges. Many scholars and sannyāsīs gather there to hear Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and perform saṅkīrtana.

TEXT 168

nija-gaṇa lañā prabhu kahe hāsya kari'

TRANSLATION

Among His own associates, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu laughingly said, "I came here to sell My emotional ecstatic love.

TEXT 169

kāśīte grāhaka nāhi, vastu nā vikāya punarapi deśe vahi' laoyā nāhi yāya kāśīte-in Kāśī (Benares); grāhaka nāhi-there was no customer; vastu nā vikāya-it was not selling; punarapi-again; deśe-to My own country; vahi'-carrying (it); laoyā-to take; nāhi yāya-was not possible.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Although I came to Vārāṇasī to sell My goods, there were no customers, and it appeared necessary for Me to carry them back to My own country.

TEXT 170

āmi bojhā vahimu, tomā-sabāra duḥkha haila tomā-sabāra icchāya vinā-mūlye bilāila

SYNONYMS

āmi-I; bojhā-burden; vahimu-shall carry; tomā-sabāra duḥkha haila-all of you became very unhappy; tomā-sabāra icchāya-only by your will; vinā-mūlye bilāila-I distributed without a price.

TRANSLATION

"All of you were feeling unhappy that no one was purchasing My goods and that I would have to carry them away. Therefore, by your will only, I have distributed them without charging."

PURPORT

When we began distributing the message of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in the Western countries, a similar thing happened. In the beginning we were very disappointed for at least one year because no one came forth to help this movement, but by the grace of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, some young boys joined this movement in 1966. Of course we distributed Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's message of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra without bargaining or selling. As a result, this movement has spread all over the world, with the assistance of European and American boys and girls. We therefore pray for all the blessings of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu upon all the devotees in the Western world who are spreading this movement.

sabe kahe,-loka tārite tomāra avatāra
'pūrva' 'dakṣiṇa' 'paścima' karilā nistāra

SYNONYMS

sabe kahe-everyone says; loka tārite-to deliver the fallen souls; tomāra avatāra-Your incarnation; pūrva-east; dakṣiṇa-south; paścima-west; karilā nistāra-You have delivered.

TRANSLATION

All the Lord's devotees then said, "You have incarnated to deliver fallen souls. You have delivered them in the east and in the south, and now you are delivering them in the west.

TEXT 172

'eka' vārāṇasī chila tomāte vimukha

SYNONYMS

eka-one; vārāṇasī-the city of Vārāṇasī; chila-remained; tomāte vimukha-against Your missionary activities; tāhā-that; nistāriyā-delivering; kailā-have done; āmā-sabāra-of all of us; sukha-awakening of happiness.

TRANSLATION

"Only Vārāṇasī was left because the people there were against Your missionary activities. Now You have delivered them, and we are all very happy."

TEXT 173

vārāṇasī-grāme yadi kolāhala haila śuni' grāmī deśī loka āsite lāgila

SYNONYMS

vārāṇasī-grāme-in the city of Vārāṇasī; yadi-when; kolāhala haila-there was broadcasting of this news; śuni'-hearing; grāmī-from the villages; deśī-from the towns; loka āsite lāgila-people began to pour in.

TRANSLATION

After the news of these events was broadcast, everyone from the surrounding neighborhoods began to pour in to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TEXT 174

lakṣa koṭi loka āise, nāhika gaṇana saṅkīrṇa-sthāne prabhura nā pāya daraśana

SYNONYMS

lakṣa koṭi-hundreds and thousands; loka-people; āise-come; nāhika gaṇana-there was no counting; saṅkīrṇa-sthāne-in a small place; prabhura-of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nā pāya daraśana-could not get an audience.

TRANSLATION

Hundreds and thousands of people came to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. There was no counting the number. Because the Lord's residence was very small, not everyone could see Him.

TEXT 175

prabhu yabe snāne yāna viśveśvara-daraśane dui-dike loka kare prabhu-vilokane

SYNONYMS

prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yabe-when; snāne yāna-goes to bathe; viśveśvara-daraśane-or to see the Deity of Lord Viśveśvara; dui-dike-on two sides; loka-all the people; kare-do; prabhu-vilokane-seeing of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to take His bath in the Ganges and to see the temple of Viśveśvara, people would line up on both sides to see the Lord.

bāhu tuli' prabhu kahe-bala 'kṛṣṇa' 'hari'

bāhu tuli'-raising His two arms; prabhu kahe-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu says; bala-please say; kṛṣṇa hari-Kṛṣṇa, Hari; daṇḍa vat kare-offer their respects; loke-the people; hari-dhvani kari'-loudly chanting the name of Hari.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu passed by the people, He would raise His arms and say, "Please chant Kṛṣṇa! Please chant Hari!" All the people received Him by chanting Hare Kṛṣṇa, and they offered their respects to Him by this chanting.

TEXT 177

ei-mata dina pañca loka nistāriyā āra dina calilā prabhu udvigna hañā ei-mata-in this way; dina pañca-five days; loka-the people; nistāriyā-delivering; āra dina-on the next day; calilā-departed; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; udvigna hañā-being very eager.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

In this way, for five days, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu delivered the people of Vārāṇasī. Finally, on the next day, He became very eager to leave.

TEXT 178

rātre uṭhi' prabhu yadi karilā gamana

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu told Sanātana Gosvāmī, "All My devotees who go to Vṛndāvana are generally very poor. They each have nothing with them but a torn quilt and a small waterpot. Therefore, Sanātana, you should give them shelter and maintain them."

PURPORT

Following in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, we have constructed temples both in Vṛndāvana and Māyāpur, Navadvīpa, just to give shelter to the foreign devotees coming from Europe and America. Since the Hare Kṛṣṇa movement started, many Europeans and Americans have been visiting Vṛndāvana, but they have not been properly received by any āśrama or temple there. It is the purpose of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness to give them shelter and train them in devotional service. There are also many tourists eager to come to India to understand India's spiritual life, and the devotees in our temples both in Vṛndāvana and in Navadvīpa should make arrangements to accommodate them as far as possible.

TEXT 184

dīghi khodāite-to dig a big lake; tāre-Hussain Khān; munsīpha kailā-appointed as the supervisor; chidra pāñā-finding some fault; rāya-Subuddhi Rāya; tāre-him; cābuka mārilā-whipped.

TRANSLATION

Subuddhi Rāya put Hussain Khān in charge of digging a big lake, but, once, finding fault with him, he struck him with a whip.

TEXT 189

pāche yabe husena-khāṅ gauḍe ’rājā’ ha-ila subuddhi-rāyere tiṅho bahu bāḍāila

SYNONYMS

pāche-later; yabe-when; husena-khāṅ-Hussain Khān; gauḍe-in Bengal; rājā ha-ila-was appointed Nawab, or governor, by the central Mohammedan government; subuddhi-rāyere-unto Subuddhi Rāya; tiṅho-he; bahu bāḍāila-increased the opulences.

TRANSLATION

Later Hussain Khān somehow or other was appointed Nawab by the central Mohammedan government. As a matter of obligation, he increased the opulences of Subuddhi Rāya.

TEXT 190

tāra strī tāra aṅge dekhe māraṇera cihne subuddhi-rāyere mārite kahe rājā-sthāne

SYNONYMS

tāra strī-his wife; tāra aṅge-on his body; dekhe-sees; māraṇera cihne-the mark of the whip; subuddhi-rāyere-Subuddhi Rāya; mārite-to kill; kahe-says; rājā-sthāne-in the presence of the King.

TRANSLATION

Later, when the wife of Nawab Saiyada Hussain Khān saw the whip marks on his body, she requested him to kill Subuddhi Rāya.

TEXT 191

rājā kahe,-āmāra poṣṭā rāya haya ’pitā’ tāhāre mārimu āmi,-bhāla nahe kathā

SYNONYMS

rājā kahe-the King said; āmāra-my; poṣṭā-maintainer; rāya-Subuddhi Rāya; haya-is; pitā-just like my father; tāhāre mārimu-shall kill him; āmi-I; bhāla nahe kathā-this is not a good proposal.

TRANSLATION

Hussain Khān replied, "Subuddhi Rāya has maintained me very carefully. He was just like a father to me," he said. "Now you are asking me to kill him. This is not a very good proposal."

TEXT 192

strī kahe,-jāti laha', yadi prāṇe nā māribe rājā kahe,-jāti nile iṅho nāhi jībe

SYNONYMS

strī kahe-the wife replied; jāti laha'-then take his caste; yadi-if; prāṇe nā māribe-you will not kill him; rājā kahe-the King replied; jāti nile-if I take his caste; iṅho nāhi jībe-he will not live (he will commit suicide).

TRANSLATION

As a last alternative, the wife suggested that the Nawab take away Subuddhi Rāya's caste and turn him into a Mohammedan, but Hussain Khān replied that if he did this, Subuddhi Rāya would not live.

TEXT 193

strī marite cāhe, rājā saṅkaṭe paḍila karoṅyāra pāni tāra mukhe deoyāila

SYNONYMS

strī-the wife; marite cāhe-wants to kill Subuddhi Rāya; rājā-the King; saṅkaṭe paḍila-became very perplexed; karoṅyāra pāni-water from a pitcher especially used by Mohammedans; tāra mukhe-on his head; deoyāila-forced to be sprinkled.

TRANSLATION

This became a perplexing problem for him because his wife kept requesting him to kill Subuddhi Rāya. Finally the Nawab sprinkled a little water on Subuddhi Rāya's head from a pitcher that had been used by a Mohammedan.

PURPORT

More than five hundred years ago in India, the Hindus were so rigid and strict that if a Mohammedan would sprinkle a little water from his pitcher upon a Hindu, the Hindu would be immediately ostracized. Recently, in 1947, during the partition days, there was a big riot between Hindus and Muslims, especially in Bengal. The Hindus were forcibly made to eat cow's flesh, and consequently they began crying, thinking that they had become Mohammedans. Actually the Mohammedans in India did not come from the country of the Mohammedans, but Hindus instituted the custom that somehow or other if one contacted a Mohammedan, he became a Mohammedan. Rūpa and Sanātana Gosvāmī were born in a high brāhmaṇa family, but because they accepted employment under a Mohammedan government, they were considered Mohammedans. Subuddhi Rāya was sprinkled with water from the pitcher of a Mohammedan, and consequently he was condemned to have become a Mohammedan. Later, Aurangzeb, the Mohammedan emperor, introduced a tax especially meant for Hindus. Being oppressed in the Hindu community, many low-caste Hindus preferred to become Mohammedans. In this way the Mohammedan population increased. Later the British government made it a policy to divide the Hindus and the Muslims, and thus they maintained ill feelings between them. The result was that India was divided into Pakistan and Hindustan.

From early histories it appears that the entire earth was under one culture, Vedic culture, but gradually, due to religious and cultural divisions, the rule fragmented into many subdivisions. Now the earth is divided into many countries, religions and political parties. Despite these political and religious divisions, we advocate that everyone should unite again under one culture-Kṛṣṇa consciousness. People should accept one God, Kṛṣṇa; one scripture, Bhagavad-gītā; and one activity, devotional service to the Lord. Thus people may live happily upon this earth and combine to produce sufficient food. In such a society, there would be no question of scarcity, famine, or cultural or religious degradation. So-called caste systems and national divisions are artificial. According to our Vaiṣṇava philosophy, these are all external bodily designations. The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is not based upon bodily designations. It is a transcendental movement on the platform of spiritual understanding. If the people of the world understood that the basic principle of life is spiritual identification, they would understand that the business of the spirit soul is to serve the Supreme Spirit, Kṛṣṇa. As Lord Kṛṣṇa says in Bhagavad-gītā (15.7), mamaivāṁśo jīva-loke jīva-bhūtaḥ sanātanaḥ: "The living entities in this conditioned world are My eternal, fragmental parts." All living entities in different life forms are sons of Kṛṣṇa. Therefore they are all meant to serve Kṛṣṇa, the original supreme father. If this philosophy is accepted, the failure of the United Nations to unite all nations will be sufficiently compensated all over the world by a great Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. Recently we had talks with Christian leaders in Australia, including the Bishop of Australia, and everyone there was pleased with our philosophy of oneness in religious consciousness.

tabe subuddhi-rāya sei 'chadma' pāñā vārāṇasī āilā, saba viṣaya chāḍiyā

SYNONYMS

tabe-upon this; subuddhi-rāya-Subuddhi Rāya; sei-that; chadma-plea; pāñā-getting an opportunity; vārāṇasī āilā-came to Vārāṇasī; saba-all; viṣaya chāḍiyā-giving up the implications of material activities.

TRANSLATION

Taking the Nawab's sprinkling water upon him as an opportunity, Subuddhi Rāya left his family and business affairs and went to Vārāṇasī.

PURPORT

It appears that Subuddhi Rāya was a big landholder and a responsible, respectable gentleman. He could not, however, avoid the social misconception that one becomes a Mohammedan when water is sprinkled on one's face from a Mohammedan's pitcher. Actually he was planning to give up his material life and leave his family. Hindu culture recommends four divisions-brahmacarya, gṛhastha, vānaprastha and sannyāsa. Subuddhi Rāya was thinking of taking sannyāsa, and by the grace of Kṛṣṇa, he received this opportunity. He therefore left his family and went to Vārāṇasī. The system of varṇāśrama-dharma is very scientific. If one is directed by the varṇāśrama institution, he will naturally think of retiring from family life at the end of his life. Therefore sannyāsa is compulsory at the age of fifty.

TEXT 195

prāyaścitta puchilā tiṅho paṇḍitera gaṇe tāṅrā kahe,-tapta-ghṛta khāñā chāḍa' prāṇe

SYNONYMS

prāyaścitta-atonement; puchilā-inquired; tiṅho-he; paṇḍitera gaṇe-among the learned scholars or brāhmaṇa-paṇḍitas in Vārāṇasī; tāṅrā kahe-they advised; tapta-ghṛta-hot clarified butter; khāñā-drinking; chāḍa'-give up; prāṇe-your life.

TRANSLATION

When Subuddhi Rāya consulted the learned brāhmaṇas at Vārāṇasī, asking them how his conversion to Mohammedanism could be counteracted, they advised him to drink hot ghee and give up his life.

TEXT 196

keha kahe,-ei nahe, 'alpa' doṣa haya śuniyā rahilā rāya kariyā saṁśaya

SYNONYMS

keha kahe-some of the learned brāhmaṇas said; ei-this; nahe-not; alpa-insignificant; doṣa-fault; haya-is; śuniyā-hearing; rahilā-remained; rāya-Subuddhi Rāya; kariyā-making; saṁśaya-doubt.

TRANSLATION

When Subuddhi Rāya consulted some other brāhmaṇas, they told him that he had not committed a grievous fault and that consequently he should not drink hot ghee and give up his life. As a result, Subuddhi Rāya was doubtful about what to do.

PURPORT

This is another instance of Hindu custom. One brāhmaṇa would give advice condoning a particular fault, and another would give advice to the contrary. Typically, lawyers and physicians differ, giving one kind of instruction and then another. Due to the brāhmaṇas' different opinions, Subuddhi Rāya became further perplexed. He did not know what to do or what not to do.

TRANSLATION

In his state of perplexity, Subuddhi Rāya met Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu when the Lord was at Vārāṇasī. Subuddhi Rāya explained his position and asked Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu what he should do.

TEXT 198

prabhu kahe,-ihāṅ haite yāha' vṛndāvana nirantara kara kṛṣṇa-nāma-saṅkīrtana

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe-the Lord advised; ihāṅ haite-from this place; yāha' vṛndāvana-go to Vṛndāvana; nirantara-incessantly; kara-perform; kṛṣṇa-nāma-saṅkīrtana-chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

The Lord advised him, "Go to Vṛndāvana and chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra constantly."

PURPORT

This is a solution to all sinful activities. In this Age of Kali everyone is perplexed by so many inconveniences-social, political and religious-and naturally no one is happy. Due to the contamination of this age, everyone has a very short life. There are many fools and rascals who advise people to adopt this way of life or that way of life, but real liberation from life's perplexities means preparation for the next life. Tathā dehāntara-prāptir dhīras tatra na muhyati. One should be situated in his spiritual identity and return home, back to Godhead. The simplest method for this is recommended herein by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. We should constantly chant the holy names of the Lord, the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. Following in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is recommending this process all over the world. We are saying, "Chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, be freed from all the complexities of life and realize Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Engage in His devotional service and perfect your life so that you can return home, back to Godhead."

TEXT 199

eka 'nāmābhāse' tomāra pāpa-doṣa yābe āra 'nāma' la-ite kṛṣṇa-caraṇa pāibe

SYNONYMS

eka-one; nāma-ābhāse-by a reflection of the pure chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra; tomāra-your; pāpa-doṣa yābe-all the sinful reactions will go away; āra-then again; nāma la-ite-after chanting purely the name of the Lord; kṛṣṇa-caraṇa pāibe-you will get shelter at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu further advised Subuddhi Rāya: "Begin chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, and when your chanting is almost pure, all your sinful reactions will go away. After you chant perfectly, you will get shelter at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

The ten kinds of offenses should be considered. In the beginning, when one is initiated into the chanting of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, there are naturally many offenses. However, the devotee should be very careful to avoid these offenses and chant purely. This does not mean that the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra is sometimes pure and sometimes impure. Rather, the chanter is impure due to material contamination. He has to purify himself so that the holy names will be perfectly effective. Chanting the holy name of the Lord inoffensively will help one get immediate shelter at Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet. This means that by chanting purely, one will immediately be situated on the transcendental platform. We should note, however, that according to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's instructions, one should not wait to purify himself before chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. Whatever our condition may be, we should begin chanting immediately. By the power of the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, we will gradually be relieved from all material contamination and will get shelter at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, the ultimate goal of life.

SYNONYMS

āra-further; kṛṣṇa-nāma-the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra; laite-continuously chanting; kṛṣṇa-sthāne sthiti-being situated in company with Lord Kṛṣṇa; mahā-pātakera-of all kinds of sinful activity; haya-is; ei-this; prāyaścitti-atonement.

TRANSLATION

"When you are situated at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, no sinful reaction can touch you. This is the best solution to all sinful activity."

SYNONYMS

mathurā āsiyā-when he came to Mathurā; rāya-Subuddhi Rāya; prabhu-vārtā pāila-got information of the Lord's itinerary; prabhura-of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; lāga-contact; nā pāñā-not getting; mane-in the mind; baḍa-very great; duḥkha-unhappiness; haila-there was.

TRANSLATION

After reaching Mathurā, Subuddhi Rāya received information of the Lord's itinerary. He became very unhappy because he was not able to contact the Lord.

TEXT 204

śuṣka-kāṣṭha āni' rāya vece mathurāte pāṅca chaya paisā haya eka eka bojhāte śuṣka-kāṣṭha āni'-collecting dry wood from the forest; rāya-Subuddhi Rāya; vece-sells; mathurāte-at Mathurā; pāṅca chaya-five or six; paisā-paise; haya-are; eka eka bojhāte-in exchange for each load of dry wood.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Subuddhi Rāya would collect dry wood in the forest and take it to the city of Mathurā to sell. For each load he would receive five or six paise.

TEXT 205

āpane rahe eka paisāra cānā cābāiyā āra paisā bāṇiyā-sthāne rākhena dhariyā

SYNONYMS

āpane-personally; rahe-lives; eka paisāra-of one paisa's worth; cānā-fried chick-peas; cābāiyā-chewing; āra-the balance; paisā-four or five paise; bāṇiyā-sthāne-in the custody of a merchant; rākhena-keeps; dhariyā-depositing.

TRANSLATION

Earning his livelihood by selling dry wood, Subuddhi Rāya would live on only one paise's worth of fried chick-peas, and he would deposit whatever other paises he had with some merchant.

PURPORT

In those days there was no banking system like the one now found in Western countries. If one had excess money, he would deposit it with some merchant, usually a grocer. That was the banking system. Subuddhi Rāya would deposit his extra money with a mercantile man and spend it when necessary. When one is in the renounced order, saving money is not recommended. However, if one saves money for the service of the Lord or a Vaiṣṇava, that is accepted. These are the dealings of Subuddhi Rāya, who is one of the confidential devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī also followed this principle by spending fifty percent of his money in order to serve Kṛṣṇa through brāhmaṇas and Vaiṣṇavas. He gave twenty-five percent of his money to relatives, and twenty-five percent he deposited in the custody of a merchant. These are the approved methods recommended in Caitanya-caritāmṛta. Whether in the renounced order or in the gṛhastha order, a Vaiṣṇava should follow these principles set forth by the previous ācāryas.

TEXT 206

duḥkhī vaiṣṇava dekhi' tāṅre karāna bhojana gauḍīyā āile dadhi, bhāta, taila-mardana

SYNONYMS

duḥkhī vaiṣṇava-a poverty-stricken Vaiṣṇava; dekhi'-seeing; tāṅre-to him; karāna bhojana-gives food for eating; gauḍīyā āile-when a Bengali Vaiṣṇava came to Mathurā; dadhi-yogurt; bhāta-cooked rice; taila-mardana-massaging mustard oil on the body.

TRANSLATION

Subuddhi Rāya used to spend his savings to supply yogurt to Bengali Vaiṣṇavas who came to Mathurā. He also gave them cooked rice and oil massages. When he saw a poverty-stricken Vaiṣṇava, he would use his money to feed him.

PURPORT

There is a special reference for the maintenance of Bengali Vaiṣṇavas. A Gauḍīya Vaiṣṇava is a Bengali Vaiṣṇava. Most of the devotees of Lord Caitanya at that time were Gauḍīyas and Oriyās, inhabitants of Bengal and Orissa. There are still many hundreds and thousands of disciples in Bengal and Orissa. Bengalis are habituated to eating cooked rice as their staple food. When they went to Mathurā in the North, they found that the people generally ate chapatis or roṭi made of wheat. The Bengalis could not digest this food because they were used to cooked rice. Therefore as soon as Subuddhi Rāya saw a Bengali Vaiṣṇava arriving in Mathurā, he would try to supply him with cooked rice. Bengalis are also accustomed to taking a massage with mustard oil. In any case, Subuddhi Rāya wanted to serve the Vaiṣṇavas according to their needs. Therefore he would supply yogurt to ease the digestion of food eaten in Mathurā, particularly the wheat-made chapatis and roṭi.

TRANSLATION

When Rūpa Gosvāmī arrived at Mathurā, Subuddhi Rāya, out of love and affection for him, wanted to serve him in so many ways. He personally took Rūpa Gosvāmī to see all the twelve forests of Vṛndāvana.

PURPORT

Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī had been a minister in the government of Hussain Shah, and Subuddhi Rāya was also known to Hussain Shah, because as a boy, he had been Subuddhi Rāya's servant. It appears that Subuddhi Rāya was elderly, yet while he was living in Mathurā he showed Rūpa Gosvāmī the twelve forests of Vṛndāvana.

TRANSLATION

After reaching Prayāga, Sanātana Gosvāmī, following the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, went to Vṛndāvana along the public road.

PURPORT

This is especially significant because when Sanātana Gosvāmī went from Bengal to Benares, due to the political situation he did not go along the public road. After meeting Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Benares, however, he was ordered to proceed to Vṛndāvana along the public road leading to Mathurā. In other words, he was advised not to fear for his political situation.

SYNONYMS

saṅkṣepe-in brief; kahiluṅ-I have described; ei-this; madhya-līlāra sāra-essence of Madhya-līlā; koṭi-granthe-in millions of books; varṇana-description; nā yāya-is not possible; ihāra vistāra-elaborately.

TRANSLATION

I have now summarized the entire subject matter of the Madhya-līlā. These pastimes cannot be described elaborately even in millions of books.

TEXT 264

jīva nistārite prabhu bhramilā deśe-deśe āpane āsvādi' bhakti karilā prakāśe

SYNONYMS

jīva nistārite-to deliver all the fallen souls; prabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bhramilā-traveled; deśe-deśe-in various countries; āpane-personally; āsvādi'-tasting; bhakti-devotional service; karilā-did; prakāśe-broadcasting.

TRANSLATION

To deliver all fallen souls, the Lord traveled from country to country. He personally tasted the transcendental pleasure of devotional service, and He simultaneously spread the cult of devotion everywhere.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu personally traveled to different regions of India to spread the bhakti cult throughout the country. He also personally relished transcendental activities. By His personal behavior He has given an example for devotees to follow. That is, one should broadcast the cult of devotional service. He specifically instructed His devotees to enjoin all Indians to broadcast this message throughout the world because at that time the Lord could not personally travel to other parts of the world. In this regard, He has left two instructions:

bhārata-bhūmite haila manuṣya-janma yāra janma sārthaka kari' kara para-upakāra

"All Indians should seriously take up the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and should perfect their lives by adopting the process of devotional service. After perfecting their lives, they should broadcast this message all over the world for the welfare of all human beings [para-upakāra]." (Cc. Ādi 9.41) A Vaiṣṇava is especially interested in para-upakāra, doing good to others. Prahlāda Mahārāja was also interested in this. He did not want to be delivered alone; rather, he wanted to deliver all fallen souls, who are bereft of knowledge of bhakti and who misuse their intelligence for the temporary benefit of the material body. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu also wanted His mission spread all over the world.

pṛthivīte āche yata nagarādi grāma sarvatra pracāra haibe mora nāma

”In every town and village, the chanting of My name will be heard.”

Following in His footsteps, we are trying to broadcast His message throughout the world. By His mercy, people are taking this movement very seriously. Indeed, our books are extensively distributed in the Western countries, especially in America and Europe. Even the ecclesiastical orders in these countries are appreciating the value of this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement and are ready to unite for the highest benefit of human society. The followers of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu may therefore take this movement seriously and broadcast it throughout the world, from village to village and from town to town, just as Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself did.

kṛṣṇa-tattva, bhakti-tattva, prema-tattva sāra bhāva-tattva, rasa-tattva, līlā-tattva āra

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-tattva-the truth of Kṛṣṇa; bhakti-tattva-the truth of devotional service; prema-tattva-the truth of ecstatic love of Godhead; sāra-the essence; bhāva-tattva-the emotional truth; rasa-tattva-the truth of transcendental mellow; līlā-tattva-the truth of pastimes of the Lord; āra-also.

TRANSLATION

Kṛṣṇa consciousness means understanding the truth of Kṛṣṇa, the truth of devotional service, the truth of love of Godhead, the truth of emotional ecstasy, the truth of transcendental mellow and the truth of the pastimes of the Lord.

TEXT 266

śrī-bhāgavata-tattva-rasa karilā pracāre kṛṣṇa-tulya bhāgavata, jānāilā saṁsāre

SYNONYMS

śrī-bhāgavata-tattva-rasa-the truth and transcendental taste of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; karilā pracāre-Caitanya Mahāprabhu preached elaborately; kṛṣṇa-tulya-identical with Kṛṣṇa; bhāgavata-Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; jānāilā saṁsāre-has preached within this world.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has personally preached the transcendental truths and mellows of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and the Supreme Personality of Godhead are identical, for Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is the sound incarnation of Śrī Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 267

bhakta lāgi’ vistārilā āpana-vadane kāhāṅ bhakta-mukhe kahāi śunilā āpane bhakta lāgi’-especially for the purpose of His devotees; vistārilā-expansively described; āpana-vadane-personally, with His own mouth; kāhāṅ-sometimes; bhakta-mukhe-through the mouth of His devotees; kahāi-making describe; śunilā āpane-listened Himself.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu broadcast the purpose of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. He sometimes spoke for the benefit of His devotees and sometimes empowered one of His devotees to speak while He listened.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, as an ideal teacher, or ācārya, explained Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam very elaborately Himself. He sometimes also empowered His devotees to speak while He listened. This is the way an ācārya should train His disciples. Not only should he describe the bhāgavata cult personally, but he should also train his disciples to speak on this sublime subject.

TEXT 268

śrī-caitanya-sama āra kṛpālu vadānya bhakta-vatsala nā dekhi trijagate anya

SYNONYMS

śrī-caitanya-sama-equal to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; āra-anyone else; kṛpālu-merciful; vadānya-magnanimous; bhakta-vatsala-very kind to the devotees; nā dekhi-I do not see; tri-jagate-in these three worlds; anya-anyone else.

TRANSLATION

All sane men within these three worlds certainly accept the conclusion that no one is more merciful and magnanimous than Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and that no one is as kind to His devotees.

TEXT 269

SYNONYMS

śraddhā kari’-having faith and love; ei līlā-these pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; śuna-hear; bhakta-gaṇa-O devotees; ihāra prasāde-by the grace of this transcendental hearing; pāibā-you will get; caitanya-caraṇa-the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

All devotees should hear about Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu’s pastimes with faith and love. By the grace of the Lord, one can thus attain shelter at His lotus feet.

TEXT 270

ihāra prasāde pāibā kṛṣṇa-tattva-sāra sarva-śāstra-siddhāntera ihāṅ pāibā pāra

SYNONYMS

ihāra prasāde-by hearing these teachings of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; pāibā-you will get; kṛṣṇa-tattva-sāra-the essence of the truth of Kṛṣṇa; sarva-śāstra-of all revealed scriptures; siddhāntera-of conclusions; ihāṅ-here; pāibā-you will get; pāra-the ultimate limit.

TRANSLATION

By understanding the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, one can understand the truth about Kṛṣṇa. By understanding Kṛṣṇa, one can understand the limit of all knowledge described in various revealed scriptures.

PURPORT

As stated in Bhagavad-gītā (7.3):

manuṣyāṇāṁ sahasreṣu kaścid yatati siddhaye yatatām api siddhānāṁ kaścin māṁ vetti tattvataḥ

"Out of many thousands among men, one may endeavor for perfection, and of those who have achieved perfection, hardly one knows Me in truth."

It is very difficult to understand Kṛṣṇa, but if one tries to understand Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam through Caitanya Mahāprabhu's bhakti cult, one will undoubtedly understand Kṛṣṇa very easily. If somehow or other one understands Kṛṣṇa, his life will be successful. Again, as stated in Bhagavad-gītā (4.9):

janma karma ca me divyam evaṁ yo vetti tattvataḥ tyaktvā dehaṁ punar janma naiti mām eti so 'rjuna

"One who knows the transcendental nature of My appearance and activities does not, upon leaving the body, take his birth again in this material world, but attains My eternal abode, O Arjuna."

TEXT 271

kṛṣṇa-līlā amṛta-sāra, tāra śata śata dhāra, daśa-dike vahe yāhā haite se caitanya-līlā haya, sarovara akṣaya, mano-haṁsa carāha' tāhāte

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-līlā amṛta-sāra-the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa are the essence of all eternal bliss; tāra śata śata dhāra-the flow of that eternal bliss is running in hundreds of branches; daśa-dike-in all the ten directions; vahe-flows; yāhā haite-from which; se-those; caitanya-līlā-pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; haya-are; sarovara akṣaya-a transcendental eternal lake; manaḥ-haṁsa-my mind, which is like a swan; carāha'-please wander; tāhāte-in that lake.

TRANSLATION

The pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa are the essence of all nectar. They flow in hundreds of rivulets and in all directions. The pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are an eternal reservoir, and one is advised to let his mind swim like a swan on this transcendental lake.

PURPORT

The essence of spiritual knowledge is found in the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, which are identical with the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa. This is the essence of knowledge. If knowledge does not include the understanding of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Kṛṣṇa, it is simply superfluous. By Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's grace, the nectar of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa's pastimes is flowing in different directions in hundreds and thousands of rivers. One should not think that the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are different from Kṛṣṇa's pastimes. It is said: śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya, rādhā-kṛṣṇa nahe anya. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu is a combination of Rādhā-Kṛṣṇa, and without understanding His pastimes, one cannot understand Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura therefore sings: rūpa-raghunātha-pade haibe ākuti kabe hāma bujhaba se yugala pirīti. "When shall I become very eager to study the books left by the six Gosvāmīs? Then I shall be able to understand the conjugal pastimes of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa." Caitanya Mahāprabhu directly empowered Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī and Śrīla Sanātana Gosvāmī. Following in their footsteps, the other six Gosvāmīs understood Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His mission. One should understand Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya and Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa from the Gosvāmīs in the paramparā system. This Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is following as strictly as possible in the footsteps of the Gosvāmīs. Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says, ei chaya gosāñi yāra, mui tāra dāsa: "I am the servant of the six Gosvāmīs." The philosophy of Kṛṣṇa consciousness is to become the servant of the servant of the servant of the Lord. Whoever wants to understand the difficult subject matter of kṛṣṇa-kathā should accept the disciplic succession. If one is somehow or other able to understand Kṛṣṇa, his life will be successful. Tyaktvā dehaṁ punar janma naiti mām eti so 'rjuna. A perfect devotee is able to understand Kṛṣṇa through the disciplic succession, and his entrance into the kingdom of God is thereby certainly opened. When one understands Kṛṣṇa, there is no difficulty in transferring oneself to the spiritual kingdom.

TEXT 272

bhakta-gaṇa, śuna mora dainya-vacana tomā-sabāra pada-dhūli, aṅge vibhūṣaṇa kari', kichu muñi karoṅ nivedana

SYNONYMS

bhakta-gaṇa-O devotees; śuna-please hear; mora-my; dainya-vacana-humble submission; tomā-sabāra-of all of you; pada-dhūli-the dust of the feet; aṅge-on my body; vibhūṣaṇa kari'-taking as ornaments; kichu-something; muñi-I; karoṅ nivedana-wish to submit.

TRANSLATION

With all humility, I submit myself to the lotus feet of all of you devotees, taking the dust from your feet as my bodily ornaments. Now, my dear devotees, please hear one thing more from me.

TEXT 273

kṛṣṇa-bhakti-siddhānta-gaṇa, yāte praphulla padma-vana, tāra madhu kari' āsvādana prema-rasa-kumuda-vane, praphullita rātri-dine, tāte carāo mano-bhṛṅga-gaṇa

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-bhakti-siddhānta-gaṇa-the conclusive understanding of devotional service to Kṛṣṇa; yāte-by which; praphulla-enlivened; padma-vana-the forest of lotus flowers; tāra madhu-the honey collected from those lotus flowers; kari' āsvādana-relishing; prema-rasa-of transcendental love of Kṛṣṇa; kumuda-vane-in the forest of kumuda flowers (a type of lotus); praphullita-being jubilant; rātri-dine-day and night; tāte-in that forest of lotus flowers; carāo-make wander; manaḥ-bhṛṅga-gaṇa-the bumblebees of your minds.

TRANSLATION

Devotional service to Kṛṣṇa is exactly like a pleasing, jubilant forest of lotus flowers wherein there is ample honey. I request everyone to taste this honey. If all the mental speculators bring the bees of their minds into this forest of lotus flowers and jubilantly enjoy ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa day and night, their mental speculation will be completely transcendentally satisfied.

TEXT 274

nānā-bhāvera bhakta-jana, haṁsa-cakravāka-gaṇa, yāte sabe' karena vihāra kṛṣṇa-keli sumṛṇāla, yāhā pāi sarva-kāla, bhakta-haṁsa karaye āhāra

SYNONYMS

nānā-bhāvera bhakta-jana-devotees relishing relationships with Kṛṣṇa in different ecstasies; haṁsa-cakravāka-gaṇa-compared to swans and cakravāka birds; yāte-in that place; sabe'-all; karena vihāra-enjoy life; kṛṣṇa-keli-the pastimes of Kṛṣṇa; su-mṛṇāla-sweet buds; yāhā pāi-which one can get; sarva-kāla-eternally; bhakta-haṁsa-the devotees, who are just like swans; karaye-do; āhāra-eating.

TRANSLATION

The devotees who have a relationship with Kṛṣṇa are like the swans and cakravāka birds that play in the forest of lotus flowers. The buds of those lotus flowers are the pastimes of Kṛṣṇa, and they are edibles for the swanlike devotees. Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa is always engaged in His transcendental pastimes; therefore the devotees, following in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, can always eat those lotus buds, for they are the pastimes of the Lord.

TEXT 275

sei sarovare giyā, haṁsa-cakravāka hañā, sadā tāhāṅ karaha vilāsa khaṇḍibe sakala duḥkha, pāibā parama sukha, anāyāse habe premollāsa

SYNONYMS

sei sarovare giyā-going to that lake where the clusters of lotus flowers exist; haṁsa-cakravāka hañā-becoming swans or cakravāka birds; sadā-always; tāhāṅ-there; karaha vilāsa-enjoy life; khaṇḍibe-will be diminished; sakala duḥkha-all material anxieties and miseries; pāibā-you will get; parama sukha-the highest happiness; anāyāse-very easily; habe-there will be; prema-ullāsa-jubilation in love of God.

TRANSLATION

All the devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu should go to that lake and, remaining always under the shelter of the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, become swans and cakravāka birds in those celestial waters. They should go on rendering service to Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa and enjoy life perpetually. In this way all miseries will be diminished, the devotees will attain great happiness, and there will be jubilant love of God.

TEXT 276

viśvodyāne kare variṣaṇa tāte phale amṛta-phala, bhakta khāya nirantara, tāra śeṣe jīye jaga-jana

SYNONYMS

ei amṛta-this nectar; anukṣaṇa-continuously; sādhu mahānta-megha-gaṇa-pure devotees and saintly persons, who are compared to clouds; viśva-udyāne-in the garden of the universe; kare variṣaṇa-rain down these nectarean pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa; tāte-because of that; phale-grows; amṛta-phala-the fruit of nectar; bhakta khāya nirantara-and the devotees eat such fruit continuously; tāra śeṣe-after their eating; jīye jaga-jana-the living entities all over the world live peacefully.

TRANSLATION

The devotees who have taken shelter of the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu take the responsibility for distributing nectarean devotional service all over the world. They are like clouds pouring water on the ground that nourishes the fruit of love of Godhead in this world. The devotees eat that fruit to their hearts' content, and whatever remnants they leave are eaten by the general populace. Thus they live happily.

duhe mili' haya sumādhurya sādhu-guru-prasāde, tāhā yei āsvāde, sei jāne mādhurya-prācurya

SYNONYMS

caitanya-līlā amṛta-pūra-the pastimes of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are full of nectar; kṛṣṇa-līlā su-karpūra-the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa are exactly like camphor; duhe mili'-the two meeting; haya-become; su-mādhurya-very, very palatable; sādhu-guru-prasāde-by the mercy of saintly persons and devotees in the transcendental position; tāhā-that; yei-anyone who; āsvāde-relishes this palatable nectar; sei jāne-he can understand; mādhurya-prācurya-the extensive quantity of sweetness in devotional service.

TRANSLATION

The pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are full of nectar, and the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa are like camphor. When one mixes these, they taste very sweet. By the mercy of the pure devotees, whoever tastes them can understand the depths of that sweetness.

TEXT 278

ye līlā-amṛta vine, khāya yadi anna-pāne, tabe bhaktera durbala jīvana yāra eka-bindu-pāne, utphullita tanu-mane, hāse, gāya, karaye nartana

SYNONYMS

ye-he who; līlā-of the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa and Caitanya Mahāprabhu; amṛta vine-without nectar; khāya yadi anna-pāne-if one eats only ordinary food grains; tabe-then; bhaktera-of the devotees; durbala jīvana-life becomes weakened; yāra-of which; eka-bindu-pāne-if one drinks one drop; utphullita tanu-mane-the body and mind become jubilant; hāse-laughs; gāya-chants; karaye nartana-dances.

TRANSLATION

Men become strong and stout by eating sufficient grains, but the devotee who simply eats ordinary grains but does not taste the transcendental pastimes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Kṛṣṇa gradually becomes weak and falls down from the transcendental position. However, if one drinks but a drop of the nectar of Kṛṣṇa's pastimes, his body and mind begin to bloom, and he begins to laugh, sing and dance.

PURPORT

All the devotees connected with this Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement must read all the books that have been translated (Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Bhagavad-gītā and others); otherwise, after some time, they will simply eat, sleep and fall down from their position. Thus they will miss the opportunity to attain an eternal, blissful life of transcendental pleasure.

TEXT 279

citte kari' sudṛḍha viśvāsa nā paḍa' kutarka-garte, amedhya karkaśa āvarte, yāte paḍile haya sarva-nāśa

SYNONYMS

e amṛta kara pāna-all of you must drink this nectar; yāra sama nāhi āna-there is no comparison to this nectar; citte-within the mind; kari' sudṛḍha viśvāsa-having firm faith in this conclusion; nā paḍa' kutarka garte-do not fall down into the pit of false arguments; amedhya karkaśa āvarte-in the untouchable, harsh whirlpool; yāte-in which; paḍile-if one falls down; haya sarva-nāśa-the purpose of life will be spoiled.

TRANSLATION

The readers should relish this wonderful nectar because nothing compares to it. Keeping their faith firmly fixed within their minds, they should be careful not to fall into the pit of false arguments or the whirlpools of unfortunate situations. If one falls into such positions, he is finished.

TRANSLATION

Taking the feet of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, Śrī Sanātana Gosvāmī, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī and Jīva Gosvāmī on my head, I always desire their mercy. Thus I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, humbly try to describe the nectar of the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, which are mixed with the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

tat-that (Caitanya-caritāmṛta); idam-this; ati-rahasyam-full of spiritual mysteries; gaura-līlā-amṛtam-the nectar of the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yat-which; khala-samudaya-envious rascals; kolaiḥ-by pigs; na-never; ādṛtam-praised; taiḥ-by them; alabhyam-not obtainable; kṣatiḥ iyam iha kā-what is the loss in this connection; me-of me; sväditam-tasted; yat-which; samantāt-completely; sahṛdaya-sumanobhiḥ-by those who are friendly and whose minds are very clean; modam-enjoyment; eṣām-of them; tanoti-expands.

TRANSLATION

The Caitanya-caritāmṛta pastimes of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu constitute a very secret literature. It is the life and soul of all devotees. Those who are not fit to relish this literature, who are envious like hogs and pigs, will certainly not adore it. However, this will not harm my attempt. These pastimes of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu will certainly please all saintly people who have clear hearts. They will certainly enjoy it. We wish that this will enhance their enjoyment more and more.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Madhya-līlā, Twenty-fifth Chapter, describing how the inhabitants of Vārāṇasī were converted to Vaiṣṇavism.

Note:

The author of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, has condemned all his enemies by comparing them to envious hogs and pigs. This Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement, which is spreading throughout the world, is being appreciated by sincere people, although they have never previously heard of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Kṛṣṇa's pastimes. Now even the higher, priestly circles are appreciating this movement. They have concluded that this movement is very nice and that they have something to learn from it. Nonetheless, in India there are some people who say that they belong to this cult but who are actually very envious of the ācārya. They have tried to suppress our activities in many ways, but as far as we are concerned, we follow in the footsteps of Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī and take them as envious pigs and hogs. We simply wish to present the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to the best of our ability so that those who are really honest can cleanse their hearts. We hope that they enjoy this literature and bestow their blessings upon us. It appears that even such a great personality as Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī met with some envious obstacles; what, then, to speak of us, who are only insignificant creatures in this universe. We are simply trying to execute the orders of our spiritual master to the best of our ability.

END OF THE MADHYA-LĪLĀ

18.6 Antya-līlā

18.6.1 Chapter 1

Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī's Second Meeting With the Lord

A summary of the First Chapter is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya as follows. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu returned to Jagannātha Purī from Vṛndāvana, all His devotees from other parts of India, upon receiving the auspicious news, came to Puruṣottama-kṣetra, or Jagannātha Purī. Śivānanda Sena took a dog with him and even paid fees for it to cross the river. One night, however, the dog could not get any food and therefore went directly to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī. The next day, when Śivānanda and his party reached Jagannātha Purī, Śivānanda saw the dog eating some coconut pulp offered to it by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. After this incident, the dog was liberated and went back home, back to Godhead.

Meanwhile, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī reached Bengal, after returning from Vṛndāvana. Although he could not follow the Bengali devotees, after some time he then came to Jagannātha Purī, where he stayed with Haridāsa Ṭhākura. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī composed an important verse, beginning with the words priyaḥ so 'yam, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu relished it very much. One day when Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Rāmānanda Rāya and Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya went to see Haridāsa Ṭhākura, the Lord saw the verse Rūpa Gosvāmī had composed as an introduction to his books Lalita-mādhava and Vidagdha-mādhava. After examining the manuscripts of these two books, Rāmānanda Rāya approved and appreciated them very much. After the period of Cāturmāsya, all the devotees who had come from Bengal returned to their homes. Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, however, remained at Jagannātha Purī for some time.

TRANSLATION

I pray to the lotus feet of the six Gosvāmīs-Śrī Rūpa, Sanātana, Bhaṭṭa Raghunātha, Śrī Jīva, Gopāla Bhaṭṭa and Dāsa Raghunātha-so that all impediments to my writing this literature will be annihilated and my real desire will be fulfilled.

PURPORT

If one wants to benefit the entire world, he will certainly find persons like hogs and pigs who will put forward many impediments. That is natural. But if a devotee seeks shelter at the lotus feet of the six Gosvāmīs, the merciful Gosvāmīs will certainly give the Lord’s servitor all protection. It is not astonishing that impediments are placed before those who are spreading the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement all over the world. Nevertheless, if we adhere to the lotus feet of the six Gosvāmīs and pray for their mercy, all impediments will be annihilated, and the transcendental devotional desire to serve the Supreme Lord will be fulfilled.

TRANSLATION

I am now almost an invalid because of old age, and I know that at any moment I may die. Therefore I have already described some portions of the antya-līlā.

PURPORT

Following in the footsteps of Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, I am trying to translate Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam as quickly as possible. However, knowing myself to be an old man and almost an invalid because of rheumatism, I have already translated the essence of all literatures, the Tenth Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, as a summary study in English. I started the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement at the age of seventy. Now I am seventy-eight, and so my death is imminent. I am trying to finish the translation of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam as soon as possible, but before finishing it, I have given my readers the book Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, so that if I die before finishing the whole task they may enjoy this book, which is the essence of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam.

TRANSLATION

One day, when they needed to cross a river, an Orissan boatman would not allow the dog to get in the boat.

TEXT 19

kukkura rahilā,–śivānanda duḥkhī hailā daśa paṇa kaḍi diyā kukkure pāra kailā

SYNONYMS

kukkura rahilā-the dog remained; śivānanda duḥkhī hailā-Śivānanda became very unhappy; daśa paṇa-ten paṇa; kaḍi-small conchshells; diyā-paying; kukkure-the dog; pāra kailā-crossed to the other side of the river.

TRANSLATION

Śivānanda Sena, unhappy that the dog had to stay behind, paid the boatman ten paṇa of conchshells to take the dog across the river.

PURPORT

One paṇa is eighty kaḍis, or small conchshells. Formerly, even fifty or sixty years ago, there was no paper currency in India. Coins were generally made not of base metal but of gold, silver and copper. In other words, the medium of exchange was really something valuable. Four pieces of kaḍi made one gaṇḍā, and twenty such gaṇḍās equaled one paṇa. This kaḍi was also used as a medium of exchange; therefore Śivānanda Sena paid for the dog with daśa paṇa, or eighty times ten pieces of kaḍi. In those days one paisa was also subdivided into small conchshells, but at the present moment the prices for commodities have gone so high that there is nothing one can get in exchange for only one paisa. With one paisa in those days, however, one could purchase sufficient vegetables to provide for a whole family. Even thirty years ago, vegetables were occasionally so inexpensive that one paisa's worth could provide for a whole family for a day.

TEXT 20

cāhiyā-looking; nā-not; pāila-found; kukkura-the dog; loka saba āilā-all the men returned; duḥkhī hañā-being unhappy; śivānanda-Śivānanda Sena; upavāsa-fast; kailā-observed.

TRANSLATION

When the men returned without success, Śivānanda Sena became very unhappy and fasted for the night.

TEXT 24

prabhāte kukkura cāhi' kāṅhā nā pāila sakala vaiṣṇavera mane camatkāra haila

SYNONYMS

prabhāte-in the morning; kukkura-the dog; cāhi'-looking for; kāṅhā-anywhere; nā pāila-not found; sakala vaiṣṇavera-of all the Vaiṣṇavas present; mane-in the minds; camatkāra haila-there was great astonishment.

TRANSLATION

In the morning they looked for the dog, but it could not be found anywhere. All the Vaiṣṇavas were astonished.

PURPORT

Śivānanda Sena's attachment to the dog was a great boon for that animal. The dog appears to have been a street dog. Since it naturally began to follow Śivānanda Sena while he was going to Jagannātha Purī with his party, he accepted it into his party and maintained it the same way he was maintaining the other devotees. It appears that although on one occasion the dog was not allowed aboard a boat, Śivānanda did not leave the dog behind but paid more money just to induce the boatman to take the dog across the river. Then when the servant forgot to feed the dog and the dog disappeared, Śivānanda, being very anxious, sent ten men to find it. When they could not find it, Śivānanda observed a fast. Thus it appears that somehow or other Śivānanda had become attached to the dog.

As will be evident from the following verses, the dog got the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and was immediately promoted to Vaikuṇṭha to become an eternal devotee. Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura has therefore sung, tumi ta' ṭhākura, tomāra kukkura, baliyā jānaha more (Śaraṇāgati 19). He thus offers to become the dog of a Vaiṣṇava. There are many other instances in which the pet animal of a Vaiṣṇava was delivered back home to Vaikuṇṭhaloka, back to Godhead. Such is the benefit of somehow or other becoming the favorite of a Vaiṣṇava. Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura has also sung, kīṭa-janma ha-u yathā tuyā dāsa (Śaraṇāgati 11). There is no harm in taking birth again and again. Our only desire should be to take birth under the care of a Vaiṣṇava. Fortunately we had the opportunity to be born of a Vaiṣṇava father who took care of us very nicely. He prayed to Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī that in the future we would become a servant of the eternal consort of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Thus somehow or other we are now engaged in that service. We may conclude that even as dogs we must take shelter of a Vaiṣṇava. The benefit will be the same as that which accrues to an advanced devotee under a Vaiṣṇava's care.

utkaṇṭhāya cali' sabe āilā nīlācale pūrvavat mahāprabhu mililā sakale

SYNONYMS

utkaṇṭhāya-in great anxiety; cali'-walking; sabe-all the devotees; āilā-came to Jagannātha Purī, Nīlācala; nīlācale-as usual; pūrvavat-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; mililā sakale-met all of them.

TRANSLATION

Thus in great anxiety they all walked to Jagannātha Purī, where Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu met them as usual.

TEXT 26

sabā lañā kailā jagannātha daraśana sabā lañā mahāprabhu karena bhojana

SYNONYMS

sabā lañā-taking all of them; kailā-did; jagannātha daraśana-visiting the Jagannātha temple; sabā lañā-with all of them; mahāprabhu-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; karena bhojana-took prasāda.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went with them to see the Lord in the temple, and on that day He also took lunch in the company of all those devotees.

TEXT 27

pūrvavat sabāre prabhu pāṭhāilā vāsā-sthāne prabhu-ṭhāñi prātaḥ-kāle āilā āra dine pūrvavat-as it was previously; sabāre-everyone; prabhu-Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; pāṭhāilā-sent; vāsā-sthāne-to their respective residential quarters; prabhu-ṭhāñi-to the place of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; prātaḥ-kāle-in the morning; āilā-they came; āra dine-on the next day.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

As previously, the Lord provided them all with residential quarters. And the next morning all the devotees came to see the Lord.

TEXT 28

āsiyā dekhila sabe sei ta kukkure prabhu-pāśe vasiyāche kichu alpa-dūre

SYNONYMS

āsiyā-coming; dekhila-they saw; sabe-everyone; sei ta kukkure-that very same dog; prabhu-pāśe-near Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; vasiyāche-sat; kichu alpa-dūre-a little bit away from the Lord.

TRANSLATION

When all the devotees came to the place of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, they saw the same dog was sitting a little apart the Lord.

TEXT 29

prasāda nārikela-śasya dena phelāñā
'rāma' 'kṛṣṇa' 'hari' kaha'–balena hāsiyā

SYNONYMS

prasāda-food; nārikela-śasya-pulp of green coconut; dena-gives; phelāñā-throwing; rāma-Lord Rāmacandra; kṛṣṇa-Śrī Kṛṣṇa; hari-the holy name of Hari; kaha-say; balena-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu says; hāsiyā-smiling.

TRANSLATION

Furthermore, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was throwing remnants of green coconut pulp to the dog. Smiling in His own way, He was saying to the dog, "Chant the holy names Rāma, Kṛṣṇa, and Hari."

TEXT 30

śasya khāya kukkura, 'kṛṣṇa' kahe bāra bāra dekhiyā lokera mane haila camatkāra

SYNONYMS

śasya khāya-eats the pulp of green coconut; kukkura-the dog; kṛṣṇa-the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; kahe-chants; bāra bāra-again and again; dekhiyā-seeing this; lokera-of all the people; mane-in the minds; haila-there was; camatkāra-astonishment.

TRANSLATION

Seeing the dog eating the green coconut pulp and chanting "Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa" again and again, all the devotees present were very much surprised.

TEXT 31

śivānanda kukkura dekhi' daṇḍavat kailā dainya kari' nija aparādha kṣamāilā

SYNONYMS

śivānanda-Śivānanda Sena; kukkura-the dog; dekhi'-seeing there; daṇḍavat kailā-offered obeisances; dainya kari'-exhibiting humbleness; nija-personal; aparādha-offenses; kṣamāilā-was forgiven.

TRANSLATION

When he saw the dog sitting in that way and chanting the name of Kṛṣṇa, Śivānanda, because of his natural humility, immediately offered his obeisances to the dog just to counteract his offenses to it.

TEXT 32

āra dina keha tāra dekhā nā pāilā siddha-deha pāñā kukkura vaikuṇṭhete gelā

SYNONYMS

āra dina-the next day; keha-all of them; tāra-of the dog; dekhā nā pāila-did not get sight; siddha-deha pāñā-obtaining a spiritual body; kukkura-the dog; vaikuṇṭhete gelā-went to the spiritual kingdom, Vaikuṇṭha.

TRANSLATION

The next day, no one saw that dog, for it had obtained its spiritual body and departed for Vaikuṇṭha, the spiritual kingdom.

PURPORT

This is the result of sādhu-saṅga, consequent association with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and promotion back home, back to Godhead. This result is possible even for a dog, by the mercy of the Vaiṣṇava. Therefore, everyone in the human form of life should be induced to associate with devotees. By rendering a little service, even by eating prasāda, not to speak of chanting and dancing, everyone could be promoted to Vaikuṇṭhaloka. It is therefore requested that all our devotees in the ISKCON community become pure Vaiṣṇavas, so that by their mercy all the people of the world will be transferred to Vaikuṇṭhaloka, even without their knowledge. Everyone should be given a chance to take prasāda and thus be induced to chant the holy names Hare Kṛṣṇa and also dance in ecstasy. By these three processes, although performed without knowledge or education, even an animal went back to Godhead.

TEXT 33

aiche divya-līlā kare śacīra nandana kukkurake kṛṣṇa kahāñā karilā mocana

SYNONYMS

aiche-in that way; divya-līlā-transcendental activities; kare-performs; śacīra nandana-the son of mother Śacī; kukkurake-even a dog; kṛṣṇa kahāñā-inducing to chant the holy name ”Kṛṣṇa”; karilā mocana-delivered.

TRANSLATION

Such are the transcendental pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the son of mother Śacī. He even delivered a dog simply by inducing it to chant the mahā-mantra, Hare Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 34

ethā prabhu-ājñāya rūpa āilā vṛndāvana kṛṣṇa-līlā-nāṭaka karite haila mana ethā-on the other side; prabhu-ājñāya-upon the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu: rūpa-Rūpa Gosvāmī; āilā-went; vṛndāvana-to Vṛndāvana; kṛṣṇa-līlā-nāṭaka-a drama on Lord Kṛṣṇa’s pastimes; karite-to compose; haila-it was; mana-the mind.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Meanwhile, following the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī returned to Vṛndāvana. He desired to write dramas concerning the pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TEXT 35

vṛndāvane nāṭakera ārambha karilā maṅgalācaraṇa ’nāndī-śloka’ tathāi likhilā

SYNONYMS

vṛndāvane-at Vṛndāvana; nāṭakera-of the drama; ārambha-the beginning; karilā-wrote; maṅgalācaraṇa-invoking auspiciousness; nāndī-śloka-introductory verse; tathāi-there; likhilā-he wrote.

TRANSLATION

In Vṛndāvana, Rūpa Gosvāmī began to write a drama. In particular, he composed the introductory verses to invoke good fortune.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura quotes his notes from the Nāṭaka-candrikā, wherein he has written:

prastāvanāyās tu mukhe nāndī kāryāśubhāvahā āśīr-namaskriyā-vastu-nirdeśānyatamānvitā aṣṭābhir daśabhir yuktā kiṁvā dvādaśabhiḥ padaiḥ candranāmāṅkitā prāyo maṅgalārtha-padojjvalā maṅgalaṁ cakra-kamala-cakora-kumudādikam

Similarly, in the Sixth Chapter of the Sāhitya-darpaṇa, text 282, he has said:

āśīr-vacana-saṁyuktā stutir yasmāt prayujyate deva-dvija-nṛ-pādīnāṁ tasmān nāndīti saṁjñitā

The introductory portion of a drama, which is written to invoke good fortune, is called nāndī-śloka.
